PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

The Translation has been revised and additions made to the Notes, Appendices and the Vocabulary.

Soon after the publication of the first edition Dr. A. K. Coomaraswamy informed me that the Nala-Damayanti series of drawings of the Kangra School closely followed the text of Śrīharṣa's Naiṣadhacarita. A copy of his magnificent Catalogue of Rajput paintings in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, was sent to me for examination; and in a note published in The Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. XII, 1936, I pointed out some of the episodes in the Naiṣadhacarita on which the paintings were based. Dr. Coomaraswamy seems to have read the Translation with care and made some suggestions which I have adopted in the present revision.

I owe an apology to the learned public for the unusual delay in publication of the work mentioned in the Introduction. Other studies and responsibilities have been the main factors in retarding the progress of this undertaking of my younger days. But I hope that the work will be completed and published before long at least in a modified form.

The ungrudging help of my friend Dr. P. K. Gode of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, which I gratefully acknowledged in the Preface to the first edition, has been generously repeated after the lapse of so many years; and he has taken the trouble of preparing for me summaries of certain Marathi materials in connection with the detailed Footnote on the Dattātreya sect in Appendix II.

It is a happy augury that the compilation of a comprehensive Dictionary of the Sanskrit language on critical and historical principles about which I expressed a vague hope in the Preface to the first edition has been undertaken by the Deccan College Postgraduate and Research Institute. I thank the authorities of the Institute for including the Translation in their Monograph Series and specially for their kind acceptance of the present edition as a gift to be utilized in furtherance of the work on the Dictionary project.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

Śrīharṣa's Naiṣadhīyacarita, or Naiṣadhacarita, is one of the five traditional Mahākāvyas or later Sanskrit epics, the others being Kālidāsa's Raghuvaṃśa and Kumārasambhava, and the two poems of Bhāravi and Māgha. The Naiṣadhacarita deals with a part of the well-known story of Nala and Damayantī, and it is principally remarkable for its treatment of the character of Nala in Canto IX, which I have also considered in the preliminary Note to the Synopsis (p. xxvi). There is here a conflict of emotions, a clash of love and duty, rare in Sanskrit poetry, but which is not without its appeal to the imagination of the modern reader. This is perhaps the most universal element in Śrīharṣa's treatment of the Nala story, and furnishes evidence of the poet's power to handle tense moments of emotion and pathos. The Naiṣadhacarita, like other Kāvyas, has its full share of epigrams and ethical reflections, the most remarkable of which are perhaps those glorifying the individual conscience as the criterion of right and wrong, e.g., "With the good, the purity of their motives has their own conscience for witness" (9. 129); "The good are far more ashamed of themselves than of others" (6. 22). There are, likewise, quite notable observations on benevolence, charity, manly virtue, jealousy and similar topics, which show the poet to have been alive to the problems of life and conduct. Description of Nature, the forte of Sanskrit poets, is not prominent in our poem, but there are elaborate pictures of sunrise and the rising moon in Cantos XIX and XXII. The poem abounds in animated dialogues, enlivened by wit and repartee; while the description of Damayantī's Svayaṁvara with its splendour and gaiety, occupying no less than five Cantos (X-XIV), is the most comprehensive narrative of its kind in Sanskrit literature. The merits of the poem need not blind us to its defects and shortcomings, many of which are peculiar to the age of decline in which it was written. But in spite of the abundance of artificial fancies and conceits, and the fondness for word-play and obscure learning, the poem maintains a high level of style, and the ornate verse of the Naiṣadha has been for ages a rare intellectual treat to students in India.

Poetic merits apart, the chief interest of the Naiṣadha lies in the fact that it is in many ways a repository of traditional learning, and contains literary, lexicographical and socio-religious data, important for the study of the cultural history of medieval India. No apology is needed for translating a lengthy Mahākāvya, which is in some respects the most difficult of the later Sanskrit epics.

The present Translation is based on the fourth Nirnaya-sagar edition of the Naiṣadhacarita published in 1912, and generally follows the commentary of Nārāyaṇa. The Translation, however inadequate, will, I hope, facilitate the study of the poem and make its contents more widely known; I have spared no pains to make my version faithful if not elegant. No translation of the Naiṣadha can, however, serve any scholarly purpose unless it is accompanied by a critical examination of the many obscure allusions and words which occur in the poem. An attempt has been made to deal with these in the Appendices and the Vocabulary. Philosophical doctrines like the Vaiśeṣika theory of darkness and the Nyāya conception of salvation, and allusions such as those to Rādhā and the Buddhist goddess Tārā have been discussed in the Appendices; while the Vocabulary includes all rare and difficult words which either are not found, or are inadequately dealt with in the existing lexicons. Certain words have been included owing to their scarcity in Kāvya literature. The Vocabulary has been prepared with some care, and I shall consider my labours amply rewarded, if it is found useful when the time comes for compiling an up-to-date lexicon of the Sanskrit language on critical and historical principles.

The inadequacy of the commentary of Nārāyaṇa was brought home to me while translating the poem. But after the completion of the translation, I had the good fortune to obtain access to several unpublished commentaries, some of which are earlier than Mallinātha and Nārāyaṇa, and represent the earliest exegetical attempts to elucidate the Naiṣadha, besides providing valuable readings which often differ from those found in the current Text. I have taken this opportunity to give a number of extracts from these commentaries in the Notes, and have also reproduced the material portion of the learned commentary of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita composed in the thirteenth century. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, it may be mentioned, was also the author of a commentary on the Ṛgveda, and an interesting specimen of this pre-Śāyaṇa commentary will be found in the Notes. Full details about the commentaries have been given in the Introduction.

It was my intention to discuss in detail the contents of the poem as a whole, its date and authorship in a separate section of the Introduction, and there are in fact a few references to it in the footnotes to the Translation. I have been compelled, however, to reserve the discussion under this head for a later publication. If everything goes well, the above discussion may be expected to appear as part of a general survey of the Mahākāvya literature now in preparation.

In conclusion, I have to acknowledge the help which I have received from various quarters in the preparation of the present volume. My sincere gratitude is due to the authorities of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona for lending and allowing me to retain rare and valuable manuscripts for a protracted period. I am particularly indebted to Mr. P. K. Gode, M.A., Curator of the Manuscript Department of the Institute, for his unfailing courtesy and promptness in replying to my queries and providing all the help I required. To my friend Rev. T. Sefton, Chaplain at Clewer, Windsor, I owe a debt of gratitude for not only correcting some of the proofs, but for many valuable suggestions which, I doubt not, have improved the tone and quality of the Translation. Last but not least, I must offer my thanks to my friends Prof. S. K. Bhuyan and Prof. B. K. Kakati of Cotton College, Gauhati, and Mr. Girishchandra Borooah of Golaghat for help in various matters connected with the publication of this work.

With regard to the printing, the proofs were corrected with care, but I could not exercise any effective supervision as the book was printed far away from my place of residence. I should have liked also to make a few minor alterations here and there in the Translation, and I must crave the indulgence of my readers for any mistakes that may have crept in. Finally, my thanks are due to the well-known firm of Moti Lal Banarasi Dass for undertaking the expense of publication at a time of widespread economic depression.

INTRODUCTION

Śrīharṣa's Naiṣadhacarita has for its subject the story of Nala and Damayantī, but carries the narrative only as far as their marriage and the advent of Kali in Nala's capital, followed by certain descriptions which do not in any way contribute to the progress of the story. A brief outline of the contents of the poem will be found in the Synopsis.

The Naiṣadha is the longest Mahākāvya of the classical period with the exception of Ratnākara's Haravijaya and Abhinanda's Rāmacarita. It has been assigned to the twelfth century, and is the last great poem of Sanskrit literature. Śrīharṣa's poem is famous for the lyric flow of its diction, but it is also a learned Kāvya, being the work of a poet who wrote the abstruse Vedāntic treatise Khaṇḍanakhaṇḍakhādya. We shall discuss the poem, its date and place in Kāvya literature in a separate volume, and here confine ourselves to the commentaries, mostly unpublished, which have been quoted in the Notes.

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita

The extracts from Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita given in the Notes are taken from the following manuscripts of his commentary preserved in the Bhandarkar Institute.

(1) Ms. A (No. 16 of 1874—75) is well-written and fairly correct, and contains the commentary on Cantos I-X, XII, XVIII-XXII, and about a dozen verses of Canto XI. The manuscript was written at different times, and is obviously a composite work. At the end of Canto II the date is given as Saṁvat 1476 (A.D. 1420), while Saṁvat 1473 (A.D. 1417) is the date given at the end of Canto XXII. The portion of the Commentary on Cantos X and XVIII-XX is written on leaves of much smaller dimensions, and seems to have been incorporated from a different manuscript.

(2) Ms. C (No. 89 of 1919-24) is beautifully written and fairly correct, the date of writing being Saṁvat 1679 (A.D. 1623), as stated at the end. This manuscript contains both Text and Commentary, but gives only an abridged version of the latter. The commentary of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita is not thus preserved in full in the manuscripts referred to here.

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita gives the date of his commentary as Saṁvat 1353 (A.D. 1297) at the end of Canto XXII.[1] His date has already been mentioned by Paṇḍit Śivadatta in his Introduction to the N. S. edition of Naiṣadhacarita, and by Paṇḍit Lakshmaṇ Śāstrī in his Introduction to the Benares edition of Khaṇḍana-khaṇḍa-khādya. Dr. Bühler, however, in his Report of 1874-75, wrongly states that the date of the commentary is A.D. 1456-7, and his mistake is copied by Aufrecht in his well-known Catalogue. Bühler's mistake has been corrected by Mr. P. K. Gode of the Bhandarkar Institute in a Note published in the Journal of the Mythic Society (April, 1928).

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita gives a good deal of information about himself in the colophons to his commentary at the end of each Canto. He was a Nāgara Brahmin and a native of Dhavalakkaka or Dholka (near Ahmedabad), which rose to prominence during the thirteenth century at the expense of Anahilapaṭṭana which had long been the capital of Guzarat.[2] Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita states that his commentary was completed when Sāṅga was the king and Mādhava the prime minister.[3] This Sāṅga is obviously the same as Sāraṅgadeva, the Vāghelā king of Guzarat, who ascended the throne in 1277 A.D. and reigned for twenty years,[4] that is, till 1297, the year in which Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's commentary was written. Karṇadeva, the successor of Sāraṅgadeva, ascended the throne in the same year; but as Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita states in his gloss on Naiṣadha 8. 59,[5] the minister Mādhavadeva proceeded to make one Udayarāja the king, and as a result of the prevailing insecurity there was universal pillage and theft in Guzarat. Karṇa, however, ruled for seven years,[6] and was the last king of the Vāghelā dynasty, after whose downfall the sovereignty of Guzarat passed into the hands of the Muhammadans. The incursions of the latter have left their mark on Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's commentary, for it is stated at the end of the first Canto that the commentary was burnt during 'the devastation caused by the Mlecchas', but was restored by Cāṇḍū's learned brother Tāhlaṇa.[7]

6. Not in Guzarat. Vincent Smith states that in 1297 an officer of Alauddin Khilji annexed Guzarat to the Sultanate of Delhi. (Oxford History of India, 1928, p. 268.) It is said that Karṇa took away Mādhava's wife from him, and the latter retaliated by inviting the Muslims to invade Guzarat. Karṇa, after his defeat, fled to the Deccan and took refuge at the court of the Yādava king Rāmacandra of Devagiri. Not long after he set himself up in Baglan as a semi-independent ruler and a vassal of the Yādava king. Commissariat—A History of Gujarat, Vol. I, chap. I (Longmans, 1938).

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's father was Āligapaṇḍita, and Gauridevī was his mother. Vaidyanātha was his teacher, but he studied the Naiṣadha under Munideva,[8] and the Mahābhārata under Narasiṁhapaṇḍita. He studied the Kāśikā with the Nyāsa,[9] and the different philosophical systems. But the commentary itself furnishes adequate evidence of the range of his studies and his wide acquaintance with the various branches of learning.

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita is described in some of the colophons as the author of a commentary on the Ṛgveda. A specimen of this commentary is found in his gloss on Naiṣadha 9. 75, in the course of which an entire hymn of the Ṛgveda (10. 51) is quoted and explained.[10] Cāṇḍū is earlier than Sāyaṇa by more than half a century, and it is all the more regrettable that his commentary should have been lost, probably during the Muhammadan invasion of Guzarat. He was a master of the Vedic sacrificial system, and is probably the only Kāvya commentator who quotes chapter and verse from the Śrautasūtras. He performed a number of important Vedic sacrifices, such as the seven varieties of the Soma sacrifice, the Dvādaśāha and the Agnicayana. He assumed the proud title of Samrāṭ by performing the Vājapeya sacrifice, and became a Sthapati by performing the Bṛhaspatisava.[11] The religious activities of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita show that comprehensive Vedic sacrifices were still undertaken in Guzarat in the thirteenth century.

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita quotes a large number of authors and works in his commentary, and does not hesitate to give lengthy quotations.

Most of his citations will be found in the Extracts from his work given in the Notes. Among philosophical texts he quotes Praśastapādabhāṣya (19. 52),[12] Śrīdhara's Nyāyakandalī (22. 36), Kumārila's Ślokavārtika (2. 61), Bhāsarvajña's Nyāyasāra (5. 18; 8. 41), Ānandabodha's Nyāyamakaranda (21. 108), Sāṁkhyakārikā (22. 76, 83), and the Mīmāṁsāsūtras (17. 60, 61). The elaborate exposition of the Prābhākara theory of cognition under 6. 51, and the discourse on Upādhi, though somewhat irrelevant, under 19. 45 testify to our author's deep knowledge of the philosophical systems.

Among Vedic works, Cāṇḍū quotes Bṛhaddevatā (9. 75), Yāska's Nirukta (2. 24; 7. 39; 4. 24; 20. 59, etc.), Kātyāyanaśrautasūtra (5. 135; 19. 27), Śāṁkhāyanaśrautasūtra (3. 62; 11. 117; 19. 27), Śāṁkhāyanagṛhyasūtra (12. 37), Anukramaṇī (6. 2), Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (1. 40), and nearly the whole of the seventh Prapāṭhaka of Chāndogya Upaniṣad (11. 129). He quotes Durgācārya's commentary on Nirukta under 9. 20, and seems to refer to Varadattasuta Ānartīya's commentary on Śāṁkhāyanaśrautasūtra under 11. 117 and that of Karka on Kātyāyanaśrautasūtra under 19. 27.[13]

Among Smṛti writers, Vijñāneśvara's commentary on Yājñāvalkya is cited under 21. 85, while three Ācāryas Viśvarūpa, Govindarāja and Harasvāmin (Harisvāmin ?) are named in connection with Smṛti interpretation in the gloss on 17. 52. Of these Viśvarūpa is mentioned by Vijñāneśvara as his predecessor in the beginning of his Mitākṣarā commentary, while Govindarāja is the well-known commentator on Manu. The identity of Harasvāmin is doubtful, but if Harisvāmin is meant, the latter is known to have written a commentary on Śatapathabrāhmaṇa, and in fact, he is known also as Hari-hara-svāmin.[14] Among Purāṇas Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita quotes Viṣṇu-purāṇa (3. 101; 11. 77) and Bhāgavata (11. 115). An Āgama is quoted under 12. 102.

Several lexicons are quoted. Pratāpamārtaṇḍa is cited under 2. 24, 18. 62 and 21. 30, and Dhanvantarīya Nighaṇṭu under 20. 21. Hemacandra is quoted several times (4. 63; 7. 80; 10. 105; 19. 27). Halāyudha is quoted under 3. 119; 4. 76; 8. 35; 19. 27 and 20. 12. The reference under 19. 27 is important as it helps us to correct a mistake in Aufrecht's edition of Halāyudha's Abhidhānaratnamālā.[15] In the gloss on 19. 27 there is also a reference to Kṣīrasvāmin.

Some of the Kāvya quotations deserve mention. Under 6. 2 Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita refers to Raghu 15. 54 and mentions an interesting variant.[16] In the gloss on 7. 80 he cites Māgha 20. 70 (वसुपुरंध्रिनादिनो नदानामतटाराधितधारं वारिवाहाः) while explaining the word Atata. It may be here noted that Mallinātha reads Pratata for Atata, but the latter reading is found in the commentary of Vallabha who is earlier than Mallinātha. Under 12. 10 Cāṇḍū quotes a line from the little known Arjunacarita, a poem attributed to Ānandavardhana. Mayūra's Sūryaśataka is referred to in the gloss on 10. 41. A verse from Murāri's Anargharāghava is quoted under 5. 29, and there are further quotations from Kālidāsa, Bhāravi and Māgha.

Among Alaṁkāra works there are citations from Kāvyaprakāśa (1. 142; 3. 73; 3. 128; 10. 59), Rudraṭa (3. 37; 4. 26; 17. 221; 18. 54), Rucaka, i.e., Ruyyaka (2. 46), Bhaṭṭendurāja (1. 75; 3. 22), Daśarūpaka (2. 44), Śṛṅgāratilaka (1. 34), and Vāmana's Kāvyālaṁkāra (1. 66; 4. 40; 5. 66; 8. 96). Under 5. 110 (q. v.) the latter writer is referred to as Uttaravṛttikāra. Vṛttaratnākara is mentioned under 10. 76, and Halāyudha's commentary on the Piṅgalasūtras is quoted twice (8. 105; 12. 91). There are some minute references to Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtras under 5. 32, 6. 35 and 7. 97; and a lengthy quotation from the Jayamaṅgalā commentary on the Kāmasūtras (the section dealing with the fine arts or Kalās) occurs in the gloss on 7. 97. Ratirahasya is quoted under 7. 36 and 97.

As regards grammatical references, Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita quotes Kāśikā several times, and refers to Padamañjarī under 11. 117 and quotes a Gaṇakāra under 12. 66. A noteworthy feature of his commentary is that he quotes both from Pāṇini and the Kātantra, and his work is in fact designed for the use of students of either system of grammar. I have verified most of the quotations from the Kātantra, which occur in the printed edition of the work.[17] It may also be noted that Cāṇḍū frequently refers to Kātyāyana or Kātyāyanīya in the case of the rules dealing with Kṛt forms.[18]

This is interesting in view of the fact that the Kṛt chapter of the Kātantra was composed not by Śarvavarman, but by Kātyāyana, as stated by Durgasiṁha in the beginning of his Vṛtti on the Kṛt section.[19] Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita quotes also from Durgasiṁha's Vṛtti,[20] and in this connection it may be noted that he attributes two rules of the Ākhyāta section to Durgasiṁha, showing that he considered them to be part of the Vṛtti and not of the Sūtrapāṭha.[21] The opinion of a Kātantravṛttikāra mentioned in the gloss on 11. 94[22] seems to refer to Durgasiṁha's Kātantragaṇavṛtti.[23]

Under 9. 43 Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita quotes Trilocana, the author of the Pañjī commentary on the Vṛtti of Durgasiṁha.[24] In the gloss on 11. 127 he quotes a grammarian named Vijayānanda who belongs to the Kātantra school.[25] Cāṇḍū seems also to have been acquainted with Śrīpati's Kātantrapariśiṣṭa, though he does not mention Śrīpati by name. The Calcutta edition of the Kātantra includes these two rules in the Sūtrapāṭha, but puts them in a supplementary section of the Ākhyāta chapter (76-1 to 76-66).

23. The material portion of this work was first published by A. Borooah as Dhātuvṛttisāra with extracts from Ramānātha's commentary in 1887.

24. While explaining the form विदुषिव्रवा, Cāṇḍū says त्रिलोचनश्च 'अनुस्यन्तविहिताया (Ms. अस्यन्तन्तविहिताया) नद्याः तरतमरूपकल्पचेलब्रवगोत्रमतहतेषु वा ह्रस्वः' (इत्याह). The quotation is found in Trilocana's Pañjī on Kātantravṛtti on अर्वनर्वन्तिरसावनञ् (Nāmaprakaraṇa, Pāda 3).

form श्येनी, he quotes a rule which is found with an insignificant variation in Śrīpati's work.[26]

The Kātantra is quoted not only by Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita but also by Vidyādhara who, as we shall see, is earlier than Cāṇḍū. Vidyādhara's references are not as systematic as those of the latter, but he quotes a work named Kātantravistara,[27] which is obviously the same as the Kātantravistara of Vardhamāna who probably flourished in Guzarat in the latter portion of the eleventh century.[28] The Kātantra is known to have been prevalent in Kashmir from the twelfth century downwards, but the numerous references to this grammar by Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara, both natives of Guzarat, point to its popularity in the latter country as well at least in the thirteenth century.[29]

The scholarly character of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's commentary will be evident from the works and authors cited by him. His commentary is particularly useful for understanding the more difficult verses, and throws light on many points ignored or imperfectly explained by the other commentators. It is to be regretted that the complete text of his commentary is no longer available.

Vidyādhara

The extracts from Vidyādhara's commentary given in the Notes are from the following manuscripts.

(1) No. 454 of 1895-1902 belonging to the collection in the Bhandarkar Institute written in Saṁvat 1732 or 1676 A.D., as stated at the end of Canto XXII.

26. Cāṇḍū says 'वर्णादनुदात्तात्-' इति पाणिनीये श्येनी श्येतेति विकल्पः। कौमारे ऽपि वक्तव्यमुक्तम्—'श्येतैतहरितलोहितेभ्यस्तो न' इति नदादौ। The Calcutta edition of Kātantraparišiṣṭa reads .....लोहितानां तो नथ.

27. See Notes on 21. 40.

28. Belvalkar-Systems of Sanskrit Grammar, p. 88.

29. Durgasiṁha is mentioned in the following popular verse reported about Vastupāla, the famous minister of Guzarat, who flourished in the first half of the thirteenth century—सूत्रे वृत्तिः कृता पूर्वं दुर्गसिंहेन धीमता। विसूत्रे तु कृता तेषां वस्तुपालेन मन्त्रिणा॥ See Vastupālaprabandha in Rājaśekhara's Prabandhakoṣa. Arjunavarmadeva, who also belongs to the thirteenth century, quotes Durgasiṁha in his commentary on Amaruśataka (verse 16). Durgasiṁha's commentary seems to have been a popular work in this century in Western India. Kīrtikaumudī 3. 43 refers to the Kātantra term सन्ध्यक्षर.

This manuscript is well-written on thick and smooth paper, and fairly complete, but contains some extraneous matter incorporated from other commentaries. It often quotes Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's commentary, sometimes by name; for example, under 2. 32 (इति च ण्डव्याख्यानम्); under 2. 22 (तथाच चाण्डूविरचितभाष्यम्); under 12. 110 (...च ण्डवी व्याख्या). There are also verses[30] on which the manuscript simply reproduces Cāṇḍū's gloss and gives nothing of Vidyādhara. At the end of Canto XXI, it goes as far as quoting the verses which describe Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's parentage and occur in the colophons of his commentary.[31] The manuscript quotes even from Nārāyaṇa's commentary, and on 18. 148-53 simply reproduces the latter's gloss. On 17. 196, 197 it inserts the corresponding portion of Jinarāja's commentary.[32] It is certain that the commentary of Vidyādhara was not available to the scribe in its complete form, and he made up for the deficiency by borrowing from other commentaries.

(2) No. 415 of 1887-91 belonging to the same collection as above and written in Saṁvat 1442 or 1386 A.D.[33] I have called this Ms. B.

Ms. B contains only a fragment of Vidyādhara's commentary, namely, a portion of Canto XII and Cantos XIII, XVII (with a few pages missing), XXI and XXII. The curious thing about this manuscript is that it attributes the commentary to a Cāṇḍū Mahākavi, whose name appears at the end of Canto XXII. It was, as a matter of fact, lent to me as a manuscript of the commentary of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, but it has nothing to do with the latter, and agrees in contents, as far as it goes, with the commentary of Vidyādhara noticed above. Besides, in spite of the mention of Cāṇḍūkavi as the author of the commentary, the manuscript quotes at the end of Canto XXI the Pratīka of the verse लीलायोतित ....., which recurs in the other manuscript at the end of several Cantos and describes Vidyādhara's authorship of the commentary (see below).

The comparatively early date of Ms. B is noteworthy, but it is only a fragment, and not as well-written as the later manuscript. A comparison of the two manuscripts shows that the later manuscript is far more diffuse than B, and contains matter omitted in 30. e.g., 9. 71; 6. 96; 19. 32-34, 43-46, 60-66 etc.

31. श्रीमानालिगपण्डितः स्वसमयाविर्भूतसर्वश्रमः etc. This line is quoted also at the end of Canto XIX.

32. See below (Section on Jinarāja).

33. The date appears at the end of Canto XXII.

the latter. It seems certain that the commentary of Vidyādhara was revised and somewhat enlarged by a later hand, and it is this version that is preserved in the later manuscript. In making extracts from Vidyādhara, I have, in the case of the relevant cantos, collated them with Ms. B and noted the more important variants and additions. In spite of being a fragment, B often preserves the text of Vidyādhara better than the later manuscript. From 21. 158 to the end of the Canto the latter simply reproduces Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's gloss; B, on the other hand, gives what is no doubt Vidyā's own interpretation. The case of Canto XIII is again puzzling. Here the two manuscripts do not agree, and we do not know which of the two versions represents Vidyādhara's work. In the Notes on XIII. 36 I have quoted the interpretations found in both the manuscripts, which will show the divergence between the two in respect of this Canto.

The later manuscript gives certain details about Vidyādhara and his commentary. The following verse occurs at the end of several Cantos.

लीलाद्योतितगूढभावसुभगालंकारवृन्दान्विता
संसेव्या सुमनोवरैर्नवरसप्रोल्लासिनी शोभना ।
चित्तासेचनके नलस्य चरिते बद्धास्पदा या सदा
टीका कान्तिगुणान्विता जयति सा साहित्यविद्याधरी ॥

It will be seen that the name of the commentary is Sāhitya-vidyādharī, so called from the title Sāhityavidyādhara assigned to our author in another verse which occurs frequently in the manuscript. We further learn that a physician named Rāmacandra was his father and Sītā his mother.

The date of Vidyādhara is fairly certain. He is earlier than Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita who refers to him in the beginning of his commentary on Naiṣadha. The following statement occurs at the end of the eleventh Canto in the later manuscript of Vidyādhara (No. 454 of 1895-1902)—इत्यपरार्जुन-चौलुक्यचूडामणि-राजनारायणावतार-भुजबलमल्ल-महाराजाधिराज-श्रीमद्वीसलदेवस्य भारतीभाण्डागारे नैषधस्य एकादशमोऽध्यायः. It will be seen that there was a manuscript of Naiṣadhacarita in the library of king Visaladeva of Guzarat, also called Aparārjuna,[34]

34. See Paṇḍit Śivadatta's Sanskrit Introduction to Surathotsava. The date of Visaladeva's accession to the throne is 1243-44 A.D., according to Bühler, while it is 1246 according to R. G. Bhandarkar. It is pushed further back by Dalal in his Introduction (P. XII) to Vasantavilāsa Kāvya (G. O. S.).

who reigned till 1264 A.D.[35] We know, as a matter of fact, that a manuscript of Śrīharṣa's poem had been brought by the poet Harihara to Vastupāla, the minister of king Vīradhavala, the predecessor of Vīsaladeva.[36] We know also that Vastupāla had the manuscript copied, and a transcript of the same may have found its way to the royal library. However that may be, Vidyādhara's commentary was based on the text preserved in the library of Vīsaladeva, and he probably lived during the reign of this king. He is of course earlier than 1297 A.D., the date of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's commentary, and we shall not be wrong if we assign him to the fifties or sixties of the thirteenth century.

The Sāhityavidyādharī is not a learned work, but it is the earliest known commentary on Naiṣadhacarita, and its author has the distinction of being the first commentator to grapple with the difficulties of Śrīharṣa's poem. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita praises Vidyādhara's commentary in the beginning of his work,[37] and other commentators have borrowed from it. It may also be noted that Cāṇḍū frequently mentions certain variant readings with their interpretation, and attributes them to an 'Anya'.[38] I have verified many of these, and find that they occur in Vidyādhara's commentary.

There are very few notable quotations in Vidyādhara's work. In his grammatical explanations he frequently quotes the Kātantra,[39] and we have already mentioned his reference to Kātantravistara. Under 2. 40 he refers to the Vakroktijīvitakāra,[40] and in his gloss on 21. 126-28 he quotes two works on music—Saṁgītacūḍāmaṇi and Saṁgītasāgara. Pratāpamārtaṇḍa is quoted under 2. 24.[41]

Vidyādhara makes the following interesting statement at the end of Canto XVII— अनेन सर्गेण श्रीहर्षकविराजेन आत्मसर्वज्ञता अभिव्यञ्जिता। इतस्तत्सदृशेन अन्येनाप्यस्य सर्गस्यार्थरत्नाकरस्य पारं प्राप्तुं शक्यते।[42]

Manuscripts of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara are extremely rare. I learn that there are some fragments of the commentary of the former on the second and fifth Cantos in the Oriental Institute of Baroda, but I had no opportunity of consulting them. With regard to Vidyādhara, Paṇḍit Śivadatta in the footnotes to his edition of the Naiṣadha gives some extracts from a manuscript of the commentary lent by Paṇḍit Nārāyaṇabhaṭṭa Parvaṇīkar of Jaipur. The manuscript, however, goes only as far as 11. 6, and apart from a few variant readings, Paṇḍit Śivadatta quotes only the figures of speech mentioned in the Sāhityavidyādharī. Generally speaking, the citations agree with the manuscript used by me.

Īśānadeva

The next commentary on the Naiṣadha was written by Īśānadeva in Benares. A few notable extracts from his commentary have been included in the Notes and the Vocabulary, and are taken from the following manuscript preserved in the Bhandarkar Institute.

No. 188 of 1879-80 is a fairly well-written and correct manuscript written in Saṁvat 1473 or 1417 A.D., as stated at the end. The manuscript contains the commentary on all the Cantos except the fourteenth, but a few leaves are mutilated. The manuscript frequently quotes Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's commentary, the citations being usually placed in a supplementary section at the end of the gloss on each verse,[43] and sometimes followed by the remark इत्यन्यतः.[44]

41. See Notes.
42. Ms. B is here incomplete and breaks off with सर्गस्या ... .
43. Under 3. 73; 2. 61; 6. 54; 6. 66; 6. 109 etc.
44. Under 6. 2; 7. 80; 7. 107 etc.

Under 7. 65 the scribe remarks that the gloss on the verse in question is not found in the manuscript of Īśānadeva's commentary (ईशानदेवभाष्यप्रति), and so has been incorporated from another commentary (इत्यन्यभाष्यतो न्यस्तम्).On examination the gloss turns out to be that of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, and as a matter of fact, helps us to supply an omission in the manuscripts of the latter.[45] Again, at the end of Canto XIX the scribe remarks that a folio is missing in the manuscript of Īśānadeva's commentary, and so the gloss on the last six verses of the Canto (19. 61-66) has been written by himself[46] with the help of Vyāsa Kālidāsa, who was his teacher, as we learn from the colophon at the end of our manuscript.

The date of Īśānadeva's commentary appears on the last leaf of the above manuscript. A portion of the leaf is unfortunately mutilated, but the date is clear enough, being Saṁvat 1378 or 1322 A.D.[47] The commentary was thus written within twentyfive years of the composition of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's work. Īśānadeva was a Śaiva ascetic and practised the Mādhūkarī method of begging. He asks the connoisseurs of poetry not to laugh at his attempt, and is profuse in the acknowledgement of his literary obligations to his teacher Vāmarāśi.[48] mentary is, in fact, based on that of Vidyādhara, whom he generally follows both in the readings and the interpretation of the verses. It may be noted that his work is sometimes useful in checking the readings found in the manuscripts of Vidyādhara.

Īśānadeva quotes very few authors. A quotation from Halāyudha in the gloss on 22. 4 is found in Aufrecht's edition of Abhidhānaratnamālā (2. 13), while a Vyavahārasāra is quoted under 15. 42.[50] A rule from the Cāndra grammar is cited under 7. 6.[51]

Narahari

A small number of extracts from the commentary of Narahari has been included in the Notes. There are several manuscripts of this commentary in the Bhandarkar Institute. The one borrowed by me (No. 140 of 1875-76) is well-written and correct, but covers only the first nine Cantos. A complete manuscript was lent to me later, but it was too late to make any use of it.

Details about Narahari and his date have already been given by R. G. Bhandarkar in his report for 1882-83: "The commentary ..... contains at the end of each canto a stanza in which the author gives his name as Narahari, and states that he was the son of one Svayaṁbhū, 'whose feet were incessantly adored by the king of Triliṅga', by his wife Nālamā, and that he was treated with kindness by Vidyāraṇya, the Yogin, who probably was his guru or preceptor. The king of Triliṅga or Telangana, alluded to here, must very likely be a prince of the Vijayanagara dynasty, and if the Vidyāraṇya mentioned by the writer was the same as Mādhava, who, when he renounced the world, assumed that name, our author flourished in the latter part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Harihara."[52] The verse on which Bhandarkar's statement is based is—

यं प्रासूत त्रिलिङ्गक्षितिपतिसतताराधिताङ्घ्रिः स्वयंभूः
पातिव्रत्यैकसीमा सुकविनरहरिं नालमा यं च माता ।
यं विद्यारण्ययोगी कलयति कृपया तत्कृतौ दीपिकायां
... . ॥

It should here be noted that the Triliṅga king referred to in the verse must have belonged to the dynasty which was reigning in Triliṅga or Telangana during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Inscriptions of these kings bearing dates such as 1374, 1411 and 1448 A.D. have been recorded,[53] and one of the kings of this dynasty, Vīranārāyaṇa Vema, is well-known to students of Sanskrit poetry as the author of a commentary on Amaruśataka.[54]

The reference to Vidyāraṇya is more important. It is usual to identify him with the famous Mādhavācārya of Vijayanagara, the brother of Sāyaṇa. Mādhava is said to have renounced the world in 1391 A.D., after which he assumed the name Vidyāraṇya.[55] Attempts have, however, been made to prove that Mādhava and Vidyāraṇya were two different persons.[56] We are told that "Vidyāraṇya was already an ascetic and the head of the Sringeri Mutt in 1377-78 (Epigraphia Carnatica VI koppa 19 and 31)" and that "Vidyāraṇya was dead in 1386 A.D. according to the second Sringeri Mutt copper-plate (Mys. Arch. Rep., 1916, page 59)".[57] We are not here concerned with the question of identity, but there is no difference of opinion about the fact that Vidyāraṇya was alive in the eighties of the fourteenth century. Vidyāraṇya was thus a contemporary of the Triliṅga kings, and as we have seen, one of these kings was a great admirer of Narahari's father Svayaṁbhū. The coincidence is not without interest, and lends support to Bhandarkar's suggestion that the Vidyāraṇya referred to by Narahari is no other than the sage of Vijayanagara. Narahari states that he is looked upon with favour by Vidyāraṇya Yogin (य विद्यारण्ययोगी कलयतिकृपया), and if we regard him as a disciple of the great Vidyāraṇya, we shall have to assign him to 1380 A.D. or thereabouts.

Narahari's connection with the Triliṅga kings through his father is apparent from the verse quoted above. It may be added in this connection that the author of Śabdacandrikā also refers to Vidyāraṇya and calls him his guru.[58] The work is attributed to Vāmanabhaṭṭa Bāṇa, the author of Pārvatīpariṇaya, Nalābhyudaya and Śabdaratnākara; and it is interesting to note that Vāmanabhaṭṭa was a protégé of the Triliṅga king Vīranārāyaṇa Vema, the hero of Vemabhūpālacarita by the same author. Vāmanabhaṭṭa and his patron Vema have been assigned to the early years of the fifteenth century,[59] and even if we suppose that Vidyāraṇya died as early as 1386 A.D., that does not conflict with his being the guru of Vāmanabhaṭṭa. Vidyāraṇya's literary associations seem to have extended to the neighbouring kingdom of Triliṅga; and though his interest was in philosophy, poets and scholars like Narahari and Vāmanabhaṭṭa came to sit at his feet.

Narahari's Dīpikā is probably the earliest commentary on the Naiṣadha to be written in South India, for he speaks of the absence of other commentaries in the beginning of his work.

असंनिधावन्यनिबन्धनानां कदापि कुर्यादुपकारमेतत्।
तरङ्गिणीनां तरणेरभावे तुम्बीफलेनापि तरन्ति पूरम्॥

Narahari's commentary, while it has nothing remarkable about it, is generally concise and seems to have been once popular. There have been recorded at least eight manuscripts of the work, and one of those in the Bhandarkar Institute is in Śāradā character.[60] The commentary seems to have found its way as far north as Kashmir, and Haraprasād Sastri notices an incomplete manuscript of Naiṣadhacarita with Narahari's commentary, which contains a verse to the effect that the Naiṣadha (evidently with the commentary of Narahari) was introduced into Kashmir during the reign of Sikandar.[61]

60. No. 141 of 1875-76. The date of this manuscript is, according to the Curator, Samvat 1207 or 1151 A.D. This date is impossible and evidently a mistake, as suggested by Mr. K. N. Dikshit, offg. Govt. Epigraphist, in a letter to Mr. P. K. Gode, Curator of the Bhandarkar Institute, dated the 14th May, 1932. Narahari's commentary was introduced into Kashmir more than two centuries after 1151 A.D. See below.

61. Mr. Gode has favoured me with a note on this point. The verse in question appears at the end of the manuscript—

वैकुण्ठकण्ठेनानीतः प्रबन्धो नैषधाभिधः॥

H. P. Sastri identifies this Sikandar with Sikandar Lodi, king of Delhi (1489-1517 A.D.). Notices of Sanskrit Mss., Vol. XI, 1895. Preface, p. 8. Mr. Gode rightly points out that the Sikandar referred to in the verse must be Sikandar the Idol-breaker who was king of Kashmir from 1386 to 1410 A.D. Imperial Gazetteer of India, Vol. II, 1909, p. 373.

There is only a small number of quotations in the portion of Narahari's commentary examined by me. Under 1. 13 he quotes Vāgbhaṭa's definition of the Virodha Alaṁkāra.[62] Under 3. 99 Narahari quotes the following line from Halāyudha— विहाया: पतङ्ग: पक्षी गरुत्मान् पक्षिखेचरा इति हलायुध:, but it is not found in Halāyudha's Abhidhānaratnamālā edited by Aufrecht. It is possible that Narahari refers to some other lexicographer of the same name. The following quotation from Yādavaprakāśa occurs in the gloss on 7. 109— भवो लीलाक्रियाचेष्टाभूत्यभिप्रायजन्तुषु इति यादवप्रकाश:, and is found in Oppert's edition of Vaijayantī. Other quotations from Yādavaprakāśa occur under 1. 17 and 30. Kṣīrasvāmin is quoted under 9. 158, and there is a quotation from a Bālabhūṣaṇakāra, who seems to be a grammatical writer, in the gloss on 1. 46.[63] Among other works Narahari quotes Viśvaprakāśa under 9. 4 and Bṛhatsaṁhitā under 1. 105.[64]

A considerable similarity is likely to be found between the commentary of Narahari and the Tilaka commentary of Cāritravardhana. A few extracts from the latter commentary have been given by Paṇḍit Śivadatta in the footnotes to the N. S. edition of Naiṣadha, and I have noticed a remarkable similarity between them and the corresponding portions of Narahari's commentary.[65] Cāritravardhana's gloss on Naiṣadha 7. 93 is also found quoted in a marginal note in the manuscript of Vidyādhara used by me, and I find that it is almost the same as the corresponding gloss of Narahari. I have not seen Cāritravardhana's work, but it will be worth while to compare the two commentaries.

Viśveśvara

A small fragment of Viśveśvarasūri's commentary was lent to me by the Bhandarkar Institute, being No. 187 of 1879-80. It is a fairly correct manuscript and covers Cantos VII, VIII, X and XI. Mallināṭha in his commentary on Naiṣadha 1. 5 criticises the interpretation of a Viśveśvara-bhaṭṭāraka, and if he is the same as Viśveśvara-sūri, as suggested by Aufrecht,[66] the author of our

A few extracts and readings from this fragment will be found in the Notes. The commentary appears to be concise and brief, and quotes Rājaśekhara under 7. 25, the lexicographer Ajayapāla under 7. 66, and Viśvaprakāśa several times.

Jinarāja

A number of extracts from the commentary of Jinarāja has been given in the Notes from Ms. No. 452 of 1895-1902 belonging to the collection in the Bhandarkar Institute. The manuscript which contains both Text and commentary is correct and well-written on thin paper, but unfortunately some of the earlier folios are worm-eaten, and some of the leaves have stuck together so tightly that it is often difficult to detach them. The manuscript was written in Saṁvat 1788 or 1732 A.D., as stated at the end of Canto XVI. The Śāka date 1653 is also mentioned.

The commentary of Jinarāja is not very old, as under 3. 4 he quotes the Manoramā of Bhaṭṭoji Dīkṣita who is assigned to about 1630 A.D.[67] At the same time Jinarāja must be regarded as earlier than 1676, as in the manuscript of Vidyādhara's commentary written in the latter year, Jinarāja's gloss on Naiṣadha 17. 196, 197 is found quoted.[68] It is, therefore, fairly certain that Jinarāja lived about 1650 A.D. He was a Jaina as suggested by his name, and the bulk of his quotations is from the grammar and the lexicon of the great Jaina savant Hemacandra. Under 16. 20 Jinarāja quotes a lexicographer named Śrīdhara.[69] Under 16. 119 he criticises a statement of Vardhamānamiśra, the author of Khaṇḍanaprakāśa, a commentary on Śrīharṣa's Khaṇḍanakhaṇḍakhādya.[70]

Jinarāja's commentary is known as Sukhāvabodhā and largely modelled on that of Nārāyaṇa, which it often supplements and

69. See Notes. Śrīdhara is quoted in the Puruṣakāra commentary on the Daiva. The Puruṣakāra has been assigned to the thirteenth century (see Introd. to Trivandrum ed.). According to Aufrecht, Śrīdhara is frequently quoted in Sundaragaṇi's Dhāturatnākara.

70. The passage in question has been cited by Paṇḍit Śivadatta in a Footnote to his edition. Vardhamāna is also the author of the well-known Kusumāñjaliprakāśa and has been assigned to the first quarter of the fourteenth century. See G. N. Kaviraj in Sarasvati Bhavan Studies, Vol. III, p. 134.

amplifies. But in his readings Jinarāja almost always follows the earlier commentaries of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara. Besides, he sometimes copies Vidyādhara, for example, in the gloss on Naiṣadha 7. 44[71] and 14. 58. Under 10. 76 he quotes Vidyādhara's interpretation of the last two lines,[72] word for word, and remarks केचित्.....इति व्याचक्षामु:.

The commentary does not systematically follow the accompanying Text found in the manuscript, but the Text is also important as generally agreeing with the earlier readings followed by Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara. Where Text and Commentary do not agree I have often designated the former as Jina (Text).

Jinarāja's commentary is an elaborate work, and has distinct merits of its own. The commentary is well-preserved in the above manuscript, though it contains a few gaps.[73] As a commentator Jinarāja belongs to the school of Nārāyaṇa, whom he generally follows in the matter of interpretation. But the real importance of Jinarāja's commentary lies in the fact that he follows a Text older than that followed by Nārāyaṇa, Mallinātha and others, and preserves to a considerable extent the continuity of the earlier and more reliable readings of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara. It is, however, noteworthy that in a few cases Jinarāja criticises and rejects the readings of the two earlier commentators, though he does not mention them by name.[74]

Mallinātha

Mallinātha's commentary on Naiṣadhacarita is known as Jīvātu, but the Palghat edition used by me goes as far as the eleventh Canto only. Mallinātha may be assigned to the fifteenth century or the latter portion of the fourteenth, as he wrote a commentary on Vidyādhara's Ekāvalī composed in the first quarter of the fourteenth century.[75] His work has all the merits associated with his well-known commentaries on the other Kāvyas. Some of his readings are, however, very peculiar, and do not agree with those found in the other commentators.

The commentary of Mallinātha is particularly rich in lexicographical quotations. Apart from Amara and Viśvaprakāśa, the largest number of quotations is from Vaijayantī, which is also referred to as Yādava. I have examined some of these quotations, and find that they occur in Oppert's edition. The same remark applies also to the citations from Halāyudha, the author of Abhidhānaratnamālā. Mallinātha quotes also Utpalamālā,[76] Śābdikamaṇḍana,[77] Śabdārṇava,[78] Amaraśeṣa,[79] the commentary of Kṣīrasvāmin,[80] and the lexicographers Śāśvata,[81] Keśava,[82] Dhanañjaya,[83] Ajayapāla or Ajapāla[84] and Bhojarāja.[85]

Among other authors he quotes the Bhāṣyakāra,[86] the Nyāsoddyotakāra,[87] Vāmana,[88] Kaiyaṭa,[89] Bhaṭṭamalla,[90] Varāhamihira,[91] Vāgbhaṭa,[92] and Pitāmaha.[93] The Bhūpāla quoted under 3. 109 is Siṅgabhūpāla, the author of Rasārṇavasudhākara.[94] A definition of sugarcandy and varieties of sugar is cited from a Vaiśeṣikakāra in the gloss on 8. 101.[95] A quotation from Mīmāṁsakas occurs in the gloss on 2. 61.[96]

The foregoing statement of Mallinātha's references is compiled from his commentary on the first eleven Cantos of Naiṣadha, but the importance of the lexicographical quotations will be seen even from the above list, as Malli quotes several lexicons which are no longer extant.[97] It may also be noted that Malli refers to his commentaries on Kirātārjunīya and Kumārasambhava in his gloss on Naiṣadha 5. 71 and 8. 99. On the other hand, he refers to Śrīharṣa's poem in his commentaries on Raghuvaṁśa and Śiśupālavadha.[98]

Nārāyaṇa

The standard commentary on the Naiṣadha is the Prakāśa of Nārāyaṇa; at any rate, it is the most popular. Nārāyaṇa was the son of Narasiṁha Paṇḍita whose surname is stated to be Bedarkar in the colophon at the end of each Canto. The title Bedarkar seems to suggest that Nārāyaṇa was a native of Mahārāṣṭra.

Nothing is definitely known about Nārāyaṇa's date. It is, however, certain that he is earlier than 1637 A.D., as there is a manuscript of his commentary written in Saṁvat 1693, being No. 368 of 1884-87 preserved in the Bhandarkar Institute.[99] On the other hand, his work is later than Medinīkoṣa, as he quotes this lexicon in the gloss on 1. 91, the quotation being found in the printed edition. Medinīkoṣa is assigned to about the fourteenth century,[100] and one of the earliest writers to quote it is Rāyamukuṭa who wrote his commentary on Amarakoṣa in 1431 A.D.[101] If we assume that Medinīkoṣa began to be popular in the fifteenth century, Nārāyaṇa who quotes from it may be assumed to be later than 1400. He is of course earlier than 1637.

It is possible that Nārāyaṇa was acquainted with the commentary of Mallinātha. In his gloss on 1. 86 Nārāyaṇa says चम्पकोपरि भ्रमरो न तिष्ठतीति केचित्। तत्र तिष्ठति परंतु म्रियते इति प्रामाणिकाः. This looks like a summary of Malli's remarks on 1. 91—

97. Of these, the Śabdārnava is frequently quoted by Sarvānanda who wrote his commentary on the Amarakoṣa in 1159 A.D. (See the Trivandrum ed.). Sarvānanda quotes also the Utpalinī and Ajaya or Ajayakoṣa. With regard to Bhoja, he is quoted by Kṣīrasvāmin (see Introd. to Oka's ed.).

Even if we regard Nārāyaṇa as later than Mallinātha, that would not conflict with the probable date of Nārāyaṇa suggested above.

Considering the bulk of his commentary, Nārāyaṇa quotes only a small number of authors and works. He refers to the Bhāṣyakāra, Kaiyaṭa and the author of Padamañjarī, the well-known commentary on Kāśikā, in the gloss on 14. 55.[101a] Haradatta is quoted under 15. 89, and appears to be the same as the author of Padamañjarī. Most of the lexicographical quotations are from Amara and Viśvaprakāśa, and quotations from the latter work sometimes show variations from the printed text.[102] Under 19. 45 Nārāyaṇa quotes Amaraśeṣa which is quoted also by Mallinātha, the citation being practically the same in both the commentators.[103] There are quotations from Halāyudha's Abhidhānaratnamālā,[104] Medinīkoṣa, and Dharaṇi[105] and Yādava.[106] The lexicographer Ajayapāla is quoted several times,[107] and there are references to Kṣīrasvāmin and a Vaidyakanighaṇṭu under 22. 59 and 20. 21 respectively.[108] Vasantarāja's work on augury is referred to in the gloss on 15. 76, and Sārasindhu, which seems to be a work on the science of horses, is quoted under 1. 73. In the gloss on 22. 113 there is an interesting quotation from a Kalākoṣa, which describes a method of removing stains from cloths.[109] Among Purāṇas, Nārāyaṇa refers to the Bhāgavata,[110] the Bhaviṣyottara,[111] the Kāśīkhaṇḍa[112] and the Quotations from philosophical authors are practically absent, but under 22. 36 there is a reference to the views of Vyomaśiva, Śrīdhara and Udayana on the Vaiśeṣika theory of darkness. These views are actually found in Vyomaśiva's commentary on Praśastapādabhāṣya, Śrīdhara's Nyāyakandalī and Udayana's Kiraṇāvalī, and a brief summary of them will be found in Appendix I. Nārāyaṇa seems to have been familiar with the works of Udayana, as he quotes him also to illustrate the use of a word occurring in Naiṣadha 5. 105.[119]

The Prakāśa of Nārāyaṇa has practically ousted every other commentary on Naiṣadha. Nārāyaṇa does not deal with the figures of speech, but pays all his attention to interpretation and grammar. The popularity of his work is due to the fact that he tries to explore all possible meanings, which explains the large number of alternative interpretations found in his commentary. Like Īśānadeva, he sometimes gives Vernacular equivalents of Sanskrit words, some of which have been included in the Vocabulary.

General Estimate of the Commentaries

We have so far noticed eight commentaries on Naiṣadhacarita, of which only two, those by Mallinātha and Nārāyaṇa, have been printed. Among the commentaries mentioned here, the Sāhityavidyādharī of Vidyādhara is the oldest and, in fact, the earliest known commentary on Naiṣadhacarita. The Dīpikā of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita is the most learned, and there are few Kāvya commentaries which can compare with it in the extent and variety of its references. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita seems to have realised that Naiṣadha was essentially a learned poem, and must be approached with the full equipment of the traditional learning. Mallinātha's Jīvātu is an excellent introduction, and pays due attention to interpretation as well as grammar and rhetoric. Nārāyaṇa's commentary is the most comprehensive and particularly well adapted to the needs of the student. Yet no single commentary is sufficient for a proper understanding of the poem. It is often necessary to compare different interpretations and readings, and seek the help of more than one commentator in solving the difficulties of many a puzzling verse. The extracts given in the Notes, however inadequate, will show the necessity of such comparison and co-ordination. At any rate, the need of some such attempt was felt by the commentator Bhagīratha, who in his Naiṣadhagūḍhārthadīpikā gives notes and extracts from a number of earlier commentators, besides offering interpretations of his own.[120]

The Commentaries and the Text of the Naiṣadha

A study of the commentaries reveals a bewildering mass of variant readings, and there is probably no other poem of the Kāvya period, which presents so many of them. It is, however, possible to attempt a classification and discover a certain degree of uniformity among the various groups of readings. Generally speaking, the readings of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara tend to agree, and are followed among later commentators by Īśānadeva and Jinarāja. So far as readings are concerned, Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, Vidyādhara, Īśānadeva and Jinarāja belong to the same group. It should, however, be noted that there is sometimes disagreement between Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara, and where such differences exist Vidyādhara's readings are often followed by Īśānadeva. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara follow the same text, but there are also occasional differences, and as we have already remarked, Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita sometimes mentions the readings of Vidyādhara without mentioning the latter's name. Even apart from this, there were other variants in the time of the two early commentators, and they are often mentioned and sometimes discussed by Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita.[121]

120. See Paṇḍit Vindhyeśvariprasad's Sanskrit Introduction to Tārkikarakṣā, p. 31. Bhagīratha quotes Nṛhari (Narahari ?), Lakṣmaṇa, Nārāyaṇa, Viśveśvara, Jagaddhara, Tāṇḍava, Mukuṭa, Jīvātu and other commentators and commentaries. The following verse occurs in the manuscript which is incomplete—अध्यापकं विना यो नैषधगूढार्थदीपिकां टीकाम् । पश्यति रसनाग्रे तु वाग्देवी तस्य स्फुरति भृशम् (?) ॥

121. See, for example, Notes (Extracts) under 6. 109.

The readings of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara frequently differ from those of Nārāyaṇa, and I have taken care to indicate the difference between the two groups of readings in the Notes. It should, however, be noted that Nārāyaṇa sometimes mentions the earlier readings as variants,[122] though he does not adopt them in his commentary. Sometimes, again, the readings followed by Nārāyaṇa (and also by Mallinātha) are mentioned by Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita as variants.[123] Such cases are, however, comparatively few, and there is a real difference between Nārāyaṇa and the earlier commentators in the matter of readings. There is another class of readings in Nārāyaṇa, which differs not only from those of Caṇḍūpaṇḍita, Vidyādhara and their followers, but from those of Mallinātha, with whom he otherwise frequently agrees. Examples of such readings will be found in the Notes, and a few may be cited here: स्तनावटे (7. 80) for स्तनातटे ; रथस्य तस्य (6. 1) for रथस्यदस्य ; दराञ्छित (11. 96) for दराञ्चित ; एतादृशोः (10. 120) for एतद्दृशोः; निःस्वात (17. 26) for निः स्वान् ; ईयिवान् (4. 115) for एतवान् ; विदर्भराजप्रभवाभिरामम्(6. 57) for विदर्भराजप्रभवानिवासम्. Readings like these may be regarded as spurious, but their number is not large.

The readings of Mallinātha are sometimes very peculiar, and neither wholly belong to the group of Nārāyaṇa nor to the earlier group of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara. Broadly speaking, Mallinātha's readings, as far as I have examined them, fall into three categories. Sometimes they agree with those of the earlier commentators, but differ from those of Nārāyaṇa. Sometimes they agree with the readings of Nārāyaṇa, but differ from those of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara. Sometimes, however, Mallinātha's readings, and the number of these is by no means small, differ not only from the readings of Nārāyaṇa but from those of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, Vidyādhara and their followers.[124] In the case of some peculiar readings, Mallinātha, it is true, agrees with Narahari,[125] but there is no systematic resemblance between the readings of the two commentators. I am inclined to hold that Mallinātha sometimes deviates from the original text of Śrīharṣa's poem even to a greater extent than Nārāyaṇa.

124. Examples of this will be found in the Notes.

125. See Notes 3. 63, 65, 131; 7. 66.

The above account of the readings of Naiṣadha must be regarded as tentative, as there are many other unpublished commentaries on the poem to which I have had no access. But there is no doubt about the text followed by the two early commentators. There are certain verses which are not explained by the latter, but found in Nārāyaṇa.[126] These are probably to be regarded as interpolations. Nārāyaṇa himself calls certain verses interpolations,[127] but these are generally variations of preceding verses. It is also noteworthy that the readings of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara are sometimes distinctly superior, and give a simpler meaning than those of Nārāyaṇa.[128] An extreme instance is provided by the reading रम्याधर (21. 155) followed by Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara and the curious हम्याधर found in Nārāyaṇa. In spite of such divergences, the text of Naiṣadhacarita is generally well-preserved in the commentary of Nārāyaṇa, though it is Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara who record the earlier and more authoritative readings.

SYNOPSIS

The story of Nala and Damayantī is too well-known to need any introduction. The Naiṣadhacarita deals with the earlier portion of Nala's career ending with his romantic marriage with Damayantī. The episode to which Śrīharṣa devotes about two-thousand eight hundred verses is related in less than two hundred couplets in the Mahābhārata. Except for minor details, Śrīharṣa follows the great epic in the broad outlines of the story so far as it concerns the episode dealt with by him. There is, however, one noteworthy point of difference. In the Mahābhārata, Nala accepts the mission of the gods, and betakes himself to Kuṇḍina, and after telling Damayantī that he is Nala, asks her to choose one of the gods. Damayantī protests and declares her love for him. Nala replies that he cannot seek his own interest in the face of his promise to the gods, but he will do so if she can devise a means by which self-interest can be reconciled with Dharma or the call of duty.[1] Thereupon, Damayantī suggests that Nala should come to her Svayaṁvara, and she would absolve him from blame by choosing him in the presence of the gods. In the Naiṣadhacarita, on the other hand, Nala carefully conceals his identity from Damayantī while delivering the message of the gods. The difference, though one of detail, makes Śrīharṣa's conception of the character of Nala fundamentally different from that found in the corresponding portion of the story in the Mahābhārata. In the Naiṣadhacarita, we find Nala, disguised as the messenger of the gods, reasoning with Damayantī and urging her to accept one of the gods as her consort. He is alternately sarcastic and annoyed at her evasions and persistence in her love for Nala. Her grief and entreaties move him to pity, yet he drives her to despair for the sake of his duty and honour. When at last the tears of Damayantī set free his repressed emotion, and he throws off his disguise in a frenzy of love and grief, the thought that is uppermost in his mind is not the fear of the gods, but the disgrace which he has unwittingly brought to the honourable calling of the messenger. Yet, in the ultimate resort, he appeals to his own conscience and the sincerity with which he has striven to execute his mission, and neither stands in awe of the gods nor concerns himself about the opinion of men.[2] In Śrīharṣa's poem, Nala's anxiety is not how to reconcile self-interest with Dharma, but how to reconcile his honour with the failure of his mission. The emphasis on the individual judgment and moral responsibility makes Śrīharṣa's portrait of Nala one of the noblest creations of Sanskrit poetry, at least so far as conception of character is concerned.

The fact that Śrīharṣa confines himself to the lighter side of Nala's career makes him dilate on certain minor details which the Mahābhārata either mentions briefly or ignores altogether. The latter work disposes of the Svayaṁvara in a few lines, and makes only a passing reference to the marriage and the joys of the newly married couple. These topics occupy whole Cantos in the Naiṣadhacarita; while there are certain others, for example, the contents of Cantos VI, VII, XV, XIX, XX, XXI and XXII, which are totally absent in the Mahābhārata. The same is true of the greater portion of the contents of the seventeenth Canto.

CANTO I

The first Canto opens with an elaborate description of Nala. His might is extolled, and he is called 'the destroyer of kings'. His physical beauty is next described. 'The autumnal full moon is not fit even to play the slave to his face'; and nymphs and mortal women are never tired of looking at his beauty. (1—31)

Damayantī is now introduced, but the description of her beauty is reserved for a later Canto. She falls in love with Nala without ever seeing him and elicits news about him from messengers, Brāhmins and bards coming from the land of Niṣadha. Though never seen by her before, sleep shows him to her as a deep mystery; while she sometimes diverts herself by having Nala painted on the wall of her pleasure-chamber as enjoying her company. Nala, in his turn, also falls in love with Damayantī without seeing her and yields to the power of the god of love, who disturbed the equanimity even of Brahmā, the age-worn creator of the world. The night, 'soft with moonshine', is a witness to Nala's sleepless suffering, and he at last seeks peace in a visit to his pleasure-garden in the outskirts of the capital. A description of the horse he rides follows, and then he is shown to reach the thickly shaded garden where he sees various flowers in bloom, the sight of which is supposed to enhance the grief of forlorn lovers. (31-77)

Nala curses the Ketaka blossom with its serrated flower leaves: 'sharp with thorns, it is thrust by Cupid like a barbed arrow into the hearts of separated lovers'. He shudders to see maiden creepers kissed by the gentle breeze, and views with distaste Campaka blossoms, and those of the Palāśa, Pāṭalā, and others in bloom, all deadly weapons of the god of love. But he welcomes the trees bending with the weight of fruits in obeisance to their foster-mother Earth; while cuckoos sing, peacocks dance and the ripples of the pleasure tank play music in his honour. Though parrots recite his praise and cuckoos sing his glory, his joy is superficial and ill conceals the grief of his heart, while he is pining for 'the fair-browed maid of Vidarbha.' (78—106)

Now follows a laboured description of an artificial lake in the garden, on which the king sees a golden swan disporting himself with the female swans, some young, others grown up. After a while the swan falls asleep, and the king, slowly approaching the shore of the lake, with gentle hands catches hold of the bird. The swan, fearing that death is near, pours forth a melancholy strain of the deepest grief, pleading the cause of his wife at home, and the young ones in the nest, which have not yet learnt to speak. Nala is moved to pity, and lets the bird go. (107-45)

CANTO II

The golden swan comes back to Nala, and expresses his gratitude to the king for his mercy in releasing him. The king's mercy is all the greater, because hunting is no sin in a king who only kills the fish that feed on their weaker comrades, the birds that injure the trees on which they build their nests, and the deer that oppress the harmless grass. The bird offers to repay the kindness of the king by doing a kindness to him, and volunteers the story of Damayantī, the unmarried daughter of the king of Vidarbha, of whom the swan gives a laboured description. (1-40)

The bird slyly suggests the subject of a worthy husband for Damayantī. He insinuates that Nala alone is worthy of her; but union with her, beloved of the gods, is by no means easy; 'just as it is difficult for the night lotus to enjoy the light of the beclouded moon'. So the bird offers to sing Nala's praise before Damayantī with such effect that, once treasured in her heart, his image will not be ousted from it even by the lord of the gods. Nala consents and describes his love for Damayantī. The moon and the south wind burn his limbs. 'If the arrows of Cupid are flowers and not thunder, surely these flowers grow on creepers that are poisonous'. The bird forthwith sets out for the capital of the king of Vidarbha. His golden wings flicker with speed, while the gold of them is set off by the blue of the sky. (40-72)

The bird at length reaches the capital of Damayantī's father, and now there is a dignified description of the city, which is full of crystal houses and bejewelled chambers, heaven and earth laughing with them; their nightly splendour makes one imagine that the full moon is eternally present in the city. The pleasure tank is reddened by the saffron paint of beautiful women sporting in its waters, and the city reflected in the tank looks like heaven. The mercantile life of the city is also pictured. In the market place there arises the rumbling sound of mills grinding sweet-smelling flour. In the shops 'cowries' are counted; merchants display an infinite variety of wares for sale. Among objects of luxury are conchs, gems, camphor powder and musk. The saffron stalls of the perfume shops look like lingering rays of the setting sun. The white silken streamers flying over the edifices are shaded by the gloom of the azure chambers, and maidens step from the top of their pleasure mansions on to clouds which carry them to the pleasure halls of their lovers. (73-105)

The bird sees Damayantī in her pleasure garden in the company of her maiden friends, looking like the crescent of the moon in an assembly of stars. The swan looks for a suitable landing ground and makes a circuit in the air above, radiating the gleam of his golden wings.

CANTO III

The swan alights on the ground close to Damayantī, who tries to catch the bird and follows him to some distance despite the warning of her comrades. The bird lures her to a thicker part of the wood and surprises her by addressing her in graceful human speech. After mocking her for attempting to capture him, the swan presents himself as one of the birds drawing Brahmā's chariot, but now on his holiday in the course of which he is travelling through the world. The bird declares that he is known to Nala whose virtues and beauty he carefully describes. (1-40)

He claims to have free access to the inner apartments of Nala where the fair inmates confide to him all their secrets, and Cupid's latest commands. He deplores that some maiden other than Damayantī will marry Nala and enjoy the celestial happiness unattainable by her. But who has probed into the working of the Creator's mind ? Perchance she might be Nala's bride, young and unmarried as she is. Perhaps the Creator himself, by uniting the moon with the night, and Śiva with Pārvatī, is acquiring practice successfully to bring about her union with Nala. How, too, would the Creator, grown hoary with wisdom, save himself from disgrace if she was married to any other than Nala ? Be that as it may, the bird expresses his regret for fatiguing her and asks her what service he may render her. (40-52)

Damayantī requests pardon of the swan for having tried to catch him, entreating the bird to forgive her light-hearted action as that of an inexperienced maid. But what desire of hers would come to fruition ? Where is the maid who would express her inmost desire in words, her longing to catch the moon with the hand? (53-59)

The swan replies that all things are attainable on earth. Even if she should desire the city of Laṅkā, situate in mid ocean, it would be hers. Damayantī, delighted and abashed, says that her heart longs neither for the city of Laṅkā nor for any other thing. But the swan, intent on eliciting a confession of love, explains her statement as having a double meaning, namely, her longing for Nala, and insists on a clear and straightforward declaration of her will.

If she purposes to marry some one else, the bird will not plead her cause before Nala; it would not be right to undertake a mission whose purport was doubtful. (60-73)

The firm words of the swan cause Damayantī to discard shame and hesitation, and she makes a fervid confession of her love for Nala. How can the bird conceive of her union with any one else? Can it be imagined that the night may be joined to any one other than the moon or that the day lily may have a lover other than the sun? Damayantī declares her intention to enter the flames, if her father disallows her marriage with Nala, and exhorts the swan to plead her cause before the king, choosing the right moment, and with all the resources of the art of persuasion. She entreats the bird to give her what is more precious to her than her life, and urges him not to tarry, since deliberation is meet only in a matter that admits of delay. (74-96)

The swan smiles at this mad declaration of love, and declares that there is nothing for him to do. Cupid himself has brought about the union of Damayantī and Nala. The bird then gives an intricate description of the conventional stages of love, through which Nala is supposed to have passed, and congratulates Damayantī on her manifold virtues which have attracted even Nala. May she, the bird continues, shine with Nala as the night with the moon, and may he shine with her as the moon with the night! (97—117)

The swan then takes leave of Damayantī and speedily returns to Nala's capital where he finds the king under an Aśoka tree, crowned with a blaze of flowers, reclining on a bed of young leaves.

CANTO IV

This Canto carries the story little further. It is principally concerned with the description of the unbearable grief of Damayantī owing to her absence from Nala. The monotony of the description is relieved by Damayantī's address to the moon and Cupid, which here and there reaches a high lyrical level (47-99). This is followed by a playful dialogue between Damayantī and a girl companion in musical verses, one half of which is spoken by the former and the other half by the latter. (101-9).

At the end of the dialogue, Damayantī faints 'with Cupid's fire smouldering in her mind', but her comrades restore her to consciousness by means of cool appliances like lotus leaves and snow. The noise made by the girls brings her father to the scene.

The minister and the physician also come in. The physician prescribes the fragrant Nalada herb, an efficacious sedative; while the minister predicts that the remedy will be found to be Nala. Damayantī's father realises that his daughter has reached the age when 'flowers act as arrows on the body'; so he announces that the Svayaṁvara gathering, for Damayantī to choose her husband, will soon be convened.

CANTO V

While preparations for Damayantī's Svayaṁvara takes place, the sage Nārada with his companion Parvata pursues an aerial journey to heaven. He is received by Indra who evinces an extraordinary degree of politeness and courtesy. The king of the gods asks Nārada why mortal princes have of late ceased to come to heaven and share his hospitality as a reward for dying glorious deaths in battle.

Nārada replies that warlike activities are no longer the concern of kings on earth. Damayantī's Svayaṁvara is at hand. Cupid's order has gone abroad, and the mortal princes are now concerned about finery and other things likely to enhance their credit in Damayantī's eyes. But he (Nārada) loves to witness warfare, and as it is out of fashion on the earth he expects Indra to provide this amusement for him.

Indra declines Nārada's request. His attention is rivetted on Damayantī's Svayaṁvara. Hastily bidding farewell to the sage, he sets out earthward much to the chagrin of the nymphs of heaven, who give vent to their spleen by sarcastic remarks about the lord of the gods running after a mortal woman. Indra is accompanied by Agni, Varuṇa and Yama, three divine simpletons, who follow Indra because he happens to lead the way.

The gods meet Nala on the way as he proceeds to the city of Kuṇḍina to attend Damayantī's Svayaṁvara. They greet Nala and announce that they have a favour to ask of him. Nala's heart overflows with sentiments of generosity and self-sacrifice at the thought of the gods coming to him as suppliants, but his charitable disposition is soon put to a severe test, when he is asked by the crafty Indra to undertake a mission to Damayantī on behalf of the four gods in order to persuade her to choose one of them as her husband.

Nala boldly refuses, though at the outset he had promised to grant any favour the gods might ask. He warns the gods not to make themselves ridiculous by asking him to act as a messenger to a maiden whom he himself loves and pines for. Indra is first sarcastic and then conciliatory, and the four gods join in exhorting Nala to earn eternal fame by carrying out his promise. Bound by a promise, the mighty demon Bali and the great Vindhya mountain remain to this day where they promised to stay; why should he then hesitate to keep his? Life is transient and there is nothing lasting. He should on no account neglect virtue, the abiding reality. Fame, not Damayantī, is his true bride. Who would renounce the beloved Fame, fairer than the moon, and faithful even when absent in the farthest regions, for the sake of a maiden whose possession is but a passing shadow?

Nala is flattered to hear these words, and in spite of his love for Damayantī, undertakes the mission urged on him by the gods. Indra marks his pleasure by giving Nala the power of becoming invisible at will.

CANTO VI

Nala reaches the city of Kuṇḍina and views its streets hallowed by Damayantī's feet. He sighs deeply, thinking how the desire of his heart has been thwarted by the gods. But he is determined to carry out his promise. He goes about invisible by virtue of Indra's boon and enters the royal palace and the inner apartments assigned to the ladies of the royal household. Seeing all, but himself unseen, he moves freely among the womenfolk, inadvertently jostling some and surprising others in their toilette. Passing women are frightened when they touch Nala's invisible figure, and he is sometimes struck by a ball when it is flung about by the girls while playing.

After these and similar adventures, Nala comes to see Damayantī, recognising her by her superior beauty, amidst a throng of beautiful maids. He hears his own name uttered by a parrot, which has learnt it from maidens who had used it to console Damayantī in her grief. His reflection on the bejewelled floor is not noticed, though clearly visible among his own portraits drawn by Damayantī's comrades for her diversion.

Meanwhile, the four gods, not wholly depending upon Nala's mission, had sent women messengers to plead in their behalf. Nala who is still invisible rejoices to see the suit of three of the gods rejected by Damayantī, but he hears with misgivings the peroration of the messenger of Indra, which is cheered by her comrades in the hall. What greater glory can befall a maiden, asks Indra's messenger, than to be loved by the mighty Indra, the greatest among the gods? Let her accept the invitation from Indra to share in the sovereignty of heaven and the worlds, and think of the pleasure there is in walks by the celestial Gaṅgā, and in the garden of Nandana.

Damayantī replies with a smile. Indra's greatness is beyond the range of words; how can he be sufficiently praised? Certainly will she serve Indra, but it is a human Indra, incarnate in the form of a mortal king, to whom she has given her heart. Doubtless heaven is a land of bliss, but Bhārata, the best of lands, has both joys and duties to offer; and it is for happiness blended with religious virtue that she aspires. Moreover the desires of mortals are determined by Fate, and their tastes differ. The joy of success is common to all in an equal measure; hence no one is to be blamed for his likes and dislikes. In a word, Damayantī makes it clear that Indra's merits, however attractive they may be, do not induce her to give up the man whom she loves.

Indra's messenger is downcast by Damayantī's speech, and makes no reply. But Nala is braced to hear her words.

CANTO VII

In this Canto the progress of the story is halted by a description of the beauty of the princess. Nala who is still invisible views Damayantī and describes her in detail, 'beginning from the hair and ending with the toe-nails', which is literally true. He then decides to make himself visible to Damayantī and her friends.

CANTO VIII

The girls are astonished at the sudden appearance of a stranger in the female apartments. Damayantī, however, remains cool, bids the stranger welcome and asks him in poetic language to tell his name, origin and destination. Without waiting for a reply, she addresses to him a high-flown description of his beauty (32-44). Where does the full moon go to on the moonless nights of the month, if it is not merged in his face? Is he not the love god reborn, after his burning by Śiva? Or, perhaps he is some one allied to the gods, to judge from his lustre, surpassing gold, and the manner in which he has eluded the sentinels and made his entry.

Nala occupies the seat offered by Damayantī and coolly introduces himself as a messenger from the gods. After a brief greeting, he sets himself to describe the love of the four gods for Damayantī, and narrates in detail the wanton tyranny of Cupid over each of them (58-84). The trees of heaven have been stripped of their young shoots to provide leafy beds for the feverish limbs of Indra. 'The god of fire has been so heated by Cupid that, having himself experienced what it is to be heated, he will not heat others again.' The condition of Yama and Varuṇa is no better. The gods, on hearing about Damayantī's Svayaṁvara, have come to the earth and sent the speaker as a messenger to her, who now delivers their combined message, couched in poetic language calculated to soften her heart.

The gods in their message (90-106) appeal to Damayantī to have pity on them and not to let them be slain by the invisible arrows of the lowborn Cupid. Let her adorn heaven without delay; but if she prefers to remain on earth, her motherland, they will transform the earth itself into heaven!

Nala concludes by entreating Damayantī to fulfil the purpose of his mission by choosing one of the gods as her husband. Let her gratify Indra or save the love-sick Agni from his plight; let her take pity on Yama or choose Varuṇa.

CANTO IX

Nala's appeal produces no effect on Damayantī who considers his words misplaced, and asks him to communicate his name and family. He evades her question by suggesting that their conversation may run smoothly even without his disclosing his name, and that it is also the custom, among the good, not to utter one's own name. (1-13)

Damayantī retorts that she, too, then must refrain from conversing with him, as it is not the custom among respectable women to talk with strangers. Nala tries to smile away her retort and begs her to send a favourable answer to the gods. Damayantī protests that a mortal woman can never be worthy of a god: 'how can a hind desire the lord of elephants'? (16-29)

She continues, speaking indirectly through a companion, that the all-knowing gods ought to have been aware of her love for Nala whom she has determined to marry. If he should refuse, she would end her life by suicide. (30-35)

Nala is somewhat annoyed at these words, and rebukes Damayantī for preferring a mortal to a god: the camel, likewise, loves the bitter and thorny Śamī plant, and rejects the sugar-cane. As to suicide, Indra, the lord of the upper regions, will take her away, if she hangs herself and remains suspended in the air, while the god of fire or water will only be too glad if she enters the flames or the water. But Nala softens his tone and makes a further appeal to Damayantī by picturing for her a glorious union with one of the gods. (38-59)

Damayantī heaves a deep sigh and calls Nala the worthy messenger of Yama, the god of death. Upon her supplication, a girl invites the visitor to halt for the day and wait till the Svayaṁvara which is to take place on the morrow: there is so great a resemblance between him and the portrait of Nala drawn before Damayantī by the golden swan. Meanwhile, he must not talk of the gods again; her eyes are far too drenched with the onrush of tears. (61-69)

His cruelty comes home to Nala, and he begins to think himself not the messenger of Death, but Death himself. But though pierced by the pathetic appeals of Damayantī, he remains faithful to his mission and makes a final attempt to persuade. Further protest is useless, he says, for the gods possess various wish-fulfilling agencies which will at once bring her within their grasp. How can she hope to marry Nala, if the gods are angry? How can even the marriage rites, for instance, take place without the sacred fire, if the fire god burns with anger, but not in flames? What mortal can obtain even the thing that is in his hands, if the gods mean to frustrate him? (73-83)

Hearing these words, Damayantī begins to feel convinced that she has lost Nala for ever, and pours forth her grief in melancholy strains of the deepest despair. She is anxious that the news of her death should reach Nala and bring home to him her undying love for him. She asks the South Wind to scatter her ashes, after she is dead, northward in the direction of Nala's capital. Her reason rocks; she weeps and bemoans her fate.

Damayantī's tears stir the inmost depths of Nala's heart. He forgets his mission and discloses his identity in an impassioned address, the frenzy of which is in marked contrast to his cool-headed advocacy of the claims of the gods. Why does she weep? He asks. Does she not see Nala standing before her? Soon, however, he realises that he has proved false to his mission and brought on himself irreparable disgrace. But he is conscious of the sincerity and innocence of his motives and the power of Destiny; so he prepares to face the gods with courage, in defiance of whatever aspersions may be spread by the glib tongue of report. (101-126)

Now the golden swan appears suddenly, and advises Nala not to afflict Damayantī any more, nor stand in any more awe of the gods, since he has exerted himself so sincerely in their cause. Nala asks Damayantī to think well before she makes her choice lest she should afterwards repent. He says so quite indifferently, and not for fear of the gods. He will repay her love even by sacrificing his life, if it is for her good. (127-135)

A great change comes over Damayantī. The straightforward maiden who adduced learned arguments about the respective merits of heaven and earth while replying to Indra's messenger, and bandied retorts with Nala himself, observes incorrigible silence when his identity is revealed to her. A girl companion intervenes, and reproduces what Damayantī once addressed to Nala, while looking at his portrait and drenching it with her tears. (143-155)

Damayantī then gives a hint, unperceived by others, that Nala should come to her Svayaṁvara along with the gods. Nala consents and returns forthwith to the gods to give them a true report on the failure of his mission.

CANTO X

This Canto describes Damayantī's Svayaṁvara. Princes of diverse lands are on their way to the festal gathering, and huge multitudes betake themselves to the city Kuṇḍina, some to seek the hand of the princess, some to carry her away by force, others to wait upon the rest and yet others merely to look at the spectacle (3). The poet explains why certain among the gods did not attend the Svayaṁvara: Brahmā was too old to entertain the idea of marriage and Kubera too ugly for that purpose (13, 16). The four gods Indra, Agni, Yama and Varuṇa, whose proposals had been rejected by Damayantī, come to the Svayaṁvara, each assuming the form of Nala. To acquire the similitude of Nala's beauty was no easy task. They made and remade the moon and the lotus their face, and looking at it in a mirror, broke it up anew; it was not beautiful enough (20).

The royal guests are received with lavish hospitality. Coming as they do from different regions, they do not understand one another's dialect and so speak Sanskrit, the common language. The next day the Svayaṁvara opens, and the suitors arrive and occupy their seats. Nala comes, too, and eclipses the others by his radiance, as the moon does the stars. (27-39)

There are now five Nalas, the true one and the four gods disguised as Nala. The kings who are jealous of Nala's beauty console themselves by saying that after all there are several others like him. The beauty of the bogus Nalas attracts even the real Nala who, not suspecting the fraud, asks them if they are Cupid, Purūravas and the two Aśvins, all models of beauty. The impostors calmly reply that they are none of these. (40-45)

The Svayaṁvara begins in brilliant sunshine. Vālmīki praises it and Śukrācārya describes it in detail. But king Bhīma, Damayantī's father, is at a loss how to describe the numerous kings to his daughter. Viṣṇu who is present on the scene relieves the embarrassment of the king by asking Sarasvatī to introduce the princes to Damayantī in orations worthy of the distinguished assembly.

A laboured description of Sarasvatī follows, in which the various limbs of the goddess are described as representing different branches of learning (73-87). Damayantī is then summoned to the assembly, and the poet here describes her beauty and adornment in elaborate verses (91-107).

The splendour of the princess creates a sensation among the suitors, who with faltering tongue express their admiration in playful if hyperbolical verses, designed to convey the confusion of their mind (111-131). They are at a loss to find out who created Damayantī: was it the age-worn Brahmā or the Moon, or the Spring, or the god of love? Indra who sits close to Nala opens his mouth to describe her with a few well-chosen epithets, which at the same time represent the names of nymphs, Indra's mistresses in heaven. Nala looks at him warily, but the crafty dissembler explains away the names in a sense suited to mortals. The Canto ends with the joyous shouts of the people:

"There goeth she, the maiden beautiful in her adornment. There goeth the Urvaśī of the earth, stepping forth to the altar."

CANTO XI

Sarasvatī expounds the merits of the suitors with unsurpassed eloquence and commends them to the favour of Damayantī, who rejects them one after another. After disposing of the gods, the goddess addresses the mortal princes and asks them to behold the daughter of Bhīma: if they look and look, they will not be satiated with gazing even in millions of years (24).

Sarasvatī praises severally the lords of the seven islands (Puṣkara, Kuśa, Plakṣa, Śāka, Krauñca, Śālmala and Jambū), and Damayantī in her turn rejects them with undisguised apathy, despite the sonorous verses in which their merits are extolled. The goddess often refers to attractive features of the regions under the sway of one or other of the kings. In the Puṣkara island, the great Banyan tree with its ripe fruits and evergreen leaves looks like a mighty sunshade of peacock feathers (30). The Jambū river flowing near the edge of the Jambū island has the juice of rose berries for its waters and gold for the ooze of its bed (86). In the Kuśa island, the mighty clumps of Kuśa grass are watered by the rain clouds pierced by their swordlike blades undulating in the wind (59). Sometimes the goddess enumerates the joys accessible to Damayantī in these lands. In the Ocean of Wine, encircling the Śālmala island, she will indulge in drinking bouts with her beloved and her maiden companions (68). In the Śāka island, while she walks on the crest of the Mount of Sunrise, her beauteous face will give to the delighted inhabitants the idea of the rising moon (14). In the Plakṣa island, she will desire to sport in the swings suspended from the branches of the great fig tree of the place (74).

The kings of Avantī, Gauḍa, Mathurā and Benares are next described. If Damayantī marries the king of Avantī, the river Śiprā while she indulges in sports in its waters will be her friend, embracing her with its wavy hands (89). The dark-complexioned king of Gauḍa embraced by her, will look like a fresh raincloud coming in contact with the crest of the golden Mount of Sumeru (98). With the king of Mathurā for her husband, she might enjoy pleasure walks amid the balmy flowers of Vṛndāvana (107). Sarasvatī recounts the virtues of the king of Benares, and glorifies the sanctity of the holy city, which grants remission of sins and ensures both worldly pleasure and religious piety.

The declamations of the goddess fall on deaf ears and leave Damayantī cold and indifferent. Their merits fail to attract her, and she is led from one prince to another, disappointing all of them. She rejects the lord of the Puṣkara island, because 'the soft name Nala is not his', and the lord of the Śāka island, because the divine Indra never came as a suppliant to him as he did to Nala. (32, 46)

CANTO XII

The theme of the preceding Canto is continued. Sarasvatī recites the praise of the kings of Ayodhyā, Pāṇḍya land, Kaliṅga, Kāñcī, Nepāla, Malaya country, Mithilā, Kāmarūpa, Utkala and Magadha. The goddess describes each king with undiminished eloquence, and conjures up a picture of pomp and grandeur, which, however, fails to strike the imagination of the princess, who is as indifferent as ever. Sometimes, as when the king of Utkala is described, she silently utters Nala's name with the picture of her beloved growing clearer and clearer before her mind's eye (86). Sometimes she is bored by the description of a king, and gives an explicit hint to Sarasvatī not to continue her eulogy of him (31).

CANTO XIII

Damayantī has by now rejected all the notable princes, and she is therefore led before the five Nalas, that is, the real Nala and the four gods assuming his form. Sarasvatī is afraid to displease the gods by explicitly referring to the peculiar characteristics of each, and so reveal their identity, which they are anxious to conceal. At the same time, she loves Damayantī too well not to be just to her, in the face of the insidious fraud of the gods, each of whom earnestly hopes that she will mistake him for Nala, and choose him as her husband. Sarasvatī, therefore, describes the four gods in turn in verses which have a double meaning. One interpretation of her language refers to the god, the other to Nala. Damayantī is cautious, and does not mistake any one of them for Nala. (1-26)

The goddess then describes Nala himself. But to avoid being accused of singling out the real Nala from among the dissemblers, she declaims again in ambiguous language. And in the closing verse, in language capable of five interpretations, one for each of the dissembling gods, the fifth for Nala (27-34). This serves only to perplex the poor girl, who is dazed and bewildered with doubt and hesitation. How will she find out the truth in the presence of these five who confuse her mind ? Is it not owing to her own miserable fate that wrong has usurped the place of right? She might, indeed, ask the kindly goddess to indicate the genuine Nala, but that will expose her to the hostility of the offended gods, and she will never sacrifice such a jewel of a friend for her own selfish gain. Or, she might ask the true Nala to disclose his identity, but how can she do that, discarding shame, while the whole assembly hears her words ?

CANTO XIV

Bewildered with confusion, Damayantī worships the gods in the open assembly with flowers and hymns, which softens their hearts. They now exhibit certain characteristics peculiar to gods, which automatically distinguish them from Nala. (18-24)

Damayantī furtively glances at Nala and back again at Sarasvatī, and feels a new bewilderment of bashfulness and emotion. Playfully teasing her for a while, Sarasvatī leads her to the presence of the gods and implores their mercy, explaining why Damayantī is unable to choose any of them (33-45). The gods nod assent, and Nala is formally chosen, for the princess places round his neck a wreath of Madhūka flowers, interwoven with blades of Dūrvā grass (48).

The four gods now assume each his own form, and the hitherto invisible companions of Indra and Yama come into view (60-68). Sarasvatī in her turn reveals her divine stature, and the gods join in conferring various boons on Nala (69-85). Sarasvatī bestows on him boons suited to her character as the goddess of learning and poetry (88-92).

The gods and the goddess then address Damayantī. Nothing is unattainable to her, chaste as she is; yet they vouchsafe to her the inviolable character of her wedding vow. May knowledge grow in her mind and issue in wisdom (93-94)!

The divine visitors then take their departure for heaven, while the disappointed suitors are consoled by the fact that Damayantī's father, in response to her entreaties, gives them for wives certain of the maiden companions of the princess, who had learnt from her all her accomplishments, and practised them. This happy ending delights all, and the Canto closes on a note of joy.

CANTO XV

Preparations are made for the formal marriage of Nala and Damayantī, and the festivities connected with it. Walls are painted and houses decorated; the streets are overhung with perfumed wreaths of artificial flowers, while the bejewelled pavements radiate their gleam (12-15). Music bursts forth from all kinds of instruments playing in harmony; and the resonance of the music, together with the swelling noise of the crowd, is heard on the billows of oceans far away (16-18).

But the chief aim of the Canto is to describe the adornment of Damayantī and Nala on the eve of their marriage. A turgid description follows, with details of toilette and ornaments (26-71). The work of embellishment is entrusted to efficient girl companions who bestow their care on Damayantī, while experienced servitors minister to Nala. Damayantī's natural beauty outshines the jewels and the gold of her ornaments which at moments seem to be useless; while at times it is not clear whether the ornaments shine by her or she by them (48, 27). The description of Nala's adornment is even more laborious and artificial than that of Damayantī.

Nala now sets out from the palace, assigned to him in the city of Kuṇḍina, to the residence of his bride, where the marriage ceremony is to take place. As he goes in his chariot through the streets, followed by the bridal procession, the women of the city rush out to have a look at him, and there are amusing instances of their distraction and precipitate haste (73-81). Their eyes are fixed in a continuous gaze. One of them does not notice even her pearlstring, torn and slipping off her body, while another puts her toy lotus into her mouth instead of the favoured betel.

Some of the women indulge in magnificent soliloquies in praise of Nala's splendour and Damayantī's love for him (82-91). 'She hath chosen him, spurning Indra, the lord of all the gods; the generation of love by Cupid in the hearts of men since the beginning of the world, hath reached its culmination in the union of Damayantī and Nala.' A prosaic Canto thus ends in a poetic vein.

CANTO XVI

This Canto opens with a description of the marriage procession, after which important items of the marriage rites are mentioned, including details of the ceremonial presents given to Nala by his father-in-law. A more agreeable note is struck with the description of the feast, at which the guests accompanying the bridegroom are entertained. The flirtation of the guests with the beautiful waitresses is narrated in detail (48-110).

After a stay of five or six days in the house of his father-in-law, Nala returns with his bride to his own capital, where the daughters of the citizens receive him in jubilation, showering on him grains of parched rice in token of welcome.

CANTO XVII

The events described in this Canto are but remotely connected with the story of Nala. The four gods, while returning from Damayantī's Svayaṁvara to heaven, meet on their way a dark, advancing multitude, amid which they discover Lust, Wrath, Greed and Delusion who are graphically described (13-34). The surging crowd has a spokesman, who voices forth exceedingly heretical and materialistic doctrines, and makes a pungent attack on the orthodox system of religion (36-83).

The four gods now appear in the role of protagonists of the traditional faith. Indra, Varuṇa, Yama and Agni, each in his turn, wax eloquent in praise of the orthodox religion and defend it by appealing to the Scriptures and traditional custom and belief (84-106). The audacious critic of the established order turns out to be a panegyrist of Kali, the spirit of sin, who is discovered in a chariot in the company of Dvāpara, the spirit of fraud and deception. Kali astonishes the gods with the false grandeur that is the livery of evil.

Kali steps forward disdainfully and announces his intention of repairing to Damayantī's Svayaṁvara to seek her hand. The gods, smiling to each other, inform him that Damayantī has chosen a mortal, ignoring the assembled gods and demigods. The news throws Kali into a paroxysm of rage. He reproaches the gods for humbly submitting to their humiliation and swears to wreak vengeance on Damayantī by compassing the ruin of Nala. The gods try to dissuade Kali from embarking on his unholy project, and this leads to an altercation in the form of an exchange of repartee between Kali and the others (153-157).

Accompanied by Dvāpara, Kali then sets out for the land of Niṣadha and soon reaches Nala's capital, which is a sanctuary of piety and religion. Kali is swept off his balance, and filled with despair, at the sight of the rites and observances pertaining to the orthodox religion, which follow their undisturbed course in the city (163-204). The spirit of sin wanders for years, looking for an opportunity to secure an advantage over Nala, but hears no evil report about him, not even in the gossip of the streets. He takes shelter in Nala's pleasure garden in a Bibhītaka tree. Meanwhile Cupid draws his bow to wait upon Damayantī and Nala.

CANTO XVIII

This Canto opens with a description of Nala's palace (3-28), but its chief object is to describe the joys of Nala and Damayantī on the first night of their marriage. The description, however, fluctuates, and wanders from one day to another. It is coarse and outspoken in places, but has the saving grace of a diction which is impassioned and poetic.

CANTO XIX

The subject of this Canto is the description of the morning. Bards come to the palace door and sing the glories of the rising sun with a view to awakening Nala and Damayantī whom they think to be still asleep. The queen is pleased with their description, and rewards them for their musical strains. Meanwhile, Nala returns from his ablutions in the celestial Gaṅgā, whither he was taken by his magic chariot before the arrival of the minstrels.

CANTO XX

Nala spends the forenoon in jesting and teasing Damayantī, taking into his confidence a girl companion of his consort, named Kalā. Playful and witty remarks are freely exchanged between the king and the girl, and the former does not hesitate to indulge in frivolities. In 74-96 Nala addresses Damayantī, recalling various experiences of their conjugal love. At length a lady minstrel enters, and announces in dignified strains the hour of noon, and the time for the ceremony of the bath (158-60).

CANTO XXI

Nala takes his bath after the reception of feudal princes, and participation in military exercises. The midday bathing rites are described in detail (9-20). Then follows a long account of the worship of Viṣṇu by Nala. The chamber of worship with its heaps of flowers is described in some extravagant lines (22-31), which is followed by particulars about the ritual (32-50). Nala addresses a long hymn to Viṣṇu, whose various incarnations are invoked (53-118).

After the midday meal, Nala is joined by Damayantī who is followed by her companions, one of whom carries a cuckoo perched on a crystal rod. The girls sing the praises of Nala and Damayantī to the accompaniment of lyres, after which a tame parrot reproduces the verses recited by the maidens, in a manner which meets with the approval of the cuckoo (131-43).

Evening approaches and the girls leave the place on various pretexts. Damayantī then briefly describes the sights and sounds of the evening, and Nala follows with an eloquent tribute to her radiant beauty and the musical notes of her voice (151-61). He then takes leave of her to go down to the river for the evening rites.

CANTO XXII

Nala returns to Damayantī after the evening ablutions, and both indulge in a playful description of the moon in the form of a dialogue. Darkness and moonshine are adequately described, and justice is done to the moon's glory. The poem comes to an end without recounting the tragedy of Nala's subsequent career.

CANTO I

1. Nala was a mass of radiance, resplendent from festivities, the circle of his fame serving as a white umbrella for him. Drinking in his story, protector as he was of the earth, the gods do not in a like manner esteem even nectar.

2. Nala, whose story by the varieties of its sweetness surpasses nectar, was the lord of the earth, marvellous in his virtues. The flaming trail of his might and the circle of his fame served as a sceptre of gold and a unique, white umbrella.

3. His story, kept in mind, purifies the world in this age, as if by washing with water; why will it not purify my speech, which, though crude, is solely devoted to him ?

4. Creating as he did four stages (in each of the fourteen branches of knowledge) with the attributes of study, understanding, practice and teaching, I know not why he himself created "the character of being fourteen", in the fourteen sciences.[1]

5. Learning, a dancer on the tip of his tongue, became eighteenfold, like the three Vedas multiplied by the (six) Vedāṅgas, as if out of a desire to conquer the sovereignty of each of the eighteen islands.[2]

6. Being the lord of the regions, his might was composed of portions from the divine lords of the regions. He had in the law-books a third eye, which checked the march of desire, and indicated his descent from the three-eyed Śiva.[3]

7. In the Golden Age, Nala having established Virtue on its four feet,[4] who did not practise religious austerities ? For even Vice, lean and thin, turned an ascetic, touching the earth with only the little toe of one foot.[5]

8. The dust raised by his army in his expeditions, the dust that was beautiful like the smoke of the blazing fire of his might,

1. Four stages or aspects of fourteen sciences ought to make fifty-six; so the poet asks why they are still spoken of as being only fourteen. See, however, Notes.

2 In this verse the number of sciences, with which the king was conversant, is raised to eighteen.

3. Śiva had destroyed Cupid, the god of desire, with the fire issuing from his third eye.

4. Truth, non-stealing, quietude and self-control.

5. A mark of severe austerities implying that vice was practically absent.

went and fell into the moon, a sea of nectar;[6] and there turned into clay, it forms the lunar spot.

9. His numerous enemies spread their disgrace, as if it were the charcoal left by the fire of their valour, quenched in battle by the copious rain of arrows loosed by him, who was, as it were, a cloud with the sound of his flashing bow.[7]

10. He, the slayer of kings, shone with the 'ceremony of circular waving of lights' performed (in his honour), after having gone round, with a view to conquest, the circle of the earth, refulgent with his might, that was radiant as the fires which burnt up completely the cities of his enemies.

11. Excessive rains, prevented by Nala throughout the entire earth, rendered free by him from the evils known as the Îtis,[8] never left the eyes of the gazelle-eyed mistresses of hostile kings, being without any other place of refuge.[9]

12. The shuttle that was the skill of his soldiers, acting in cooperation with the loom that was his mighty sword, wove on the battle-field, with his moon-coloured virtues serving as yarn, the wide cloth of his fame covering the limbs of those maidens, the regions of the sky.

13. Just as hostile kings gave up creating disaffection among his subjects for fear of him, similarly did even mutually conflicting attributes give up their contrast out of fear for him? For by virtue of his power he was both conqueror of enemies and conqueror of friends; he saw through spies, and at the same time did not see through spies.[10]

14. The Creator draws round the sun and the moon, a halo for a cancelling mark, whenever he thinks, "These two are useless in the presence of Nala's might and fame."[11]

6. Cf. 11. 97; 22. 93.

7. See Extracts from Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita.

8. Excessive rain stands at the head of the Îti evils.

9. i.e. excessive rain was present only in the shape of the tears shed by the widows of Nala's enemies killed by him in battle.

10. The apparent contradiction is to be reconciled by construing the epithets as follows: "He was the conqueror of enemies and the conqueror of (i.e. more powerful than) the sun; he saw through spies as well as through his own judgment."

11. The halo of the sun, like that of the moon, is fancied as a circle drawn round a word to indicate that it is to be cancelled. The idea is that Nala's might was brighter than the sun, and his fame purer than the moon.

15. 'This man will be poor'—this script of the Creator present on the forehead of suppliants was not made false by the king; for having surpassed the Wishing Tree (in generosity), he made poverty itself poor.

16. Two things were regarded by him as his two blemishes, resting on his head in the shape of his divided hair; namely, that he did not by partitioning the (golden) Mountain of Meru, put it at the disposal of suppliants, and that he did not turn the ocean into a desert, by giving away 'waters of gift'.[12]

17. The able king, with a splendour like that of the sun, rose in prosperity day by day, joyfully passing his time with poets and scholars, who ceaselessly practised their art; (just as the powerful sun rises each day in joy, creating the hours with the planets Venus and Mercury constantly staying by its side.)

18. Did the Creator mark his foot with an upward line[13] to indicate that it would be uppermost (in beauty and position) in the future? For it (now) puts the lotus and the new leaf below it in rank, and plants itself on the heads of all the kings of the earth.

19. Coming to the end of his boyhood, he achieved the conquest of the world, and by that means the acquisition of inexhaustible treasure; then did youth embrace his body, just as the season that is Cupid's friend[14] embraces a forest.

20. His foot held the lotus in contempt; in the leaves of trees was there even an iota of the beauty of his hand? The autumnal full moon was not fit even to act as a slave to his face.

21. Did not the Creator reckon his merits with crores of lines, the hairs of his body? Did not the maker of the world put the pores of his skin for zeros to indicate the absence of defects?

22. Verily his arms received the length and stoutness of a bar, while storming the forts of his enemies; and in the same activity the splendour of his chest assumed the breadth and unassailable strength of the shining panel of a fortified door.

23. His face eclipsed the moon with its smile, which was but a fragment of its grace, and threatened the beauty of the lotus with its eyes, which were but a part of it; so it had nothing similar to it in the world, which had no other beautiful object that surpassed those two.[15]

12. Refers to the ceremonial water accompanying gifts. See 5. 85, 86.
13. Refers to a line believed by astrologers to bring luck.
14. i.e. the spring.
15. i.e. the moon and the lotus.

24. The lotus was vanquished by his eyes; his mere smile conquered the beauty of the moon: but is there anything else as beautiful as the lotus and the moon? Lo, great is the scarcity of objects worthy of comparison with his face.

25. The Camarī deer, under the pretext of wagging her tail, seems to say again and again that the desire of her mass of hair to be similar to his hair is a childish prank which does not constitute an offence.[16]

26. The beautiful women of the three worlds had with regard to the king two kinds of delusion produced by Cupid; the one owing to the Cupid-like beauty of the king, and the other owing to their heart's desire for him.

27. A deep-rooted habit acquired by the maids of heaven, while eagerly drinking him in with eyes that never closed, is still manifested by them by their flickerless eyes.[17]

28. The mistresses of serpents, who hear with their eyes, both praised and reproached their eyes inwardly on account of Nala, thinking, "These our eyes which hear of him have their existence crowned with success, but they are futile, as they do not see him."[18]

29. Women of the earth, seeing him even while their eyes were closed by virtue of constant contemplation, did not have in the matter of looking at him the slightest hindrance caused by the closing of their eyes (during sleep).

30. What woman was there, who did not see him in dreams, or who did not utter his name by mistake, or who did not arouse her erotic feeling during dalliance, by contemplating her husband in the form of Nala?

31. With the sole exception of Damayantī, what beautiful woman, no longer proud of her beauty, after having seen him,[19] did not darken with her sighs the mirror, which she had taken up in her hand, to look at herself, thinking, "I am worthy of Nala in beauty"?

16. Lit. the childish prank of her mass of hair wishing to be similar etc.

17. Goddesses being immortal never wink; this characteristic is here alleged to be the outcome of a habit of gazing at Nala.

18. Serpents are believed to hear with their eyes. Here, their mistresses heard of Nala with their eyes, but did not see him as they lived in the nether world.

19. i.e. Nala himself or his portrait. Damayantī fell in love with Nala without ever seeing him.

32. Just as Pradyumna, carried by the bird[20] which feeds on serpents, was forcibly introduced into the city of Bāṇa surrounded by fire; similarly Cupid, borne by the age that enjoys pleasure,[21] was introduced into Damayantī's mind occupied by Nala.

33. The daughter of king Bhīma devoted her mind, utterly subservient to the command of Cupid, particularly to Nala, worthy of her wealth of beauty, of whom she had repeatedly heard.

34. Every day coming to pay homage to her father, she took delight in the recitals of panegyrists, and was profusely thrilled, hearing of Nala, while they sang the praises of kings.

35. During conversation with her friends, when she heard from a friend the name 'Nala', though it referred only to the grass of that name,[22] the slender damsel, quickly leaving other matters, made her ears ready to listen to it in joy.

36. "I am afraid of the dead Cupid, with eyes that never blink; so cite somebody else as an illustration". So saying, she made those who praised young men install Nala in his place as an example.[23]

37. She used to ask messengers, Brāhmaṇas, panegyrists and bards from the land of Niṣadha, about the virtues of Nala under various pretexts; then listening to the story of his fame, she long remained sad.

38. "Draw on the wall of the recreation hall a lover and his beloved excelling the three worlds in beauty." Thus saying, she used to see the love of Nala and herself, which she caused to be depicted by some clever artist.[24]

39. Was there a night when she, sleeping, did not see Nala, whom she had made her husband in her mind? Owing to the power of destiny, sleep makes even an unseen object the guest of the eyes of men.

21. i.e. youth.

22. The grass 'Nala' is a kind of reed.

23. A beautiful youth is usually compared with Cupid, but Damayantī caused Nala to be substituted for Cupid on the ground that the latter was a sort of spectre, having died aforetime at the hands of Śiva. Further, Cupid being a god does not blink his eyes.

24. i.e. when the artist was told to draw two lovers, the most beautiful in the world, he drew a portrait of Nala and Damayantī in the company of each other.

40. Though never seen by her before, the king was shown to her by sleep as a mighty secret, concealing him from her closed eyes; and even from her mind, dormant owing to the inaction of the external organs of sense.

41. Lo, to her, tortured by Cupid, even in the winter the days became long, and even at the height of summer the nights put on loads of fat.[25]

42. A time came when Nala likewise heard from people of her merits, enough to make a youth lose his patience; merits that assumed the role of a string for joining together the pearlstring of the fame of her beauty.

43. So getting an opportunity, Cupid, who was jealous, because he was surpassed by Nala in beauty, wished to conquer him by means of Damayantī, the embodiment of Cupid's own unfailing strength.

44. Damayantī's excellence was made by the king the guest of his ears; and Cupid, too, joining arrows to his bow for destroying Nala's elevated strength of mind, made the string of his bow "the guest of his ears".[26]

45. Then Cupid, connecting his bowstring with arrows, daring in his attempt to conquer that strong-minded man, verily staked the fame which he had earned by his conquest of the worlds.

46. So it was the never-failing desire of the Creator, wishing thus to unite Damayantī with Nala, that displayed itself, when even flowery arrows such as those of Cupid, pierced the armour of his steadfast character.

47. Lo, what else, Brahmā himself, consumed by the weapon of Cupid, still takes refuge on the lotus growing on the waters;[27] it seems, however, as if Nala could not surmount the influence of Cupid, owing to the latter being the shadow of his own body.[28]

48. Did the two pitchers of her bosom flash as youth's new offering to her? For (with their help) swimming across the impassable river of bashfulness, the slender maiden entered the heart of Nala.[29]

25. i.e. became long.

26. i.e. drew it up to his ears to shoot his arrows. Cf. 4. 1; 12. 109.

27. i.e. in order to mitigate his heat, the lotus being Brahmā's seat. The reference is to Brahmā's passion for his own daughter Sandhyā and others.

28. Cupid is fancied as a mere shadow of the far more beautiful Nala; and, as a man cannot avoid his own shadow, Nala could not avoid Cupid.

29. For pitchers used as aids in swimming see 2. 31.

49. What Cupid did to Nala, who was concealing his restlessness from others, was known to the night as well as his bed, both of which, soft with moonshine, witnessed his sleepless suffering.

50. The powerful Nala, though consumed by Cupid, did not ask the king of Vidarbha for the hand of his daughter: the proud would rather renounce both life and happiness than forsake the single vow never to beg.

51. Feigning to be sad on account of something, he concealed the succession of his sighs caused by her absence, and denied his paleness, by attributing it to an excess of camphor in the sandal paste applied to his body.

52. Luckily, even while in company, he was able to conceal what he addressed to his beloved seen under an illusion, as well as the fact that he fainted, while the lutanists played the cadences of the fifth note of the gamut.

53. The king, who had the reputation of being the foremost among those whose passions were subdued, was ashamed when the irresistible power of Cupid became by degrees manifest in him.

54. The power of discrimination, nor the other virtues could restrain Nala's disquiet; for where there is love Cupid produces this disquiet that is never restrained: such is the natural law of the universe.

55. When, in spite of his efforts, he became unable to sit in the royal assembly even for a moment, without betraying signs of being in love, he desired to betake himself to a secluded place, under the pretext of recreation in his pleasure garden.

56. Then he who excelled Cupid in beauty ordered his servants to make a chariot ready, apparently in order to visit a garden in the outskirts of the city along with some friends who knew his secret.

57. The servants then brought his white, well-decorated horse, powerful in speed and more than a man's height in size, who used to cleave the floor of the stable with his constantly moving hooves.

58. The horse was brilliant with the lustre of his mane, the lustre that resembled moonlight, and seemed to arise, through the inner passage of the nape, from the curl of hair known as the 'divine jewel', located on the surface of the neck.

59. His feet were attended by particles of dust raised by his ceaseless cleaving of the surface of the earth, as if they were the atom-sized minds of people coming to study the superiority of his speed.

60. It seemed as if the horse, repeatedly shaking his snout, was eager to tell the king about the glories of his speed, but kept silence, thinking, "What need to tell? He knows the mind of horses himself."[30]

61. The horse was white with fame by reason of his carrying the great warrior emperor on the highway, without the help of any other horse; and, with the bright lustre of his teeth he was laughing[31] at the capacity of the sun's horses, who were not like him.[32]

62. He was clearly demonstrating the fact of his being the king of horses by means of the emblem of two waving Cāmara whisks, namely, his tail and mane, moving and gleaming white.

63. The horse vied with Garuḍa, already forcibly humbled in his pride of speed, also in his power of devouring serpents, by means of the long and beautiful reins attached to his mouth.[33]

64. Then the large-eyed Nala, the Indra of the earth, who had conquered all kings, mounted that horse born in the land of Sindhu, white as the moon, and finer than the horse of Indra.

65. Just as the solar rays follow the sun, similarly bright-looking horsemen followed the king, who rode that swift horse, and whose lotus hand was distinctly marked by figures of lotus blossoms.[34]

66. As Nala went along adorning that horse of great speed, and beautiful in his dress befitting a rider, he was gazed at by the inhabitants of the city, whose eyelashes were totally motionless with joy.

67. In a moment, simultaneously with the showers of looks of the people, Nala with the lustre of the moon and the might of Indra, issued forth from the city on that horse, whose speed the wind might emulate.[35]

68. Two cavalry battalions in the vanguard of Nala's army, brandishing the tips of their lances at one another, fought a mock fight out of fun, crying 'Take, Strike.'

30. See 5. 60.

31. In Sanskrit poetry a laugh is always white; here the white lustre of the teeth is fancied as a laugh.

32. Unlike Nala's horse, the horses of the sun could not singly draw his chariot.

33. The reins attached to the mouth of the horse are fancied as serpents in the mouth of the divine bird Garuḍa who feeds on them.

34. A sign of luck.

35. Lit. whose speed was worth studying by the wind.

69. The horses, proud of their own speed, raised a volume of dust enough to dam up the ocean, as if they thought, "How many steps will this earth provide for us to pass over? So let the ocean, too, be turned into earth."

70. Half striding in the air, with their mouths bent downwards, the horses refrained (from traversing the sky), as though thinking, "As Viṣṇu traversed the sky even with a single foot,[36] it will be a shame for us horses to traverse it with four."

71. As the Buddhists[37] of the land of Sindhu, when they reach their monastery, do out of faith in the sayings of Buddha; so did the king's cavalry soldiers, on reaching the garden of pleasure, make a circular formation with the large number of their horses.

72. The horses adorned the place with the beauty of their circular formation, ceasing to trot, as if thinking, "The regions have already been traversed by his enemies, and his fame has already turned the ocean into a cow's footprint."[38]

73. Does not the wind even to-day, making circular movements in the shape of whirlwinds, learn from the circular trottings, which Nala ably caused his horses to make on the ground under his umbrella?

74. Just as Viṣṇu enters the ocean which has a lustre like that of clouds, and is tinged with the hue of corals, in order to sleep in it; similarly the king soon after went and entered the thickly shaded pleasure garden, tinged with the hue of new leaves, to divert himself.

75. The looks of the citizens resembling a company of friends following (a departing friend), going with eagerness up to the border of the woodland, turned back as he gradually went out of sight.

76. The king then saw in the lovely flowers and fruits the beauty of the garden, pointed out to him by the gardener with his hand, with his fingers to the fore.

77. The trees, taking flowers and fruits in their leafy hands, shaken by the gusts of wind caused by birds flying over them, learnt the manner of according hospitality to him from the multitude of old sages living in the garden.

36. During his Dwarf Incarnation.

37. The reference is to the custom of circumambulation of a monastery by Buddhist monks.

38. i.e. Nala's enemies, routed in battle, have already covered all directions, and his fame has spread beyond the ocean; so it is unnecessary for the horses to cover the same distance over again.

78. Looking about with curiosity, he saw there a Ketaka flower, which, in the guise of the bees settling on its full-blown leaves, was bearing a disgrace spreading on all sides; the disgrace which it had earned, owing to its rejection by Śiva.[39]

79. Angrily did he rebuke the Ketaka flower thus:[40] "Thou art hated by Śiva; because, piercing with thorns, thou art thrust by Cupid, like a barbed arrow, into the hearts of lovers in separation. Being inextricable from there, thou dost end their lives.

80. "With the needle of thy point as a help, Cupid weaves the two sheets of a loving couple's disgrace; verily he plays havoc on the wood that is the heart of forlorn lovers by means of thy serrated leaves.

81. "Cupid, though his hand is moist with the honey flowing from his (flowery) bow, discharges his arrows at me, devoted as I am to Damayantī, smearing his hands with thy pollen as though with dust."

82. He saw fruits on a pomegranate tree, which was being fertilized with smoke, as if they were pots engaged in rigorous austerities, drinking in smoke, face downward, in order to attain the height of Damayantī's breasts.

83. He saw a pomegranate plant, with birds on it, and with thorns clearly visible, as if it were a forlorn maiden, clearly thrilled at the memory of her beloved; while it had arrows of Cupid made of Palāśa flowers, namely, the beaks of parrots,[41] piercing its rent and crimson heart, in the region of its breasts, its fruits.

84. On a Palāśa flower, resembling a crescent-shaped arrow of Cupid, and rending the hearts of lovers in separation, he saw the stalk, as if it were a portion of liver attached to it, apparently owing to its habit of eating away the flesh of pining lovers away from their homes.[42]

39. It is forbidden to worship Śiva with Ketaka flowers, which is here regarded as a disgrace. The bees settling on the yellowish Ketaka flowers and appearing like dark spots are the symbol of this disgrace.

40. Most of the verses from 79 to 101 speak of the effect produced by diverse flowers on pining lovers.

41. The red beaks of parrots pecking at the rosy interior of cracked pomegranates are fancied as arrows of Cupid, made of scarlet Palāśa flowers, penetrating the bleeding heart of a maiden separated from her lover.

42. The sight of the brilliant Palāśa flower being unbearable to lovers in separation, the Palāśa, the literal meaning of which is "carnivorous", is fancied as having eaten away their flesh, while its dark stalk is the liver which the flower has not yet been able to absorb.

85. With both fear and ardour, Nala gazed at a young, gently quivering creeper kissed by the breeze. It was covered with the sprays of the honey of flowers, and had buds beaming with smiles.

86. He looked at the rows of Campaka buds, as if they were ceremonial lights in honour of Cupid, that were amassing sin in the shape of their soot, namely, the bees settling on them, because they killed forlorn lovers, like moths.[43]

87. He deemed the pollen inside the flowers to be blinding to lovers in separation, as if it were ashes from the body of Śiva, which came to be attached to the arrows discharged at him by Cupid in times of yore.

88. The suffering Nala saw a ground lily expanding its flowery hands in indifference, while the forest, "with blossoming Karuṇa trees in it",[44] heard from the cuckoo the story of forlorn lovers' plight, together with the humming of the bees.

89. He saw a mango tree angrily buzzing with the hum of agile bees, as if it wished to give separated lovers the fright of a threat, with the buds of its flowers playing in the air.

90. Mournfully he looked at the red-eyed cuckoo birds, which seemed to curse wayfarers thus. "Pine away every day more and more ; fall into repeated swoons ; suffer from heat."

91. With a restless mind, gazing at a Campaka bud, high-crested with a wreath of bees, he surmised in fear that it was a comet rising to imperil forlorn lovers.

92. He saw a Nāgakesara flower, with its pollen streaming from it, and with a line of bees, which had settled on it, slipping down with circular movements ; as if it were a grindstone with glowing sparks issuing on account of Cupid's arrows being whetted on it.[45]

93. Cupid was ashamed, when he saw the lines of humming bees flying from the flowers to Nala's fragrant limbs, being attracted by their excellence ; for he mistook them for his own arrows, ill discharged from his bow.[46]

43. The Campaka, like the rest of the flowers mentioned in this section, is regarded as intensifying, when seen, the sorrows of lovers in separation. Here the Campaka flowers are fancied as lights, and the bees settling on them as lampblack, which again is a symbol of sin.

44. Means also "taking pity."

45. The Nāgakesara (Assamese 'Nāhor') is a round flower with white petals and bright yellow stamens. Here, the pollen is likened to sparks and the bees to arrows.

46. The lines of humming bees coming towards Nala are described as clumsily shot arrows, giving forth a loud twang, but going only a short distance.

94. He saw a ripe Bilva fruit, hurt by the tips of the leaves playing in the air. It had a choice fragrance like that of sandal emerging from it, and resembled the breasts of courtesans.

95. Thinking that a cluster of Pāṭalā blossoms, studded with flowers,[47] in which the hearts of young couples were apt to sink, was a quiver of Cupid's arrows, he trembled with a mind stupefied with fear.[48]

96. In the wood he thought that a dark-hued Agastya tree, which was putting forth buds, was Rāhu giving out the digits of the moon, which he had swallowed when the moon waned in the dark half of the month.

97. The amorous sports of the breeze, in which the leaves white with frost were first forcibly grasped, and which gave rise to graceful gestures in the creepers of a hedge, made him close his eyes when he saw them.

98. How could he refrain from welcoming the trees, which, with their heads bent extremely low with the weight of fruits, were bowing to the earth, their foster mother, in whose lap they had grown up?

99. The glow of the day, cooled by sylvan breezes; turned into nectar by the honey of flowers; and whitened by the pollen of Ketaka blossoms, gave no joys of moonlight to the king, absent from his beloved.

100. The cuckoo, eyes red with anger, seeing the face of the king, the moon itself, the same as erstwhile, in spite of his being a lover in separation, called over and again with its sound Kuhū the night hostile to the moon.[49]

101. It seemed to him as if the shelter-giving Aśoka tree, which took up the burning weapons of Cupid[50] with its leaves, was killing those wayfarers pining for their homes, who had come to it with the derivative meaning[51] of its name in their minds.

47. Lit. which had its inner cavity filled with flowers.

48. The Pāṭalā is a species of trumpet-flower. The sight of this flower being painful to Virahins, its tubular hollow is fancied as a cavity in which the hearts of young couples sink.

49. The voice of the cuckoo being unbearable to Virahins, the bird is here regarded as their enemy. The cuckoo, seeing that Nala's face was still the moon itself in spite of his sufferings, cried Kuhū, Kuhū—its usual sound; but Kuhū means also the Amāvāsyā night, so the bird really called that night to eclipse the moon incarnate in the shape of Nala's face.

50. i.e. the red flowers of the Aśoka tree forming Cupid's arrows.

51. The word Aśoka means "that from which there is no grief." Depend-

102. The trio of music, song and dance waited upon him even in the wood, in the sound of ripples along the bank of the pleasure tank, the song of cuckoos and the agility of the peacock's dance. Is there anywhere where a lucky person enjoys no pleasure ?

103. Clever parrots let loose by people in the garden, after having trained them for the purpose, chanted his praise ; sparrows, too, made likewise singers of his might, sang to him with the sweet melody of their voice.

104. Thus walking about in the garden, rich in choice perfume, cuckoos singing to him and parrots chanting his praise, he experienced an outer exuberance of fragrance, but no great inner joy, owing to Damayantī's absence from him.

105. Holding the figure of a fish, his emblem, in his hand, as if for fear it should enter the water of the basins round the trees, he was taken for Cupid[52] following his friend, the spring, here in this garden with all the seasons present in it.

106. The woodland breeze, a tutor to maiden creepers in the art of dancing, and open thief of the store of fragrance in the flowers of the trees, attended on him, after it had resorted to pleasure swims in scented waters, the honey of flowers.

107. The king then saw a pool of water, as if it were the ocean living hidden in the garden, afraid of being churned, taking with it its long accumulated riches that excelled in everlasting gems.

108. The pool, in the guise of its multitude of lotus stalks, half hidden in the water, and penetrating the ground along the bank, was bearing the tusks of a crowd of Airāvatas submerged in the water, tusks beautiful like the tail of the serpent Ananta.

109. The pool, in contact with the clear reflections on it of the horde of horses resting on the border of its bank, shone forth, as if it possessed a thousand Uccaiḥśravas horses, moving by reason of the strokes of those whip-ends, its ripples.[53]

110. The pool looked bright, densely bearing a wide accumulation of moons spattered with sombre spots, namely, its mass of white lotus blossoms darkened in the midst by bees.

ing on this meaning, forlorn lovers had recourse to its shade for relief, but the sight of its bright-hued flowers served only to aggravate their suffering.

52. Nala had the figure of a fish in his hand, a sign of luck; Cupid, too, has a fish as his emblem.

53. The Airāvata elephant and the Uccaiḥśravas horse had their home in the ocean; the pool is throughout fancied as the ocean with all its possessions before they were churned out of it.

111. Under the disguise of a cluster of lotus shrubs the pool seemed to be accompanied by Śrī Kṛiṣṇa holding his wheel (and attended by Cakravāka birds), associated with Lakṣmī (and lotus blossoms), resembling (and friendly with) a swarm of bees, and resting on the serpent Ananta visible in the shape of a mass of lotus stalks.[54]

112. The pool bore on it lines of waves, which seemed to be rivers, its own mistresses resorting to its bosom. It carried a mass of coral sprouts, namely, the slightly emerging buds of its red lotus beds.[55]

113. Nala fancied the pool to be emitting the lustre of the moon and the Kālakūṭa poison, immersed in its waters in the form of its vast lotus beds, white and blue.[56]

114. The rows of full-grown mossy creepers on it, agitated by the movements of waves, verily looked like smoke, ever growing in volume owing to the presence of the submarine fire in it.[57]

115. A lily growing on the pool was intensely thrilled in contact with the sun, and emitted an exuberance of fragrance. With lotus blooms for its body, it looked like a nymph during the day.

116. A tree on the bank, shaken by gusts of wind, with its dimensions reflected on the expanse of the waters of the pool, looked like the Maināka mountain,[58] immersed (in the ocean), and shaking its wings.

117-8. On that pleasure tank, surpassing the ocean in beauty, Nala saw a marvellous golden swan, which was moving about close by, eager for the sweet voice of the female swans desirous of play; and was holding, with its beak and feet, Cupid-made sprouts of the tree of passion—sprouts with two shoots for its younger mistresses, and leafy ones for those who were grown up.[59]

54. The epithets within brackets refer to the bed of lotus shrubs, which is compared to Kṛiṣṇa sleeping on the ocean on the coils of the serpent Ananta.

55. The comparison between the pool and the ocean is continued. The ocean is frequented by rivers, the pool by lines of waves; the former has corals, the latter red lotus buds.

56. The moon and the Kālakūṭa poison were in the ocean before the churning took place.

57. The pool being fancied as another ocean, the mosses on its surface are the smoke sent up by the fire associated with the ocean.

58. The only mountain who "retained his wings, when Indra clipped those of other mountains, on account of his friendship with the ocean."

59. The red beak and feet of the swan are fancied as sprouts, the beak with its upper and lower sections as a sprout with two shoots, and the feet as sprouts with young leaves.

119. For a moment, looking at the immensely delightful bird, the king grew a little curious, although overwhelmed with grief, owing to his beloved's absence from him.

120. Just as a straw follows a whirlwind, similarly the utterly uncontrolled heart of man follows the Creator's will in the direction in which it moves, irresistible in its course in matters that are bound to be.

121. Then at that time the bird, exhausted with erotic langour, slept near the tank for a moment with its neck bent sideways, resting on one leg, and covering its head with its wings.

122. Did he think it to be a golden lotus together with its stalk,[60] drooping in shame, owing to its lustre being surpassed by his own face; or a yellow Cāmara whisk of Varuṇa adorned with a coral rod ?

123. Then Nala having alighted from his horse, his shod feet flashed as if they were equipped with armour, wishing to vie with the leaves of the forest and the lotus blossoms of the water.

124. The king guilefully made his frame smaller, which (then) resembled Viṣṇu (during his Dwarf Incarnation), and took hold of the bird with his hands, having come to its side with silent feet.

125. The bird, perceiving that it was caught by him, tried in fright to fly away again and again. Quacking and despairing of flying away, it simply bit the hands of its captor.

126. It seemed as if the pool of water, ruffled by a flock of birds flying away in confusion, and anxiously taking pity (on the swan), was deterring the king from catching the bird, with its hands, the lotus blossoms moving with the waves.

127. A flock of swans quacked on the bank, like the anklets of the moving lotus-feet of the goddess of beauty, departing from that pool, deprived of the beautiful bird.

128. Verily the birds rebuked him by their cries, having left the earth and resorted to the sky, as if saying, "It is not worth while to live on this earth, whose lord is one like thee who hast renounced the customary conduct (of a king)."

129. Then the swan, resting on his hand as in a cage, said to the king as he was praising it again and again, "This beauty emanating from wings of gold was not seen in a bird."

60. The golden swan resting on one leg is likened to a golden lotus resting on its stalk. The idea is continued in the next line.

screen (of invisibility), who does not know that a digit of the moon resides on Śiva's head ?

20. "Glorious, indeed, is the lock of hair that the learned Damayantī holds on her head ; who will wish to compare it to the Camarī deer's tail which even the animal does not put to the fore ?[7]

21. "Antelopes console their eyes under the pretext of scratching them with their hoofs, as they close up out of fear, vanquished by the beauty of Damayantī's large eyes.

22. "King, the family of Damayantī's father and that of her mother, her eyes and her womanly virtues—those which are heard of as well as those which are seen in her—all these brilliantly shine forth with their mutual splendour; the families, because they are celebrated ; the eyes, because they are stretched as far as the ears ; and the virtues, because they follow the Scriptures.

23. "Her eyes which prove the lotus to be pale, when they do not touch the collyrium-stick, make even the Khanjana bird humble in its pride of beauty, when they are embellished with collyrium.

24. "The word Adharabimba ('a lower lip like the Bimba fruit') designating her lip has acquired a (more) appropriate construing, viz., 'The fruit called Bimba is inferior (adhara) to it (in beauty').

25. "The disc of the moon, the essence of which seems to have been taken away by the Creator for making Damayantī's face, is (for that reason) seen to have a hollow made in the middle, and hold the blue of the sky in the deep cavity.

26. "Rightly does the Creator revolve the moon round Damayantī's face as a vessel of 'ceremonial whirling', whitish (as if) with a lotion of flour-water in it, and carrying, as it were, a plaster of cowdung in the guise of its dark spot.[8]

27. "In a test of beauty the entire genus of lotus flowers was defeated by Damayantī's face ; obviously it has not even now given up the sign of its defeat—the habit of keeping above the water.[9]

28. "Her eyebrows have emerged as the bows of Cupid and his wife Rati for the conquest of the world, and are not the nostrils

7. It is usual to compare the rich hair of a woman to the bushy tail of the Camarī deer.

8. The reference is to a certain popular custom.

9. See Notes.

of her high nose shooting tubes for them both, desirous of letting loose their arrows on thee ?[10]

29. "Hero, she is worthy of thee alone ; her arms conquer the lotus stalk that resides in its watery fort, and with the grace of her hands she wishes to take possession of the charms of the lotus blossoms devoted to the sun.

30. "Do not the two ages, childhood and the one following it, both of which wish to pervade the fair-eyed damsel, live contented in her, though limited off by the Creator by making a division with a line of hairs ?[11]

31. "Verily her breasts are serving as two swimming pitchers[12] both for Cupid and Youth, as they move forward on her body, though made unfathomable by floods of beauty.

32. "Has the pot acquired the power of turning the potter's wheel from its (instrumental) cause—the potter's rod ? For having become her high breasts, it (now) produces a whirling motion[13] with a shower of lustre.

33. "Verily the peacock, whose train is slighted by Damayantī's hair, has recourse to Kārttika,[14] and Airāvata, the king of elephants, whose temples are vanquished by the beauty of her breasts, has recourse to Indra.

34. "The (Creator's) fist, the thumb-mark of which is patent from the fact of Damayantī's back being depressed in the middle, made her belly beautiful with three fleshy folds which issued from inside its four fingers.[15]

35. Does some curious fellow measure with his fist Damayantī's belly ? For it shines with (three) fleshy folds together with

10. Cf. 21. 151 and see Vocab. under नालीक.

11. i.e. the downy growth of new hair on Damayantī's body indicates that she is on the border-line of childhood and youth. Cf. 6. 38.

12. The reference is to the use of pitchers to assist in swimming. Cf. 1. 48.

13. i.e. of the eyes of onlookers, by making them roll in amazement. See Notes.

14. Kārttika or Kārttikeya rides a peacock.

15. The Creator is fancied as making Damayantī's belly by holding her slender figure in the fist; the three fleshy folds on the belly are the marks left by the four fingers of his fist, while the mark of the thumb is visible in the depression in the middle of the back.

a zone of gold, as if bearing (the impressions) of the four fingers of a fist.[16]

36. "Does the Creator who made her plump and rounded hips wish to build an one-wheeled chariot for Cupid with the experience he gained in making the (one-wheeled) chariot of the sun?

37. "With her broad thighs, does the beautiful damsel wish to surpass only the banana plant known as Rambhā? (She wishes to surpass) also the young nymph of that name, (the touch of) whose bosom was the result of religious austerities on the part of Kubera's son.

38. "Two day-lotus blossoms, as if by worshipping the sun, obtained for themselves a superior position in the shape of being Damayantī's feet; certain it is that a pair of swans, coming and cackling round them, provides them with anklets.[17]

39. "Why should not the lotus, which dwells in sacred pools and rivers, and passes whole nights in meditation by way of closing its petals, attain a happystate in its birth as Damayantī's feet?

40. "I who have visited many places to resort to pools of water have made Damayantī the guest of my eyes—Damayantī, about whose waist it is doubtful whether it exists or not.

41. "Concluding that she had not pursued her studies even with the celestial maidens, as her comrades, I pondered as to who was in the mind of the Creator as her husband.

42. "Then trying to think of a worthy husband for her, and being unable to get rid of objectionable features in the case of all other young men, I hit upon thee as the final conclusion.

43. "My recollection being roused by this climax of thy beauty, it is today that the pure-smiling damsel has come to my mind, though I have seen her for a long span of time.

44. "Hero, Damayantī's emotional complex will become thee alone; only on the bosom of a young woman does the beauty of a pearl-string shine forth.

45. "Without her, this thy beauty is useless like the flower of a barren tree; (without her) this wealthy earth is useless, and what is thy pleasure-garden worth, though it has singing cuckoos?

16. The three fleshy folds and the golden girdle round the waist are fancied as the impressions of the four fingers of a fist holding the slender belly in its grasp.

17. As swans and lotus blossoms are inseparable, Damayantī's feet are fancied as two lotus blossoms, and her jingling anklets (हंसक) as two cackling swans (हंसक).

46. "But union with her, desired by the gods, is not easy for thee, just as in the rainy season union with the beclouded moonlight is not easy for the lotus of the night.

47. "Hence will I sing thy praise near Damayantī in such a manner that, treasured by her in her heart, thou wilt not be replaced even by Indra.

48. "Fie on these words of mine, though they are meant only to obtain thy consent; the good speak of their usefulness by action, not by words."

49. Having drunk this clear nectar of words emanating from that king of birds, Nala gave out a pure, white smile, as if it were an emission, due to satiation, of the nectar drunk by him.

50. Fondling the bird with the red lotus[18] growing at the fore-end of his arm, Nala softly uttered to its joy words which came from a throat that was the repository of the nectar of pleasant speech.

51. "Thy figure is beyond the range of comparison; the goodness of thy nature is beyond the range of expression; the gist of the essential tenets of palmistry that a noble figure possesses noble qualities has thyself as the example.

52. "Indeed, not merely thy body is of gold; is thy voice, too, so? Why, thy partiality is not only for the path that is without any support,[19] but also for one like me.

53. "Suffering from an extreme heat, I have got thee—a breeze with the quintessence of snow; it is otherwise with the rich, but for the good the company of those who are virtuous is the only perfect treasure.

54. "A hundred times have I heard of her, the unfailing herb that makes the three worlds lose their senses; but by virtue of what thou hast said, I feel I have seen her with my own eyes.

55. "To the wise seeing everything clearly with the aid of friends or their own heart, the eyes which cannot grasp minute objects even at close quarters are merely ornaments of the face.

56. "Bird, her story, a sort of peerless honey, which people have made the guest of my ears, serves as a kindling verse[20] in stirring up Cupid's fire; fie on those who are fickle!

18. i.e. with his rosy hand.

19. i.e. the sky.

20. A Vedic verse known as Sāmidhenī, with which a sacrificial fire is kindled.

57. "Bird, being as fuel in the fire of her absence I surmise the south wind to be unbearable, full as it is of the poisonous whiffs of the serpents on the Malaya mountain.[21]

58. "Bird, is it because the moon is united every month with the sun[22] that it burns me with its extremely sharp rays which take away my patience ?

59. "If Cupid's arrows are flowers, and not thunderbolts, they grow on poisonous creepers ; for they have stunned and vehemently heated my heart.

60. "To me about to be drowned in this limitless ocean of pain caused by Cupid's arrows, be thou therefore a refuge, like a boat suddenly placed near at hand by fate.

61. "Or, perhaps my urging thee to action is like crushing a thing already crushed ; for the good do good to others of their own accord, just as sense-perceptions become valid on their own account.

62. "Auspicious be thy way ! May we meet speedily again ! Dear bird, do, do what I long for, and remember me in time."

63. Having sent away the bird with these words, the patient king, the Bṛihaspati of pleasant and truthful speech, entered the garden house, astonished at the swan's words adhering to his memory.

64. Then the bird, in order to crown that very day with success, by looking at Damayantī, started for the city of Kuṇḍina which acted as the ornament of the mundane sphere.

65. On its way before it, the swan perceived a pitcher full of water as the first guest of its eyes—a token that augurs the success desired by a traveller.

66. Adopting for a moment a motion, slow with amazement, in order to look round in the sky, the bird saw in the king's pleasure-garden a mango fruit attached to the tree.[23]

67. The noble bird saw a mountain, frequented by clouds, the elephant cubs of the sky, and abounding with shrubs, and possessing hyenas and serpents hidden by branches.

21. The Malaya mountain is believed to be situated in the south.

22. It is believed that on every Amāvāsyā night the rays of the moon enter the sun. See Notes on 6. 7. Nala, being a Virahin, finds the light of the moon as hot as the sun.

23. Regarded as a good omen.

68. The bird went on, now shaking the root of its wings, now imperceptible by soaring high, and now spreading out its motionless wings, giving delight to lookers-on.

69. Owing to its speed the swan gleamed along, as if rubbing the gold of its wings against the touchstone-like surface of the sky, with a thin ray of light coming into view.

70. The swan, whose wings left in their trail a jingling sound owing to its speed, was seen overhead with a steadfast gaze by birds which were below and which quickly came to a lower level, apprehending the pounce of a hawk.

71. The swan, as it went along, could not be seen by people, who saw its shadow on the earth and immediately looked at the sky in all directions, the bird quickly going out of sight at a high speed.

72. On its way the swan, with its lustre spreading with its speed, did not stop anywhere in any wood beautiful with lofty trees, nor did it answer back the quacking of its relations.

73. Then the beautiful city, protected by the terrible-armed king (Bhīma), and adorned with edifices white as the Mount of Kailāsa, came in sight of the bird.

74. (The city) where houses with frames of crystal, with walls pure like a digit of the moon, shone as if they were continual amorous smiles of the earth meant for her beloved (the king).

75. (The city) where enveloping darkness, without any return, took shelter even in daytime, for fear of the sun, in the guise of the lustre of the sapphire[24] buildings of the king.

76. (The city) where at night in the houses made of shining white gems—the interval between heaven and earth laughing with them—the single night of the full moon visited all other nights as a guest.

77. (The city) where the pleasure tank, tinged with the saffron transmitted by beautiful women plunging in them, did not clear up even in the course of the whole night, just as an obstinate ladylove, offended by the saffron transmitted (to her lover) through his attachment to beautiful women, does not show her favour throughout the night.

78. (The city) which at night, calm and quiet for a moment, adored a certain pure, internal light in the shape of its houses of gems, using its line of ramparts as the sheet of cloth worn during meditation.

24. The azure lustre of the sapphire buildings is fancied as perpetual darkness.

79. The city that flashed like the heavens, reflected in the middle of a pool of water, in which the portion of water not occupied by the reflection sparkled clearly in the guise of a moat.

80. The city where the strokes of the stick-like hems of the flying streamers over the rows of houses gave rest to Aruṇa, the charioteer of the sun, as he voyaged through the sky and drove the horses of the sun.[25]

81. The whole city was marvellous with the choicest gifts of the three worlds corresponding respectively to the basement, the middle and the upper storeys of the houses—choicest gifts which belonged to the nether regions, the earth and heaven, and bore each their own characteristics.[26]

82. The city where it was natural that the royal palace, with the top border blue with clouds, and bearing a surface brilliant with exceedingly pure white-wash, should bear the semblance of the moon-crested Śiva.[27]

83. The city where the antelopes serving as the dark spots of those moons, viz., the faces of the multiform statuettes, appeared to have been devoured by the lions on the beams of the numerous palatial buildings.[28]

84. The sage Nārada of truthful speech said that the heaven of the nether world was above heaven itself; but being as it were put in a lower position by that city, the ornament of the earth, it became just the opposite.[29]

25. i.e. the buildings were so high that the flags flying over them could like rods drive the horses of the sun.

26. The gifts of the nether world, the earth and heaven are respectively treasure, cereals and articles of luxury; the three floors of the houses corresponding to the three worlds were full of them.

27. Śiva has his neck blue, and body white; the palace, too, is blue with clouds hovering on a level with its roof, and is painted white. With these characteristics, the palace with the moon above looks like Śiva who has the moon on his forehead.

28. The beautiful faces of the statues are fancied as moons which are, however, without the dark antelope associated with the moon. It is, therefore, surmised that the animals were perhaps devoured by the artificial lions on the beams.

29. The nether world was once declared by Nārada to be more beautiful than the heavens; but as this city surpassed even the nether world in beauty, it was more beautiful than both the heavens and the nether world.

85. The rumbling sound from the noise in the city emanating from the millstones in each market avenue along with the fragrance of flour, inviting to travellers, does not even now renounce the clouds.

86. The divine mountain Meru in the shape of the wall of gold, the city gates thickly studded with jewels serving as its wings, lived there, embracing and conciliating its offended lady-love, the heaven that had departed from its lap.[30]

87. Encircled by the flames issuing from the city-wall made of sunstones being on fire[31] between sunrise and sunset, the city looked as magnificent as the city of Bāṇa.[32]

88. Loudly did the ocean of shops roar in the city, with many conches and gems, with crabs in the shape of hands moving in the counting of cowries, and with white sand in the shape of camphor.

89. At each moonrise, the celestial Gaṅgā, with her volume of water increased by the oozings of the moonstones in the pavements of the topmost chambers of the buildings in the city, forsook not an attitude befitting a devoted wife.[33]

90. (The city) where in the evening the stalls of saffron in the perfume shops shone as if they were the fallen and homeless rays of the setting sun.

91. Just as formerly the sage Mārkaṇḍeya saw inside the stomach of Viṣṇu the objects of the universe, similarly people saw in that city articles of every description exposed for sale by each merchant in his shop.

92. In that city, the merchant in a shop, while weighing a black bee along with pieces of musk, did not notice it owing to the noise of the people, though it was humming, motionless with the greed of fragrance.[34]

30. The heaven located on the Meru is fancied as having angrily left the mountain and come down to the earth, to become the city of Kuṇḍina. The golden city wall is fancied as the golden mountain which has followed its lady-love to the earth, while the gates of the city are fancied as the fabulous wings attributed to mountains.

31. Sunstones are believed to catch fire in contact with the sun.

32. The city of Bāṇāsura was surrounded by protecting flames.

33. Moonstones are believed to exude water in contact with moonlight. Here the idea is, the houses are so high that at moonrise the copious oozings from the moonstones embedded in the floors of the top chambers flow into the celestial Gaṅgā, and cause in that river a rise of tide, as if it were the rise of emotion in the heart of the river at the sight of her beloved moon.

34. i.e. the bee could not be distinguished from the dark-coloured musk on which it had settled, its humming being drowned in the noise of the people.

93. In that city, in winter nights, the frost did not hurt the feet of people going over the bridge made of sun-stones, heated all the day by flames.[35]

94. At the advent of summer, the heat as severe as the Kali age did not heat the city's highway of moonstones, cool like Nala's temper, owing to the flow of water in contact with the rays of the moon.[36]

95. The city marked with a circle in the shape of its circular moat was not accessible to enemies, being as difficult to tackle as the propositions of the Mahābhāṣya.[37]

96. Made of lotus blossoms in the face, hands, feet and eyes, and of Campaka flowers in the other limbs, Damayantī herself assumed there the grace of a wreath of flowers meant for the worship of Cupid.

97. It seemed as if a hundred nymphs coming down to the earth, being unable to walk in the sky owing to the heavy weight of their hips and breasts, lived in the city as her friends.

98. It was natural that the city, full of paintings, should contain all colours that were permanent; it was also natural that it should have a variety of tones, possessing as it did sounds from many a mouth.[38]

99. At night the city's houses, made of rubies, and thirsty during the day, owing to the sun coming in contact with them, licked in many ways the moon, the storehouse of nectar, with their flags tinged red by their own lustre.

100. At night the royal palace in the city, made of pure rubies, and thirsty, being frequented by the rays of the sun, licked the moon, the abode of nectar, with its tongue-like flag of the same hue as itself.

101. The spot in the moon coming in contact with the yellow flags over the turrets bore resemblance to the yellow-robed Kṛiṣṇa lying on the coiled up serpent Ananta.

35. See under Verse 87. 36. See under Verse 89.

37. These are said to have been marked with a circle to indicate their difficulty. See Notes and Vocab. under कुण्डलना

38. Also: It was natural that the wonderful city should contain all the castes observing their customary rules; it was also natural that it should have a variety of accents, possessing as it did the sound of the Vedas (lit. the sound of the many-mouthed Brahmā).

102. The silken streamer flying over the palace in the city played in the sky with undulations caused by the wind, as if it were the celestial Gaṅgā left half-made in times of yore by the sage Viśvāmitra, whose game of creating a new heaven was interrupted by the mouths[39] of Brahmā, busily engaged in manifold prayer emanating from tongues that were sanctified by the untiring recital of the Vedas.

103. The row of white flags over the buildings, restless and playing in the lap of the sun, and tinged with a bluish hue by the lustre of the exceedingly pure blue apartments of the city, was, as it were, the child of the river Yamunā.[40]

104. The young ladies of that city, stepping from the top of their palaces of pleasure on to the clouds that were eager to accept the hospitality of the borders of the pleasure-edifices of their lovers, were manifestly nymphs traversing the sky in aerial chariots; for their eyes winked not, owing to their emotion, as they made their way with the speed of clouds.[41]

105. The religious merit of the city, resulting from the giving of mouthfuls of grass to cows, manifested itself constantly through the medium of those Kuśa blades, viz., the rays which went up from the emerald peak of Damayantī's pleasure-hill, but which, downcast with shame at their pride of speed being destroyed by their striking against the orb of the universe, entered with their tips the mouths of the divine cows going about with upturned face in the heavens.[42]

106. There the swan was charmed with Damayantī's pleasure-garden where the arduous task of watering the trees was rendered useless by the basins round the trees being made of moonstones and full of the water oozing from them, when embraced by the rays of the moon.[43]

39. These were four.

40. i.e. the row of these flags reminded one of the Yamunā river with its deep blue waters shimmering in the sun.

41. The women are fancied as travelling like nymphs on clouds to meet their lovers. Nymphs, being of divine origin, do not wink; the women also do not wink in their eagerness to meet their lovers.

42. The rays shooting up with great speed went beyond the heavens, till they were obstructed by the roof of the universe; then turning back, they came along with their tips downwards, and on their way through heaven entered the upturned mouths of the divine cows. In this way the city acquired the virtue resulting from feeding a cow with mouthfuls of Kuśa grass, the jets of rays being similar to the pointed blades of Kuśa.

43. See under Verse 89.

107. Then the golden-winged bird saw there the princess, radiant in a concourse of her friends as bright as herself, and whose beauty was able to rival that of the crescent of the moon abiding amidst the assembly of stars.

108. Radiating a golden lustre by the speed of its flying, and looking for a place suitable for landing somewhere below, the bird made a circuit above, as if it were the halo of the moon hanging in the air to attend on her moon-like face.

109. Looking at Damayantī engaged in play with her friends in the woodland, the bird thought, "Śacī, the consort of Indra, doth not feel so great a joy in the garden of Nandana in the company of her friends, the nymphs Ghṛtācī and others."

110. Śrīhīra, the ornamental diamond, etc.; here ends the second canto, brilliant by nature, in his composition—the beautiful epic Naiṣadhīyacarita.

CANTO III

1. Then the swan, swiftly descending from the sky with folded wings, dropped on the ground near Damayantī, spreading and shaking its wings on the spot where it landed.

2. The sudden sound that went up at the time from the earth struck by its wings abruptly startled her whose eyes were fixed on something else.

3. Just as the minds of ascetics, forsaking their attachment to the objects of the world, attain the One Absolute whose nature is beyond the range of expression, similarly the eyes of Damayantī's friends, leaving their attachment to this and that object, were fixed only on the swan which had an indescribable beauty.

4. Just as the mental function of a sage comes to a standstill to comprehend in earnest the Absolute residing near within the body, similarly Damayantī cautiously stood still, wishing to catch, with a caressing hand, the swan moving about close to her.

5. The bird, though it guessed Damayantī's trick from her movements, did not fly up to the sky, but with a quick bound it rendered ineffectual her hand which was about to pounce upon it.

6. At that moment her friends, knowing that her attempt was thus rendered futile by the bird, burst into laughter, clapping their hands at one another.

7. But Damayantī took her friends to task, saying, "Should you now scare away the bird by the clapping of your hands? Any one here who follows me will be doing me an ill turn".

8. Slightly angry at the laughter of her friends, and visibly ashamed at her failure to catch the swan with her hands, the beautiful maiden then followed the bird, just as the shadow follows a man going in the direction of the sun.

9. When her friends mockingly said to her with a play of words, "But this thy journey towards the Haṁsa is not laudable", she replied, "This swan cannot be an ill omen for me; it is going to announce some future good."[1]

1. There is a pun on the word Haṁsa meaning both 'swan' and 'the sun.' "The journey towards the swan" may turn out to be "a journey towards the sun", which is regarded by astrologers as inauspicious. But Damayantī replies that the journey is not towards Haṁsa 'the sun', but towards Haṁsa 'the swan', which is highly auspicious, as the sight of a swan is believed to bring luck.

10. The swan, too, gracefully going in front of the beautiful damsel, who had a gait like that of a swan, gleamed as if it were continually mocking her by mimicking her own gait before her, in order to put her to shame.

11. The bird, sportively going along, lured the slender-limbed damsel into the midst of creepers, while the fair one was thinking at each succeeding step that it was about to come within reach of her hands.

12. When it discerned that Damayantī had only her shadow as her companion, having angrily deterred her friends (from following her), it addressed her like a parrot in a human voice, while particles of sweat adorned her body.

13. "Well, how far wilt thou go? Why art thou thus tiring thyself in vain? Girl, art thou not even afraid to see these dense rows of woods?

14. "Look, this woodland, by shaking its hands in the shape of the leaves playing in the wind, also through the cooing of doves, is like a friend deterring thee from fruitlessly setting thy foot on an undesirable path.

15. "How can I be caught by thee—I who go about in the air and thou who movest only on the earth? Ah, thy childishness has not been diminished even by the age that is Cupid's friend.[2]

16. "We are birds, the offspring of the family of swans who act as the steed of Brahmā; the nectar of the sentiments of our pleasant speech is seldom obtained by those who are not inhabitants of heaven.

17. "Feeding on the tips of stalks and fibrous roots of the golden lilies on the river of heaven, we acquire a wealth of beauty that is in keeping with our food; an effect does, indeed, acquire its properties from the cause.

18. "Of the golden swans, who at the instance of Brahmā came to earth to play on Nala's pleasure-tank, I am the only one travelling, anxious to see the earth.

19. "Once during the Creator's pleasure trip I relieved the shoulders of my elders exhausted with fatigue; since then I have not felt tired, though I have been going over all the world without any rest.

2. i.e. youth.

20. "Snares and the like will never have the power to capture a divine bird like me, unless it is due to the uncommon luck of heavenly enjoyment of one man, one like whom is born but rarely on earth.

21. "Subservient to Nala, owing to his sacrifices and the charitable provision of wells and tanks, the gods create the pleasure of heaven even on the earth, and as a result of fertilising processes and the pouring of water trees burst into blossom before their season.

22. "Coming down speedily from the Mountain of Gold, we fan that king during his sports of love with our fly-whisk-like wings, permeated with the sprays of the river of heaven.

23. "If one thinks of making a classification of the good men of the world, that individual has to be mentioned first, who by the exercise of his powers is capable of achieving a great position for himself (just as the nominative case by the play of सु, औ, जस् is capable of turning many a base into an inflected word).

24. "The king, who is a sacrificer and has bestowed his wealth on learned Brāhmaṇas in his service, enjoys his kingdom after having put it at the disposal of learned men, just as he partakes of the sacrificial butter after having offered it to the gods; but lo! he enjoys the first object 'last', and the last one 'first.'[3]

25. "Who do not beg their desired objects of that contented king, who is the friend of the gods, and in respect of crowds of suitors fulfils an unfailing mission like that of the clouds by showers of riches that destroy poverty?

26. "The nymph Rambhā, having long made the peerless beauty of Nala the nectar of her ears through us, had become attached to him; but not getting him, she betook herself to Nalakūbara[4] for the sake of the name Nala attached to him.

27. "The court singer of Indra became known as Hāhā, because we pitied him by uttering hā, hā, as he sang, when we had gone from here to heaven, after having drunk in the sweet strains of Nala's songs at the hour of his recreation.

3. An apparent contradiction is aimed at. In the verse butter is mentioned first, but it is taken by the king 'last' (शेष); the kingdom is mentioned last, but it is enjoyed "first" (अशेष). The real meaning is, however, that the butter is taken not "last", but "at the end of sacrifices", and the kingdom is enjoyed not "first", but "in its entirety". The apparent inconsistency is due to शेष meaning both "last" and "end", and अशेष meaning both "not last i.e. first" and "entire or whole". The first meanings give a semblance of mutual contradiction which disappears when the latter ones are adopted.

4. See 2. 37.

28. "Indra, hearing with his wife the story of Nala's generosity, did not, fortunately for her, notice the constant thrills of his consort Śacī owing to the garland of his eyes[5] being covered with tears of joy.

29. "Pārvatī, to whom Śiva is half her self, stopped her ears with the fingers, pretending to scratch them, whenever Śiva listened to the story of Nala's virtues that forcibly charm the heart.[6]

30. "In vain the Creator, devoted to religious observances, endeavours to detain the goddess of speech by means of silence; immersed in the study of the Vedas, he knows not that the crooked goddess, clasping Nala's neck, is there content with the flow of sentiments.[7]

31. "The vow of the goddess of wealth as the devoted wife of Viṣṇu has not suffered in the least owing to her embracing Nala; nor has her husband felt even an iota of jealousy, because the universe forms his self.

32. "Fie on the hand of the Creator, which, unabashed, makes the full moon on the full moon night;[8] but having remembered the beauty of his face, the intelligent hand, I ween, hath left the moon half made on Śiva's head.

33. "The moon, overwhelmed with shame, on hearing from us about Nala's face far surpassing it in beauty, hides itself sometimes in the sun, sometimes in the tide of the ocean[9] and sometimes in the bosom of the clouds going about in the sky.

34. "Making a sign to us, who are the servants of his emblem Garuḍa,[10] to sing the praise of Nala's face that surpasses the lotus in

5. Indra has a thousand eyes. His wife Śacī ought not to have taken so much interest in Nala.

6. As a devoted wife, Pārvatī avoids listening to the praises of Nala.

7. The silence of the Creator during religious observances is fancied as an attempt on his part to detain his faithless wife, the goddess of speech, who, however, secretly leaves him for Nala.

8. The Creator is here reproved for making the full moon in the presence of Nala's face.

9. The moon is believed to be merged in the sun during the Amāvāsyā night and in the ocean when it sets.

10. i.e. we who are birds, Garuḍa being the king of birds and the emblem of Viṣṇu.

beauty; Viṣṇu disports himself with Lakṣmī without any shame before Brahmā, who is covered up by the lotus of Viṣṇu's navel shrinking on hearing our praise."[11]

35. "By reckoning with the thirty-two teeth in his mouth for lines, the Creator declared that here exist the fourteen and the eighteen sciences reckoned in two different ways.[12]

36. "Observing the beauty and wealth of the king, we do not recall even Cupid and Indra, and owing to his complete possession of both the earth and the quality of forbearance, verily we do not think even of Ananta[13] and Buddha.

37. "What region has not been traversed by his horses, who are birds without wings, winds visible to the eyes, and minds not having the size of atoms? [14]

38. "On the battle-fields, fertilised by rivers of his enemies' blood, the life-breath of crowds of (hostile) kings furnishes abundant food to the serpents in the shape of the showers of his arrows.

39. "The fame produced by his arm itching for battle has a passion for rubbing itself against the banks of those rivers, the regions of the sky, owing to the very nature of its cause.[15]

40. "If the three worlds were engaged in calculation, if their life-span did not come to an end, and if there were numerals beyond a hundred thousand millions of millions, it would be possible to count all his virtues.

41. "Entering the inner apartments of the king, for the doors are open to birds, we teach the slender-waisted damsels features of greater excellence in their beautiful gait.

42. "We plunge their hearts into an ocean of emotion by stories of the secrets of the joys of Rambhā and other nymphs,

11. Brahmā sits on the lotus that grows out of the navel of Viṣṇu, who asks the swans to describe the beauty of Nala's face; while the swans do so, the lotus shrinks in shame on hearing that Nala's face is superior to it in beauty, and Brahmā sitting on it disappears in the fold of its petals.

12. See 1. 4, 5.

13. The serpent who holds the earth on his hood.

14. The mind is regarded as an atom, but the horses, though as swift as the mind, are not of that size.

15. He who feels an itching sensation must rub himself against something: here though the arms is itching for battle, it is its effect-fame-that rubs itself against the four quarters, according to the principle that the characteristics of the cause pass on to the effect. The idea is that Nala's military fame was spreading in every direction.

stories sweet as nectar streams,[16] and valued by Śukrācārya himself, the creator of poetry.

43. "Who among those damsels does not confide to me Cupid's latest commands, as one does merchandise to the care of a merchant? For a bird does not feel shame before any one, and so no one feels shame before a bird.

44. "The information which I store in my heart, steadfast with concentration—I whose ears are accustomed to hear the teachings of Yoga, sanctified by the explanations emanating from the different mouths of Brahmā—that information reaches no one, even though it be a trifle.

45. "It is a pity that some other girl will attain the celestial happiness unattainable by thee, by betaking herself to Nala; just as the night lily enjoys the gaiety of moonshine unattainable by the day-lotus plant, by taking the moon unto herself.

46. "As Nala has not married thee, thou canst not obtain the happiness arising from flattering words spoken by us; just as a mango-grove that has not received the visit of the spring cannot obtain the happiness brought by bees.

47. "Or, perhaps, thou wilt be his. Who has surveyed the Creator's mind by delving into it? Thou art, indeed, unmarried, and dost possess an exuberance of the true nature of beauty.

48. "At the same time, the Creator's spontaneous effort to unite those who are worthy of each other is well-known from his having united the moon with the night, Śiva with Pārvatī, and Viṣṇu with Lakṣmī.

49. "Thou who art the tide of the ocean of womanly virtues overflowing its shores, art not fitted for union with any one other than Nala; a tender wreath of Mallikā blossoms is not woven with an extremely coarse string of Kuśa grass.

50. "As one who draws the Creator's chariot, I asked him once whether he had created any woman worthy of Nala's dalliance. Methought I heard the letters of thy name in the creaking of the wheels of his car.

51. "If thou art united with a husband other than Nala, what boat will be there for the Creator, who has passed all his life with a reputation for wisdom, to cross the ocean of popular censure?

52. "Enough! It is useless to indulge in irrelevant thoughts.

16. Lit. stories that are not inferior to.....

Slender damsel, I have tired thee too much; I would wipe off that offence; tell me what desire of thine I should fulfil."

53. Having spoken thus, the bird stopped, wishing to know the heart of the princess. The wise propose an action to some one after sounding his heart, just as they propose a descent into a deep lake after sounding the waters.

54. With her head slightly turned aside and moving, the king's daughter, who with her face eclipsed the moon, having pondered for a moment over what she was to say, said to the bird.

55. "Fie on my childish love of wanton acts, excited by the impulse whereof I disturbed thee who wast innocent, just as the ripples of water moving in contact with the wind disturb one standing on the bank.

56. "Beautiful as thou art, thou hast by thy purity become a mirror unto those who are good; this my offence came to be mirrored in thy own self, while thou wast honouring me, offender though I was.[17]

57. "Gentle bird, forgive me, a girl, even if I have done something improper; though a swan, thou dost deserve homage, being divine in nature, as does Viṣṇu incarnate in the form of a fish.

58. "What joy wouldst thou bring me that would surpass even the joy of my eyes on seeing thee? What does the moon do for the creatures beyond sprinkling their eyes with the sprays of its nectar?

59. "How can that desire, which the mind never parts with, be ever expressed? Who is that shameless girl who will speak of her desire to catch the moon with her hands?"

60. Drinking in her gentle words sweet as the vine, the swan renounced its liking for the cuckoo's voice, and felt contempt for the sound of the lyre.

61. When she became silent, having spoken indistinctly from shame, the swan, somewhat in doubt regarding what she said, joined its lotus-like mouth with words.

62. "The matter, of which thou thus speakest with fervour as something like a desire to catch the moon with the hands—have

17. i.e. the bird is so pure that her own offence, namely, her attempt to catch it, is reflected in its mirror-like self, and the bird taking it for its own offence apologises to her. See verse 52. She means to say that the bird, instead of blaming her, blames itself.

I no right even to hear of it, just as a Śūdra has no right to hear the words of the Vedas?

63. "Why so much ado? Thou wilt obtain the object which only exists on the by-way of thy mind; even the Absolute, about which the mind itself is in the dark, can be realised by those who are alert.

64. "Thou whose waist is a phase of Śiva's power of becoming small as an atom! Among the creatures inhabiting the Creator's world, respect thou me, though an ignorant bird, as one whose fame has been created by his truthfulness and power of appreciation.

65. "The goddess of speech lives in our mouth amidst the Vedas as her neighbours;[18] bound by the power of good company, she does not deviate from the path of truth, as if out of shame before her neighbours.

66. "If thy heart in desire for something goes even to the city of Laṅkā, situate in mid ocean,[19] know even that to be in thy hands."

67. Thus spoken to by the bird, Damayantī said, abashed and delighted, "My heart is not going to Laṅkā[20] nor is it desirous of anything else."

68. Then that Indra among swans, remembering that a maiden's nature is a mountain, as it were, with Cupid the elephant submerged in the river of bashfulness, said to her who was not speaking in a clear fashion.

69. "Have I not, an intelligent being, understood the meaning of those two verses uttered by thee, a poetess expert in puns, to be respectively, 'My desire is to marry the king,' and 'My mind longs for Nala' ?[21]

70. "But thinking of the lack of firmness of thy heart, I feel that I am, in fact, ignorant of it. Cupid himself, when his aim is a maiden's heart fickle by nature, is likely to miss his mark.

71. "Surely the moon of the people of Niṣadha (Nala) is the Indra of the earth; how can one like myself, acting like a low-born creature, acquaint him thus with such a dubious matter?

18. The verses of the Vedas being uttered by Brahmā, to whose chariot the swans are attached, the Vedas are here spoken of as being the neighbours of the swans, i.e., their utterances are true like the Vedas.

19. Lit. the city of Laṅkā, for which the bosom of the ocean has become a bedstead.

20. Damayantī's reply can be construed as meaning also "My heart longs for Nala (नलं कामयते)."

21. See Verses 59 and 67.

72. "If thou choosest some other youth, whether at the instance of thy father or of thy own accord, what will Nala think of me if I plead before him on thy behalf?

73. "Princess, thou, too, must not enjoin me to set about this matter which it is feared may go wrong, but I will do whatever thou askest of me other than this."

74. The king's daughter spoke again, slackening the persistence of bashfulness, as if shaking off the swan's words which had entered her ears, by shaking her head in disagreement.

75. "Thy surmise about my being given in marriage to someone other than Nala is as the Veda in thy heart; thou shouldst make the conjecture of the night having a beloved other than the moon precede it as if it were the syllable Om.[22]

76. "Without surmising the growth of affection in the heart of the day lily to be connected with some one other than the sun, thou dost fear that I may marry some other than Nala:[23] great, indeed, is thy rashness.

77. "This hast thou surmised well: I will, indeed, have recourse to someone other than Nala of my own accord, but only to destroy myself without him; also not to make thee a liar before the king.[24]

78. "As to conjecture that tells thee that thou must be deceived by me, why is it dumb regarding the good that is to result from that deception? If words, in which it is impossible to suspect any reason for insincerity, are not the Vedas, then what are the Vedas like?

79. "If my father desires to give me to someone other than Nala, why does he not sacrifice me in the fire, the body being all that remains of me? He is no doubt the master of the body of his child; but it is still Nala who is the lord of my life.

80. "Thou wouldst do me a good that would be even higher than my being the devoted bondslave of Nala! What will the day lily do even with the moon that is full of nectar so long as it is not the sun?

22. The syllable Om is put before a Vedic verse. The idea is, to think that she may marry someone other than Nala is as absurd as to think that the night may have a lover other than the moon.

23. i.e. I love Nala just as the day lily loves the sun.

24. i.e. to prove the truth of the bird's report that she loves Nala. "Someone other than Nala (अनल)" means also fire.

81. "In my heart, desirous only of him, there is no thought of obtaining even the priceless Wishing Stone; in my mind he with a face like the lotus is the only treasure, the quintessence of the three worlds put together.

82. "I have heard of him, seen him in my delusion in all the directions, and contemplated him without any break in the stream of consciousness. To-day I will obtain him or die; both are in thy hands, one shall remain.

83. "Acquire thou the virtue that would accrue from keeping thy promise[25] and giving my life to me. Good sir, give up futile doubts; why this extreme reserve even in a matter that is good?

84. "O wise and dear one, reject not my prayer, nor put diverse obstacles in the path of what is to be done. Deviate not from the path of fame that arises from the honourable position of being true to one's word—the path free from the sport of calumny.

85. "Thou art so niggardly that thou dost feel no shame, thinking even of those who give their very lives for the good of the distressed. Virtue purified by fame is slipping from thy hand owing to thy reluctance to give my own life to me.

86. "If thou givest my life to me, I will repay thee by sacrificing even my life; but with what can I repay, if thou be the giver of something more than life? So do thou plunge me in a limitless ocean of poverty that I may be unable to repay my debt to thee.

87. "Purchase my life even as a piece of merchandise; there will at least be some religious merit, if nothing else. Thou giver of the lord of my life, if I have nothing to give thee, I can at least sing thy fame.

88. "Or, perhaps the rich do not care to win grateful people to be had even by means of a benefit costing a 'cowrie'; but lo, the good, calling themselves wise, purchase those very people even at the cost of their lives.

89. "Nala is a king, hence the impersonation of the eight divine lords of the quarters;[26] devoted as I am to him, they are pleased with me; otherwise it was impossible that coming of thy own accord, thou shouldst become the guarantee of my winning him.

25. See verse 66.
26. Cf. I. 6.

90. "Becoming as the root of the Vīraṇa grass, made for me by the Creator without any joints, wilt thou not, acting like the root of the Vīraṇa for me, apply to my bosom the paste of sandal?[27]

91. "No use delaying, it is time to hurry up; for there is scope for deliberation only in a matter that admits of delay; suffering never waits for time, just as a keen intellect waits not for a teacher's instruction.

92. "When thou goest from here, thou shouldst not supplicate Nala on my behalf, while he is in the inner apartments; for at that time his sympathy for the beloved faces there might cause a distaste for any other maid.

93. "If Nala is perfectly satisfied with his enjoyment in his harem, it is not necessary to speak of this matter to him; for to one who is satisfied with (plain) water a sweet, fragrant and cool drink of water tastes not well.

94. "Ornament of the race of swans, thou shouldst not put in any word for me, when Nala's heart is tepid with anger; on a tongue tainted with bile even sugar tastes bitter.

95. "Thou shouldst not make thy entreaty on my behalf, when the king's mind is occupied with other affairs; the sleeplike inattention of a man asked for a favour at such a moment bears the stamp of disdain.

96. "Being wise, thou shouldst therefore communicate this to the king after finding out a suitable occasion; what seems good to thy noble self—complete failure or delayed success?"

97. It might seem improper to our minds that she discarded all shame as she said these things; but Cupid who made her say all this bore testimony to her innocence.

98. Both Śiva and Cupid feel unbounded joy in rivalry with each other, when they get something mad; the former when he gets the 'mad' flower;[28] the latter when he gets some one suffering from the pangs of separation.[29]

27. The root of the Vīraṇa grass and sandal are used as sedatives to allay the heat of the body. Damayantī asks the swan to be for her as "the root of the Vīraṇa grass" called Nalada, which means also "that which gives Nala."

28. The 'mad' flower is the Dhattūra which has highly intoxicating properties.

29. i.e Śiva rejoices when he gets the 'mad' flower, Cupid when he gets someone mad with love. The Dhattūra flower is sacred to Śiva. See 21. 34.

99. Then concluding that the princess who spoke thus was in love with Nala, the bird laughingly unloosened again the seal of silence on its beak.

100. "Princess, if this be the truth, I do not see what is to be done by me in this matter; Cupid himself, by intensely heating both thee and the king, hath brought about this union.

101. "Let the divine character of the sense-organs of Nala, whose mind is set on thee, be to-day a reality, having obtained by winning thee a satisfaction that is given only by nectar[30]—the sense-organs that had taken the vow of privation through austerities.[31]

102. "Owing to thy absence Cupid is consuming his body, as if out of envy, thinking, 'Our bodies were alike, but mine was burnt (by Śiva), while his is not even heated.'

103. "While drinking in thy portrait, decorating a wall, with his eyes, not winking from eagerness, the king's eyes take a redness given by streams of tears, but which seems to be caused by thee.

104. "While the king drinks in thy portrait with eyes winkless out of eagerness, a dispute about the tears takes place between 'love by eyesight' and 'lack of winking.' Each says, 'These are mine.'[32]

105. "Damayantī, though thou art outside, thou art in his heart; is there a way in which thou art not his life-breath? No wonder that his mind with thyself as its only object pervades thy portrait.

106. "Unceasingly dost thou ascend the everlong stairway of his thoughts, and the sighs that he plentifully heaves are due to his meditating on thee, with his self absorbed in thyself.

30. Being a king, Nala was sprung from the eight gods known as the Lokapālas, and as such his sense-organs were already known to be divine; now they are actually so by the taste of nectar at the prospect of their association with Damayantī.

31. i.e. were pinning away as in the case of one engaged in religious austerities.

32. The idea is, while Nala gazes at Damayantī's portrait, tears appear in his eyes, and it is not possible to decide whether they are caused by his continuous gaze or by his fond glances at her lifelike portrait. The difficulty in coming to a decision regarding the cause of the tears is represented as a quarrel between the two possible causes, both of which claim the tears as their own.

107. "What his heart secretly tells thee, his face bespeaks openly.[33] This act of his face is in keeping with its friendship with the moon, the friend of Cupid who is the enemy of Nala.[34]

108. "As he now lies in bed at night, there is no sleep for him, nor any damsel other than thou who might, by embracing him, kiss his eyes, submerging his mind in stupor.

109. "In vain did Cupid, by piercing Nala with his arrows, reduce him to emaciation, with beauty as the residue; though made lean and thin, he doth not give up his rivalry with him.[35]

110. "He would not fear sin itself, if it brought thee to him; and he would not even be ashamed to be a slave to thee; has Cupid in any wise damaged even his character by piercing him severely with sharp arrows?

111. "Like a contagious disease, the extreme shyness of the bashful king insinuated itself into the expert physicians who were treating his dreadful fever of love; for they remained silent about the cause of the disease.

112. "He is suddenly frightened, fancying thou art angry, and laughs without any occasion, fancying he has got thee; without any reason he follows thee, as if thou art going away, and replies to the air, as if addressed by thee.

113. "Alas, alas, this valiant king is sinking helpless, like an elephant, in the clay of utter delusion on the island of swoon belonging to the Yamunā river of incessant sorrow caused by thy absence.

114. "That stage, the last of the stages,[36] created each by the five arrows of Cupid, doubled because they are discharged from the right as well as the left hand—may it never come about.

115. "To thee I am sent by the king, ever dejected owing to Cupid's oppression; having come hither, I have achieved my

33. i.e. his secret musings are manifested by the paleness of his visage. Nala has turned pale owing to his anxiety for Damayantī.

34. Cupid, the oppressor of Nala, is his enemy, and as an enemy he wants to divulge Nala's secrets. In this he is helped by Nala's face, which by its paleness says that Nala secretly thinks of Damayantī day and night. The face thus acts as Cupid's friend, but Cupid is not its immediate friend. The friend of the face is the moon (owing to the similarity of both), and the moon is the friend of Cupid (love being associated with moonlight); thus it is quite proper that the face should offer its help to Cupid, because he is the friend of its friend—the moon.

35. i.e. he is still as beautiful as Cupid.

36. i.e. death, the last of the ten stages of love.

reward in the knowledge of thy sentiment, eager for merit as thou art.

116. "Damayantī, blessed art thou who hast attracted even Nala by thy noble virtues; after this, what praise is there for the light of the moon that it perturbs even the ocean?

117. "Mayst thou shine with Nala as the night with the moon; may he shine with thee as the moon with the night. Perhaps the Creator, who unites that couple again and again, is acquiring practice with a view to uniting you both.

118. "Slender maid, Nala's art of drawing pictorial designs, exhibiting no small skill, will reach its perfection, if anywhere, on thy swelling bosom alone.

119. "One moon can never satisfy thy two eyes; so let it bring an unbounded joy to thy eyes in company with another moon—the face of Nala.

120-1. "Behold the wishing tree of Nala's religious austerities! The beauty of its sprouts is flashing in the guise of the tips of thy finger-nails; verily thy eyebrows are but two leaves of this tree, and it is thy lower lip that is flashing red as its mature sprout. Thy hands are its new leaves, and thy smiles are its buds: it is flowering with the tenderness of thy limbs, and bearing fruit in the guise of the charms of thy bosom.[37]

122. "It seems, while making your mutual attachment equal in measure, Cupid made the disc of the moon the dish of the balance, with the lunar rays attached to it as the cords, while he made his own arrow the beam of the balance.

123. "During the gaieties of love, let the pictorial designs on thy breasts, erased in contact with Nala's lotus-like hand, thickly coated with the wax-like sweat caused by emotion, once more enter the hand whence they had gone forth.[38]

124. "Damayantī, let both of you, young as you are, accept in the garden of pleasure the shower of flowers, released ever and anon by the breezes, delighted at the various modes of your erotic wrestling, rich in postures.

37. Nala's religious austerities are here fancied as the Kalpa tree which grants him his desired object—Damayantī.

38. i.e. the pictorial designs drawn on her breasts by Nala's hand will be erased by that very hand; they will be reabsorbed, so to say, in their place of origin.

125. "By virtue of your mutual union, let now your minds, thine and Nala's, shine forth, blossoming with joys, as if they were two atoms forming first a unit of two atoms, about to create once more the body of the mind-born god of love.[39]

126. "To vanquish Nala, who is not to be conquered with a bow of flowers, Cupid rejoices to find in thee, who dost belong to a pure family and possess great virtues, a bow made of faultless bamboo and furnished with a string; thou art, indeed, gleaming with a winding silk ribbon beautiful with vermilion, which, decorating thy neck, hangs down a little on thy back, as if it were a trace left by the rubbing (of vermilion).[40]

127. "Know thyself to be the beautiful flowery bow of the mighty Cupid, the pearls in thy necklace to be the shots of his bow, and the great king Nala to be the target; the line of hair on thy body assumes the entire grace of a bowstring, softened by its constant stay in the lap of that bow, and has a loop in the centre in the guise of thy gleaming navel.[41]

128. "Cupid, surpassed by Nala in beauty, became despondent and left his arrows[42] on thy hair, his bow at the bottom of thy forehead,[43] and his body in that furnace—the (third) eye of Śiva; but deprived of his body, he has now taken shelter on thee for vanquishing Nala, and the leafy designs painted on the mountain of thy bosom are serving as a cottage for him."[44]

39. Cupid being born of the mind, his body destroyed by Śiva can be recreated only by minds serving as atoms. The two minds of Nala and Damayantī, both in love with each other, are fit constituents to serve as a starting point in the recreation of Cupid.

40. Damayantī is fancied as a bow to be used by Cupid. As a bow is made of bamboo, the scarlet ribbon hanging down on her back is fancied as the trace left by vermilion, when rubbed on the back of the bamboo to see whether it is sound; Cupid is testing the soundness of the bow he is going to use.

41. The line of hair on Damayantī's body is fancied as the string of Cupid's flowery bow, while the navel is fancied as the loop provided in the centre of the bowstring for holding the shot before it is let off.

42. i.e. flowers.

43. The eyebrows are meant, beautiful eyebrows being represented as Cupid's bow.

44. The burning of Cupid by Śiva is interpreted as an act of suicide by Cupid throwing himself into the fire of Śiva's eyes to escape the disgrace of being surpassed by Nala in beauty. He is now fancied as performing religious austerities for conquering, in his turn, Nala with Damayantī as his weapon.

129. The bird having thus spoken to Damayantī, her friends who had been long looking for her, then came and surrounded her; the bird also hastily set out for Nala's capital, saying, "Happiness to thee, allow me to depart."

130. Damayantī, though she fondly tasted again and again the infinitely sweet and fragrant butter that was the speech of the noble bird, the messenger of her beloved, the butter being mixed with the honey of the flowers composing Cupid's arrows, obtained no joy, but experienced in her heart an intense heat, and her stupefaction knew no measure.[45]

131. Tears soon became the limit of the range of her vision, as it followed the swan, the friend of the king; even while by her side, it was far from her eyes,[46] but now, though it was far away, it was not removed from the range of her mind.

132. The swan started alone on its journey to communicate to Nala all that had taken place, clearly expressing the possibility of success by diverse flutterings of its wings; while her friends took her away, saying, "Dear friend, thou art out in the wilderness; foolish one, hast thou forgotten the way? Weep not, come, let us depart."

133. The bird found the king restless with love and making a bed of young shoots and leaves fade away (with the heat of his body), while he was under an Aśoka tree, crowned with a luxuriant growth of flowers that vied with the flaming arrows of Cupid, the tree being on the bank of the pool of water near which it had erstwhile seen him.

134. "Dependent Damayantī, to thee I will say nothing; but swan, come quickly, tell me what she said about me"—Nala having said thus, the swan, coming near, related it. In the case of the good the only delay in the attainment of a cherished object is that of their own desire.

135. The great king made the swan repeat what his beloved had said, asking the bird, "What is it? What is it?" Then mad with the wine of intense joy, he himself likewise repeated a hundred times what he had heard.

136. Epilogue.

45. The idea is, the swan's words, describing as they did Nala's love for her, touched her deeply and only increased her sorrow; her position is likened to that of one who has taken butter mixed with honey, believed to have a poisonous effect.

46. i.e. she did not see it clearly owing to her tears.

CANTO IV

1. Then did Cupid quickly conquer Damayantī; making the fragrant flower of Nala's fame his bow and his excellence the string of that bow, while he made Nala himself, owing to the latter's keen intellect, an arrow—Nala whose tidings had come to her ears.[1]

2. As she suffering from Cupid's fever, plunged into the waters of that pool, namely, the story of her beloved, its effect instantly grew harmful, long consuming her heart.

3. The slender-waisted[2] maiden seemed to have learnt her impatience, contrary as it was to sobriety, from the flying speed of the messenger of her beloved;[3] for that which appears immediately after something originates from it.

4. Her face was too benumbed even to think of an iota of smile; the Khanjana bird in the shape of each of her eyes limped even in making a slight stir in its own courtyard—the corner of the eye.[4]

5. Were Nala and Cupid the two physicians of heaven, the Aśvins,[5] who entered her heart to probe it, being engaged by her lover Indra, the king of the gods, to cure her quickly?

6. Her face, tender like the lotus and troubled by Cupid's heat, was seen each day bearing an ever increasing resemblance to the moon withered by the rays of the sun.

7. It was but natural that her breasts, like two pitchers, hardened by the rays of the sun of youth, should then be subjected to the heat of fire—heat due to the frolics of the flower-bowed potter.[6]

8. The banana plant, if it were tainted by the burning barren soil of the desert, would experience the suffering of her thighs, as they then lay buried by Cupid in the heat of the grief of desolation.

9. Damayantī's hands, feverish by the strokes of Cupid's arrows, resembled the lotus of a pool dried up by the summer, the rays of the sun falling freely on the flower.

1. Applied to arrow, श्रुतिपथोपगत means 'drawn as far as the ears.'
2. Lit. she who has a belly composed of two atoms.
3. i.e. the swan.
4. i.e. she was too morose to cast any sideglance.
5. These were famous for their beauty, so were Nala and Cupid. Cf. 5. 46.
6. i.e. Cupid.

10. The obstructing pressure of the plump and stout breasts was guilty of preventing Damayantī's heart from flying away, bursting under the excessive heat of Cupid.

11. What a pain is caused by the tip of a beard of corn, if it enters the foot! Then why should not a mountain—a king that upholds the earth,[7] staying in her heart, having entered it, cause pain to the tender-limbed girl?

12. Her eyes, as if gone within in their eagerness to see her beloved residing in her mind, could not grasp even objects resting in front of them.

13. The face of Damayantī, whose countenance drooped owing to her forlorn state, being reflected on her bosom flooded with tears, shone forth, as if by drawing near it had come to kiss Nala who was in her heart.

14. The breeze of the gazelle-eyed damsel's sighs assumed a magic power of secret entry, inferred only at the time of exit, in order to stir up its friend, fire, namely, Cupid living in her mind.[8]

15. Her vision acting as an artist painted the ten directions with figures of Nala by means of the pallid yellow produced by her grief of separation, the crimson hue (of passion), the black of inky stupor, and its own white lustre serving as colours.

16. Her sighs shook the scarf resting on her bosom, as if by way of speaking repeatedly and abundantly of her heart's plight caused by Cupid. Who is not afraid when his place of refuge[9] is in distress?

17. During the fair maid's fever caused by the grief of desolation, the lotus blossoms known as her hands, feet, face and eyes emitted for a long while, in the guise of their incessant heat, the glow of the sun which they had erstwhile absorbed in profusion.

18. It was a wonderful thing that her friends, after consideration, inferred Nala to be the cause of her fever, by merely looking at the tears of the princess—an inference that did not prove false.

7. i.e. Nala.

8. The sighs are fancied as air secretly entering her body in order to fan the flame of Cupid burning in her mind. Its secret entry is not noticed, and can only be inferred at the time of its going out in the form of sighs which alone are noticed.

9. The scarf was moving as the bosom heaved up and down with her sighs. The sighs are calling attention by that means to the imminent danger to their place of refuge—the heart—from Cupid's oppression.

19. Cupid, smiting Damayantī's heart with his arrows for the sake of Nala, and deeply piercing his own self present in her heart, lost all consciousness, his mistaken action thus bearing fruit.[10]

20. Lo, if she fancied the moon to be the sun, then why did the sun, too, with its rays thus set her heart on fire—the heart that was clearly shown to be stone as it was not rent even under the weight of the grief of desolation?[11]

21. Where was there a maiden to resemble her as she lay buried in grief from her beloved's absence, with a lotus placed on her bosom? Was she then Rati, lying in the flames of the funeral pyre to follow her dead husband,[12] clasping on her bosom the (flowery) bow of her beloved?

22. She did not know the secret that the grief of her forlorn state lurking in her mind was a fire; for in order to calm it she wished to cast into the blazing fire her life, making it a handful of straw.[13]

23. Why should not a soft heart, the natural characteristic of women, be present in her? The wise Cupid manifested it clearly by hurting her heart even with flowers serving as arrows.

24. Assuming the form of lotus stalks, the overhostile rays of the moon perhaps entered through the windows, afraid of expulsion if they entered in any other way, in order to cause a feverish heat to her who never went out of her mansion.[14]

25. Damayantī's face, eyes and lips, mirrored on her bosom full of tears, owing to her face drooping low, were evidently all arrows planted by Cupid, consisting as they did of flowers comparable with those very limbs.[15]

10. i.e. in the midst of her ardent longing for Nala her feelings were deadened, and she was reduced to a state of stupor.

11. Moonlight being highly oppressive to lovers in separation, Damayantī was being burnt by the rays of the moon, which she therefore regarded as the sun. But even as the sun, it set her heart on fire, as if it were a sunstone which is supposed to catch fire in contact with the rays of the sun.

12. i.e. Cupid, after he had been burnt by Śiva.

13. i.e. her grief will not be calmed by death; even in the after life the fire of grief caused by Nala's absence will continue to burn.

14. The lotus stalks, placed on her body to allay her sufferings, and glistening with moonlight, are the rays of the moon stealthily coming in to oppress Damayantī who kept indoors to avoid the light of the moon.

15. The reflections of Damayantī's face, eyes and lips are fancied as the five flowery arrows of Cupid fixed in her heart.

26. The moon mirrored on the surface of Damayantī's cheek, pale with the grief of her forlorn state, easily made her face resemble it, by attaching to it its emblem—the deer, while its white radiance remained imperceptible.[16]

27. Decorated with paleness by the sandal dust on her body, hot from the grief of separation, and adorned with lotus stalks looking like snakes; so appearing like Śiva, she was an object of terror to Cupid.[17]

28. The sandal paste applied by her to her heated bosom looked beautiful, with bubbles appearing on it, as if it were the moon with a retinue of stars accompanying it, coming on a visit to its friend Cupid residing in her heart.

29. Inflamed by Cupid's fire, she repeatedly cast away a fresh lotus blossom, approached toward herself for use (as a sedative), but made to rustle, midway, by her sighs.[18]

30. The two lotus blossoms placed on her bosom seemed to say, shrinking with heat, to the full-breasted maiden, "So will thy breasts obtain the grasp of the hands of thy beloved; why do they now shrink?"

31. By means of the paleness caused by the absence of her beloved, she was making known to Nala, the lord of her heart, her purity in the fire of Cupid, as if by saying, "None other than thee have I ever thought of as my lord."

32. Did the lotus plant placed on her body, heated by the grief of her forlorn state, try to remove her intense heat, or seek to overcome it with fists in the shape of its closing leaves?

33. Overpowered as she was by the poison of her desolate grief spreading on account of the bites of those snakes, Cupid's arrows, whom did she not plunge in an ocean of pathos, looking like a digit of the moon oppressed by the rays of the sun?

16. i.e. the moon reflected on her cheek could not be distinguished from it, as the white portion of the moon was not noticed on the pale cheek, its dark spot alone coming into view, with the result that her face with the lunar spot visible on it looked like another moon.

17. The sandal paste applied to her feverish body, when it dried up, looked like ashes, while the lotus stalks looked like snakes, both together giving her the appearance of Śiva. It seemed as if Damayantī was using these to scare away Cupid who dreaded Śiva, being once burnt to ashes by him.

18. i.e. the lotus blossom, withered by her sighs, rustled like dry leaves, and had to be thrown away as useless.

34. The moist, creepery lotus stalk applied by her to her bosom, burning with the suffering caused by Cupid, faded completely, as if out of shame before the adjoining hands of Damayantī, which surpassed it in beauty.

35. A spray of moss placed by her on her bosom, which throbbed when the voice of the cuckoo was heard, looked beautiful as it moved, as if struck by the fish, the emblem of Cupid ever present in her heart, while rubbing its body close against it.[19]

36. It was not through any mistake that Nala's mind regarded her face as a moonstone; otherwise how was it that at moonrise water flowed from it in tears?[20]

37. Damayantī was thriving just like Cupid's victorious weapon—his arrows; so he wished to connect her definitely with the number five, like his own arrows.[21]

38. The forlorn maiden, thinking a fiery weapon of Cupid was emerging in the shape of the moon, at once took up a watery counter-weapon suitable for it in the guise of tears.

39. The beautiful damsel, seeing a new rain-cloud, a cloudy weapon hurled by Cupid, discharged at him a suitable windy weapon in the guise of her long-drawn sighs.[22]

40. The fair damsel, believing the south wind to be a windy weapon sent by Cupid, seemed to adopt for a snaky weapon the lotus stalks which she had taken for fear of Cupid's intense heat.[23]

41. Cupid placed two darts, as it were, in her heart—the absence of her beloved and life in spite of it: did he after that

19. As Cupid occupied Damayantī's heart, his emblem—the fish—is also supposed to be there. It is fancied that the cool spray of moss, which was applied to her bosom, and moved as her heart throbbed, was shaken by this fish from inside her heart.

20. Śaśikānta ('beautiful like the moon') means also moonstone which is believed to exude water in contact with moonlight. Damayantī's face was a moonstone in the sense that at the sight of the moon it used to be wet with tears for Nala.

21. The idea is that she was as charming as Cupid's flowery arrows. The latter, however, are five in number; so Cupid wanted to connect her also with that number, i.e. he wanted to kill her; "to be reduced to the five elements" means "to die."

22. A new rain-cloud is one of the phenomena regarded as unbearable to love-sick people. Damayantī's sighs are blasts of wind which would blow away the mischievous rain-cloud.

23. As snakes are believed to feed on air, the lotus stalks which were placed on her body as a sedative are snakes used by her to drive away the south wind.

drive them home, by hitting them with a couple of Bilva fruits, her own breasts?

42. Cupid, hitting her with his arrows in extreme profusion, and then hurling even fruits, owing to all his flowery arrows being exhausted, clearly dowered her bosom with a pair of palm fruits, her own breasts.[24]

43. Then Damayantī, who repeatedly and severely reproached the moon, and repeatedly praised Rāhu,[25] suffering as she did from Cupid's fever, addressed a friend whose visage was covered with tears.

44. "As with regard to men, gods and Brahmā, it has been calculated how much time constitutes an age in the case of each, why is it that in the science of numbers the same has not been done in the case of lovers in separation, measured by the moments of young lovers in union?[26]

45. "Satī accepted her birth from the Himālayas, 'the abode of snow', because she was heated by Cupid, not because of her esteem for its greatness; on the forehead of Śiva, too, it is not his eye, but his separation from Satī that burns engraved.[27]

46. "The pain of burning caused by fire is not great, it is the pain caused by separation from one's beloved that is great; if it is not so, why do women hastily enter the fire, eager to attend on their departed lords?

47. "Friend, look at the impudence of the moon; those of its digits which are heavily stained with the sin of killing lovelorn maidens are playing in its heart, but those which make friends with the night lotus have been thrust outside.[28]

24. i.e. two palm fruits flung at her by Cupid stuck to her body and became her breasts.

25. The moon being an oppressor of Virahins, she rebuked the moon and praised Rāhu who swallows the moon during an eclipse.

26. i.e. what is a moment to lovers in union is an age to lovers in separation; to the unhappy even a moment appears as long as an age.

27. Satī committed suicide, as her father Dakṣa insulted her husband Śiva during a sacrifice performed by the former, and in the next life she was born as the daughter of the Himālaya mountain under the name of Pārvatī. It is here fancied that she chose the snowy Himālaya as her father in order to calm the fire of her grief for Śiva; while the third eye of Śiva, glowing on his forehead, is the fire of Śiva's grief for the absent Satī.

28. i.e. the moon keeps its dark spot representing vice carefully in its heart, while its white portion, which by its lustre makes the night lotus bloom, is kept by it at a distance.

48. "Friend, ask the moon clearly this, 'Inert moon, from what teacher didst thou learn the generosity of thy heat? Is it from the poison that hath withered Śiva's throat, or from the submarine fire in the ocean?'

49. "Verily this moon, on account of the sin of killing women separated from their lovers, is, after being whirled round, flung from heaven on the rock of the dark night, while the sparks bursting forth and flying upwards make the sky richer in stars.[29]

50. "Friend, do thou speak to the moon on my behalf thus, 'Why set about such a thing? Thou mayst have no regard for thy birth in the ocean, but thou hast forgotten even thy position on Śiva's head.'

51. "Moon, it is a pity thou wast not pounded by the Mandara mountain falling into the ocean[30] nor consumed even in the fire of the stomach of the sage Agastya, who drank up the ocean.

52. "Foolish moon, dost thou think, 'Damayantī's mind will be merged in me when she dies?' The learned Cupid declares that the relevant scriptural text refers in my case to the moon-like face of Nala.[31]

53. "Moon, sound forth the new drum of thy fame; now brighten the dynasty of the ocean; do thou also acquire the heroism of killing a woman; only give up torturing.

54. "Vicious moon, at night masquerade as the sun and inflame me in the absence of the sun; but when day comes, I shall see thy pride eclipsed by the sun.

55. "Moon, Terrible to maidens like me, shining as thou dost at night, abiding in the sky,[32] this thy ghostly nature, dizzying the heads of others,[33] is astonishing in thee, who art composed of nectar.

29. The moon is fancied as a criminal who is dashed against a rock by way of punishment. Here the rock is the dark, moonless night, while the stars, more in view on such a night, are increased in number by the fragments of the moon when it is smashed.

30. i.e. during the churning of the ocean, the birthplace of the moon.

31. The ruling idea of the verse is fidelity even after death. The text in question says that the mind, after the death of the body, is merged in the moon. The moon, oppressing and wishing to kill the love-sick Damayantī, is planning to have her mind after her death, but she says Cupid has so ordained that her mind, after her death, would go not to the moon in the heavens, but to that other moon—the face of Nala.

32. Also "resting on Śiva", i.e. on his head. See Vocab. under भूतपति.

33. i.e. forlorn lovers suffering from the exciting light of the moon.

56. "Friend, cast the sprout of that Tamāla leaf, thy ear-ornament, into the mouth of the deer in the moon; the deer, so fattened, might cover the moon by a little, and quickly thereby I may breathe for a moment.

57. "Truly the idea flashes upon me at the wrong moment: the Amāvāsyā night which was in my hands is gone, but if it returns, it shall be held back and compelled to abide. Dear, never will I see the face of the moon more.

58. "Friend, will not this young Cakora bird of mine become a disciple of the ocean-drinking sage Agastya? How many drops will the rays of the moon be, to the bird drinking them, after it has been trained to gulp down the ocean?

59. "Dear, take in thy hand a heavy iron club, and take my mirror outside; as soon as the moon there enters, do thou kill that malefactor quickly with ease.

60. "Why did not the ocean keep in its womb the unbearable moon, as it does the submarine fire, and why did not mighty Śiva swallow it, when it was discarded like poison by the ocean?[34]

61. "The black poison of the ocean, swallowed by one god (Śiva), did not appear again; but the moon, the white poison of the ocean, though destroyed by the gods by drinking it,[35] rises spontaneously anew.

62. "Know thou the full moon to be a sinner, dominated by a passion for killing lovers in separation; and know the moon, whose nectar is drunk up by the gods[36], to be free from sin; why do then astrologers assert a contrary dogma?

63. "Verily the fortnight, which forlorn lovers held in great esteem, became on the earth the 'great'[37] fortnight; and was the lunar day, on which all those lovers made that esteem immeasurable,[38] made Amā (or Amāvāsyā)?[39]

34. While the ocean was being churned, the moon came out of it, as did poison, which was, however, swallowed by Śiva in order to save the world.

35. The waning of the moon is believed to be due to the gods drinking the nectar constituting the body of the moon.

36. i.e. the invisible moon of the Amāvāsyā night, regarded as inauspicious by astrologers.

37. The literal meaning of बहुल, which, means, however, the dark fortnight.

38. Immeasurable, because on the Amāvāsyā night the moon is totally invisible.

39. The word "Amā" standing for "Amāvāsyā" means "immeasurable." See also Notes.

64. "Does Rāhu swallow the moon, mistaking it for the sharp Sudarśana wheel of his enemy Viṣṇu? Otherwise why does he give it up, fallen in his mouth and coming into his possession, looking like the curd-rice offered at his worship?[40]

65. "Friend, truly Rāhu does not willingly let go the moon coming within his mouth; as soon as it is swallowed by him, it slips through the passage of the hollow of his throat without any harm.[41]

66. "Experts in ancient lore, taking a plain view of things, say that Viṣṇu cut off the head of Rāhu, but do not say he is one who cuts off the heads of lovers in separation; the moon would be extinct, if Rāhu possessed the consuming power of the stomach.[42]

67. "Friend, the divine physicians, the two Aśvins, being the friends of Cupid by virtue of their beauty, at once joined to the body the head of the deer-shaped Sacrifice[43] severed by Śiva, who was Cupid's foe; who would do the same to Rāhu?

68. "Or, will not the head of Rāhu be joined to the throat of the headless body of some enemy, decapitated by Nala in battle, and hastily flying up for fear of death, the link being cemented with his blood?

69. "Friend, ask thou the Ogress Jarā why she doth not sew up the head of Rāhu with the headless body of Ketu, as she did the two sections of Jarāsandha's body.

70. "Friend, ask Rāhu on my behalf, 'Dost thou spare thy enemy,[44] thinking him to be the king of the Brāhmaṇas? If he were one, would he return to heaven, once he had fallen, by coming into contact with Vāruṇī?'[45]

40. i.e. Rāhu gives up the moon, because he finds it extremely sharp and biting.

41. It will be remembered that Rāhu has no body, possessing only a head.

42. i.e. if Viṣṇu had not severed Rāhu's head from the body, he would have swallowed and digested the moon. So Viṣṇu being responsible for the survival of the moon, is also responsible for the killing of separated lovers by the moon.

43. The reference is to Dakṣa's sacrifice destroyed by Śiva. For the allusion see Vocab. under तारामृग.

44. i.e. the moon which is regarded as the king of the Brāhmaṇas.

45. Vāruṇī means both "the west" and "wine". The moon goes down in the west; a Brāhmaṇa who drinks wine goes down from his caste and position. Such a Brāhmaṇa cannot come to heaven, but as the moon does so, in spite of his connection with Vāruṇī, he cannot be a Brāhmaṇa.

71. "Has Rāhu, like Garuḍa,[46] spared the moon, being under the impression that it was a Brāhmaṇa, because it burnt his throat? Rāhu, to burn is the nature of the moon; tell me, what Brāhmaṇa quality it has in the case of one innocent like me.

72. "For the use of the god of death, the moon was carefully made with all its digits serving as teeth, as a device for crushing maidens separated from their lovers: it is why the moon is known as Dvijarāja.[47]

73. "The moon is the burning face of Cupid, which the Creator pulled out of the fire issuing from Śiva's eye;[48] after that it was marked with a black spot in the guise of a hare, owing to its manifold sins resulting from the killing of forlorn lovers."

74. Then thinking it was useless to censure the distant moon with varied expressions in this way, Damayantī suffering grievously from the fever of desolation began to upbraid Cupid who was in her heart.

75. "Cupid, if in my heart thou art taking refuge, why art thou thus burning that very heart? Wretched one, like fire, where wilt thou be thyself, after having burnt up thy own fuel in a moment?

76. "Śiva made thee invisible,[49] fearing lest there should be an overabundance of 'three-eyedness'; Cupid, is there any one, in whom, on seeing thee, 'three eyes' did not emerge?[50]

77. "People say that thou art the companion of Rati (Cupid's wife), but why is it that in spite of thy presence (in my heart) I have no Rati (pleasure)? Or, perhaps now thou and she live not together; for she did not follow thee at thy death.

46. Garuḍa was once devouring a low-caste man, but when he felt a burning sensation in his throat, he gave him up, knowing by that means that his victim was a Brāhmaṇa. See Mahābhārata (Ādiparva, chap. 27 ff.), Cal. ed.

47. The word द्विजराज, an epithet of the moon, meaning "the king of the Brāhmaṇas" may be construed also as meaning "the king of teeth."

48. i.e. while Cupid was being burnt to ashes by Śiva. The love-inducing moon is imagined as Cupid's face saved from the fire.

49. i.e. by burning and reducing him to an ethereal form.

50. Śiva, the terrible destroyer of the world, is credited with three eyes, hence the appearance of three eyes means an outburst of anger. It is here fancied that owing to the mischievous nature of Cupid everybody became "three-eyed" or enraged whenever he was present. But this roused the fear of Śiva whose reputation as the only being possessing three eyes in the universe was thus jeopardised. He, therefore, made Cupid "invisible" in order to remove the necessity of people becoming "three-eyed" on seeing him.

78. "Thou who art incapable of discriminating between thy own self and others, hast thou heated me as thou heated thy own self separated from thy Rati? Otherwise if thou thyself didst not bear heat, how is it that my heart is being burnt in contact with thee?

79. "Cupid, why did not Rati die with thee, though she was renowned as a devoted wife? Thou art such a sinner on account of thy killing helpless women that wast thou forsaken even by thy love?

80. "Buddha, the conqueror of his passions, had already, by vanquishing thee, destroyed the body of thy expansive fame; then Śiva destroyed in battle thy physical body—all that had remained.

81. "Alas, Cupid, because of the result that thou didst obtain by fighting Śiva with flowers, the science of polity, being frightened, disapproves of fighting even with flowers as weapons.

82. "How is it that Śiva reduced thee to that plight, in spite of thy drinking nectar like the other gods? Confess. Truly thou didst not drink nectar, disdaining it owing to thy addiction to the taste of Rati's lip.

83. "Lifeless Cupid, didst thou, owing to the sin of deluding the world, become a ghost that thou now goest about oppressing one like me, pale with the sufferings caused by my forlorn state?

84. "Alas, Cupid, thou givest not death, nor does thy bow slip from thy hand out of pity; but then thou art dead, and one who is dead[51] opens not a fist that is clenched.

85. "Cupid, devotion to other gods removes blindness, untimely death and deformities; but utter blindness, emaciation of the body and paleness are his who worships thee.

86. "Cupid, thou art the cruellest of all; that is why the Creator made flowers thy weapon; if he were to create for thee a strong bow and arrows of iron, the three worlds would be in ruins.

87. "Did the anxious Creator drench the flowers serving as thy arrows with honey, in order that the fire of thy arrows might not burn down the three worlds, as did the fire of Śiva's arrows the three cities of the demons?

88. "Verily the Creator made the mind of man thy target, observing it to be indivisible and impenetrable; had he given even thunder (as thy target), it would have been cleft by thy arrows.

51. Cupid assumed an ethereal form after he had been burnt. Damayantī speaks of him as if he were dead.

89. "Cupid, the Creator was not content even with making flowers thy arrows; he gave thee five by specifying them; lo, even so they have shattered the world.

90 "What a number of flowers do the five celestial trees offer to a god, whoever he may be! But owing to thy inferior rank they give thee only one flower each.[52] Fie on thee! Even at this, thou hast no shame.

91. "Did the Creator, after giving thee thy bow, take it back, as it proved passing mischievous, although composed of flowers? But what could he do to thee? In the place of that one bow, there arose now two in the shape of the eyebrows of Nala.

92. "The six seasons which simultaneously delight the garden of Nandana give thee each a flower of its own out of pity; with these thou shapest one like a bow and five like arrows.

93. "It is good for the world thou hast no body; where is a sage who would be able to bear thy shots, if thou couldst discharge thy arrows, drawing them with firm hands as far as the ears?

94. "Cupid, thou wast suddenly reduced to ashes along with the arrow which thou didst aim at Śiva; of thee, now formless, verily the voice of the cuckoo hath become that fifth arrow of thine.[53]

95. "Cupid, even the labour of the mighty Śiva, in burning thee, was rendered futile by my sins; for thou wast immediately reborn in heaven, having sacrificed thy body for the good of the gods.

96. "To a lover in separation, turning his back at the rising moon, the Dakṣiṇa (South) wind is not 'dakṣiṇa'; if it is 'dakṣiṇa', it is thy own arm bending at the end the flowery bow.[54]

97. "Is not the mighty Śiva celebrated as the conqueror of Cupid, the demon Andhaka (Blind) and Death, simply because he conquered thee alone, blind as thou art with the joy of pride, and death to lovers in separation?

98. "Cupid, no one expert like thee in doing ill to others hath ever been seen or heard of; for thou didst light thyself from the fire (of Śiva's eye) in order to set fire to all the worlds, by embracing them with thy burning self.

52. i.e. just enough for his five arrows.

53. The song of the cuckoo is here regarded as the fifth arrow of Cupid, as the voice of the cuckoo is supposed to reproduce the fifth note of the scale.

54. There is a pun on the word "dakṣiṇa" meaning both "south" and "right." Applied to the arm, it means "right". See Notes.

99. "Śiva rightly made thee a sacrificial oblation for the pacification of the world in the fire issuing from his eye, but what purpose, alas, did Viṣṇu serve by killing the demon Madhu, while leaving thy friend Madhu the spring?"[55]

100. Even with these few words her mouth, greatly athirst for the lip of her beloved, quickly became dry as dust, as if from being struck by the Withering arrow of Cupid, enraged at her unpleasant words.

101. Severely wounded by Cupid's arrows in the core of her heart, and unable to speak much, she then talked with her dear friends in verses, she herself speaking one half and her friends the other half.

102. (A friend): In danger, save thy life with thy inborn patience from the cruel flower-arrowed god.

(Damayantī): Life itself is opposed to me to-day. How dost thou, friend, tell me to save my foe?

103. (Friend): Submissive one, why dost thou not listen to good counsel? Save thy life even by force.

(Damayantī): Friend, if thou art so good to me, why dost thou wish to preserve my enemy—my life?

104. (Friend): Damayantī, it is the nectar-rayed moon; why feelest thou heated by its rays?

(Damayantī): Friend, if the rays of the moon were dead, there would be no heat.

105. (Friend): Have patience, give up unreasoned fear, it is the cool-rayed moon that rises.

(Damayantī): It is clearly burning me with the heat of a smouldering fire; friend, thou dost eclipse feeling with words.

106. (Friend): Dear, I swear by thy heart it is the light of the moon that thou feelest.

(Damayantī): Friend, the effect of its light is clear; it is burning my skin and disrupting my life.

107. (Friend): Why dost thou, then, avoid the cuckoo, which calls the lunar day hostile to the moon?[56]

55. i.e. Viṣṇu ought to have killed the spring (Madhu) as the chief accomplice of Cupid rather than the demon Madhu.

56. The cuckoo cries "kuhū" which means also the moonless Amāvāsyā night.

(Damayantī): Friend, it is useless to hunt up meanings. The cuckoo pours on me a voice that is full of harm.

108. (Friend): Damayantī, that loved one is in thy heart, why art thou sorrowing still?

(Damayantī): Friend, I am sad, because he is only in my heart, and not without.

109. (Friend): The gem in thy necklace having burst with Cupid's heat, thy bosom is without any ornament to-day.

(Damayantī): Friend, woe is me if my beloved is banished even from my heart.[57]

110. Thus saying, immediately she fell into a swoon with Cupid's fire growing intense in her mind; prostrate with grief, how could she endure the loss, though but imagined, of the fragment of her hope?[58]

111. One of her friends put water in her mouth; one covered her breasts with lotus petals; one fanned her bosom; some one put ice on the fair maid's body.

112. The multitude of her dear friends attended her long with soft and cool lotus stalks and fibres, water and the like in such a way that by degrees she slightly came to her senses.

113-14. "Kalā, look, she distinctly breathes; Calā, observe, the eyelashes move; Menakā, guess the quivering of her lower lip; Kalpalatā, hear, she speaks something; Cārumati, cover her breasts; Keśinī, bind her unloosened hair; Taraṅgiṇī, wipe off her streaming tears"—then were words like these heard.

115. In quick accents from the mouth of her friends rose that loud noise, hearing which the king of Vidarbha came in fear to the mansion of his daughter.

116. Then the great minister of the king and the physician, owing to whose being in office there were no evils to disturb his daughter's inner apartments or the inner constitution of her body, both of them spoke to the king words that were alike. The former, "Sire, listen, I know everything from reliable reports and the statements of spies; none could overcome her grief, except some one who would give her Nala." The latter, "Sire, listen, I know

57. The girl said अनलंकृतम् "without any ornament," but Damayantī takes it to mean अनलं कृतम् "deprived of Nala."

58. To be connected with the preceding verse. Damayantī imagined that she was really going to lose Nala, at the very thought of which she became unconscious.

everything from Suśruta and the statements of Caraka; no expedient can suppress her heat, except the herb known as Nalada."

117. What was being simultaneously said by them was, though alike, mutually opposed; but the ears of the king, who was worried by the apprehension of a hundred evils with regard to Damayantī, did not take in anything.

118. The king knew his daughter, prostrate at his feet, to be overwhelmed by sufferings caused by Cupid, though she had quickly shaken off all signs of her grief due to the absence of her beloved; the wise, indeed, know at once the thoughts of others.

119. Then the father gave his blessings to his daughter whose head was bent by quickly raising her head: "Mayst thou in a few days obtain in a Svayaṁvara the virtuous husband of thy choice."

120. After that he said to the friends of his daughter: "As soon as the winter of such maidens is past, even flowers act as arrows on their bodies; so nurse her properly.

121. "In a few days your friend will herself choose a noble husband in accordance with her desire; so with her leanness at an end, she ought to regain all her beauty through the care of maidens like you."

122. Damayantī's friends made their minds an ocean of joy and shame, thinking that the king, speaking thus, did not ask his daughter about what was a matter of shame;[59] that he concluded her swoon to be caused by Cupid from the paleness, heat and the like of her body: thinking also of what he had said under the pretext of giving his blessings, and what he had said about the kind of consolation that would be suitable for her.

123. Epilogue. [The poet refers to his work Sthairya-vicāra-prakaraṇa, A Treatise on the consideration of Stability (or Permanence) of Things.]

59. i.e. her secret love for Nala.

CANTO V

1. Then while the king was waiting for kings for the Svayaṁvara, the sage Nārada was ascending to heaven in order to see Indra.

2. There was nothing surprising in the fact that the sage Parvata followed him; for he was his friend: but Nārada, the preceptor of the world, was traversing the sky to the great astonishment (of all).

3. The sage, making his way without any aerial conveyance, was plunging into the ether. There is a restriction of means for others, but for ascetics everything is accomplished by their austerities.

4. The sage went beyond the aerial chariots which wounded the pride of the mansions of Indra and the like,[1] and did not, though begged by their owners falling at his feet, accept their hospitality.

5. Being afraid of heating him, the sun diminished its own lustre exactly so much as not to be speedily heated in its turn by the lustre of the sage, as the moon is by the day.

6. Alas, as the sun used to overpower with its rays Dvijarāja 'the moon', another Dvijarāja, 'the great Brāhmaṇa' (Nārada), now overpowered it with his lustre. Who on this earth reaps not the fruit of his actions?

7. Then to him, coming as a guest, the celestial Gaṅgā presented a grass-made seat with the rows of Kuśa grass growing on its banks, water for washing his feet with its own waters, offerings of worship with Dūrvā blades, and Madhuparka with the honey of its lotus beds.

8. Just as an ascetic attains the Absolute, beautiful with the plenitude of bliss, after crossing through the ocean of worldly existence without a beginning; similarly Nārada reached the mansion of Indra, after going beyond the sky, whose depths are unfathomable.

9. Indra finely entertained the guest with a homage greater than what was due. For the good, to do just as much as is proper removes the sin (of omission), but brings no merit.

10. The mountain-cleaving[2] Indra then quickly welcomed the sage who was the friend of mountains owing to a similarity in

1. i.e. by going high above them.
2. Formerly mountains had wings which were cut off by Indra.

name.[3] Why should not even a 'mountain' who was a Brāhmaṇa receive honour, when coming to the lord of the gods ?

11. The great sage (Nārada) knew even the celestial trees to be generous with the highest degree of charity, well-learnt from the extremely lavish hand of Indra, owing to their living together with him in heaven.

12. Indra conversed with Nārada, suppressing all talk with others. The meeting of friends is, as a rule, a mine of extensive talk about themselves and others.

13. As Indra's interest in the conversation grew very intense with the mutual talk, he said to Nārada, wishing to know why the kings of the earth had not long come to heaven.

14. "Do not the royal dynasties now produce as before valiant scions who, on attaining their maturity, fall on the surface of the earth, wounded by the weapons of their enemies ?

15. "Heroes betake themselves to the magnificence of my hospitality, by discarding in battles their earthly bodies, by their weight a grave hindrance to an upward journey.

16. "Mighty one, as those kings do not now come to me as guests, as if I were under a curse, I do not set a high value on this my wealth, rendered vile by a selfish enjoyment.

17. "Abundant riches being considered an evil, acquired as they are at the expense of the wealth of good deeds performed in former births, their bestowal on the lotus-hands of worthy suppliants is the prescribed religious rite calculated to calm that evil.

18. "So let the words of thy sublime self, forming the essence of the Vedas, act to-day as the Vedic 'Sin-destroying' verses, by forthwith wiping out my accumulated sin that is causing in this matter doubts in my mind."

19. Thus saying, Indra stood, heightening the abundance of his courtesy with the depth of his attention, and fixing his thousand winkless eyes on the face of the sage.

20. Astonished to see the maturity of his politeness, in spite of his occupying the position of Indra, Nārada said with a smile in a voice thrilled with joy.

21. "Having experienced the labour involved in acquiring the religious virtue accruing from a hundred sacrifices, thou alone, if any one, showest this disregard for the fruit of that labour, thy wealth, though what is gained through pains causes one to have greater attachment to it.

3. The name of the sage was Parvata, Mountain.

22. "Who will believe that even thy riches, which are beyond the range of expression, have not destroyed thy politeness, unless one's own intimate, immediate perception says so ?

23. "Thou hast a certain superior power of vision, seeing as thou dost the outside as well as the inside of things ; for thou sayest, 'Let me give away my great riches to guests ; selfish enjoyment is not good.'

24. "Ah, I am deeply moved by this sweet, unaffected expression of thy sentiments. Rule thou the heavens well for limitless ages. O Indra, prosper thou well !

25. "As to why kings do not come here, lessened in weight by reason of all their sins being washed away by the blood flowing from their bodies wounded in battle, hear a piece of news, the joy of the world's youth.

26. "There thrives a maiden, an indescribable, priceless gem, the ornament of the earth, who is the daughter of king Bhīma, Damayantī by name—an unfailing weapon of the god of love.

27. "At present growing every moment marvellous in beauty with the speed of youth, she is said to be cherishing love for a youth that bears in full measure the essence of virtue.

28. "With thy lips moving art thou going to ask me, 'Why not say who he is?': but thou mayst check thy query midway; fatigue it not by making it go out (of thy mouth).

29. "For even an ascetic's intellect which goes only as far as the atom, sees not this youth who has been made by the maiden a lion lying in the cave of bashfulness inside the atom of her mind.

30. "Her limbs speaking of the sufferings due to her beloved's absence indicate her as being the target of flowery arrows, and she has caused the desire of her father to further the Creator's will in order to bring about the festival of her Svayaṁvara.

31. "Then as the Creator gave orders to Cupid to go on a mission of summoning all kings ; the lords of the earth, devoted to Cupid, now regard war as poison.

32. "The endeavour of the kings now is to attain distinction, however slight, in those things, whether finery or qualities, of which Damayantī is fond.

33. "Daily has Cupid's passion of hunting in the youthful society of kings grown lively in eagerness since the days of her youth.

34. "Hence those kings, (now) longing for the earth, are not eager to become thy guests; ah, there is a vast difference between the desire of the kings for Damayantī and their desire for heaven.

35. "Discontented with this, I have come to heaven to see thee, in order to have the pleasure of seeing a war; for on the earth I do not see any conflict among the kings whose minds are absorbed in her.

36. "Alas, though I know that no one is offering any resistance to thee, cruel as thou art to enemies, I am asking thee about warfare; for the outpouring of affection on a thing tends to wipe away one's judgment."

37. The great divine sage having said thus, the seal of silence on Indra's mouth burst at once; the gradual conversation of the great is something extremely pleasant and increasingly happy.

38. "There is no question of my practising warfare so long as my own younger brother Viṣṇu, the enemy of demons and my defender, keeps watch; happily do I sleep without any fear, using the victory-marked palm of his hand as a pillow.

39. "Owing to Viṣṇu's assuming the form of the universe, his identity with the sage Jaimini became proper, and (as such) being unable to tolerate any corporeal form for gods, he made my thunderbolt devoid of meaning."[4]

40. Having said to the sage such words as these, he, the ocean of politeness, paused, and then there issued forth Nārada's faint voice, coming after a long succession of sighs.

41. "Residing on earth, I am not content, thinking of wars that may be going on in heaven and the nether world, and when I come to heaven, there rises in my mind a surmise, unhappy in the end,[5] as to wars being waged by the heroes of the earth and the nether world.

42. "Now that I have seen thee, permit me to go to the earth; will not perchance the kings coming to marry Damayantī quarrel with one another there?"

43. Saying thus, the sage set out for the earth, forcibly turning back Indra; but the latter, though deterred, carefully followed him a few steps more.

4. According to Jaimini, the author of the Mīmāṁsā philosophy, the gods have no corporeal form, being in the form of mantras, in which case the fact of Indra's having a thunderbolt becomes meaningless; consequently Indra cannot make any use of it in fighting as desired by Nārada.

5. i.e. a surmise that does not come true in the long run.

44. The sage Parvata (Mountain) echoed the rumbling words of Nārada, having taken them in ; he himself did not manifest any Pakṣa (opinion) of his own to Indra who had clipped the Pakṣas (wings) of mountains.

45. Then Cupid prescribed for Indra's hand the grasping of Damayantī's cool and tender hands as a fit remedy for its long accumulated hurts caused by the presence of the thunderbolt in it.

46. The beauty of the physicians of heaven, the two Aśvins, is present in Cupid also, and Cupid, having the knowledge of the science of medicine transferred to him through the medium of that beauty, was, I ween, acting as a physician in that way.

47. Then as her husband was going after a mortal woman,[6] the wife of Indra, assuming an air of humility, indicated that her solemn pride was wounded by the drooping of her lotus face.

48. Verily the thick gloom that came over the nymph Rambhā, as Indra was leaving heaven, was the colour which playfully shewed the erotic sentiment of her heart fading away.

49. The nymph Ghṛtācī said, not in words, but through the heaving of long sighs, "The life of nymphs is now fruitless, it is proper for us to die."

50. As the Cāmara stick dropped from the lotus hand of the nymph Tilottamā, while her arm like the lotus stalk was agile in waving the Cāmara, she, too, seemed to say thereby, "It would be well for us thus to fall from heaven."

51. The nymph Menakā, as she sought to hide her feelings, wishing to cover up the grief rising in her mind, seemed to apply an external plaster of clay, while her bursting heart was being heated, as if wrapped in leaves.[7]

52. Under the pretext of her motionless posture at that moment the nymph Urvaśī, who had charmed the world with her excellence, was with her body doing the work of a boundary post marking the end of her friendship with Indra.

53. One of the nymphs said to another, who wished to know what the matter was, Indra hearing some of her words, "Look, this

6. i.e. Damayantī.

7. The twofold pressure of grief and the effort to hide her feelings is compared to Puṭapāka, which is a 'particular method of preparing drugs, the various substances being wrapped up in leaves, covered with clay, and heated in fire'. The idea recurs in 17. 168.

son of the sage Kaśyapa—Indra, the performer of a hundred sacrifices—is going to the earth."[8]

54. One of the nymphs, proud of her beauty, said to a friend within Indra's hearing, "Why disdain even to look at mortals? Art thou not going, too, for the sake of company?"

55. Then did the lords of the quarters, Agni, Varuṇa and Yama follow Indra with pleasure: let some one first show only the way ahead; he who follows his footsteps is not rare.

56. Then they separately sent to Damayantī women messengers, expert in the stealing of hearts, and sent to her father presents concealed under a pretence of joy at his success in wars.

57. Alack, it was strange that even those gods followed the way to the earth, leaving the heavens; or, perhaps there is no heaven called as such; that is heaven where one's heart goes.

58. Then those great gods were taken to the earth by horses which quickly covered the distance; on the way, in a posture in which their necks were turned aside and raised, they heard a sound far away.

59. They did not have the time even to guess whether the sound came from the clouds or the ocean; they saw only a chariot close by, which had arrived simultaneously with the hearing of the sound.

60. In it the great gods recognised Nala, the supreme reward of the existence of their eyes—Nala who used to delight in giving rest to his charioteer, and was expert in understanding the instinct of horses.

61. Was it not natural that Varuṇa should be reduced to a state of complete inertia at the sight of Nala's youth, being motionless, lord of the waters as he was, with a sense of profound astonishment?

62. Observing Nala's beauty, Yama, the ornament of the solar dynasty, became so very gloomy that that god is called even to-day Kāla (black)[9] by all.

63. When Agni, reflecting on the exuberance of Nala's beauty, felt the heat (of grief), the cause was not that he was fire, but that he was not Nala.

8. "Kaśyapasutā", earth, lit, the daughter of Kaśyapa, in which case the insinuation is that of incest. Kaśyapa means also 'a drunkard', in which case Indra is visiting the daughter of a drunkard.

9. Kāla is an epithet of Yama and means "time": it is here taken in its adjectival sense "black".

64. Kauśika (Indra), with his many eyes gazing at Nala's beauty surpassing that of Cupid, and (then) looking round the whole of his own body thought he himself was really a Kauśika (owl).

65. Considering him to be the Monism of Beauty, rising up incarnate, the gods surrendered their hearts to amazement, and so lost control over them.

66. Since the features of his beauty corresponded to what they had heard before, the gods said to one another in a low voice, "Is he that Nala?"

67. His adornments, appropriate for choosing such a bride, the time itself, the way of the chariot leading to Kuṇḍina—all these spoke to them of the king's intentions.

68. Having found Nala, the life-breath of the world, Yama, Varuṇa and Agni, respectively glad, restless (with joy), and exceedingly warm (with fervour), secretly thought in their minds thus.

69. "Whether Damayantī chooses him or not, she can be dear to me in neither of two ways: on the one hand,[10] fie on her, unable to discern merits; on the other,[11] how can I have her?"

(Varuṇa thought)—

70. "She will choose me, if she does not know the measure of his superiority to me; but how will the princess know my own superiority to him?"

(Agni thought)—

71. "If Damayantī chooses Nala, I shall not merely be put to shame in the outside world; how shall I show my face drooping with shame to my wife at home?"

72. The three gods, pondering thus, did not know in the least what to do; with the sole exception of Indra, they looked at one another's face.

73. Noticing the dumbfounded look of his followers thinking, 'What is to be done now?', Indra, expert in guile as he was, with a view to deceiving Nala, said loudly.

10. i.e. if she does not choose Nala.
11. i.e. if she chooses Nala

74. "Art thou thriving in all respects ? We think thou art that Nala; we seem to see in thee the splendour of King Vīrasena,[12] our friend occupying half our seat.

75. " 'Nala, where art thou going ?'—it is no use asking thus; as this our journey to the earth has become auspicious (by our meeting thee). Has not that very journey, about to achieve its end, made thee come forward half the way?

76. "Nala, here is Yama; he is Agni, shaggy with a mass of flames; here is Varuṇa, and know the remaining one[13] to be the ruler of the gods.

77. "Nala, to thee we have come as suppliants; know this to be the gist of our words; after taking rest for a while, we shall communicate our business to thee."

78. Thus saying, Indra became silent and said nothing in particular; there was nothing marvellous in this skill in speaking; his teacher from his childhood was Bṛihaspati.

79. As the king was bowing with all his hair standing at the word 'suppliant', he was offering, as it were, his own self like a mass of full-blown Kadamba flowers for the worship of their feet.

80. "What is unattainable for these divine lords of the quarters? How can a thing like that be under my control?"—pondering on such a contrast as this, Nala was long in doubt.

81. "As any suppliant may easily obtain from me anything that he asks for up to my life, with what gift will my heart be content when the suppliant is the lord of the gods?

82. "As for Damayantī, who is more valuable than even my life and wealth, she is only in my heart; she is not mine; the earth is not worth even a sixteenth part of her.

83. "How can I know their desired object ? How can I give unasked ? Fie on him who, though he knows a suppliant's wish, waits for the occasion of his speaking.

84. "A donor, by making a belated gift, cannot remove the sin which he commits, by making a suppliant go through the humiliation of flattering and humble entreaties, and undergo the shame of profuse begging.

12. Nala's father.
13. Indra himself.

85. "The water given to a suppliant by the generous, after having brought to him the gifts to be made, is meant as a remedy against the accidental death of the suppliant falling into a swoon, owing to his fright caused by an apprehension of the failure of his prayer."[14]

86. "Not only one's wealth, but even one's life should be given away like a straw to a suppliant; this is the meaning of the cleverly worded rule about the making of gifts, when it enjoins the giving of water together with Kuśa blades.[15]

87. "The lotus, stained in contact with mud, is not fit to be occupied by the goddess of wealth; [16] hence, the wise should make the pure lotus hand of the suppliant the abode of the goddess.

88. "The earth is overburdened, neither with trees nor with mountains nor with oceans, but with the man whose birth does not serve the purpose of fulfilling the desires of suppliants.

89. "The miser might not out of greed give his riches to others while he is alive; but what surprises me is that he does not do so, even when dead.[17]

90. "What can be a recompense for the gods for the fame which they have conferred on me, by making their request to me, neglecting all other donors in the world?

91. "'Alas, this man is going to the other world alone, leaving behind his wealth at his death'—thinking thus, the friendly suppliant, taking pity, desires to take that man's wealth to the other world.[18]

92. "He who accepts a gift is a debtor, who takes one thing in this world to give it back multiplied by a crore in heaven; only a good man, if there be any, comes to practise this everlasting usury in the next world by virtue of his good deeds."

14. A gift is preceded by the act of pouring water on the suppliant's hand, signifying the resolve to give, and so removing any doubt about the gift to be made.

15. Nala interprets the rule that a gift is to be preceded by the formality of offering to the suppliant water with a few blades of Kuśa grass. The significance of the blades of grass is obvious: with regard to the water, the word जीवन "life" is one of the synonyms of water; hence the conclusion that even one's life should be given away.

16. The lotus is the seat of Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth.

17. This is an apparent contradiction. The real meaning is, "On his death he surrenders his wealth to the king."

18. i.e. wealth, charitably spent in this world, comes back to the donor in the next world. The idea is continued in the next verse.

93. Thinking thus for a moment, Nala said to the gods who were glad to find the countenance of the man supplicated[19] beaming with joy—something difficult for suppliants to get.

94. "There is not much difference between a cause and an effect, and it is true that a person's body is produced by food; looking at your nectar-fed bodies, my eyes are being immersed in nectar.

95. "Compare my slight religious merit with its result, namely, you come within the range of my eyes! It is the religious austerities of my forefathers which, maturing in this way, thrive in glory.

96. "Ah, verily the merit resulting from the vow of enduring everything, installed this earth in the rank of a goddess, and even you are honouring her with your lotus feet.

97. "Whatever you desire from this mortal child, whether an offering as great as life itself, or more, let him with it worship your feet: say, what can such a thing be."

98. Then Nala having politely said thus without any hesitation, Indra, the master of hypocrisy in his actions, spoke these words crooked with insincerity.

99. "Moon of the earth, we desire that festive occasion—marriage with Damayantī; conqueror of Cupid, act thou as our messenger in this matter, casting aside for ever the fear of Cupid.

100. "There are hundreds of kings on the earth; thou art certainly an ocean, they are wells: are there not so many planets in the heavens, which of them is like the sun?

101. "We have all-seeing eyes; we know the unfathomable ocean of thy merits; none of us would be content without engaging thee in this secret affair in this way."

102. Though he came of a pure family and felt himself to be an abode of virtues, Indra in his desire to oust the sincere and friendly Nala at once became crooked like a bow, which, though made of good bamboo and provided with a string, becomes bent in order to let go the straight and feathered arrow.

103. Nala, who was very subtle, understood Indra's guile from those very words and then made a suitable speech. Sincerity is not the policy towards those who are insincere.

104. "It is the gravity of my own sins committed in another birth that desires to defy even your greatness that transcends the limit of words.

19. i.e. Nala.

105. "You know the minds of all; yet I must not maintain a silence which might be prejudicial to the main object in view; let there be shame through speaking, rather than the acceptance of the unrefuted words of others.

106. "How can you, in whose mind is present as in a clear mirror all that is, give such a command to one, to whom it is not fit to be given?

107. "Strange. How can I go on a mission on your behalf to one whom I am at this moment going to choose as my bride? Do not high personages like you feel even contempt for deceiving a straw like me?

108. "Owing to her absence I go mad and lose my senses in a moment; tell me, how can I as such keep your secret[20] before her?

109. "How can I dissimulate my emotions in the presence of one, cherishing whom in my heart in the form of desire I take my breath? Even the wise cannot resist the objects of sense.

110. "Besides, how can one like me even see her without crushing the sentinels? Where does a maiden confide in a man, ruthless in conquering a hundred thousand sentinels?

111. "The fame that was valued by the generous including the sage Dadhīci had only life as its maximum price. How can I accept it by paying a price a hundred times greater than my life, my beloved Damayantī?

112. "Just as you are asking me for her, I too ought to ask you for her; I must make yourselves my teachers in the matter of flattery in entreaties for the sake of my desired object—Damayantī.

113. "Worshipping you daily, first of all have I begged Damayantī of you; if you do not feel shame in transgressing my prayer, I too am not bound to feel it overmuch.

114. "It is said that Damayantī has already resolved to choose me as her consort; when she sees me, she will only blush; certainly she will not accept you.

115. "So be pleased. Grieve not. This mission is entirely unsuitable for me; wishing to carry it into effect by a wrong method, you will simply acquire ridicule, and not the desired object."

20. i.e. the secret of your appointing me—her lover—as a messenger to her.

116. Then thinking over these words of Nala, Indra said, smiling slightly, and furtively looking at the face of his companions.

117. "King, didst thou not thyself, a scion of the dynasty of the moon, say all this? Is thy tongue not ashamed of its refusal, having promised of its own accord to give suppliants the object of their desire?[21]

118. "Thoughtful one, how is it that thou dost not see this world, transient and false, that even thy mind, strangely enough, is going to forsake virtue and fame?

119. "Who was ever born to thy dynasty, the crown of the world, but did not fulfil the desires of suppliants? The very first member of the dynasty, the moon, was indeed marked with a stain; alack, mayst thou not be like him, too!

120. "But the hare in the moon is only a sign (not a mark of disgrace), while even a sour look or silence or displeasure with regard to a suppliant—all this is disgrace for one like thee.

121. "'Did he not read the letter 'Na', while reading the alphabet, or has he forgotten it even if he did read it?'—thus the letter 'Na' used to sway to and fro in the swing of doubt in the minds of suppliants."[22]

122. Agni said to him, "Nala, why dost thou let this renown escape thee, white as the moon, that has come to thy hands? No one else on earth has thus had Indra, the owner of the all-giving Kalpa tree, coming as a suppliant.

123. "Let our desire, never thwarted while procuring the joy of the inhabitants of heaven, renounce to-day its pride of being without an equal, owing to our having crowned thyself in its place."

124. Then said Yama to Nala who was sad: "Light of the family of Vīrasena, is the strange gloom that seeks to dominate thee worthy of thee who dost belong to the dynasty of the moon?

125. "A suppliant was not disappointed even by the Rohaṇa mountain,[23] hard among hard objects, and even by the wish-cow, a mere animal; alas, child, what is this that thou art about to do?

126. "Does a thoughtful man ever delay, when asked for a favour? Who can be a guarantee for one's life even for a moment? The two eyes rolling by way of winking speak instantly of death.

21. See Verse 97.
22. i.e. formerly Nala never said No, when asked for a favour.
23. A legendary mountain producing jewels.

127. "Because of the disappointment suffered by the beak of the Cātaka bird asking for water, a gloom spreads over the expanse of clouds, though it was willing to give cool water to the bird."[24]

128. Varuṇa, too, raising his hand, spoke some appropriate words to him, "Fame alone, whose pearlstring is the stream of water offered in connection with gifts,[25] is thy beloved wife.

129. "Thoughtful one, if it is true that even Karṇa and Dadhīci were not everlasting on earth—Karṇa whose skin was an impenetrable armour, and Dadhīci whose bones were hard as the thunderbolt—then neglect not religious virtue.

130. "A wise man like thee cannot get rid of the noose that is fidelity to one's promise—the noose, bound by which Bali and Vindhya are still unable to move.

131. "Fame, that dear one, the beauty of whose visage surpasses the moon, and who does not forsake her lover, even when she goes to the farthest ends of the directions,—who will maltreat even Fame for the sake of a gazelle-eyed damsel, union with whom is of transient duration ?

132. "Strange. Even we whom others ask for boons ask thee for a favour ; hero, do thou fulfil not only our desire, but also fill the regions with thy fame.

133. "The gods have come to thee as suppliants. Let the divine Kalpa tree, the lustre of its vast fame for charity being thus tarnished, make to-day the heaven white with its flowers alone.[26]

134. "Nala, even thy name recalled like those of Bharata, Arjuna and Pṛithu gives a traveller his desired object ; if thou dost doubt the success of thy own journey, all those benign agencies must also be futile.

135. "Make thy pious promise,[27] which was to-day delightful with its accents respecting our desired object, true to its literal

24. The gloomy colour of the clouds is fancied as the result of the sin caused by their delay in giving a drink of water to the thirsty Cātaka bird.

25. See Verse 85.

26. The divine tree, which usually supplies the wants of the gods, is white with its fame as well as its flowers; but as this fame no longer exists owing to these gods having diverted their prayer to Nala, it is now white with its flowers only.

27. See Verse 97.

meaning, by making it a rival of the scriptures[28] (in its regard for the truth); and, let thy fame, purifying the three worlds, destroy the connection of things with the terms 'black', 'yellow', 'red' and 'green', by proclaiming 'white' as the only colour on earth.[29]

136. "How is it that Śani, begotten by the thousand-footed Sun, was born lame? It is said a son has a tendency to resemble the father. But the Sun, manifesting himself to be lame in the act of rising above thy might, in spite of his thousand feet, has provided us with the answer to-day."

137. Thus hearing these flattering words of the group of gods, the king, though in love with Damayantī, undertook the mission forcibly imposed on him. When he gave his consent, Indra said to him in great joy, "Let the power of being invisible be everywhere subject to thy will."

138. Epilogue. [The poet refers to his work Śrīvijayaprāśasti.]

28. Setting aside the usual derivation of the word प्रतिश्रुति "promise", the poet derives it as श्रुतेः प्रतिभटा प्रतिश्रुतिः "a rival of the scriptures."

29. The fame, white in its purity, is to make all things white, leaving only one colour on the earth and banishing the rest.

CANTO VI

1. Then starting on Indra's mission, the king of Niṣadha, the repeller of enemies, made the capital of king Bhīma the destination of his chariot.

2. Just as the sage Agastya did not consider even the irresistible Ocean-fire as an obstacle to his drinking up the ocean, similarly the firm-minded king did not consider the loss of Damayantī a hindrance in the path of carrying out his mission.

3. The gods, wishing to drink the nectar of news about the lotus-eyed Damayantī coming to them through Nala, as through a conduit, remained as the ornament of that place, winkless as if to look at the direction in which he was going.[1]

4. Just as a wish attains its fulfilment, similarly Nala's chariot in a moment reached that city, the Amarāvatī of that Indra of the earth (king Bhīma), disguised under the mere name of Kuṇḍina.

5. "This is the city whose streets are hallowed with the touch of Damayantī's feet"—overwhelmed with anxiety at this thought, Nala, looking wistfully at the city for a moment, heaved a deep sigh, his hopes destroyed by the gods.

6. His left eye, perspiring with a drop of joyful tears, while the eyelashes thrilled, as well as the other eye, quivering with throbs, felt the joy of the first union of lovers at the sight of that city.

7. Just as a mass of rays, going out of the solar disc, enters the lunar orb,[2] similarly the king then descending from the chariot, occupied by the charioteer, went into the city.

8. Wonderful was it that the figure of Nala, when he entered the city, remained invisible ;[3] more wonderful was it that his figure still remained the one thing 'visible'[4] in the world.

9. Nala's eyes, after long traversing the city, which, owing to its clever inhabitants and beautiful buildings, was like an (all-giving) Kalpa creeper of wonder, became at last the guest of the royal palace.

10. He held the armed sentinels in contempt, but was ashamed in his heart that he was going about unseen ; he was delighted that

1. A special reason is here fancied for the winkless character of the eyes of the gods, who by nature do not wink.

2. The reference is to the idea that the moon shines by the reflected light of the sun, familiar to Hindu astronomers. Cf. Bṛhatsaṁhitā 4. 1-4.

3. See 5. 137.

4. Here, "worth seeing".

he would see Damayantī, but became sad, remembering he was a messenger.

11. Then repeatedly turning his eyes in all directions, with the object of seeing Damayantī, he entered the palace without any hesitation, unseen through Indra's (magical) feat by the guardsmen in the rooms of the palace.[5]

12. The mighty sovereign, though he passed through the palace door, looked round, curving his neck, with eyes motionless with surprise, at the voice of the sentinels who were preventing other people from coming in, shouting, "Who is this ?"

13. Having closed his eyes, on seeing in the inner apartment a young woman, who had uncovered her thighs to paint them, he was startled to have jostled another maid who was passing by.

14. Perhaps Nala had perceived Damayantī in the cycle of creation without a beginning or in pictures, or it was perhaps a magical illusion produced by Cupid that he saw in all the directions.[6]

15. He had no liking for the nymph-like maidens owing to his seeing them along with the illusory figure of Damayantī; thanks to this very mistake[7] about Damayantī, he mistook them not for Damayantī.

16. Nala was overwhelmed with grief at his beloved's absence, the grief to which Cupid gave a helping hand in his heart despairing of Damayantī. Having seen there her illusory figure, he grieved, seeing her no more, having in a moment recovered from the illusion.

17. As he was delivering a little the message of the divine lords of the directions to the figure of his beloved called up by his imagination, he was brought to his senses by the shout of the many timid girls, who were frightened by the voice coming from an invisible source.

18. Seeing there a slender damsel's breasts, from which the breeze had removed the cloth, as if to touch them, Nala, being ashamed, stood with his face turned aside, the face that did not brook the full moon's presence.[8]

5. This Canto, it will be remembered, describes the adventures of Nala going about invisible in the inner apartments.

6. Though Nala had never seen Damayantī before, he seemed to have her vision before him on all sides.

7. i.e. illusion.

8. i.e. Nala's face was as beautiful as the full moon, but the face was pure, while the moon was marked with a stain.

19. Cupid, though he cast a net in the inner apartment, with the manifold charms[9] of the multitude of maidens, was unable to catch that black antelope—the pair of Nala's deep black eyes.

20. Seeing (first) the root of the arms as a girl was binding her hair, then the breasts as she was painting them, and then the navel as her clothing got loose, he thereafter closed his eyes, having had his eyes drawn here and there by degrees.

21. As he was standing with his eyes closed, he could not be tightly grasped by two women, coming towards each other, being kept apart by their bosoms; stepping aside, Nala afterwards reproached his own limbs; the two women were, however, thrilled to come in contact with the body of a man.

22. Harassed by this (alternate) closing of eyes and looking distinctly,[10] and (hence) looking at the women with side-glances only, he was greatly ashamed, appearing (thereby) to look at them with passion;[11] the good, indeed, feel shame much more before their own selves than before others.

23. The flowers serving as the arrows discharged at Nala by Cupid, who was misled by the glances he was casting at a woman whose body was thrilled,[12] were not wasted, but served as offerings of worship to his steadfast character.

24. Leaving the foot-path, Nala, the light of the good, became the ornament of a quadrangle to have a look at the people, thinking, "Here it is easy to avoid the contact of passing women."

25. The eyes of the king falling on the bosom of a woman, who was painting it, turned back at once, as if expelled by the crescent-shaped nail-marks on her breasts, owing to their enmity with lovers forlorn.[13]

26. The eyes of the forlorn Nala, which speedily closed on meeting the moon that was the face of a slim damsel, confirmed two

9. Means also: "with intertwined cords of hair."

10. In the first case there was the risk of being jostled by passing women; in the second the shame of surprising them in delicate situations.

11. Sideglances being expressive of love and passion.

12. Obviously by a chance contact with his own body.

13. Moonlight being highly oppressive to forlorn lovers, the moon is regarded as their enemy. Now as the nailmarks resemble the half moon in shape, they are fancied as so many half moons, which are hostile to Nala owing to his being a lover in separation, and drive off his eyes when they come in contact with them.

things—the fact of the face being the moon, and that of themselves being lotus blossoms.[14]

27. Women coming from all sides would easily have caught hold of him, as he was standing on the quadrangle with his eyes closed, had they not themselves made way for him, turning back in terror on jostling his (invisible) figure.

28. Dragging away in his haste the scarf of a girl which got stuck to the points of the diamonds on his ornaments, as the girl knocked against him, and laying bare (by so doing) the hips of the slim damsel, the king felt grief at the resulting sin.

29. Struck on the way by one girl with a ball (which she was throwing at another girl), scratched with nails by another knocking against him, smeared by another with the saffron powder of her breasts—thus became he almost an object of dalliance to them.

30. Some one of the girls saw him in the form of a reflection on her pearlstring; then as he passed and was no longer seen, the slender damsel, thinking of him, decided well in her mind that the figure vanished into her own heart.

31. Cupid, unable to distinguish in any way his wife Rati among those damsels who greatly rivalled Rati in beauty, doubtless embraced each one of the girls, whose patience was exhausted by the beauty of Nala's reflection.[15]

32. Restless with the delusion produced by the beauty of his reflection, they were not too afraid even of his invisible figure: fair-eyed maidens who obey Cupid's commands regard even their lives as straw.

33. The tremor, which came over the fair-eyed damsels when they saw his reflection, and which spread through them when they came to touch him, was greatly enhanced by the fear caused by the sound of his footsteps when he speedily ran away from them.

34. Let Cupid thrill with joy those limbs of the maidens which came in contact with Nala's limbs or even their eyes which drank in Nala's image; but when he made their hair stand—hair that is insensible even to cuts—he was making really stones dance.

35. A gazelle-eyed damsel went back to the place where she

14. Nala closed his eyes in order to avoid looking at the girl. The closing of his eyes at the sight of the girl's face is compared to the closing of the petals of a lotus at moonrise.

15. i.e. Cupid took possession of the hearts of the damsels who fell in love with Nala's reflection.

was thrilled to get a "touch"[16] of Nala, and falling on his footprint on the dust of the earth, said in a low voice, "Please, (come back)."

36. Languishing on account of Damayantī's absence, Nala, tired of walking about in the place, frequently took rest in the grounds[17] alongside the rows of buildings.

37. Who (among the women) was not astonished to see Damayantī (in a portrait), with Nala's pearlstring presented to her by him, after having drawn her exactly in the same way as the swan had shown her to him, by drawing her on a lotus-leaf ?

38. Nala looked at her, having drawn her in a portrait as a girl on the threshold of youth, being marked with a cane in the shape of the line of hairs on her body, and suppressing those habits which still smacked of childhood.[18]

39. The circle in his footprints, a mark of emperors, which was visible on the way where a crowd of young princes was playing with a thick mass of camphor powder, caused amazement to the elderly ladies who were looking at it.

40. Stepping for a moment between two gazelle-eyed damsels, who were looking at each other's beauty charming with youth, he caused their astonishment by this sudden hiding of each other's figure.

41. At one place the women, wondering and wondering a thousand times, saw their own reflections appearing in the air on the invisible ornamental jewels of Nala standing in front of them.

42. Some maidens (playing the game of ball-throwing), their face fair like the moon, seeing that the ball dropped midway, having struck Nala in its course, and that it was tinted with the ornamental paint of his body, were lost in astonishment, remembering that the ball was being thrown at one another only among themselves.

43. The queens (in the harem), though they were devoted to the austerity of not looking at any man except their own consort, obtained the supreme joy of their eyes, by looking at his beauty in his reflections on the floor.

44. Looking at his shadow, they thought, "Just as we bear Cupid (i.e. love) in relation to our husband, so is the earth, too,

16. स्पृष्टक: a kind of light embrace.

17. The reading उपत्यका has been adopted.

18. The line of downy hairs growing on her body at the approach of youth is fancied as a cane with which she was suppressing the last vestiges of childish conduct.

in that way, in relation to her husband (the king), carrying this Cupid, turned blue by the flames of Śiva's eyes ?"[19]

45. Although to their heart's content they looked at his beauty, presented by his reflection, they did not see that beauty of his,[20] which surpassed a lump of gold.

46. It was wonderful that the forlorn king, by becoming invisible, by spreading out a series of bodies in the shape of his reflections on the bejewelled floors, and by entering the upper story of another's mansion, shone like an ascetic (who also becomes invisible at will, assumes a plurality of bodies, and enters the body of another).[21]

47. "I touched something like a man as I was passing", "I saw something like the shadow of a man", "I, too, noticed as if some one were talking"—he heard such words of women.

48. The beautiful Damayantī came across Nala on the way, as she was coming, after paying obeisance to her mother; but he could not distinguish her among the illusory Damayantīs (seen by him), nor did she see him owing to his being invisible.

49. A wreath of flowers, obtained from her mother as a favour, though thrown by her at Nala's neck, having seen him in an illusion, did actually reach him as he was standing close by.

50. The king was astonished that this wreath—a favour from one whom he used to see in the train of his thoughts—was something real; the maiden, too, was surprised to see that the wreath thrown by her went out of sight.[22]

51. Seeing each other, as if they were at different places, even at a place occupied by them both, they did actually come to embrace each other in the midst of the embraces of their illusory selves.

52. Again, Damayantī, though she felt his touch, thought it an illusion owing to her not seeing him, while the king, though he saw her, could not catch hold of her, being suddenly paralysed in his movements.

53. Starting (to touch each other) with the idea of the touches being real, owing to the great joy caused by a touch (that was real), but encountering a check owing to the falsity (of

19. The shadow is fancied as Cupid, turned back, when burnt by Śiva.

20. i.e., his real beauty.

21. An apparent contradiction is also implied. The king, though a वियोगी "separated", "forlorn", was acting like a योगी, lit. united.

22. Because it was taken away by Nala.

subsequent touches), they did not, being confounded, believe even when they actually touched each other again on the way.

54. Never interrupting each other,[23] corresponding as they did in every respect to their real selves,[24] and extremely pleasant as they were with the wealth of their beauty, they could not abstain from the joy of play, even on discovering each other to be unreal.[25]

55. Just as the flame of a lamp, when too much oil is poured into it, goes out a little and then burns with twice as much light as before; similarly the grief of separation in their hearts, abating a little for a moment, blazed up with redoubled force owing to being drenched by a wave of affection caused by their mutual touches.

56. Damayantī entered her apartment, having repeatedly both right knowledge and delusion, owing to the union of her strength of mind and grief of separation, while Nala went about there in a frenzy, seeing before him the fair-browed damsel again and again.

57. Walking and wandering long with great fatigue, the king reached the sky-scraping palace, charming with Damayantī's presence.

58. On a bejewelled terrace at the entrance of the palace, he saw Damayantī's hall, which with the winsome gestures of hundreds of girl companions made one take it for Cupid's harem.

59. There Nala inwardly praised a certain damsel who was talking sweetly, "Does her throat marked with three lines indicate that it has conquered three things—the cuckoo, the flute and the lyre" ?

60. There he feared he was discovered, on hearing from the mouth of a sparrow perching on the hand of a woman, these words of consolation uttered by her friends, "Damayantī, look at this Nala, give up sorrow."[26]

61. There, before his eyes, a girl disguised as Damayantī was bashfully placing a wreath of Madhūka flowers, brought by the gardener, round the neck of a girl friend disguised as Nala.

62. There a damsel, as she was putting on a friend's moon-like face (on the forehead) a moon-like ornamental mark of mica, on which was reflected her own moon-like face with a similar orna-

23. i.e., the vision of each other.
24. i.e., the illusion was extremely lifelike.
25. i.e., merely seen under an illusion.
26. The bird had learnt these words frequently used by Damayantī's friends as a make-believe.

mental mark of mica, seemed to produce a state of flux of the moon.

63. There on the inside of a petal of the golden Ketaka flower, using the finger-nails as a pen, Damayantī wrote her love-letter destined for himself, on which the sketching of the letters took an inky colour in a moment.

64. There one of the friends, though highly renowned (for her artistic skill), succeeded in depicting in Damayantī's portraits the toy-lotus in her hand, but not the hand; the lotus-bud on her ear, but not the eye.

65. There Gandharva women, Nārada's favourite disciples, whose lyres were equal (in sweetness) to her throat full of the honey of melody, came and sang to Damayantī to the accompaniment of lyres.

66. There a number of girls was saying to a friend, on whose breasts was a nail-mark resembling the half-moon in shape, "Is Cupid, hiding for fear of Śiva, sporting in a canoe on thy pitcher-like breasts?"[27]

67. As flowers perturbed Damayantī's heart by becoming Cupid's arrows, a maiden there who was making a garland took vengeance upon them, by thrusting into them the point of her needle.

68. But Damayantī said to her in terror, "Friend, leave off, leave off this rashness: thou art thyself offering to Cupid flowery arrows, furnishing them with a string."

69. There a fair-waisted damsel, drawing with her hand the figure of a female dolphin among the pictorial designs on her friend's breasts, was saying to her, "Friend, here is a steed, I ween, for the celestial river—thy pearlstring."[28]

70. There that damsel was saying again to the same friend, "Let this sea animal—this female dolphin, staying on thy pitcher-like breasts as the wife of that dolphin, the emblem of Cupid

27. The crescent-shaped nail-mark on the breasts is compared to a miniature canoe. The phrase पयोधरे कुम्भे means also "in a pitcher full of water," which makes vivid the idea of rowing on a miniature scale. Cupid, being once burnt by Śiva, is fancied as hiding himself.

28. The painted figure of the dolphin is to serve as a conveyance for the pearlstring which is fancied as the divine river Gaṅgā represented as riding a dolphin.

residing in thy heart,[29] serve as a panegyric of the fame of the expanse of thy breasts."[30]

71. Nala had a significant laugh at the plaint of a house sparrow which was frightened, thinking it was going to be killed, a girl having said while casting the die, "Friend, kill this moving 'sparrow' (die)" (as the expression goes).

72. There observing near Damayantī the beauty of a golden swan serving as a receptacle for betel, he was firmly mistaken that it was the (golden) swan which had done him a great good by acting as a messenger to his beloved.

73. Then in that throng of her friends a certain exuberance of beauty clearly announced her of itself, unasked, removing Nala's doubt regarding her identity.

74. His reflection, though clearly appearing on the raised seat of jewels, was not noticed among his portraits, joyfully drawn on the floor by her friends for her diversion.

75. He brought back his hope of winning Damayantī, though it had receded far, on hearing her words while she was rejecting the messengers of Agni, Yama and Varuṇa, who had made piteous entreaties (on behalf of their masters).

76. He heard, however, with an inward fear and all too slender hopes, the declaration of the messenger of Indra to Damayantī, which was being cheered by her friends in the hall.

(The speech of Indra's messenger)—

77. "While I declare my message, with thy attention do thou favour me, a messenger of Indra, who sends thee a verbal message, as the writing of the gods cannot easily be read on earth.

78. "Indra greets thee,[31] gracefully pressing thee in his embrace: what remained (to be said) was conveyed to thee by the hair of his body, standing on end at the very mention of his embracing thee.

79. "When he comes to thy Svayaṁvara, do thou, with thy wreath of choice, quickly fetter Indra's throat, which, though

29. As Cupid is in the heart of the girl, his emblem—the dolphin—is also there, and now it is to be joined by its mate depicted on the girl's breasts. Cf. 4. 35.

30. As the dolphin is a big animal, its presence on the breasts would proclaim their bulk.

31. Lit: enquires about thy health.

urged by the heart, was guilty of being shy in the matter of asking for thy hand.

80. "Forsake him not. Let not the gods who brought out Lakṣmī for his younger brother (Viṣṇu), by churning the ocean of milk, take pains to raise up another Lakṣmī for him, by churning the ocean of sugar-cane juice.[32]

81. "In the cycle of worlds heaven is the greatest, in heaven the gods, and among the gods Indra: when Indra himself asks to be thy slave for love, is there a climax of glory even beyond this?

82. "Indra invites thee in flattering terms to that position which he acquired by performing a hundred sacrifices: do thou a favour, adorn it with the toil of moving thy eyebrows in token of acceptance.

83. "Thoughtful girl, in thy mind think of the happiness that is in pleasure walks along the celestial Gaṅgā and in the garden of Nandana, in having a god as thy husband, Viṣṇu as thy husband's younger brother, and Lakṣmī, the wife of thy husband's brother, as a companion.

84. "Thou alone hast acquired the glory of this invitation from Indra,—'Be happy in the sovereignty of the three worlds', to attain which Viṣṇu humiliated himself by his begging of Bali, and is (still) called Dwarf.[33]

85. "It is not meet for thee to make the gods ungrateful, to whom thou dost obeisance three times a day: be pleased to release them from debt who would fall at thy feet at dawn, noon and eve."[34]

86. The garland of Pārijāta flowers, a favour from Indra, presented by the woman saying this, and heartily accepted by Damayantī, filled with its fragrance all Āśās (directions), excepting the Āśā (hope) of Nala.

87. Then one of the damsels said, "Madam, it is useless to think over the matter"; another said, "Well, friend, it will be proper (to choose Indra)"; and yet another said, "Let the reply 'yes' be the one thing propitious in the matter."

32. i.e., in the case of Damayantī's refusal, the gods will have to find for Indra a wife even more beautiful than Lakṣmī, by churning the ocean of sugar-cane juice sweeter than milk.

33. According to the story, Viṣṇu assumed the form of a dwarf.

34. i.e., be pleased to allow them to repay their debt to thee by falling at thy feet etc. Damayantī is asked to become the queen of the gods and receive their homage.

88. "Am I at any time disobedient to you? But there remains something in particular to be said"—Damayantī having said thus, her friends and the messenger of Indra felt a limitless joy.

89. As Nala was thinking, 'Neither have I won Damayantī nor executed my mission;' if the day lotus that was his heart did not burst, the reason was solely the vision of the moon, Damayantī's face.[35]

90. Bowing in honour of Indra with that very garland (on her head), Damayantī, with the corners of her lips slightly brightened by a smile, replied to the messenger, after she had restrained each of her friends (from further speech), by making a sign with her eyes.

91. "Give up the audacity of praising Indra; if any one knows how to describe him, it is only the Veda to a slight extent: to him, a witness in the hearts of men, a reply on my part, which can enlighten only the ignorant, will be but futile.

92. "Whose tongue utters the discourtesy of a 'No' respecting his commands? Yet accepting his command as a garland on my head, I, a humble girl, offend him by individual utterances of my own.

93. "This kindness of Indra, because it is the result of my religious austerities, does, indeed, engage me in (further) austerities. The sweetness of a result produces an impatience in the matter of proceeding to the means.[36]

94. "Him will I therefore serve as my husband for happiness and for the fulfilment of my vows, but with this iota of difference that I will serve him in his mortal shape, partially incarnate in this world as a ruler of the earth.[37]

35. Nala's heart was the lotus, and Damayantī's face the moon. The day lotus, in the presence of the moon, does not open, but closes its petals; similarly Nala's heart did not burst with grief, being to some extent consoled at the sight of Damayantī.

36. She means that as her former austerities have brought on her the kindness of Indra, she is anxious to undertake further austerities which might bring her still happier results (i.e. the love of Nala).

37. The body of a king is said to be composed of elements derived from the eight Lokapālas, and as Indra is one of them, marrying a mortal king would be almost equivalent to marrying Indra.

95. "I have heard thy words in favour of Indra, sharp as being extremely prejudicial to the vow of a devoted woman: already in my mind have I given myself not to the immortal, but to a mortal Indra.[38]

96. "Like as the fact of having spurned the pleasures of the world brings no repentance to a firm-minded man bent on his salvation, so let not this kindness of Indra cause me to repent; for it is after deliberation that I have chosen Nala in my heart.

97. "I am desirous of attaining that religious virtue, blended with waves of bliss, by serving my husband here in this Bhārata, which the greatest among the good extol among lands, just as they do the family stage among the stages of life.

98. "Those who live in heaven have happiness, but no duties, while here in this land (of Bhārata) exist both the former and the latter; the gods, too, can be pleased here by the performance of sacrifices; how can I thus wish for one,[39] rejecting three?

99. "Even a virtuous man must come down from heaven, but when he departs from here (at his death), he goes to heaven: to one who thus reflects on the two types of future, do not the ultimate results of the two appear to be 'gravel' and 'sugar'?[40]

100. "What thoughtful man wishes to enjoy heaven that is like unwholesome food, and leads to transient happiness;[41] and comes to men only when their span of life acquired through deeds reaches its end, and not while it lasts?"

101. Thus interrupting her reply to Indra's messenger in the middle, she said to her friends, whose faces, by the beauty of the lips quivering in an attempt to speak, surpassed lotus blossoms with unfolding petals.

102. "Noble friends, a man has his mind dependent either on God or on the current of the chain of causes[42] of the succession of individual souls wandering without a beginning: does such a man,

38. i.e., a king who is called "the human Indra" or "the Indra of the earth." She means Nala.

39. i.e., happiness in heaven.

40. "Gravel" in the case of life in heaven with ultimate expulsion as the result, and "sugar" in the case of life in the land of Bhārata, promising at the end a life of bliss in heaven.

41. See the preceding verse.

42. i.e., the good and bad deeds of previous births causing the cycle of transmigration.

therefore, deserve censure (for thinking or acting in a particular way)?

103. "Every one being subordinate to fate for ever, even a man who acts knowingly does not deserve any censure, nor does fate itself, being inanimate, deserve any reproach: on the other hand, he who speaks (by way of censure or reproof) only suffers from fatigue of the mouth.

104. "An animal that likes soft things scorns the camel, and the thorn-loving camel scorns the former; the satisfaction of both eating what they like being equal, a neutral attitude, and not ridiculing the one or the other is right.

105. "Indra's merits, though charming, do not make me give up the man that pleases me: do you not see the world unwilling to give up the trio of virtue, wealth and desire, inferior though it is to final release?

106. "The sense of success on the attainment of one's desired object is common to a worm as well as Viṣṇu; aversion or liking for particular objects, on the part of those who have different desires, is not subject to any established rule.

107. "It is proper to restrain a friend, if on his way a hidden pitfall of danger lies ahead; but let him who knows the present situation (that there is no such danger) remain silent: one should ask one's own wish about the way to joy."

108. Thus putting an end to the intention of her friends to speak something in opposition, by the force of her learning, the young maid said to Indra's messenger, whose head was moving in wonder, though she was accustomed to hear the wise utterances of Indra's minister—Bṛihaspati.

109. "So I repelled the messengers of Yama, Varuṇa and Agni who had come to me, resolute, with great speed—the messenger of Yama, as if on the mind,[43] that of Agni, as if on the wind, and that of Varuṇa, as if on the three-streamed Gaṅgā.

110. "Indra's curse on thee,[44] if thou speakest to me about this matter again! I would rather efface this severe offence of mine against Indra with the inner vows of a devoted woman."

43. i.e., using it as a conveyance owing to its great speed.
44. Lit. thou dost touch the feet of Indra.

111. The messenger of Indra having departed, owing to all opportunity of further speech being thus destroyed, life re-entered the throbbing heart of Nala, just as sanity returns to a staggering drunkard.

112. In this way could Nala drink in intense joy the honey issuing from the loving words of the maid, and carefully brought to him by the chalices of his ears, thanks to the device (of invisibility), obtained through the kindness of a lord of a cardinal point.[45]

113. Epilogue. [The poet describes his epic as "more capable of standing criticism than even the brother work Khaṇḍanakhaṇḍa" composed by him].

45. i.e., Indra, the regent of the east.

CANTO VII

1. Then the king considered his desire fulfilled by the mere sight of the princess, the desire that had previously grown rank in respect of attaining his beloved, enjoying her company and the like.

2. The king's eyes sank first in every limb of his beloved, then in an ocean of the nectar of inward bliss, and then in the current of his tears of joy.

3. He felt the joy of realisation of unity with the One Brahma, even when he first saw the tip of a hair on her body; then, as was proper, he likewise felt, at the sight of the entire body, the joy of being merged in the One Cupid.

4. It was on her high bosom that Nala's eyes took refuge, when the ocean of his passion swelled up, overflowing its extensive shore, in contact with the nectar-flow of the vision of the moon of her face.[1]

5. Was his eye immersed in the nectar of her moon-like face? Did it remain fixed between her breasts? Did it leave her all too slender waist slowly for fear of tumbling down?

6. Nala's furtive eye, a wayfarer on the limbs of his beloved, wandering, and turning back again and again, rested with a gleam on her breasts, as if it lost its way in the gloom of the musk smearing on her bosom.

7. The messenger's[2] eye, which was losing its footing, after moving about on the circle of her beautiful hips, long rested firm, by closely clasping with its ray[3] the banana stems that were her thighs.

8. His eye rested on her feet, as if saying, "Is only a silken robe Netra; am I not also Netra (eye)? So, be pleased, make me also embrace thy bosom, hips and thighs."[4]

9. Then, after having presented his beloved and her friends to his eyes to his heart's content, the king said thus in his mind, full of joy and wonder.

1. Nala's eyes are likened to a man taking shelter on some high place to avoid a rising flood.

2. Ref. to Nala.

3. कर which means also 'hand', making the imagery of grasping the thighs vivid. On the ray of the eye see Appendix I, I (c).

4. Nala's नेत्र (eye) wants to be that other नेत्र (a silken garment) to explore Damayanti's limbs.

10. "It is doubtful if the creation of this amazing beauty pervading each limb would be possible, even if Cupid himself or my own fancy were to be installed in the Creator's place.

11. "I know her to be a river of the sentiment of love coming from 'a mainstay of the earth,'[5] in whom youth, plump with swelling bosom,[6] has caused a flood of graceful charm.

12. "Since she is attended by the climax of beauty, visibly heightened in contact with her limbs, does Cupid display in her a new art of assuming a succession of shapes?[7]

13. "Possessing a lustre resembling that of an object coloured with turmeric, was she not extracted from the clay of the River of Gold?[8] Because, on her body not even the unevenness marking the joint of two limbs can be guessed.

14. "As her limbs are superior, in spite of some resemblance, to all similar objects through some particular excellence, is any comparison of them possible? The fact is, any comparison of those limbs (with other objects) would be for them a humiliation.[9]

15. "Verily the women created in former times served only as sketching practice for the Creator's hand in order to create her, while the creation of present and future women is meant to procure her the fame of surpassing them in beauty.

16. "Beautiful objects of nature danced in proportion to their inferiority to her limbs; for (in spite of that), the poet was sure to bring them prestige by comparing them to those superior limbs.[10]

17. "She was not touched, I ween, by any defect, fearing she would, when seen, charm it into unconsciousness (by her beauty); so in others merits are marred by defects, but in her they abide happy without any rivals.

18. "The limbs of my beloved shunned the rough beauty of the seed-pod of the lotus, not because of its watery fort,[11] but out of sheer contempt; they shunned the dusty beauty of the golden

5. In the case of the river, "mountain"; in the case of Damayantī, "king" (i.e. her father Bhīma).

6. Or, " .... youth which is, as it were, a loudly rumbling cloud .... ".

7. i.e., Cupid was to be seen in all her limbs indicating youth, passion and beauty.

8. Jambūnadī, the river which produces gold.

9. Or, "all simile is to them a humiliation."

10. i.e., by saying, for instance, "The lotus is like Damayantī's face" instead of "Her face is like the lotus."

11. i.e., not because it is inaccessible in its watery recess.

Ketaka flower also out of contempt, not because it is covered with thorns.

19. "It seems as if Indra, in love with her, has, in order to protect her, employed his own weapons on every limb of hers—his Vajra ("thunder", also "diamond") in the shape of her ornamental gems and his bow[12] in the shape of their gleam.

20. "The lock of her hair that surpasses the peacock's train, though it has so many 'moons'[13] on its feathers, has very properly found a place above her face which has but one moon as its friend.[14]

21. "It is the darkness in the front and on either side, dispelled by the moon of her face, that is tied behind her in the guise of her clearly undulating hair.

22. "Did the lock of her hair and the peacock's train betake themselves to the Creator in consequence of a dispute?[15] Did he adore the former with these flowers, and rebuke the latter 'by giving it a half moon'?[16]

23. "She is clearly the Aṣṭamī night with the gloom of her hair and then the half-moon of her forehead coming into view; it is therefore well that Cupid, having acquired her, should attain a supernatural power to conquer the world.[17]

24. "Did the flowery bow of Cupid, turned black during the latter's burning (by Śiva), have only the filaments as its residue? Did Śiva in his wrath split even that into two, wherewith the Creator made Damayantī's eyebrows?

25. "And the (flowery) bow of Cupid, becoming the eyebrows of my beloved, turned solid and strong; for it has now acquired a greater force than it had in its unburnt state.

12. i.e., the rainbow. The lustre of the multicoloured gems is fancied as a rainbow.

13. i.e., moonlike patches.

14. i.e., its like in beauty.

15. i.e., to have a decision in a dispute regarding each other's beauty.

16. "To give a half moon" means "to turn somebody out by seizing him by the neck with the hand bent into a semicircle." The phrase means also that the Creator gave the peacock its half moons, viz., the brilliant spots on its feathers. The idea is that the tresses of Damayantī's hair studded with many-hued flowers were more beautiful than the peacock's train.

17. i.e., by using her as a weapon. Aṣṭamī is the night when mystic rites are performed for attaining magic powers. Damayanti's dark hair and her crescent-shaped forehead are fancied as the darkness followed by moonrise on the night of Aṣṭamī.

26. "Cupid's bow and the streak of black given up by the moon, when it became her face,[18] these two, (becoming) her eyebrows, obtained a birth, in which was a childlike nature befitting an agile grace.[19]

27. "Owing to his conquest of the three worlds with just three arrows, the flower-arrowed Cupid utilised the remaining two by crowning them as my beloved's lotus-eyes.

28. "Here she is, the tender arch of Cupid's flowery bow, with a waist capable of being held in the grasp of the hand, who, in order to stupefy us, casts a shower of arrowlike glances let loose from the beautiful corners of her eyes.

29. "Her lotus-eyes are like her lotus-eyes,[20] rolling and possessing rich lashes, surpassing the moon by the whiteness of the lustre of their corners, and having pupils, pure, blue and radiant,[21] like two rolling balls of sapphire.

30. "The gazelle would be fortunate, if she had her face furnished even with the lotus bud decorating her ear, (the lotus bud) that is put into the shade by the lustre of her eyes; but what would she then do with her eyes?[22]

31. "Methodically removing the (outer) sheaths from the (inner) sheaths of the banana stem and the petals from the blue lotus, in strippings of as many as five or six layers, the Creator made, with the essence extracted therefrom, the beauty of her eyes.

32. "Have the Creator's efforts to make her eyes extracted this essence composed of effusions of nectar from the eyes of the Cakora bird and the eyes of the gazelle as well as blue lotus blossoms, 'by employing the winking of the eyes and the closing of the petals as an instrument (of pressing)'?[23]

18. The moon, when it became the spotless face of Damayantī, had of course to give up its black mark.

19. The eyebrows are likened to two playful children. ".....in which was a childlike nature" etc., may be rendered also as ".....in which was a hairy growth suitable for" etc.

20. i.e., not admitting of comparison with other objects.

21. See Vocab. under तार

22. The idea is, the eyes of the gazelle are inferior even to Damayantī's lotus ear-rings which are, besides, obscured by the lustre of her eyes. But the animal would be glad even to have these lotus buds as its eyes, making thereby its own eyes useless.

23. Lit. 'with the instrument of closing'. See Notes.

33. "Did the gazelles ever borrow from her the beauty of her eyes that she has by force realised it from the timid animals manifold and entire?

34. "Would not her unsteady eyes, stepping far, meet with each other, if the fear of falling into the earholes did not create an obstacle to their going?[24]

35. "At the advent of the winter, I ween, the lily of the field died to gain a happier existence; for its flowers became Damayantī's eyes, and its buds the Cakora bird's eyes.

36. "Her nose is a quiver made of sesamum flowers holding two of Cupid's (flowery) arrows, inferable from the richness of the fragrance of her breath, Cupid having shot the (other) three arrows at the three worlds each.[25]

37. "The outline of her lower lip emerging along with the moon of her face calls itself the twilight of childhood and youth, resembling as it does the Bandhūka flower by the beauty of its crimson hue.[26]

38. "This lower lip on her moon-like face is the fit image of a Bimba fruit of some nectar-fed soil;[27] but the beauty of the fruit is found in any treebearing place, that of the lower lip is possible only in a place without trees.[28]

39. "I know, it is her lower lip that is the Bimba fruit owing to its deep red hue, while the inferiority[29] of the Bimba fruit to it is evident; people were mistaken regarding their names, being unable to understand the difference between the two.

40. "The two sides of her lower lip close to the centre look somewhat swollen: am I not perhaps myself guilty of having bitten it with my teeth in my dalliance with her in dreams?

24. i.e., she had long eyes reaching as far as the ears.

25. It will be remembered that Cupid has five arrows.

26. The red lip with the fair face is compared to the evening twilight, bright with the glow of sunset, with the moon rising above. As the twilight indicates the junction of day and night, so the red lips indicate that she is on the border line of childhood and youth.

27. Also, "This lower lip on the moon of her face is a fit image of the orb of the moon." See Vocab. under सुधाभूबिम्ब.

28. i.e., in a city. The idea is, the beauty of the Bimba fruit is wild and coarse, that of her lip urban and refined. विद्रुम 'treeless' means also 'coral'.

29. अधरत्व "inferiority" as well as "the character of being an अधर (lower lip)." The अधर, ruddier than the Bimba fruit, is to be called Bimba, and the Bimba fruit itself is to be called अधर which means in this case "inferior", i.e., to the lip.

41. "'How many branches of learning with their sub-varieties dance on Damayantī's lower lip?'—thus being curious, the Creator, free from his toils, seems to have reckoned them (by marking the lip) with lines.[30]

42. "Playing with her to-day in a dream in the early hours of the morning, I felt her as possessing lips full of sweetness; otherwise how could I believe her to have such infinitely charming lips?

43. "If she were pleased to give the moon even a thousandth part of her smile,[31] that deity would make the existence of the lunar rays fruitful, by worshipping it (with the rays) as with a circular waving of lights.[32]

44. "The slightly elongated drops of lustre, thicker than the rays of the moon, emitted by her face excelling the moon, are acting as the two rows of her teeth, the drops oozing first having become second[33] (in the process).

45. "Here she shines—the morning twilight of the night of swoon caused by my sorrows of separation—she who is the cause of Indra's passion reaching its climax, and attended by those teeth, (as the morning twilight which causes the crimson hue of the east is worshipped by Brāhmaṇas).

46. "These four frontal teeth of hers I know to be pearls in the line of her teeth; for bright with the polish of the colour of betel and the like, they possess the lustre of learned Brāhmaṇas, (free from worldly bondage, possessing luminous minds, and pure owing to the effacement of worldly cares, passion and the like).

47. "The Creator, having made all the limbs of Damayantī who is softer even than the cup of the Śirīṣa flower, and attained perfection in the creation of tender objects, put the final seal of softness on her voice.

48. "Or, perhaps, does not the cuckoo bird living on alms from trees learn from her moon-like face[34] a certain mystic doct-

30. The lines on her lower lip are fancied as indicating the number of sciences with which she was acquainted.

31. i.e., her smile was purer than moonlight.

32. In the case of the reading निमिल्य : 'by casting it' (i.e. the smile) among the lunar rays.

33. i.e., the smaller drops oozing first have formed the second row, i.e., the lower teeth. The white teeth are fancied as drops distilled from the lustre of the face.

34. "Mouth" would be more appropriate. In Sanskrit the same word is used for both.

rine propounding the oneness of Cupid,[35] (just as a Brāhmaṇa living on alms learns from a noble Brāhmaṇa the monistic doctrine of the Upaniṣads)?

49. "Has Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, seeing that Lakṣmī has her home in the lap of a lotus, betaken herself to Damayantī's moonlike mouth that surpasses the lotus in beauty, with the object of excelling Lakṣmī who is her cowife owing to both being attached to Viṣṇu?

50. "As the clever Sarasvatī, residing in Damayantī's throat, plays on her lyre, its sound, becoming the voice of the gazelle-eyed girl in the latter's mouth, acquires the sweetness of nectar in the hearer's ears.

51. "Did the Creator, on finishing her beauty, look at her, raising up her face? For there appears on her chin, slightly depressed (in the middle), something like an impression of a finger caused by a grasp.

52. "The moon, by becoming my beloved's face, thrives contented owing to the fear of Rāhu[36] being at an end, and the newborn circle of its rays has assumed yonder grace of her Bimba-like lips.[37]

53. "Should not her mature face have a glory, having surpassed the moon that is the face of the full-moon night,[38] (the face) whose third part—the brow—is verily the half moon, bearing the eyebrows as the lunar spot?

54. "The Creator made her lotus face an emperor amid the entire race of lotus blooms; hence it is that two lotus kings named 'eyes' wait upon it.

55. "When the moon afraid of the sun during the day and the day lotus afraid of the moon at night deposit their beauty in her face, they are then without their beauty; but by virtue of the beauty of the one or the other, when is her face not lovely?[39]

56. "It is the reflection of the beauty of her face that the lotus and the moon seem to put on from time to time, by asking

35. i.e., the amorous song of the cuckoo is an imitation of her voice.
36. Because it is no longer in the sky, having become Damayantī's face.
37. i.e., its newborn rays have become her Bimba-fruit-like lower lip.
38. i.e., the full moon.
39. i.e., in the daytime when the moon is absent, her face has the beauty of the moon, and at night when the day-lotus is no longer in bloom, it has the beauty of the lotus.

it of the paternal water and the friendly mirror, as an ornament obtained by begging.

57. "Verily during water sports, the lilies, manifesting their emotion to their lord, the sun, and stretching forth their lotus-hands, beg the beauty of Damayantī's face, perceived with their eyes, the bees.[40]

58. "Verily her face, red with saffron as with anger, having vanquished the moon, its constant rival, must have forcibly tied it up, the rope being (still) attached to it in the shape of its halo.[41]

59. "Did the Creator, destroying hundreds of lunar discs on the Amāvāsyā nights, month after month, install this moon—the face of Damayantī, unique and endowed with an imperishable beauty?[42]

60. "Cupid abides on her face with Rati ('his wife' as well as 'pleasure'), accompanied by an affectionate friend—the spring in the shape of her lips, and furnished with his emblem—the dolphin in the shape of the ornamental designs painted on her cheeks, and desirous of conquering the worlds with her eyebrows serving as his bow.[43]

61. "Are her ears two ceremonial cakes—such is Brahmā's skill—to be offered to Cupid and his consort, the water and flowers accompanying a gift being offered in the guise of her lotus eyes adorned with her tears of separation?[44]

62. "The channel-like line carved on her ear-rings that runs in the direction of the ear-holes is the path, by which the eddying[45] nectar flow of the essence of the scriptures entered her ears.

63. "Is it a new kind of numeral denoting the number nine with its deep-set outline carved within her ears, (indicating) that

40. The bees flying about are fancied as the eyes of the lotus plants, while the flowers floating on the surface of the water are fancied as their hands.

41. The halo of the moon is fancied as a rope with which Damayantī's face tied the moon round, after it had beaten it in a contest of beauty.

42. The Creator is represented as an artist who destroys many preliminary sketches before producing the final specimen.

43. Damayantī's face is fancied as the seat of Cupid; the designs painted on the cheeks form, as it were, the dolphin which serves as his emblem; the sweet lip is the spring, and the eyebrows his bow.

44. The ears are the ceremonial cakes, the lotus-like eyes are the flowers, and her tears the water—thus combining all the characteristics of a religious gift. Here the gift is made by the Creator to Cupid to serve as one more weapon in his armoury.

45. Lit. extremely crooked.

her ears, dividing the eighteen branches of learning, held one half each?[46]

64. "Methinks, with those two inflexible nooses in the shape of her creeperlike ears, Cupid conquered the single-noosed Varuṇa, without putting forth any great effort.[47]

65. "Being the image of a four-armed father,[48] Cupid, too, has rightly become four-armed; are her broad creeperlike ears, strips of bamboo-skin as it were, the strings of his two bows in the shape of her eyebrows?[49]

66. "Wonderful is her neck: it is beautiful with the nape and adorned with a necklace of pearls; it assumes a shape worth embracing, and by it the entire upper portion of the body looks beautiful.[50]

67. "In her throat the Creator fashioned poetry, song, courteous speech and truth, and under the pretext of putting three lines on it, he apportioned boundaries for them to live.[51]

68. "Let my beloved's arms conquer the stalk of the lotus—nothing surprising in it; in a duel[52] victory there must be; but it is highly amazing that the heart of the lotus-stalk broken (in defeat) is seen to be 'without any pain'.[53]

69. "Did she, whose navel is beautiful with its whirl, conquer the lotus-stalk with her tender arms? Is it not for that reason

46. The reference is to the curve of the outer ear resembling the Nāgari nine. The idea of "hearing" different sciences from the guru is continued.

47. Varuṇa who was one of Damayantī's lovers had but one noose in his hand.

48. Cupid's father, Viṣṇu, has four arms.

49. Cupid is represented here as having four arms and consequently two bows. Damayantī's eyebrows are the two bows, and the creeperlike ears the two bowstrings.

50. By a clever choice of words the poet makes this verse sound strange in the ears of the hearer: "Her neck is something strange, being adorned with a माणवक (boy), though it is beautiful with an अवटु (one who is not a boy); it looks beautiful (सुरूपताभाक्), possessing a whole ऊर्ध्वक drum, though it is assuming the form of an आलिङ्गय drum". The apparent contradiction is to be removed by taking these words in a more appropriate sense.

51. The presence of three lines on the neck is regarded as a sign of luck. Cf. 6. 59.

52. i.e., in a contest of beauty victory must come to one of the two.

53. निर्व्यथन which means also a hole. The plain meaning is: when broken, it is seen to have holes inside.

lying helpless,[54] immersed in dense clay, its humiliation in a tangible form?

70. "In the guise of the five fingers with their rosy nails, Cupid's five arrows with unique tips of gold and polished joints are to be seen in the dear one's hand, a lotus-made quiver dyed with cinnabar.[55]

71. "Verily the leaf that was eager to vie with her hands did play the fool;[56] again, boasting of a likeness to her lower lip, why should it not prove an arrant fool?[57]

72. " 'The making of lotus blossoms is my sketching practice for the making of thy hand'—did the Creator announce this to the deer-eyed damsel by sketching lotus blossoms on her hands?[58]

73. "Are these creeperlike arms lotus-stalks visible on both sides of this my 'joy-giving' Narmadā?[59] Are these breasts the islets that emerged when in her the waters of childhood dried up with Cupid's heat?[60]

74. "The palm fruit would be able to imitate her breasts, happy in their ascent, if it did not (at times) fall to the ground; not, however, by simply clinging on to the high tree; for the breasts of the slender girl are high by themselves.[61]

75. "The pot is cited as an illustration in philosophical works, being celebrated for its rivalry with her breasts; and, it is on account of this art (of pot-making) that the potter became famous,[62] though he makes jars and other things as well.

54. निःसूत्र meaning also "without any fibres" i.e. extremely young and fragile. The lotus-stalk surpassed by Damayantī's arms in beauty is fancied as lying despondent on a mass of clay.

55. The fingers are compared to Cupid's arrows, the hand to his quiver, and the nails to the tips of the arrows; both the fingers and arrows have smooth joints.

56. बाल which means also "young", so that it is implied that "the leaf became young" in order to be like her hands.

57. प्रवाल "extremely foolish" means also "a new leaf" and "very young". The leaf putting forth young and yet younger shoots to vie with her hands and lips manifests its foolishness in proportion.

58. The presence of lotus marks on the palm is regarded as a sign of luck. The idea is that the Creator was putting these marks by way of acquiring practice, in order to make the hands as beautiful as lotus blossoms.

59. i.e. Damayantī, who is fancied as the river Narmadā (lit. joy-giving).

60. i.e., at the advent of youth.

61. i.e., wihout any outside help.

62. i.e., known as potter. Lit. and, the potter, the maker of jars and the like, became famous on account of this art.

76. "The rosy splendour of a ruby necklace is emerging on Damayantī's bosom, the middle of which is foamy white with exceedingly pellucid pearls, looking like drops of water, being located in her pearlstring.[63]

77. "Here rises in her the orb of the moon as her face, unhesitatingly making the lotus shrink[64]; but, strange, still that couple of red geese in the shape of her breasts is not undergoing separation in the least.[65]

78. "These breasts have taken away the beauty of the temples of the elephant, but the latter have not been able to take away that of the former; for the temples of the elephant have concealed their pearls in fear, while the breasts have their pearl ornaments exposed to view.[66]

79. "No insane Bilva fruit would be deemed worth even a 'cowry', if it compared itself to her breasts, longed for by that Indra who holds the thunderbolt at the tip of his hand.[67]

80. "The traces left by the minds of the entire race of young men, as they slipped into the hollow of her bosom, slippery with sandal-paste, are flashing in the shape of the beams emitted by the gems in her pearlstring.[68]

81. "It is a curious phenomenon of the kingdom of Cupid on Damayantī's frame, perfect in every limb, that the slender belly is not attacked by its folds, though it stays amidst them.[69]

63. पयोधर 'bosom' means also 'a cloud', and it is intended to imply the picture of a rainbow. See Vocab. under रोहित.

64. i.e., her face eclipses the lotus, just as the moon causes its petals to shrink.

65. The Cakravāka couple, to which the breasts are compared, is said to separate from each other when the moon rises in the evening. Here, the face being the moon, the Cakravāka breasts ought to separate; but there being no intervening space between the breasts, they remain joined together.

66. The breasts are represented as the victors, and the temples as the vanquished in a contest of beauty. The victors are showing off their riches; the vanquished are timidly guarding what they have. The reference is to the pearls supposed to be inside an elephant's head.

67. Or, "who holds hundred crores (of valuable things)....".

68. It is fancied that the minds of young men slipped into the intervening space between her breasts, as they were brooding over her beauty; while the jets of lustre emitted by the gems in the pearlstring across her bosom, wet with sandal paste, are fancied as the traces of slipping left by these minds.

69. The fatty rolls of skin on the upper belly, called Bali or Vali, meaning (by sound) also 'powerful', might be expected to attack their weak neighbour, the slender belly; but it remained free from all such attack, hence the wonder. The idea is, her waist was slender in spite of the fatty rolls

82. "If the Creator, by making her waist slender, did not lay by some beautiful portion, how could he now in her youth make her breasts, her frame being without any resemblance to anything else?

83. "Round her waist, the Creator put a blue string in the shape of a row of hair, as if thinking, lucky like Pārvatī, she, too, would one day realise through her husband the completion of her half-complete self.[70]

84. "Alack, on reaching her deep well-like navel, her pitcher-like breasts and the string-like line of hair on the body, my thirst for seeing would cease, if they were not thus covered with her clothing (just as the thirst of a man, on reaching a well with a rope and pitchers, would be satisfied, if it were not guarded with a number of swords).[71]

85. "She is perhaps the abode of Cupid, gone mad like an elephant; she has a navel resembling the hole of an uprooted stake to which an elephant is tied; she has rows of downy hair on her body resembling torn chains slipping off the body, and a high bosom similar to a mound on which the animal sleeps.

86. "It is strange that Cupid the hero has become a conqueror with the line of downy hair on her waist, the eyebrows on the forehead, and the flowers on her head serving as his bow-string, bow and arrows respectively, even though they are stationary and detached, one from the other.

87. "Verily on this plate of gold, namely, her back, this is a panegyric in honour of Cupid in letters of silver in the shape of the halos of the jasmine blossoms that are on her hair bound in knots.[72]

88. "Does Cupid, seeing that his father Viṣṇu's 'clearly visible' circular blade Sudarśana had conquered the world in battle, wish to conquer the world with an invisible circular weapon in the shape of her hips?

projecting over it. See 10. 127. The imagery is that of a weak ruler living free from attack in the midst of powerful neighbours. It is also implied by means of word play that it is surprising that a weakling (अनङ्ग "limbless") should be able to reign in the territory of a terrible (भीम) sovereign which is well provided with all the "limbs" i.e. components of a kingdom.

70. The row of downy hair on the waist is fancied as a string with which she would be joined to her husband.

71. The portion within brackets is implied by means of word play.

72. Verse 87 in N.S. edition is a variant of verse 86, and not counted in here.

102. "The Creator,[87] angry at the pride of being unique on the part of her single ear, eye, lip, arm, hand, foot and the like, which surpassed all objects similar to them, made on the self-same body a companion limb to each.[88]

103. "The Creator's begging of the beauty of these five limbs of hers—the face, the feet and the hands, being desirous of creating again the lotus-beds destroyed by frost, is now like the begging of those mendicants who restrict themselves to five households for their daily alms.[89]

104. "The Creator drew on her, in the shape of her toes, as many lines as there were directions,[90] from which kings oppressed by Cupid would come to take shelter under those lotus feet.

105. "It is well that the Creator joyfully made ten moons which have become the nails of my beloved's feet; otherwise how could the moon have the luck of enjoying the beauty of those crimson lotus blossoms disguised as her feet?[91]

106. "Why should not the sixty-four arts find an abode in this fair-browed girl, who carries about her four full moons in the shape of her fame, face and the two nails of the great toes of her feet?[92]

107. "The Creator had already created her as above the world; youth took her even beyond that; and then, Cupid, by training her in all accomplishments, put her beyond the range of words."

108. Thus describing the gazelle-eyed maiden, beginning with her hair and ending with the nails of her feet, the king whose heart was swimming in an ocean of amazement, and whose joy was overflowing his heart, made up his mind to make himself visible to Damayantī surrounded by her friends.

109. Epilogue. [Śrīharṣa describes his poem as "brother to the composition of the Panegyric of the royal dynasty of Gauḍa].

87. i.e., while he was making Damayantī.

88. i.e., made a second ear, eye, etc. to wound the vanity of the first ones.

89. At the advent of the spring, the Creator is fancied as recreating the lotus-beds destroyed by the winter, by borrowing the beauty of Damayantī's limbs.

90. The ten toes are fancied as lines indicating the ten directions.

91. The moon cannot enjoy the beauty of the day lotus which closes up in the evening; but, by assuming ten forms in the shape of Damayantī's toe-nails, it can enjoy the contact of lotus blossoms in the shape of her feet. A nail-mark is in Sanskrit called अर्धचन्द्र "half-moon" which facilitates the description of the nails as so many moons.

92. The four full moons have each sixteen कलाs (digits), so that there are in all sixty-four कला s (arts).

CANTO VIII

1. Then all the fair-eyed damsels as well as the daughter of king Bhīma drank in, with their eyes, that youth, whose hairs stood up and eyes ceased to wink in amazement.

2. How long, indeed, could the words of the god[1] hide him? A sugarcane sapling, covered with straw, does of itself come into view.

3. Before the ray of Nala's eyes[2] reached even their corner with Damayantī as its aim, Cupid's arrows sank up to the very end of the shaft in every limb of the fair-browed girl.

4. As Cupid hit both Nala and Damayantī at the same time owing to his possession of an equal measure of strength and skill, why did not his (five) arrows, which do not admit of division into equal halves, produce any inequality (in their effect)?

5. She felt affection for him, thinking he was Nala, but became indifferent, thinking every moment, "How can he be here?" Nala's heart, too, went out to her, but was turned back by him, because of his duty as a messenger.

6. (Among the girls present) one blushed at the sight of Nala; the heart of another was immersed in his lustre; a certain damsel thought him to be Cupid; another resigned herself to Cupid's power.

7. Owing to the encumbrance of their embarrassment, the slender-limbed damsels could not even ask him, 'Who or whence art thou?' With diverse emotions they rose from their seats, as if with a desire to welcome him.

8. Like as a river, at the advent of the sporting season of the clouds,[3] acquires a great speed in its waters, so did Damayantī, on seeing him, experience a certain vehemence in her raptures of joy.

9. Her eyes, fixed on any limb of his, which they saw before them, would not have moved to any other limb, had not the winking of the eyes given her at long intervals a stream of consciousness, cutting short her view from time to time.

10. She could not discern a limb, though her eyes were fixed on it, owing to the joy caused by some previously seen limb; and

1. The words of Indra conferring on Nala the power of invisibility.
2. See Notes.
3. i.e., the rainy season.

then, when she saw some other limb, she could not, turning back, remember the one erstwhile seen.

11. Her eyes, unsteady by nature, leaving one limb of his, and stepping on the threshold of the enjoyment of another, long came and went, in their eagerness to enjoy both.[4]

12. The fair-browed maid of Vidarbha,[5] eagerly drinking in his limbs with her eyes, both those well-seen and those imperfectly seen, and experiencing an equal measure of joy, was not aware of the difference between the two.

13. The Khanjana birds in the shape of her eyes, totally motionless by falling into the snare of Nala's hair, fine and thick, could not get away by unloosening the tie.

14. The lotus-bed that was Damayantī's eyes, obtaining the embrace of the lotus blossoms in the shape of the king's face, hands and feet did not forsake for a long while the contact of their kin.[6]

15. At that time, becoming joy itself, and labouring under an inexplicable and ever-increasing delusion, she experienced a sweet delight that had two different tastes owing to the presence in it of the joys of both emancipation and mundane life.[7]

16. Surely the Creator did not make Indra act as his own messenger to her, disguised as Nala, in order that she might not be tainted by the sin of being attached to a messenger assuming the beautiful form of Nala.[8]

17. Is there even a sage whose mind is sure in the matter of virtue, prone as it is to sin as well? But God, being merciful, checks a devotee's mind when it thinks of sin.

18. Just as she, maddened by Cupid, could not keep silence, though extremely modest, when she had the illusion of seeing Nala before her, so even in the presence of the real Nala, she could not refrain from speech: in those who are under a delusion is there any power to distinguish the true from the false?

19. Then with her effort to conceal her emotion proving futile, she herself addressed him in a weak and faltering voice,

4. i.e., she moved her eyes to and fro to look at both the limbs.

5. Damayantī.

6. Damayantī's eyes and Nala's limbs are fancied as relatives embracing each other.

7. The state of pure joy is the state of final emancipation, while the delusion produced by the pleasures of sense is the characteristic of worldly life.

8. In that case, Damayantī would unwittingly be faithless to Nala; so the Creator made Nala himself the messenger.

bending her moon-like face, while her friends maintained silence in fear.

20. "He who knows social usage should offer to guests water for washing the feet even by bowing with the lustre of the gems on his head; the prescribed satisfaction of a guest with the Madhuparka offering should be brought about even by a mellifluous current of courteous words.[9]

21. "One's own self should be made as grass by courteous manners; one's own seat should be given up for the guest; water for washing should be furnished by means of one's tears of joy, and questions asked with honeyed words.

22. "Offence is possible even on account of the delay in bringing water for offering at the feet; so one's very sincerity should meanwhile be made one's store (of hospitality), by folding one's hands (before the guest).

23. "Leaving my seat, long ago did I offer it to thee; even if thou hast the desire to go elsewhere, shouldst thou not adorn it for a moment, though unworthy of thee?

24. "Lo, tell me to what distance thy cruel mind wishes to subject thy feet to toil, that have put an end to the pride of softness which the cup of the Śirīṣa flower had.

25. "What country hast thou to-day (by thy departure) reduced to the condition of a forest forsaken by the spring? May I not even hear the name that is blessed by being a symbol of thee?

26. "Hast thou not crossed the ocean itself by this thy entry into this closely guarded place? But I cannot even now discern the object of this daring act.

27. "I consider the merit of my eyes the cause of the fact that, at the moment of thy entry here, thou wast not noticed by the warrior sentinels, and that thou who hast surpassed by thy form the flower-bowed Cupid, art being gazed upon by those very eyes.

28. "As thy figure is something indescribable, as thou hast a power making the sentinels blind, as thou art pleasing by a lustre surpassing that of yellow orpiment, thou art akin to the gods.

9. The lustre of the gems on her crown is to take the place of water, and sweet words that of the Madhuparka offering consisting of curds, butter, sugar and honey, as water and the rest are not at hand in Damayantī's antechamber. The idea is continued in the next verse.

29. "Thou art not Cupid, because he has no corporeal form, nor art thou one of the Aśvins,[10] because neither of them is without the other. Or, what is the use of any other distinctive marks? Thy very beauty is a distinctive feature marking thy superiority to them.

30. "Thou who hast gratified the world by the vision of thee, what dynasty is that which produced thy nectar-rayed self, and is now rightly going forward to rival the ocean?"[11]

31. Owing to the eyes of the sentinels being thus baffled, the girl, thinking him to be some god, beautiful like Nala, really praised once more the beauty of her beloved, present in him, under the pretext of courteous words of hospitality.

32. "If one is silent about a thing, marvellous by its merit, it means the futility of one's faculty of speech—an unbearable thorn; on the other hand, if one speaks too little, there is the charge of wickedness: so let one rather be liable to be mistaken for a professional panegyrist.

33. "Cupid, I ween, found in thee a second birth by dint of his religious merit; for he sacrificed his body in that fire-pit, Śiva's terrible eye.[12]

34. "Thou hast (by thy beauty) made Purūravas bow his head in shame—Purūravas who surpassed the Kailāsa mountain by the fame of his lustre; thou hast made the Aśvins shed tears by taking away their splendour by force; thou hast made even Cupid renounce his pride of beauty.

35. "I know the white rows of swans are but the moving grains of the fame[13] of thy beauty, which flying and falling, as is proper, float in all directions on the waters of rivers and pools.

36. "Truly Cupid hath not acquired even the beauty present on the great toe of thy foot; indeed, the half moon, the emblem of Cupid's conqueror Śiva, is there in the shape of a toe nail.[14]

10. The Indian Dioscuri. Cf. 4. 5.

11. The ocean produced the nectar-rayed moon, when it was churned by the gods.

12. The burning of Cupid by the fire of Śiva's third eye is represented as an act of self-immolation.

13. Fame in Sanskrit poetry is always white.

14. The half moon being the emblem of his destroyer Śiva, Cupid was afraid of it and anything that resembled it; so he kept away from the nail which resembled the half moon in shape and could not take any part of its beauty.

37. "Every month different, does the moon, by emaciating its full-sized body by means of austerities, and becoming invisible on Amāvāsyā nights, merge itself in thy face?

38. "Did the Creator, after making thy eyes, variegated with many a colour, give to the eyes of the black antelope a finger-thrust in the shape of the deep-cut line of the slit visible near its eyes?[15]

39. "Cupid is called mugdha ('beautiful,' also 'foolish'), because of his foolishness, not because of his beautiful form; for, having given his bow (to the Creator) for the making of thy eyebrows, he became conquerable by thee at any moment, with this beauty of thine, by a mere wrinkling of them.[16]

40. "On this moon—thy face—are visible the two eyes of the antelope, the presence of which is inferred because thy face is the moon, while its tail with a flashing bunch of hair is visible in the guise of thy flowing locks.[17]

41. "Let the old tradition that Cupid is invisible, because destroyed by Śiva, be set aside; forsooth, a new tradition appears that he is so, because the beauty that is in thy body did not enter into possession of him.[18]

42. "The great god Śiva installed the Moon, though a child, on his head as well as in sovereignty over sacrificers,[19] because in a world, the quintessence of whose beauty was taken away by thee, the Moon sought its living by gleaning the grains left behind.[20]

15. The idea is, the Creator, while making Nala's eyes, saw near him the antelope which wanted its own eyes to be like those of Nala; but the god punished the animal for its audacity with a finger-thrust, which caused below its eyes a rent resembling the half moon. Literally: the Creator gave a "half moon stroke" in the shape of the channel-like line etc. Cf. 7. 22

16. Beautiful eyebrows are usually compared to Cupid's flowery bow. Here, Cupid lent his bow to the Creator for the making of Nala's eyebrows, but Nala with his beauty so heightened is now in a position to vanquish Cupid by a mere "wrinkling" of those very eyebrows, i.e. by a mere frown.

17. As Nala's face is nothing but the moon, the presence on it of the deer believed to be in the moon is to be inferred. The animal itself is not visible, but its eyes and bushy tail are visible in the form of Nala's eyes and hair. Cf. 2. 83.

18. i.e., he hides himself for shame.

19. The moon is called Dvijarāja "the king of the Brāhmaṇas."

20. To earn one's livelihood by gleaning the grains of corn left behind by reapers was considered a religious merit. Here, the Moon gleaned the grains of beauty left behind by Nala, and on account of the virtue resulting therefrom Śiva gave it a place on his own head and made it the king of the Brāhmaṇas.

43. "I know, God, having made the world destitute of all talk of beauty since the burning of Cupid, hath after an age taken pity on it again, by creating thy limbs.

44. "If thou art a human being, the earth has attained the end of its existence; if thou art some one of the gods, the heavens reign supreme; if some family of serpents is adorned by thee, the serpent world, though lying below, is above all the worlds.

45. "When my mind ponders on thee, it no longer entertains that great absurdity (that the ocean was drunk up as it is by the sage Agastya like a palmful of water); for the ocean easily proved equal in measure to the hollow of his palm, having its distinctive features, depth and magnitude, taken away by thee.

46. "I know, in this ocean of the world Nala exists as thy reflection; indeed, apart from an object and its reflection, the Creator hath never been seen to create two things completely alike.

47. "Lo, who in the mundane sphere has accomplished such glorious good deeds that even thy feet, moving towards him, are creating a wreath of lotus blossoms on the dust of the road?[21]

48. "I know not what my mind, resorting to the swing of doubt, is saying to me: thou art perhaps going to be a guest in the house of some blessed personage: or, what is the use of a false surmise?

49. "My eyes, drinking in the texture of thy beauty, have already attained the end of their existence; may not my ears, too, welcome nectar into them provided thou dost them a favour with thy speech?"

50. In this way did the five flowery arrows of Cupid, emitting a flow of honey, and discharged from that bow of Bandhūka flowers —the lips of Damayantī—enter his mind through his ears in the guise of her speech.

51. Drinking in the beloved words of his beloved, in nectar did he sink up to his neck. Is not the sweetness of praise, that sounds sweet even in the mouth of an enemy, immeasurable in the mouth of one that is dear?

52. Then, just as the sun, accepting the offerings of worship brought by the people, occupies the mountain of the east, so Nala, accepting the hospitality offered by his beloved, occupied a seat.

21. The presence of lotus marks on the soles of the feet is a sign of luck. It is here hyperbolically stated that the visitor, being endowed with these marks, has left impressions of them on his footprints.

53. His strength of mind and Cupid fought with each other, taking Damayantī herself as the arena where her eyebrows serving as Cupid's bow, rent in the middle, proclaimed respectively their victory and defeat.[22]

54. Then Nala, though treated to the lyre-notes of her speech, spoke, ignoring Cupid's command by his strength of mind. Never can Cupid defile the mind of the good, purified as it is by conscience in a hundred showers.

55. "Know me to be a guest of thine, come from the council of the lords of the quarters, bearing the message of the gods, like my life, with an esteem inwardly deep.

56. "Stop, honour is done. Be seated, why hast thou left thy seat? That mission of mine, which has to be crowned with success, would be abundant hospitality indeed.

57. "Blessed maiden, art thou well? Is thy mind at rest? Useless to delay. Thou with eyes stretched as far as the marge of the ears, hear thou my words.

58. "Since thy childhood the multitude of thy virtues hath charmed the lords of the various directions—Indra, Varuṇa, Agni and Yama.

59. "Their mind, of which the wealth of moral strength has been plundered by Cupid, who is also entirely stealing their lustre,[23] suffers by long brooding over thee, who art under the dual sovereignty of childhood and youth.

60. "Now, in their heart, it is solely the hope of getting thee that is flashing without cessation, while their wives—the various directions, the east and the others, flash not by assuming noble forms as before.

61. "Slender maid, simultaneously with this thy youth, Indra's abiding love for thee reached its climax; and, at the same time, the tough string of Cupid's bow mounted the other end of the bow.[24]

22. The eyebrows are as usual fancied as the bow of Cupid. But here the clear-cut eyebrows detached from each other are compared to the two pieces of a bow broken in the middle. Cupid was fighting with Nala, using Damayantī's eyebrows as his bow, and the fact of its being broken in twain indicated his defeat by Nala whose weapon was his strength of mind, i.e., Nala resisted Damayantī's charms for the sake of his duty as a messenger.

23. i.e., by making them pine with love.

24. i.e., during Damayantī's childhood Cupid's bow was lying idle with its string attached only to one end, but at the advent of her youth he joined the string to the other end also, ready to use the bow.

62. "When the sun rises in the east, Indra, owing to thy absence from him, taking it for the moon, because of its heat and similar shape, fixes on the sun, through the fault of another, the multitude of his eyes, red with wrath.[25]

63. "The thousand-eyed Indra being angry to-day, I know not what will happen to Cupid, who hath not yet been able to conceal even the effect of what Śiva, who had but three eyes, did in his anger.[26]

64. "Owing to the displeasure caused by the mere voice of the cuckoo, the mighty Indra delights not even in the Nandana, the garden of pleasure; he does not practise even the worship of the trident-bearing Śiva on account of the offence of the child moon residing on Śiva's head.[27]

65. "The flowery arrows of Cupid, making in the eyes of Indra all directions dark with their pollen, make the beak of the bird that sings 'kuhū' speak the truth even on a full moon night.[28]

66. "Lo, what would not Indra do with his thunderbolt to make him a relic of the past—the Cupid that torments him with arrows of flowers, were not his lack of corporeal form—Śiva's favour to him[29]—an invulnerable armour for him?

67. "The trees of the gods, which remove the poverty of others, have themselves become destitute of leaves, cut off for preparing beds, one after another, for Indra pining on account of thy absence from him.

68. "Indra's ears have turned deaf with the twangs caused by the stir of the string of Cupid's bow; how will he hear his preceptor's words, capable of awakening one from the sleep of infatuation produced by Cupid?

25. Indra being a Virahin finds the exciting light of the moon as hot as the rays of the sun. Hence, distracted with love, he takes the sun for the moon, and with his thousand eyes casts angry looks at the sun, though it is the moon that oppresses him.

26. The effect of being burnt by Śiva was that Cupid lost his body and was reduced to an ethereal form.

27. The moon decorates the head of Śiva, and its offence has already been referred to in verse 62.

28. The idea is, Indra, distracted with love, sees only darkness in every direction even on a full moon night, so that to him a full moon night is as dark as an Amāvāsyā night. So, when the cuckoo sings 'Kuhū,' 'Kuhū' on the moonlit night, it speaks the truth; for Kuhū means also the night of Amāvāsyā, and what is a full moon night to others is Amāvāsyā to Indra. As in 1. 100, there is a pun on the word Kuhū.

29. See under Verse 63. The idea is, Indra can do no harm to Cupid, because the latter has no physical body.

69. "Spring after spring, the lilies on the river of heaven, frequently tortured—stalks and all—for the solace of his heat, caused by Cupid, might well have a liking for the winter.[30]

70. "Damayantī, this thirst of Indra ranks among those things in the world which have to be counted first; for the ocean of his eyes is suffering from an eagerness to have only a glance from thee.

71. "Damayantī, Agni, one of the lords of the quarters, the refulgent incarnation of the eight-formed Śiva, daily worshipped by sacrificers, has also been commanded by Cupid to be thy slave.

72. "Verily the Cupid that is in thee, by heating the god of fire, makes him so pliable that having himself had a taste of what it is to be heated, he would not heat others again.

73. "Cupid, who was aforetime burnt by the god of fire with his abode in Śiva's eye,[31] is not now a defaulter in paying the debt of hostility, burning as he does the god of fire, taking up his abode in thy eyes.[32]

74. "It seems as if the lovelorn Agni, angry with one Soma (the moon), gulps another Soma (the juice of the plant of that name), offered as an oblation in sacrifices: who among the powerful can, indeed, bear with a fellow, with whom is associated the name of an enemy, be it only the name?[33]

75. "Youthful maid, unceasingly tortured on account of thee by the flowery arrows of Cupid, he is, methinks, afraid even of the flowers offered by his worshippers.

76. "The fresh sprout of a leaf, variegated with a spray of moss, placed by him on his heart,[34] burnt by Cupid, shone like a line of flame of Cupid's fire, dark with smoke.[35]

77. "The mighty Yama also, whose father is the sun, the friend of the lotus, and whose wife is the region redolent with

30. In the winter only the flowers wither, the stalks remain; but in the spring, when the plants are in bloom, they are uprooted, flowers and stalks, to be applied to Indra's feverish body.

31. Cupid, as is well-known, was burnt by a flame issuing from the third eye of Śiva.

32. i.e., with Damayantī's charming eyes as his weapon.

33. Agni being a Virahin, the real offender is the moon; but he is fancied as drinking up the juice of the Soma plant in sacrifices as a punishment for its bearing the same name as Agni's enemy, the moon.

34. i.e., as a sedative.

35. The ruddy, new leaf is compared to a flame; the green spray of moss to smoke.

sandal,[36] hath sacrificed for thy sake his patience in the fire of Cupid's might.

78. "Him, burning in the fire of Cupid, the Malaya mountain worshipfully serves even with hands that are being burnt, the young leaves of its trees: whoso always fixes his hope on someone[37] doth not give up serving him even in times of woe.[38]

79. "Owing to thy absence from him, he has his limbs pale and shaken by a violent fever, as if they were whitened by Cupid's fame and consumed by the might of Cupid's arms.

80. "Slender maid, he who is the lord of the direction that is fond of painting its body with saffron at eve,[39] sent his heart to thee at a moment, starting at which a traveller doth never return.[40]

81. "The hungry submarine fire doth not heat the oceans so much as their own master, the lord of the waters, is doing now, staying in their midst, ill from Cupid's heat.

82. "The cool lotus stalk, applied by him to his body, rather augments his heat; for it knits together, mischievous, the wreath of the memory of thy tender creeperlike arms.[41]

83. "Then a piece of lotus-stalk, placed by him on his heated bosom, gleamed, as if in a moment bored into a hundred holes by Cupid's arrows buried in his heart.[42]

84. "In this way, with regard to those gods, the ornaments of the three worlds, continues the wanton tyranny of Cupid, whose frivolity is running riot with the blindness of pride, having found in thee an unfailing weapon.

36. The South.

37. Also, "he who always adopts (as his abode) the region belonging to someone." The Malaya mountain lives in the region owned by Yama, i.e. the south.

38. The idea is, oppressed with Cupid's heat, Yama lies on beds made of young leaves provided by the trees on the Malaya mountain. The leaves withered by Yama's feverish body are the hands of the mountain which is represented as a faithful servant serving his master, though in so doing his own hands are being burnt.

39. i.e., the west presided over by Varuṇa, of whom Nala is now speaking.

40. There are certain inauspicious dates and occasions which are to be avoided by travellers, if they want to return to their homes. Varuṇa's mind obviously travelled to Damayantī on such an occasion, so it never returned.

41. i.e., reminds him of thy arms.

42. As the lotus-stalk as a whole proved oppressive, as described in the preceding verse, Varuṇa tried the expedient of putting on his bosom only a small piece of it as a sedative. Here, the holes visible at the ends, when a lotus-stalk is broken to pieces, are fancied as being made by Cupid's arrows.

85. "'Tomorrow comes thy Svayaṁvara'—this report reached the ears of these gods, gladdening their hearts, like a stream issuing from the quintessence of nectar.

86. "Then the gods of the quarters, suffering from the heat of the fire of Cupid's might, started for the earth, simultaneously with the sighs of their wives, sighs heavy with sorrow at the prospect of having a co-wife.

87. "Omitting to take any supply of nectar as provision for the way, happily did they make their journey with their desire alone fixed on thee—the sweet desire allaying their hunger and thirst.

88. "For thy sake, plunging their celestial wives in the conflagration of Cupid's arrows, those great gods are now making this earth the object of their grace, by setting their feet upon it.

89. "Having adorned (with their presence) a place near by, the gods have made me acquire the beauty of a moving script to thee, by putting on it letters in the shape of a message.

90. "Each of them, greeting thee with an embrace, pressing himself against thy full breasts, sends this message to thee—'Be for our joy the creeper Viśalyā, for us who are fainting under the darts of Cupid the savage.'

91. "Tell us, how long shall we, with the mere solace of desire, deceive our eyes,[43] wishing to drink in thy beauty?[44]

92. "Give thy arms the shape of a halo around us who are gods; be pleased to quench our heat with thy limbs, cool with the ripples of Cupid's play.

93. "Have pity, art thou about to have us destroyed by the invisible arrows of that Caṇḍāla—Cupid? Rather would we die, pierced by the pointed arrows of thy glances, sanctified by the emotion of love.

94. "There may be suitors beyond a thousand for thy hand, but our life depends upon the favour of thy feet; if thou thinkest we are feigning, Cupid living in our heart is witness.

95. "Within, these our hearts have ever been occupied by thee; without, let our bosom now be adorned by thee, even as Viṣṇu's bosom is by Lakṣmī.

43. Lit. glance.

44. i.e., their eyes want actual seeing, not a mere desire to see.

96. "If thou take pity on us, do thou adorn heaven; useless is delay; but, if thou like thy own land—the earth, we will give the designation of heaven to earth.

97. "Slender maid, the worship thou daily offerest to us with the lotus 'that grows on water' pleases us not, but let our worship be with thy lotus feet placed on our head bowing in the hope of obtaining thy favour.

98. "Fair-eyed one, what shall we do with the objects of gold offered by thee in thy worship? Ah, verily our hands ask for thy limbs that have destroyed the pride of the colour of gold.

99. "Thou with eyebrows akin to the (flowery) bow of the flower-arrowed Cupid! Like goldsmiths shall we burn that impudent, tawny gold which vies with the fair complexion of thy body.

100. "This our heat of Cupid caused by thee is not allayed even by pools of ambrosia, still less by nymphs 'that inhabit waters'; but it will be quenched by one word uttered by thee—'mine'—acting as a spray of the honey of flowers.

101. "Is sugar-candy only a fragment of thy voice, and sugar but the gravel on its path? Slender-limbed damsel, is not the sugar-cane a marshy grass, famous in the regions, growing on the sweet flow of the modulations of thy voice?

102. "What can we give thee? Nectar in the shape of thy lips is already on thy mouth of its own accord, while thy face, by conquering the Moon, will itself come to enjoy the sacrificial portion allotted to him.[45]

103. "As we ourselves wish to remain alive by taking shelter under thy lotus-feet, will it not be shameful for us to say 'Beloved, choose thou immortality from us'?

104. "The nectarean elixirs of life are powerless to save us from untimely death at the hands of Cupid; so be pleased to allow us to drink thy more availing lips.

105. "By thy grace, let Cupid rise in our mind, acting as the mindborn giver of joy! He was, indeed, burnt (by Śiva) along with his bow and arrows and his emblem—the fish; but now, slender damsel, with thy eyebrows let him be an archer; with thy pure white smiles a warrior with victory-giving arrow-tips; and, let the fish, the emblem of his banner, be subordinate to those two ever-fickle Śafara fish, thy eyes.[46]

45. The two gifts in the possession of the gods are nectar and the share of sacrificial offerings to which each of them is entitled. But Damayantī has nectar in the shape of her lips, while she can easily acquire a share in the sacrificial offerings, by conquering the moon with her beautiful face and taking possession of the share allotted to the lunar deity.

106. "When every night dreams bring thee to us, our glance sinks in thy charms, the ears in the ocean of the nectar of thy song, the skin in the tenderness of thy body—a floral spray, the nose in the fragrance of thy breath, the tongue in the honey of thy lips, and the mind in thy acts: slender-limbed damsel, none of the antelopes that are our organs of sense have skipped over the net represented by thee."

107. "Choose thou one of these lords of the quarters, using thy own judgment, and crown my mission with success—I am the bearer of a letter that is my own tongue holding the garland of the message of the gods.

108. "Slender-waisted damsel, cheer up Indra; then, with ever-new dalliance, rescue Agni, immersed in love; or take pity on Yama, or if such be not thy will, choose thou Varuṇa."

109. Epilogue. [Śrīharṣa describes his poem as "a traveller on a path unseen by the race of poets."]

46. Cupid is to be reborn, more powerful than before. He is to have two bows in the shape of Damayantī's eyebrows, an unlimited number of tips for his arrows in the shape of her smiles, and two emblems for his banner in the shape of her eyes.

CANTO IX

1. Thus did Damayantī listen to the message of the lords of the quarters, not out of respect for them, but only from a desire to hear Nala's words, while she was anxious to manifest her reluctance, evident from the hints present in the movements of her eyes and eyebrows.

2. The daughter of the king of Vidarbha said thus to Nala, the moon of the earth, as if she had not heard the speech conveying the message of the gods delivered by him.

3. "Ah, I asked thee thy name and family; avoiding these, why hast thou spoken of something else? Owing as thou dost a reply to me herein, is not this thy indebtedness a matter for shame?

4. "Thy speech (Sarasvatī), incomprehensible in some places and lucid in others with regard to my query, desires to rival the river Sarasvatī, visible in some places and faint-streaming in others.

5. "Already have I heard thy words, serving as nectar to my ears, but unrelenting is my longing to hear thy name: thirst for water is never allayed by milk nor honey, nor even by something better.

6. "What dynasty holds such a jewel of a hero as thou art—one that removes all gloom? Eager am I to honour it, great because of thee, but scorned by me, thinking it is one like others."

7. When she stopped, having spoken thus, the king highly favoured her again with his words, just as the raincloud favours the Cātaka birds tired of crying at the end of summer.[1]

8. "Well, my tongue is indifferent to both of them,[2] neither is very necessary: verbosity and superficiality of meaning are the two poisons of speech; eloquence consists in speech that is concise and weighty.

9. "What series of letters, and in what order, is assigned to me as a symbol—all this is idle talk; the words 'you' and 'I' are certainly able to give effect to our direct relations.

10. "If my family is not brilliant by nature, where is the propriety in mentioning it? If it is pure, alas! any such talk would be a mockery, coming as I do as a servant of others.

1. Cf. 5. 127.
2. i.e., his name and family.

11. "Any eagerness to persist in a matter which I have neglected, after deliberating thus, looks ill on thy part as well; the effort of thy words is now in place only with regard to giving a reply to the lords of the quarters.

12. "Thou who art still persistent! Or, why do I not with a few words comply with thy wish in the matter? Will not thy persistence be satisfied on hearing that I am a scion of the dynasty of the moon?

13. "Such is the traditional custom among the great that the good do not utter their own names; so I am loth to speak about it: people censure one who deviates from custom."

14. Saying thus, Nala, the destroyer of enemies, became silent, as does an autumnal peacock, the oppressor of serpents; then Damayantī, blushing at each word, uttered these words, like the female of a swan that bears on each foot the red hue of its beak.

15. "Though I have heard thee to be the ornament of the dynasty of the moon, my doubt regarding particulars is not removed; great, indeed, is thy skill in deception—silence over certain things and extensive talk about others.

16. "But I, too, must not give a reply to thee, as thou dost not make thy name the nectar of my ears; conversation on my part, too, with a stranger is not compatible with conformity to the custom prevalent among women of birth."

17. Then Nala, without any reply on account of her retort, said to her with a smile, welcoming in his heart her delightful words: "Fair-eyed one, waste not thy words, I say, such as these, surpassing honey in sweetness, on matters alien to thee.

18. "Wilt thou not bring this toil of mine to fruition? Wilt thou not favour any one of the lords of the quarters? Thou shouldst thus honour the gods with words sanctified by being drenched with the nectar of poetic emotion.

19. "Wilt thou not send to the gods, in the shape of a message, such words as these, detailed and drenched with a flow of sentiment—words that, delivered by me, will act on the gods consumed by Cupid, as rain does on a forest oppressed by fire?

20. "In proportion as this person[3] delays here, be it for a moment, owing to thy neglect, Cupid hastens in anger at this very moment to make the gods his target.

3. i.e., Nala himself.

21. "Are not Indra's eyes, intent so long on my path,[4] made of thunder? But fie on me, slow in a matter requiring haste, in whom is absent even the quality of a servant of others!"

22. The king having stopped after saying this, the clever maiden said to herself, as she pondered on the lack of politic wisdom of the gods who were sending him, the Cupid of the earth (in beauty), as a messenger to a woman.

23. "Certainly the king of the waters (Varuṇa) has directed thee to me, and obviously the king of the dead (Yama) has sent thee; certainly it is the god 'that has the winds' (Indra) who has sent thee; and thou hast been employed by the light that has an upturned face (Agni)."[5]

24. Then with a secret smile, Damayantī, that indescribable ornament of the race of devoted women, had her mouth distinctly inclined to the graceful manner of a talk with him again.

25. "Useless joking would be insolence; a 'no', 'no' to one like thee would amount to censure; not replying would be slighting thee; so I am willing to give thee a reply.

26. "Even out of kindness how did that message of the gods come into being with regard to one who is characterised by mortality?[6] Or, in what words do not the great express their pleasure unto those who are by nature devoted in all humility to them!

27. "Strange! How can it be proper that Indra, who shines in the company of celestial nymphs, should on my account have a deep disgrace like that of a lake profusely charming with swans, on account of cranes?

28. "Tell me, what is a mortal woman in the presence of divine nymphs, though she, too, may be beautiful where they are not? Do not brass ornaments lend beauty to a poor woman's limbs that are without any ornaments of gold?

29. "Let the gods pour forth words in any way they please; my ears are deaf even to a letter of them: how can a young doe conceive even a mere desire, improper as it is, with regard to Airāvata, the lord of elephants?"

4. i.e., fixed in the direction of his return journey.

5. It is also implied that these gods are curious creatures. 'The king of the waters (जल)' may mean also the 'king of fools (जड)'. The king of the dead is one who is himself dead and has no sense. Marutvat (Indra) 'one who has the winds' (वातुल) implies that he is mad, while the description of Agni suggests a ghostly phenomenon.

6. i.e., with regard to a mortal woman like me.

30. Then said a girl friend who was told something in the ears by Damayantī, who bent her face just after saying these words, "Listen to what she has told me, bashfully entering my heart, and which goes out through the medium of my mouth.

(What Damayantī whispered to her)—

31. "Having long cherished Nala in my heart, I am afraid even to bring such a thought to my mind; for the honour of a chaste woman, fragile like a lotus-fibre, is rent asunder even at the slightest inconstancy.

32. "Why do not the gods ask their own all-seeing intelligence if my thoughts ever touched any one else, Nala excepted, even at the command of sleep?

33. "Perhaps the gods caused their sleepless selves to sleep solely to avoid the knowledge that I am another's wife;[7] otherwise, being themselves the (saving) pilots on the ocean of vice, how could they knowingly touch such a woman even with their thoughts?

34. "It is merely a favour that they have taken a fancy even to a mortal being like me; if, however, a favour is to be done, may they be able, being pleased, to give me, by way of alms, him alone.[8]

35. "Moreover, hear my unshakable promise: if that king wed me not, myself will I act as an enemy of my life, using fire, hanging or water as an agent.

36. "In danger, when good deeds in no wise save, one ought to do even what is forbidden; when the highway is slippery with rain-water, even the wise go by a wrong way at times.

37. "I, a woman, can never give a satisfactory reply to the eloquent gods; so mayst thou be a commentator, not an adversary, of this series of aphorisms, the words spoken by me."

38. Thus dismissed, after being rebuffed, the messenger,[9] though courteous, spoke some lively words, like a sweet-voiced cuckoo, enraged by a boy repeatedly mimicking its cooing for fun.

39. "Strange, it is funny, those gods themselves have set their hearts on thee, and even thou art averse to them: does anywhere

7. Gods being all-seeing do not sleep. Damayantī means that they knew her to be devoted to Nala, but purposely went to sleep to avoid the knowledge of the fact, and so to be able to be her suitors.

8. i.e., Nala.

9. i.e., Nala.

a treasure-trove come to a penniless man, and he rejects it by raising a barrier[10] of speech?

40. "Moon-faced girl, I hold thee in high esteem, neglecting all other women, because Indra loves thee; but thou hast spurned that esteem, turning thy back even at such a good present before thee.

41. "A mortal woman does not want a god! It is something new that I have heard from thee; why is it that this thy evil obstinacy is not altogether removed even by some well wishing teacher?[11]

42. "It is by the grace of the gods that a man attains divinity by shaking off his mortal nature: how can one wish to include iron that is treated with specially prepared mercury among objects made of iron?[12]

43. "Thou who callest thyself wise—art thou not ashamed of being attached to Nala, leaving aside Indra? O thou who hast thighs soft as the border of the palm, I say deliberately, thou art superior even to the camel which neglects the sugar-cane, but likes the Śamī.[13]

44. "Alas, why art thou mistaken about the goodness of a mortal, leaving aside Indra, the leader of all the gods? It is useless toil for the current of breath to go through the nostrils, avoiding the mouth.

45. "The wise sacrifice their bodies in the fire of austerities with a view to the attainment of heaven to follow in another life; that very heaven, growing restless, is pulling thee forcibly by the hand, but foolish one, thou movest not.

10. Lit. door.

11. Also, "why is it that this evil caused to thee by some evil planet is not radically removed even by the benign Jupiter?"

12. Special preparations of mercury are supposed to turn iron into gold. The idea is that such transformed iron is no longer iron, but pure gold. So a man made divine by the grace of the gods is absolutely divine and has no longer any mortal element in him. It is implied that Damayantī raised to divinity by the love of the gods is no longer a mortal woman, but a goddess; so her objection that as a mortal woman she cannot marry a god is not valid.

13. This is sarcastic. Indra is compared to sugar-cane and Nala to the bitter and thorny Śamī plant. The idea is, Damayantī excels, i.e., is even more stupid than the camel. In this case, the epithet करभोरु is to be construed as meaning "greater (i.e., more stupid) than the camel."

46. "If, without Nala, thou art intent on hanging thyself, Indra will take thee away, as thou swingest in the air; for he is known as the lord of all that exists in the sky. Who doth neglect his legitimate share?

47. "If, bereft of Nala, thou enter the fire, that would be a mighty favour done to the god of fire; for thou wouldst then thyself give him thy body, to him unobtainable even by praying long.

48. "Varuṇa indeed will carry off the palm, if, leaving fire, thou enter the waters;[14] for then he, the lord of the waters, will ever carry his life, known to be thyself, on his bosom on the exterior as well.[15]

49. "Clever as thou art, if thou devise other modes of death, owing to these hindrances, thou wouldst indeed oblige the god of death, thyself coming to his abode as a welcome guest.

50. "Or, perhaps it is an affirmative assertion of thine, disguised as a negative; crookedness in speech does certainly befit thee: the mouth of a clever woman is a mine of that Poetic Suggestion, of which this is a flash.[16]

51. "How long am I to whirl, Damayantī, falling into the eddies of the mellifluous current of thy speech? Discarding thy shame a little, make it clear who among the great gods is to be favoured by thee.

52. "Is Indra to thy liking, the lord of the direction that has the temples of the Airāvata elephant for hard and plump breasts?[17] In my opinion no one except the thousand-eyed Indra is able to survey the beauty of thy limbs.

53. "Damayantī, be pleased with him; let him, the lord of the world, continuously enwrap his body with thrills caused by the contact of thy limbs—thrills (acting as) sharp thorns to the eyes of his wife Śacī.[18]

14. i.e., if she should drown herself.

15. Damayantī, being loved by Varuna, is, as it were, his life and is already inside his heart; united with her, he will place her also on his bosom outside.

16. Nala insinuates that Damayantī's 'No' to the suit of the gods is really a 'Yes' disguised as a 'No' by means of Poetic Suggestion or Dhvani, according to which a negative statement may convey an affirmative sense, or an affirmative statement a negative sense.

17. Indra is the presiding deity of the east. As he is one of the lords or husbands of the directions, the protuberances on the head of his elephant are fancied as the breasts of his mistress—the east.

18. Because Damayantī would be her rival.

54. "Graceful one, I have come to know the truth; thou art spontaneously attached to Agni, the god of fire; how can thy desire, born as thou art of a Kṣatriya family, turn to any one other than that valiant god?

55. "Thou who art the one devoted woman shouldst not turn back thy mind at any cost from the god of fire, for fear of thy body being burnt; at the moment of ordeal his snowlike action on women that are chaste hath been a hundred times proved.[19]

56. "Thou whose conduct is just, must have made Yama, the arbiter of just conduct, the guest of thy heart; this order of things appears commendable likewise to me. Indeed, the union of the fit with the fit looks bright.

57. "Without the fear of death, spend with him limitless ages like a moment in amorous sports, without the slightest break, in the region shining pure with the lustre of the star known as Agastya.[20]

58. "Or, tender like a Śirīṣa flower, dost thou desire the god of the waters, Varuṇa, who by virtue of his watery nature is the lord of the order of tender objects? Leaving all others, did not the night, too, for the same reason, choose the cool-rayed moon?[21]

59. "Slender-waisted one, with him play as thou wilt in that ocean of milk, to which, profusely beautiful, Viṣṇu, abandoning the heavens, resorted day and night."

60. What he thus said was obviously both heard and not heard by her, whose cheek and ear were resting on one side on the palm of her hand—(she heard it) because she was eager for his words; (she heard it not) because of the mockery involved in taking a fancy to the gods.

61. After that, Damayantī kept silence for a long while with her face downcast; then, in a moment, the clever maiden spoke to him, pitifully heaving a deep sigh.

62. "Piercing my guilty ears[22] with that heap of needles, the evil message of the lords of the quarters, thou hast clearly done

19. Chaste women are believed to be unhurt while undergoing the fire ordeal to prove their purity.

20. i.e., in the south of which Yama is the presiding deity.

21. i.e., because the moon, too, has a "watery nature", being composed of water.

22. Guilty of hearing overtures on behalf of suitors other than Nala.

to me, as if I were dead, something that befits the nature of a messenger of the god of death.[23]

63. "Those evil words of thine, the false calumny in regard to me,[24] issuing forth from thy mouth, and taking an inky colour, as if assuming the form of a script, are causing sharp pains like worms, having entered my ears."

64. Then a girl friend, induced by Damayantī, said to him, "This my friend, with one tongue that has taken a resolute vow of silence, is paying homage to bashfulness; with another—myself—she is speaking to thee.

(What Damayantī said through her friend)—

65-6. "To-morrow comes the Svayaṁvara for me to adore that king[25] with my wreath of choice; this day, standing in its way, wishes to depart, preceded by my life; so, to me be so kind as to rest (here) to-day; I wish to pass this day, looking at thee; the bird[26] described my beloved as similar to thee in beauty, sketching his figure with its nails.

67. "The Creator cheated thy eyes inasmuch as they do not see the beauty of thy face; so, let them, too, attain to-morrow the end of their existence, looking at that beauty in Nala's face.[27]

68. "Alas, how is it that on the occasion of my marriage with fire as the witness, thou dost not wish to acquire the easily gained, noble and lasting friendship of one who is thy peer?[28]

69. "With folded hands do I beg. Let me not be oppressed by thee in any way on account of the Dikpāla gods; please, thou shouldst not say such things to-day; I have my eyes filled too much with the rush of tears.

70. "Far from my choosing the lords of the quarters, I am not even looking at the beauty of Nala with any ardour, because it is present in thee.[29] I am making my life a handful of straw in

23. Of the gods who sent Nala as a messenger to her, Damayantī makes special mention of the god of death, comparing the bearer of the message to the messenger of death who tortures a sinner after his death.

24. i.e., the calumny resulting from the overtures on behalf of the gods.

25. i.e., Nala.

26. i.e., the golden swan.

27. i.e., the visitor and Nala resemble each other so closely that, when they meet, the former would see, as it were, his own beauty in the face of the latter.

28. i.e., Nala.

29. i.e., though the visitor is as beautiful as Nala, she must not look at him, as he is not Nala.

the fire of womanly devotion; what is then Cupid who is but ashes?

71. "The woman who forsakes that 'wish-fulfilling' Cintāmaṇi jewel—Virtue—placed by Jina among the three jewels of his creed,[30] for the sake of 'the ashes of the fire of Śiva's wrath',[31] does indeed scatter those very ashes over her family."

72. Hearing those words, born of nectar and serving as oblations of butter in the fire of his love, Nala deemed himself not the messenger of the god of death, as declared by her, but the ruthless god of death himself.

73. Rent though his heart was by her pathetic words of grief, he wished not to deviate from his duty as a messenger. Secretly heaving a sigh, slowly he said—he, the Bṛihaspati of clever speech.

74. "Timid one, if Indra, the lord of heaven, ask at any time the (all-giving) Kalpa tree for thee—the tree situate on his own courtyard, how wouldst thou avoid being the mistress of his life? A request to that tree goes not in vain.

75. "If Agni, wishing to win thee, perform a sacrifice designed to fulfil all desires, himself offering in his own manifestations[32] the oblation that is his share, how can that Vedic rite prove futile?

76. "Tell me what recourse is there for thee, if Yama ask for thy hand the sage Agastya, who ever lives in the direction owned by Yama,[33] and would perforce be inclined to give him a commendable tribute?[34]

77. "Who knows how many wish-cows are in the mansion of Varuṇa for the purpose of sacrifice? If he ask even one of them for thy hand, thou wouldst at once be in the possession of Varuṇa.

78. "If, owing to thy disregard of her husband, Śacī, Indra's wife, absent herself, devoted as she is to her husband, with a view to creating obstacles, how could the Svayaṁvara itself, attended

30. Right discernment, right knowledge and right conduct constituting Dharma. These are Jaina tenets.

31. i.e., Cupid who was burnt to ashes by Śiva.

32. i.e., the three sacrificial fires. Ordinarily in a sacrifice oblations are offered to Agni by others in the sacrificial fires, but in a sacrifice performed by the god of fire himself he would have to offer oblations to himself in his own manifestations.

33. i.e., the south. Cf. Verse 57.

34. Agastya, being an inhabitant of the southern region, will have to pay a tribute to its king—Yama.

by rival suitors, take place in the face of the (mutual) slaughter of the crowd of kings?[35]

79. "Dost thou then wish to see a hand-to-hand fight among the kings present, the rods detached from their umbrellas dancing about, and no one knowing what their own mouths, angrily reviling one another, mean to say?[36]

80. "Lotus-eyed one, if, on the occasion of thy marriage, the god of fire burn in anger, but not in flame, rendering futile the toil of blowing on the part of the priests, what ceremonial rite can Nala perform without Fire to witness it?

81. "Good-natured maid, if the god of death make some one of the family of the bride or the groom his guest, would not the Svayaṁvara, though magnificent, prove a failure?[37]

82. "If the other god, Varuṇa, being angry with Nala, prohibit the waters from attending the ceremony, he being their master, how will thy father, tell me, give thee to Nala, though the latter out of greed might hold out his hand (even without the presence of water)?[38]

83. "Damayantī, this have I said, highly beneficial to thee; reflect, laying aside delusion: when the gods are determined to thwart, what mortal can acquire even the thing that is in his hands?"

84. Weighing in her mind these words of his, she was convinced that so it was; and with a gush of tears let loose, she then reduced her eyes to the condition of the months of Śrāvaṇa and Bhādra.[39]

85. Two tear drops, dark in contact with the collyrium paint (of her eyes), falling on her bosom like a couple of bees from her eyes, blooming lotuses, with the hope of reaching her bud-like breasts, gleamed like two blue, unsteady gems.

35. There is a belief that Śacī must be present during a Svayaṁvara, if it is to pass off smoothly. Nala means that, if Damayantī slights Indra, the latter's wife, being so offended, will absent herself from her Svayaṁvara, thus causing disturbances and making it impossible for her to choose Nala.

36. Verses 78 and 79 are to be taken together.

37. i.e., in the case of a relative's death the ceremony will have to be stopped according to the requirements of Aśauca.

38. A gift must always be preceded by an offering of water. So if Varuṇa prevents the participation of any water in the ceremony, it cannot be performed.

39. Months of heavy rainfall. Lit.....eyes, the gush of whose tears was let loose.

86. A lake she was then of the sentiment of love, shaken by the oncoming arrows of the flower-arrowed Cupid; and, with a stream of tears bent on gushing, her eyes had the grace of the blue lotus with the stalk attached thereto.[40]

87. Then did she wail in a gentle voice, aggrieved at the certainty of not getting her love; she was going mad, she was weeping, her patience was gone, she was bewildered, the joy of her heart vanished, her reason rocked.

88. "Fire of Cupid, hurry on, spread the expanse of thy fame made up of my ashes. Creator, devoted as thou art to devouring the fruit of the longing of others, descend to hell to-day, content with my fruitless life.

89. "Thou heart of mine, heavily consumed by the fire of separation! If thou art of iron, why dost thou not melt? Thou that art penetrable by Cupid's arrows, nor art thou thunder; wilt thou not say why thou art not rent asunder?

90. "Life, why lingerest thou? Away, quick; the heart, thy abode, is afire! Even now thou leavest not thy false repose; strange is this indolence, such as thine.

91. "Eyes, great[41] as ye are, how did false and vicious desire come to hoax even you?[42] Hundred years long, wash with your tears the sin that prevents your seeing the beloved's charm!

92. "Mind, what thou wishest never becomes mine; I get neither my beloved nor death—both desired by thee; so do thou wish for my separation from my beloved; (in that way) by thy grace, separation may not be my lot.[43]

93. "Among my enemies, beseech I will not, with pitiful entreaties, the overhostile Cupid, but I will beg the wind of the south:

40. The eyes are likened to the flowers, and the stream of tears to the stalk. Śucī means also 'summer', in which case the imagery is that of a pool of water in the summer when the stalk of the lotus is clearly visible in the shallow water.

41. Big or long-drawn eyes are regarded as beautiful.

42. The desire of looking at Nala is regarded as vicious, because it is only deluding her without any chance of its being fulfilled.

43. Damayantī means that what her mind desires is never realised; it is just the contrary that comes about. So, she argues, let her mind desire that she may never be united with Nala; in that case, as usual the contrary i.e. her union with Nala might perhaps come about.

let it scatter my ashes towards the direction where my beloved is; for the practice of hostilities ends with killing.[44]

94. "The ages run on, but this moment halts; how much shall I bear? Nor will death come to me; for clear it is, never will my beloved forsake my inner being, my mind will not forsake him, and the life-breaths will not forsake the mind.[45]

95. "Ye gods, who has drunk up the ocean of your kindness, one spray of which is able to remove my burning heat? Will not a crore of women superior to me rise in a trice for your pleasure, at the exertion of a mere thought of yours?

96. "Or, the rainy weather of my own tears day and night, having created by force the season of rains, how will the gods, sleeping soundly, hear my words? Will not my words be as weeping in the wild?[46]

97. "Nala, dost thou not see this suffering of one who is devoted heart and soul to thee? How often, alas, on lake after lake, have I looked for that bird[47] which might speak to thee! But the Creator concealed even that.

98. "Kind one, if thou knowest my mind to be devoted to thy feet, why not take pity on me? But there is no question of thy offence; the Creator is to blame for plunging the mind of others in gloom.[48]

99. "Truly it will come to thy ears, Damayantī died for thy sake; lord, favour me even then with a jot of kindness, if not now!

100. "Thou who art an (all-giving) Kalpa tree to suppliants! Something do I beg of thee: this my heart is eager to burst; but

44. The south wind is as usual described as an enemy of forlorn lovers. Nala's capital being situated in the north, the south wind is requested to scatter her ashes in that direction after her death. Though an enemy, it might do her this favour, as hostilities cease after death.

45. Damayantī fancies her beloved as the soul. So long as the soul does not depart, the mind and the five life-breaths cannot depart; so there can be no death. The mind here refers to the subtle body composed of the sense organs, the mind, the five elements, the five vital breaths, etc. At death, the soul departs, followed by the subtle body, after which the dissolution of the physical body takes place.

46. The reference is to the belief that the gods sleep in the rainy season. Damayantī means that she has herself created an artificial rainy season with her tears, causing the gods to fall asleep.

47. i.e., the golden swan.

48. i.e., the Creator who keeps Nala in the dark about Damayantī's sufferings.

finding in the heart an exit in the (resulting) cleft, let not him that is equal to my life[49] depart with my miserable life."

101. In spite of his being (then) in her company, the emotion of forlorn love, subdued in his heart by his duty as a messenger of the Dikpāla gods, but bursting with force at these pathetic words of his beloved, made the king frantic again at once.

102. Then forgetting everything about his mission on behalf of Indra and other things, Nala said thus unwittingly, imagining in his beloved actions blended with graceful gestures lingering in his fancy.[50]

103. "O my beloved, for whom art thou lamenting, and drenching thy face, alas, with drops of tears? With graceful sidelong glances,[51] dost thou not see this Nala bowing before thee?

104. "Thou with eyes that have pupils like sapphire![52] It is thy expert knowledge of the figure Binducyutaka (Dropping of the Anusvāra) that shines forth in the guise of the flow of thick drops of tears; for doubtless thou art thereby thyself making this Saṁsāra (world) Sasāra (full of substance).[53]

105. "Why art thou turning thy face into a toy-lotus placed on thy hand that has discarded the lotus?[54] On thy bosom, that has banished ornaments through no fault of theirs, how long wilt thou create a string of pearls with the streams of thy tears?[55]

49. i.e., Nala himself.

50. i.e., Nala forgot himself, and all that he had fancied about Damayantī rushed to his memory.

51. Lit. with the grace of eyes moving sideways.

52. Cf. 7. 29. Or, 'Thou with eyes shining like sapphire!'

53. Binducyutaka is a kind of word-play in which the removal of the Anusvāra gives a different sense to a word or a sentence, e.g. कान्तो नयनानन्दी बालेंदुः खे न भवति means 'The beautiful new moon pleasant to the eyes is not in the sky'; but, if the Anusvāra in बालेंदुः is dropped, the sentence with the forms बाले दुःखेन भवति will mean 'Girl, the beloved pleasant to thy eyes is difficult to have'. Here, the idea is that Damayantī's tears are so charming that they have made the world full of substance, but as the 'world' (संसार) becomes 'full of substance' (ससार) only when the Anusvāra in संसार is dropped, Damayantī who brings this about by means of her tears is said to be extremely clever in the use of Binducyutaka.

54. It is usual for girls of high station to hold a lotus in the hand. Damayantī in her grief no longer has any lotus, but her lotus-like face which she sadly rests on her hand takes the place of one.

55. i.e., the current of her tears flowing on to her bosom is taking the place of the pearlstring which she has discarded in her grief.

106. "With my hand, let me first wipe off these ill-omened, oncoming tears from thy eyes; with my head will I then wipe off my offence, along with the dust of thy lotus-like feet.

107. "Like the star Rohiṇī, let the ruddy floral spray of the rays of the rubies of my crown worship the moon that is in the form of the bright nails of thy feet![56] Thou who art angry without a cause, give up, give up thy ire.

108. "If thou art in the least offended with me, humbly do I pay deep homage to thee; angry one, if thou remainest even for a while, bowing thy face, I bow at thy very feet.

109. "With the plenitude of thy power thou mayst favour me or not; but what toil is there in accepting a mere obeisance? What a measure of difference! Thou art an (all-giving) Kalpa creeper to suppliants, but miserly in casting even a look at me!

110. "Tender as thou art, how art thou bearing the havoc of Cupid's arrows? Or, perhaps the arrows of the fish-bannered Cupid turn back and rebound, falling on thy bosom armoured with firm-based breasts.

111. "With the corners of thy lips express tiny smiles; make the fringe of thy eyebrows move gracefully; be pleased playfully to cast on me looks that frequent the path of the corners of the eyes.[57]

112. "Bring to an end the rainy season of tear-drops; with thy smile give me the joys of moonlight; let the two Khanjana birds that are thy eyes play on me; let thy face be as a lotus in bloom.

113. "Inside my ears, with a garland of letters,[58] bring about a boundless play of a flow of nectar! Thou with maddening eyes, with the charm of thy smiles make my eyes feast, as it were, on milk-rice after a fast.

114. "Beloved, adorn half my throne; ah no, adorn my lap! Oh, I said that by mistake; mayst thou forgive! What seat can there be for thee except my bosom?

115. "Thou who hast studied the guile of Cupid's arrows! If thou who art inside my heart comest outside to my bosom, my heart, folded in thee,[59] will no more dread Cupid's arrows.

56. i.e., let me bow down at thy feet.
57. i.e glances.
58. i.e., with thy words.
59. Lit. "having entered into a sheath composed of thyself."

116. "Clasp me round; let the arrows of Cupid be left without any entry into our two hearts, joined one to the other; this firm expanse of my bosom is the proper handmaid of thy inflexible breasts.

117. "I long for thy lips, by the flow of whose honey honeyed are thy words, my ears being the witness; on the tableland of thy breasts, let my finger-nails bring about a wonder—the rise of the crescent of the moon.[60]

118. "Dost thou not personify Cupid's drama? Thou dost indeed 'hold the thread'[61] in the shape of the clear line of hairs on thy body; well, the central gem in thy pearlstring does look beautiful, as if it were the hero of the play that takes delight in thy graceful gestures; and, the gem on thy crown, obscuring the moon in brightness, is as the jester of the play, a noble Brāhmaṇa, with a gem on the crest of his head.

119. "Let thy lower lip, red like a Bimba fruit, the lip on which is engraved 'a group of eight lines' indicating the auspicious character of the birth of thy love, become like a Bhūrja leaf from the (crimson) colours provided by the marks of biting left by my teeth.[62]

120. "Be kind with thy words; favour me with thy kisses; be pleased to have thy breast served by me; for thou alone art the life of Nala as the night is of the lunar rays."

121. Then coming to his senses, he became conscious that he was disclosing his identity; and, seeing Damayantī coming to herself,[63] he spoke these words, having recollected his past; just as a sage, on attaining right knowledge, becomes conscious of the soul revealing itself, and just as he, seeing the Cosmic Matter near at

60. i.e., the finger nails would produce semicircular marks resembling the crescent.

61. The "thread-holder" (सूत्रधार) is the stage-manager, who by introducing the play gives the clue to the development of the action. Damayantī is here fancied as the "stage-manageress" (सूत्रधारिणी) of Cupid's drama.

62. Nala means to say: 'On thy lower lip there are eight lines which resemble the eight lines of a certain astrological calculation on a horoscope indicating a birth of exceptionally good omen (in thy case, the birth of thy love); thy lip is thus like a Bhūrja leaf on which horoscopes are written, and let the marks of biting, which my teeth will leave on thy ruddy lip, look like coloured letters written on such a Bhūrja leaf'.

63. On hearing that her visitor was Nala, Damayantī was ceasing to weep and growing calm.

hand,[64] makes (relevant) utterances, having recollected the impressions of his past lives.

122. "Ah, why did I reveal myself! What will Indra in this matter think of me! Reverently bowing before him, and then confounded with shame, I will not look at even the expression of his feelings.

123. "Ah me! this great task of Indra I have forsaken; for I disclosed my name for nothing; Hanūmat and others shed lustre[65] on the messenger's path with their fame, while I have done so with the laugh[66] of my foes.

124. "I did not purpose wrong; but I know what others will say—others who speak of Viṣṇu, exerting himself for the protection of men, as the 'oppressor of men' (Janārdana), but give the name Śiva (Benign) to the god who destroys the life of the world during the universal deluge.

125. "But, why is this heart of mine bursting under the weight of shame since its innocence is known to the gods? Let them know this rugged truth, but who will put his hand on the mouths of men?[67]

126. "Owing to this consciousness (of my duty), my toil was bearing fruit; but that consciousness was eclipsed by the powerful Creator; Indra himself is powerless to remedy a thing liable to destruction at the caprice of fate."

127. As Nala was thus deploring the disclosure of his identity, brought about by himself under a mighty wave of delusion, the kind-hearted golden swan-king came along swiftly, wishing to extricate him, as he lay thus buried in grief.

128-29. To Nala, who looked up at the sound of its wings, saying, 'Here is that bird,' said the swan, "Cruel one, bring her not to extreme despair; after this she will surely die. Being conscious of thy offence in respect of the gods, having exerted thyself so much for the success of their affair, thou need not be a false witness; the pure-heartedness of the good has themselves for witness."

130. Thus consoled by the bird which, having said this, went away after taking leave of both Nala and Damayantī, the king

64. i.e., perceiving it to be separate from the soul.
65. Lit. whitened.
66. A laugh in Sanskrit poetry is always white.
67. i.e., prevent them from saying what they like.

gently spoke to her, offering in his mind obeisance to the lords of the quarters.

131. "How much torment shall I give thee—torment fruitless in generating love for the gods? Let them be kind to me for my guileless mission or punish me for my offence.

132. "This my madness stood me in good stead; for (thanks to it) I felt not the pangs of separation from thee: even from an evil issues the abating of an evil, just as from ignorance proceeds the attenuation of a sin.

133. "The fire of the grief of separation which was thine was thus kind to me, in spite of my having harassed thee sorely; for it to-day took pity on thee, maddening me, and making me reveal myself.[68]

134. "These gods are devotedly longing for thee, but thou wishest to make even me thy slave; do what thou wilt, reflecting well; let not repentance, once felt, attack thee in the rear for naught.

135. "Indifferent, I say this to thee, not out of fear of the gods, nor because I am pining with love; even if my death do thee good, that would serve only to repay my debt for thy love."

136. Just as the rich beauty of the spring beams forth with the wide-expanding voice of the cuckoo, so was Damayantī fervently delighted with these nectar-like words, pleasant and true, spoken by Nala.

137. Damayantī who had been censuring her own mind, which had been gravitating to the messenger of the gods, though she had held it in check, thinking of her duty as a chaste woman, gave up hate as well as censure, having now ascertained him to be Nala in her mind.[69]

138. She had been censuring Cupid thus in her mind—"Mind-born as thou art, the mind of mortals is thy parent; art thou not ashamed to plunge it in sin?[70] Thou hast put an end to the tradition of worthy sons."

68. It was Damayantī's grief that maddened Nala, causing him to reveal his identity; as this, however, consoled Damayantī, her very grief is described as having taken pity on her, while owing to this happy result it was an act of kindness to Nala also, though it was he who first caused her grief by making those overtures on behalf of the gods.

69. Damayantī was reproaching herself for being influenced by the charms of a stranger; but her mind was at rest, when she came to know that the so-called messenger of the gods was Nala himself.

70. In Damayantī's case, allowing her mind to be attracted by a stranger.

139. The usual description of her body was that it was a flower, but it was not particular as to what flower it was. At that moment, in the rainy season[71] created by her tears of joy, the hairs on her body, standing erect, declared it to be a Kadamba blossom.[72]

140. The succession of gestures accompanying the ravings uttered by Nala,[73] removed Damayantī's mistaken idea that he had said so,[74] considering himself to be discovered by her; for she was wailing, addressing Nala.[75]

141. After that, the bashful Damayantī could not speak to Nala; as she had formerly spoken to him unabashed, face to face, she was now for that very reason immersed in an ocean of shame.

142. When she failed to give a reply to her beloved even indirectly, (by whispering it) in the ears of a girl friend, the girl herself said to him laughingly, "Owing to her bashfulness, silence is now thy beloved's treasure.

143. "Hear from my mouth the mystic doctrine of love which she uttered, making streams of tears the guest of thy feet, thine, who wast depicted by herself in a portrait."[76]

(What Damayantī had said, addressing the portrait. Verses 144-54).

144. "Ornament of the lunar dynasty, doubtless the swan itself did not tell thee about me, whose life was in despair owing to thy absence; otherwise, how is this cruelty inasmuch as it is killing me possible in one like thee?

145. "The moon is surpassed by thy face, Cupid by thy beauty; why are they both resolved to kill me?[77] If they are so,

71. Cf. Verse 96.

72. The hairs standing up on Damayantī's body as thrills of joy were passing through her are likened to the erect hairlike filaments of a Kadamba flower which blooms in the rainy season. Cf. 5. 79.

73. According to Nārāyaṇa, "Nala who had himself described the course of the play of his own delusion removed Damayantī's mistaken idea, etc."

74. i.e., revealed his identity. See Verse 103.

75. Damayantī at first thought Nala perhaps disclosed his identity not out of love for her, but because he suspected himself to be discovered, when she began to weep, uttering his name (Verses 97-100). But the impassioned manner in which he declared that he was no other than Nala removed her doubts regarding his sincerity.

76. i.e., Damayantī was shedding tears which drenched the feet in the portrait.

77. To Virahins both Cupid and the exciting moon are regarded as dangerous.

because I am thine, then, indeed, victory is mine; for what the gods conceive in their minds goes not in vain.[78]

146. "In vain does the moon wish to rub off its dark spot with the ashes of my limbs consumed by its rays; but, will it even thereby resemble thy face? For stained will it be again by the killing of a woman.

147. "Be pleased to give thy arrows to Cupid; let him kill me with them, setting aside his flowery arrows; breathing my last with my mind centred on thee, I will conquer him like a straw, becoming thyself.[79]

148. "Devoted as I am to thy feet, what is it to me if the Vedas sing the virtues of the gods? The night lily would never rejoice, when bathers in waters sang the praise of the sun.[80]

149. "To-day let me rather die than live; otherwise thou wouldst not know my love for thee. Lord of my life! Thou who art more than my life! From my having died for thee, believe me to have possessed thyself as my only support.

150. "The sacred vow of Kṣatriyas, common to all suppliants, namely, protection even from the terror of the thunderbolt, is in thy case grievously broken, religious defaulter as thou art, not protecting me even from flowery arrows.[81]

151. "I am thine, yet alas! thou sparest that false god Cupid out of respect for his being a god, though he is about to kill me; pray, know that Cupid to be a Caṇḍāla; he is the friend of the Spring who makes his arrows.[82]

78. Damayantī means to say that the moon and Cupid, both eclipsed by Nala in beauty, wish to take revenge: but, being unable to do anything to him, they have let loose their wrath on her, knowing her to be his beloved. As this, however, presupposes on the part of the moon and Cupid, both gods, a belief that Damayantī is Nala's by love and devotion, that very belief is bound to bring about her union with him owing to the thoughts of the gods always bearing fruit in action.

79. The reference is to the belief that a man is reborn as the person or creature, of whom he thinks at the time of his death. Damayantī expects in that way to be reborn as a man in the form of Nala, in order to 'conquer' Cupid by means of Nala's superior beauty.

80. i.e., the night lotus loves the moon, so it does not bloom at sunrise in spite of the adoration of the sun by bathers.

81. i.e., Cupid's arrows.

82. The spring creates the flowers serving as Cupid's arrows.

152. "It is on lesser and lesser enemies that the wise should first whet their prowess; for, burning on grass, gradually does fire destroy dried cowdung and numbers of trunks of trees.[83]

153. "How great, too, will be thy offence against the gods, if thou be kind to me, my choice being free?[84] Being gratified by thee at sacrifices, the gods, in order to save their face, will not even mention it (to thee).[85]

154. "Let them, too, go to the Svayaṁvara as they like; appeasing those very gods, I will choose thee; even they will somehow be moved to pity; surely they too are not Cupid nor thyself."[86]

155. "This river of the essence of honey,[87] with isles of silence at every step, was loosed by Damayantī, subject to a confused emotion of bashfulness and love, on seeing thee even in a portrait.

156. "Thy Cupid is a Caṇḍāla who is not touched nor looked at,[88] and who is called deformed,[89] perhaps because, when vanquished by thee,[90] one of his fingers was cut off. Making friends with the Spring in the jungle, and entering my friend's heart, he is stealing her life; and, let the directions on that account wait upon thy fame."[91]

157. Then the king, his head drooping with shame, took his departure, promising to go to the assembly of kings[92] in company with the gods, as Damayantī herself had told him unseen by others.

83. i.e., Cupid, though an inferior enemy, ought not to be neglected.

84. Damayantī means that, as she will choose Nala of her own accord, the gods will not be offended with him at the failure of his mission.

85. This and the subsequent verse seem to be out of place here. Damayantī was not aware of Nala's mission on behalf of the gods, previous to her meeting him in the inner apartment; and, as she was in continual conversation with him from the moment of her meeting him, she could not have turned aside to address his portrait. So this verse contradicts Verse 155 where the whole speech from Verse 144 to 154 is represented as being addressed to Nala's portrait, which could take place only before his arrival.

86. i.e., not as cruel as Cupid or thyself.

87. Ref. to Damayantī's speech.

88. Cupid here personifies the influence which Nala exercises over Damayantī, causing all her sufferings. Cupid is, therefore, described as a Caṇḍāla employed by Nala to torture Damayantī.

89. अनङ्ग "Cupid" does not mean here "formless", but "deformed".

90. i.e., in a contest of beauty. Lit. thou having triumphed.

91. i.e., let thy fame spread in the directions. This is said sarcastically.

92. i.e., the Svayaṁvara.

158. As Damayantī, in her anxiety to meet her beloved on the morrow, was rapidly shedding streams of tears—streams with reeds in the shape of high and low thrills on the surface of her cheeks,[93] even that one night consisting of four watches was hard for her to pass, owing to her pangs of love; so it seems the Creator decreed all nights to have three watches, in mercy to her.[94]

159. To those gods, Indra and the others, capable of visualizing the story of everything that ever happens to the people of the three worlds, the king quickly and sorrowfully related the whole truth of his mission to her as it actually took place.

160. Epilogue. [Śrīharṣa refers to himself as having composed a work named Arṇavavarṇana, 'Description of the Ocean (?).']

93. The flowing tears are compared to streams, and the thrills to reeds growing in them.

94. A Prahara or watch is three hours, and a Ghaṭī twenty-four minutes. A night consists of four Praharas, but it is usually called त्रियामा 'having three Yāmas or Praharas', by omitting at each end four Ghaṭis which are included in the day. It is here fancied that the night was thus shortened by the Creator out of pity for Damayantī who in her grief was finding it too long to pass.

CANTO X

1. Then came to the Svayaṁvara highborn princes in chariots, expert in arms and the Scriptures, beautiful like Cupid's magic forms,[1] and surpassing Kubera in wealth.

2. No highborn prince was there who was not the object of Cupid's arrows nor any who did not go; as the crowds of kings were going simultaneously, not even a trace of the earth remained without being a path.

3. As worthy heroes were going to win the princess, the unworthy to carry her away by force, others to see, and yet others to wait on the rest, the directions were left to themselves.[2]

4. All the inhabitants of the directions having departed, with that beauty of the world as their aim, the spaces of the directions felt a relief from the suffering caused by the pressure of these people living in them.

5. So crowded were the highways with soldiers that even sesamum seeds, scattered over them, would not reach the ground; any king who could there manage to make headway felt as if he had already obtained Damayantī.

6. A certain king, with his way barred by those in front of him, and pushed by those behind, deemed himself unsuccessful, though he was in the position of "Successful" seeds[3] pressed in a machine.

7. The flags of the capital of the king of Vidarbha, their free ends fluttering, seemed to beckon the kings who were getting late from their inability to proceed, one after another, owing to the congestion on the way.

8. On the earth, the trotting, white horses of the kings, going in the front, were drawing behind them a richly caparisoned force of elephants going towards Kuṇḍina, which an array of mules followed; while in the nether world the serpent Karkoṭaka, going in the front along with the serpent Kambala, was pulling up Vāsuki's army of serpents moving towards Kuṇḍina, followed by the serpent Aśvatara.

1. Assumed by Cupid in order to vanquish the demon Śambara.
2. i.e., became empty.
3. Siddhārtha 'successful' means also mustard seeds. The king pressed between crowds before and after is compared to mustard seeds pressed in a machine. He despaired of being in time for the Svayaṁvara owing to the obstruction of the crowd.

9. The beautiful faces[4] of those women, the regions of the sky, made pale by the dust raised by the troops of the oncoming kings, clearly manifested an appearance natural to a state of being forsaken by one's husband.[5]

10. The lords of the directions, Indra, Yama, Agni and Varuṇa —these four, but not the rest[6]—went to the Svayaṁvara, as if pulled by Damayantī, binding them with her virtues as with a string.

11. How could demons enter that city, protected by the incantations of king Bhīma's priest? So the demon Nairṛita, one of the lords of the directions,[7] never attempted to go there.

12. The Air god,[8] whose conveyance is an antelope, did not betake himself to Vidarbha to marry Damayantī, because he could not bring the animal face to face with her, threatened as it was by her lotus eyes.[9]

13. The crooked Cupid loves not birth, wealth nor virtues, but only beauty; so, Kubera,[10] the god of wealth, witnessing his ugly figure on the transparent mountain, his abode,[11] did not approach the beautiful maid.

14. How could Pārvatī, who forms half the body of her consort Śiva,[12] tolerate the latter's marrying Damayantī? Abstaining from going to Vidarbha herself, she prevented him from going.

15. Ananta, the lord of the (nether) region, did not go to Damayantī's Svayaṁvara; for on whom would that serpent who patiently bears the weight of the earth place his burden and go?

16. After due deliberation, the lord of the upper region, Brahmā, conversant with the Law-books, refrained from going to the Svayaṁvara. Where in the world has one seen a marriage with a grandfather,[13] prescribed whether in Vedic or legal lore?

4. Lit. the beauty of the face.

5. The oncoming kings are fancied as the husbands of the various directions; the dusty appearance of the latter as the paleness of women forsaken by their lovers.

6. The total number of the lords of the directions is eight. The remaining four are mentioned in Verses 11-14.

7. The south-western direction.

8. Vāyu is the regent of the north-western direction.

9. i.e., the god could not induce the animal to carry him to the Svayaṁvara, as it was unwilling to appear before Damayantī, her eyes being more beautiful than its own.

10. He is the lord of the north.

11. i.e., the Kailāsa mountain.

12. The lord of the north-eastern direction.

13. Brahmā, the creator, is called Grandfather.

17. The lords of the directions, Indra and the others, having heard from their women messengers that they were rejected by Damayantī, went to the assembly of the kings,[14] extending the languor of their hearts to their pace and lotus face.

18. "Damayantī might by chance accept us, mistaking us for Nala"—with this as their last hope, the four gods, Indra and the rest,[15] became a miraculous group of four Nalas, false in character.

19. Of the gods trying to assume his form, no one, observed and questioned by the other, admitted his success in attaining similarity to Nala. What is artificial is, indeed, different from the natural.

20. They made the full moon their face over and again; made also the blooming lotus their face again and again. Then looking at the face in a mirror, they repeatedly broke it up; it was not as exquisitely beautiful as Nala's.

21. As the gods were then unable to acquire with their face the charm of Nala's face, the fact of their being 'analānana' could not avoid the defect of repetition.[16]

22. They made themselves similar to Nala, as if by means of a quintessence drawn from Purūravas, while consumed by the fire of separation from his beloved;[17] from the moon while crushed by Rāhu; and from Cupid while he was burnt by Śiva.[18]

23. The Creator brought these kings to Damayantī in order that she might see what a difference there was between them and Nala. Making the divine lords of the quarters vie with Nala, he declared Nala's superiority to them.

24. With the (four) gods, Yama and the others, duplicates of Nala in beauty, all of them wearing heavenly jewels, the assembly looked, Nala being absent, as did the heavens with the four celes-

14. i.e., the Svayaṁvara.

15. i.e., Yama, Varuṇa and Agni. They now assumed Nala's form to cheat Damayantī.

16. As the gods live on oblations offered to them in the fire, they are called अनलानन "fire-mouthed", which means also "possessing a face not like that of Nala" (अ+नलानन). Thus by virtue of the pun they were twice 'analānana', and incurred, as it were, the literary fault 'repetition.'

17. i.e., Urvaśī.

18. i.e., the gods tried to make themselves beautiful with the essential portion of the charms of Purūravas, Cupid and the moon, all of them models of beauty.

tial trees, when the Pārijāta went to become the guest of Satyabhāmā's courtyard.[19]

25. Then came Vāsuki whose body was clear white like the ashy powder decorating Śiva's body. He was accompanied by shouts of "Be pleased", "Live long", common to servants, uttered by a multitude of serpent kings.

26. Kings of divine lands reached that city in a moment from other islands. Was there a youth who was not at that moment turned into cottonwool by the gusts of wind from the feathers of Cupid's arrows?

27. King Bhīma, the lord of the heaven Kuṇḍina, finely entertained the kings, accommodating them in beautiful palaces, with hospitality, courteous words, gifts, esteem, politeness and the like.

28. In the inner apartment[20] of kings, where Fame, their wife, is made to abide, the four oceans serving as its moat; charity, kindness, pleasant truth, and hospitality—these four are the chamberlains keeping watch over her.

29. None of the kings who were the guests of king Bhīma, the Indra of Kuṇḍina, experienced, in this and that mutually unseen act of hospitality,[21] the slightest distinction, which could serve as an index to what they wanted to know, the attainment of their heart's desire.[22]

30. Methinks, that multitude was contained in the bosom of the city of the king of Vidarbha, as the ocean was in the palm of Agastya, or the universe in the stomach of Viṣṇu.

31. In that city, on the streets, the doors and houses were decorated in gay colours out of eagerness for the festivities. Even the sky was coloured with many a hue by the rays of the ornaments of the kings.

32. Elegant movements, cleverness (in speech), and the beauty of adornments were present even in their servants to such

19. Pārijāta was the best among the five celestial trees belonging to Indra, from whom it was taken away by Kṛiṣna and planted in the courtyard of Satyabhāmā, his mistress. Here, the absent Nala is compared to the Pārijāta tree transplanted elsewhere, while the four gods are compared to the remaining trees.

20. Here, the earth.

21. i.e., courtesies offered to each king individually, unseen by the others.

22. i.e., all were treated alike, and no one found in the reception accorded to him any special mark of favour or any hint which enabled him to guess whether Damayantī would be his.

an extent that women, children and ignorant people took them for high personages coming to the Svayaṁvara.

33. Never sweating, owing to the breeze of Cāmara whisks; never winking, owing to the wonders provided by each object; and, with garlands that faded not owing to their umbrellas, the gods and the mortal kings were not marked by any difference in the city.[23]

34. The gods could not be distinguished by the people among those kings, who, coming from various regions, talked in Sanskrit[24] for fear of their not understanding one another's dialect.

35. There they passed the days, looking at the various acts of Damayantī, depicted in pictures by the citizens in the city; and the nights with the gaieties of the art of dalliance with her in dreams.

36. Liberal as she was, the virtuous Damayantī did fulfil the wish of the kings who were her suitors. For she gave them the illusion of their winning her, as she on that night appeared to them in dreams.[25]

37. The next day the heroes, summoned with courtesy by the messengers of king Bhīma, adorned the pavilion on the Svayaṁvara site, betraying amorous traits.

38. The assembly then looked beautiful with Nala. Seeing him, Indra considered Cupid to be uncouth, though he was richly adorned.

39. As that moon of a king, with beauty-paint applied to his body, appeared in that assembly, which assumed the beauty of the sky, where did the lustre of that galaxy of stars, the Kṣatriya princes, go, vanishing alas! out of sight?

40. At once the eyes of the kings, eager in amazement, were fixed on him. But, after that, as they knit their brows, the corners of their eyes became full dark with jealousy.

23. Absence of perspiration, winklessness and evergreen garlands are characteristics of the gods, which the kings shared with them, as explained in the verse.

24. Sanskrit being the language of the gods, the latter spoke Sanskrit as well as the mortal kings.

25. The illusion of having won her in dreams is fancied as being purposely created by Damayantī in the minds of her suitors as a generous compensation for her inability to choose them.

41. "It is a new moon on the earth. Is he a second Cupid? He is a third Aśvin"[26]—thus under the pretext of praising him, the envious kings spoke ill of him.[27]

42. The kings said among themselves, referring to the magic Nalas,[28] "Well, there are so many like him." The envious, when they are inferior to a rival, find a remedy in likening him to others.[29]

43. That the gods found fault with the fact of his being a mortal, though on account of his beauty the assembly never found fault with him, was certainly a piece of villainy, being the imputation of a sundry defect to one who was worthy of respect for his extraordinary virtues.

44. The real Nala said to the well-dressed bogus Nalas who were sitting near him, "Are you not perhaps Purūravas and Cupid together with the two Aśvins?"

45. At this they said to him, "None of us was born of Ilā.[30] We who are near thee are without Cupid. No one here is an Aśvin.

46. "Know us to be other than they, surpassing as we do Cupid in beauty. Damayantī, going about in this assembly, will by chance be ours among many.

47. "But king, fie on us, present here with hopes. We are still here, adopting a foolish attitude, even after we have seen thy beauty! Fie on our wisdom!"[31]

48. Nala, who did not suspect any guile in their speech, utterly ignored these words. Nothing occurred to him who was absorbed in thinking how to win that jewel of a woman (Damayantī).

49. Whoso wishes to acquire his glory, by rivalling another, himself declares the latter's superiority to him. Who will not, then, feel an immense contempt for a rival, who himself admits his inferiority?[32]

26. As is well-known, the Aśvins, famous for their beauty, were two in number.

27. i.e., by suggesting that an abnormal creature had arrived. Between Verses 41 and 42 there is another verse in the Nirnayasagara edition, which is, however, omitted by some commentators as being a mere repetition of verse 41.

28. i.e., the four gods disguised as Nala.

29. i.e., by suggesting that there are many others like him.

30. The mother of Purūravas.

31. i.e., it was foolish for the gods to hope to win Damayantī with Nala-as their rival. See Notes for another meaning.

32. The verse explains why Nala felt contempt for the gods and ignored their words.

50. At that moment, Viṣṇu, whose fame and praise were sung by Sarasvatī, and who with the lustre of his body assumed the grace of a cloud, witnessed with joy the pomp of the Svayaṁvara, standing in the sky.

51. At that moment, the (four-faced) Brahmā, wishing to see the assembly, cast his eight eyes in eight directions, (Brahmā) who, without having seen the beauty of the head of the phallic Śiva, made the Ketakī flower falsely declare that he had seen it.[33]

52. The twelve-formed Sun[34] went round the Meru mountain with one form; with another became Viṣṇu's (right) eye; and with the remaining ten looked at the ten directions full of people.[35]

53. The moon, though it ever goes round the mountain that is the palace of the gods,[36] did not feel any distressing hindrance in witnessing the Svayaṁvara, being itself a spectator in the form of the (left) eye of Viṣṇu.[37]

54. Eager in their fond desire (to see), the nymphs, looking at the splendour of the noble multitude at that moment, spread out lotusbeds, their own faces, over that ocean of people.

55. Did not hundreds of thousands of Yakṣas witness that assembly of finished beauty, or Siddhas occupy it? Did not Kinnaras attend it out of eagerness, or great sages look at it with pleasure?

56. Vālmīki praised the assembly. Through the avenue of his throat, which contained the three Vedas, trees with many a branch, the divine tongue Sanskrit first came to earth from heaven without any effort.

57. The beautiful assembly was also praised by Bṛihaspati, the adversary of all doctrines by means of the Cārvāka philosophy,[38] whose tongue I know to be the throne of the goddess of speech.

58. Śukrācārya described the assembly in poetic language, the sage who guides the policy of the demons,[39] and is a poet, expert in teaching the art of composing wreaths of words, in heaven where the divine tongue Sanskrit doth incessantly play.

33. See Notes for the allusion.

34. See Vocab. under द्वादशात्मन्.

35. This is meant to emphasise the brilliant sunshine in which the Svayaṁvara was going to be held.

36. i.e., Meru.

37. i.e., the moon was not prevented from seeing the Svayaṁvara by its daily duties; for as the left eye of Viṣṇu, it was present along with the latter.

38. Bṛihaspati is supposed to be the founder of the Cārvāka philosophy.

39. Śukrācārya was the preceptor of the demons.

59. "Not merely has king Bhīma brought these kings together, nor has Damayantī attracted them; but the Creator has deliberately shown us these youths, the entire wealth of his art.

60. "As, in times of yore, Śiva killed Cupid, because the latter was then alone, are these youths Cupid's remedy against fear from Śiva, flashing like a multitude of bodies assumed by himself?[40]

61. "The Creator, I ween, kept hidden somewhere the orbs of the full moon, different each month. With these, artist as he is, he created the beautiful faces of these youths.

62. "In vain have they put jewels on their heads, since they themselves are jewels. When the knowledge of the supreme soul spontaneously reveals itself, no other knowledge need be sought for it to dawn.

63. "If the two Aśvins joyfully enter this multitude of highly charming youths, they would not be able to distinguish each other, mixed up with the others, even in thousands of years.

64. "While there are so many clever youths, what harm was there to the world, even if Cupid was burnt? Who doth call the loss of a drop of water to the full ocean a defect amounting to drying up?"

65. As Śukrācārya thus praised the assembly, he was seconded by a singing crowd of Gandharvas with prolonged shouts of 'Hum', and by a multitude of sages reading the Vedas with a volume of Oms.

66. Then the king of Vidarbha made those mighty kings occupy numerous thrones where they looked beautiful as the gods on the peaks of the Mountain of Gold.[41]

67. King Bhīma, thinking of them, come from various lands, their character and family worthy of being sung by the gods, grew sad, not knowing how these kings were to be described to his daughter.

68. Being so perplexed, he then recalled, concentrating his mind for a moment, his family god Viṣṇu, who is a wish-fulfilling Kalpa tree in vouchsafing an object, thought of by his devotees.

69. As soon as he recalled Viṣṇu, the god said with a smile to Sarasvatī, "Goddess of speech, let me in this Svayaṁvara ask thee to narrate the family and life story of this multitude of kings.

40. The beautiful youths are fancied as so many forms assumed by Cupid as a protection against any further outrage by Śiva.

41. i.e., Meru.

70. "Thou dost know the family, character and might of these youths, come from various lands. Do thou fully describe them; is this an occasion for thee to refrain from speech?

71. "This assembly is adorned by the scholars of the three worlds. One like this never was nor will be. Under the pretext of proclaiming the merits of the kings, make these learned men hear thy orations."

72. Thus addressed, Sarasvatī, accepting the favour of his command as well as the dust of his feet, all that had remained, after being rubbed off by the crown jewels of the gods,[42] bore it on her head with esteem.

73. Then that maiden (Sarasvatī) came down to the midst of the assembly. Her throat was the seat of the art of music. The playful roll of the fleshy folds of her waist was formed by the three Vedas. The ripples of her glances were made up of poetic composition.

74. The Atharva Veda, whose lustre was black, befitting the diverse magic rites (prescribed by it), became a streak of hair on her belly, stretching out, after emerging from the root of the three fleshy folds of her waist representing the three Vedas.[43]

75. The science of phonetics visibly formed her activity. She was adorned with the splendour of the Vedic sacrificial canon. Verily the science of etymology was evolved in the form of explanations of all her meanings.

76. Metres, divided into two classes, on the basis of syllabic instants[44] and syllables,[45] became her two arms. The middle of each arm was neatly marked by the joint of the two sections of the arm, to wit, the pause marking the two halves of a verse.[46]

77. Doubtless the science of grammar composed her girdle, which possessed a breadth caused by the length of the threads composing it, and produced diverse series of sounds.[47]

42. i.e., while they were paying obeisance to Viṣṇu.

43. The three folds of the waist are fancied as the three Vedas, and the black streak of hair spreading out from them is fancied as the Atharvaveda which, too, is "black", and supposed to take its origin from the other three Vedas.

44. Metres like आर्या in which Mātrās are counted.

45. The greater portion of Sanskrit metres, in which syllables are counted.

46. The joint between the upper and lower sections of each arm is fancied as the pause between the two halves of a verse.

47. Small bells were obviously attached to a woman's girdle to produce a tinkling sound. It is also implied by word play that the girdle displayed

78. The science of astronomy, resting on her neck to serve her, the science which describes the life of the stars, and is reckoned among the Vedāṅgas, having changed its form, I ween, became her pearlstring, which had a flashing central gem, and was round, and on her person held up in the lap.[48]

79. The two forms of philosophical dissertation, primary objection and final conclusion, both shining with the deep-seated partiality of disputant and respondent each to his own thesis, became her lips, I know.

80. Mīmāṁsā which divides its body of doctrines, effective in the refutation of opponents, into two sections,[49] according to the Vedic divisions, metaphysical and ritual, formed her fleshy thighs charming with excellent clothing.

81. We believe the two chaplets of her teeth, pearls strung together, form the science of logic, resorted to by those who are desirous of salvation, and characterised by sixteen topics mentioned twice,[50] first at the stage of enunciation, and then at the time of definition.

82. The teeth of her mouth are to be considered arguments; otherwise, how could it argue with these, and how could it, in disputes, cut asunder the leaf (of counter-theses), and refute a host of meritorious (opponents)?[51]

83. Full of diffuse narrations, the Purāṇas, falling into two groups, according as they were composed by Vyāsa and Parāśara, and characterised by names such as Fish, Lotus and the like,[52] became her two hands, painted with red lac, and marked by figures of fish, lotus and the like.[53]

84. The law-books, I see, that are free from destruction till the end of time, have the Vedas as their root, and which she knows by heart, have become her head: whom will it not delight?

a multitude of grammatical topics like guṇa, dīrgha, bhāva and krit affixes, and formed diverse classes of words.

48. i.e., the pearlstring reached as far as her lap.

49. i.e., Pūrva-mīmāṁsā and Uttara-mīmāṁsā.

50. The teeth are thirty-two in number; sixteen topics mentioned twice would also make that number. Hence the two rows of teeth represent the Nyāya system with its sixteen topics enumerated twice.

51. The implied meaning is: "Otherwise how could it cut asunder a betel leaf (पत्र) and cut open a good betel nut (पूग)?" In this verse the teeth are fancied as arguments with which the mouth refutes counter-arguments; just as it, with those very teeth, chews betel leaf and cracks betel nuts.

52. Ref. to the Matsya (fish)-purāṇa, Padma (lotus)-purāṇa etc.

53. Supposed to bring luck.

85. The Creator made her eyebrows with the two sections of the syllable 'Om'; with the Anusvāra of this syllable, he made on her forehead an ornamental mark, like a Tamāla leaf; while with its Candrabindu he made the bow for playing on her lyre.

86. On her body were formed the two ear-rings with the best portion of the circular terminal script Visarga,[54] the fingers of her hands with the best of golden pens, the lock of her hair with the best of inks, the lustre of her smile with the best chalk.

87. She seemed to have a face constituted by the doctrines of the Kāpālikas, a belly composed of the doctrine of universal void, and a heart formed by the universality of sense knowledge; while her whole frame consisted of the doctrine of sense knowledge having forms.[55]

88. Sarasvatī said to king Bhīma, "An occasion it is for thee to rejoice; useless to sorrow; I shall describe the family and wonderful career of yonder kings.

89. "To narrate the virtues of these kings I have come, obeying merely the command of[56] Viṣṇu, at whose lotus-feet the celestial Gaṅgā plays as the honey of flowers.

90. King Bhīma, of the same rank as the divine lords of the regions, offered due worship to her, knowing from sounds of good omen and the like, cognisable at that moment, that the trusty goddess had come.

91. Then to the midst of that great multitude of kings, the king called his daughter, who acted as a magic device in the sport of drawing kings from the ends of the regions.

92. She stirred an ocean of amazement in the spectators; which came into being at the sight of the maids in the van, swelled when her friends were by degrees seen, and then surged up on account of the beauty that was in her form.[57]

93. The lustre of her scarf had the purity of the sheen of her jewels that were devoid of all oily touch, artificial water or coating.[58] The crowd of her girl friends was like her own reflection flashing in the limpid brilliance of the diamonds on her dress.[59]

54. See Vocab. under वृत्तसमाप्तिलिपि.

55. Ref. to philosophical doctrines. See Appendix I.

56. Lit. being some one subservient to the command of etc.

57. For the construction see Footnote on Verse 107.

58. i.e., her scarf was as bright as her jewels which were free from all kinds of artificial embellishment.

59. Lit . . . . . her own reflection staying in the water of the lustre of the diamonds etc.

CENTRAL ARCHAEOLOGICAL LIBRARY New Delhi

94. A bee, Cupid's messenger, coming with joy at the scent of her beauty-paint, seemed to speak something secretly in her ears, creeping on her lotus ear-ring.

95. She was looking at the fun provided by the clash of the gleams of the precious stones of her ornaments, having conflicting colours. She had eyebrows gracefully curved, as if they were set in motion by Cupid, mistaking them for his bow.[60]

96. She had her limbs pervaded by Cupid delighted; was accompanied by a row of friends with hands like young sprays of twigs, and was longed for by those kings: like as the Beauty of the spring, redolent with sweet-scented flowers and breezes, with rows of bees sleeping at the tips of tender branches, is desired even by the wishing trees of heaven.[61]

97. Owing to her body being tinged with the rays of her jewels that had yellow, white, pink and azure hues, she was rendering useless the paints of Gorocanā, sandal, saffron and musk applied to her body.[62]

98. Not believing Cupid to be able to conquer Nala with his flowery bow, she was offering him a rainbow, as it were, a creation of the rays of her own ornamental gems.[63]

99. Below the ornaments, upon her scarves; below the scarves, in the thick effulgence of her gems; and, nowhere in fact was any room left by the Creator, for the eyes of the royal crowd to feast upon.

100. First the showers of flowers falling from the sky, then the bees, and then her face turned aside for fear of them prevented her being seen. Behold, the Creator's effort to thwart the desires of men!

101. From the corner of her eye, she seemed to let loose a stream of camphor and musk[64] towards the face of a girl friend; which face the kings made the guest of their desire, each saying, 'I wish I were that.'[65]

60. i.e., the eyebrows were exactly like Cupid's flowery bow.

61. The Kalpa trees.

62. Gorocanā, sandal etc. are respectively yellow, white etc. For Gorocanā see Vocabulary.

63. Cf. 7. 19.

64. Camphor is white, and musk black. The idea is, she was casting at her friend glances tinged with the black and white lustre of her eyes.

65. i.e., the kings would rather become the face of that girl to receive the favour of Damayantī's glances.

102. She was destroying the pride, which moonbeams had in their heart with the rays of her teeth, slightly revealed by the throb of her lips about to smile; rays that delighted those day lotus blossoms, the faces of the kings.

103. In the guise of the transparent gems set on her ornaments on every limb, she had, as it were, so many eyes of people motionless on each several limb on which they were fixed. She had the gloom of her navel thickened in its lustre by the rays of the emerald flashing at the tip of her pearlstring.

104. Above her was the gaiety of a dance executed by rows of white Cāmara whisks, looking like swans of diverse kinds; as if they wished to imitate the beauty of the shiver of the Light of the Moon astonished at her smile, the quintessence of all that was white.[66]

105. To the nymphs who were singing panegyrics of her limbs, but stopped in the middle in the course of their recital, she was offering a present, the sense of shame worn by herself as an ornament of her heart.[67]

106. She was surpassing the stars with the lustre of her teeth, the moon with the radiance of her face, and the sky with the sheen of her hair; was there a king whose eyes she regaled not richly[68] with honey?

107. More wonderful were her bare limbs than the limbs that had ornaments on; beyond praise was her directly visible[69] beauty. The row of kings then absorbed[70] her with their glances as she entered the assembly in a palanquin.

66. The glistening light of the moon is personified and fancied as shaking its head in amazement at the extreme whiteness of her smile, while the white Cāmara whisks playing over her head are fancied as imitating the movements of this imaginary head of the Light of the Moon. Lit.....imitate the beauty of the shaking of the head by the Light of the Moon.

67. The idea is, the nymphs set themselves to sing the praise of Damayantī's beauty, but as it was beyond their power of description they could not proceed, and were ashamed to have to stop in the middle. As, however, shame or bashfulness is regarded as an ornament of women, it is fancied that it was offered to the nymphs by Damayantī herself from her own heart, as a gift in return for their praise. The imagery is that of high personages giving away jewels and ornaments worn by themselves to minstrels singing their praise; in 19. 65 Damayantī actually offers such presents.

68. Lit. up to the neck. 69. i.e. uncovered.

70. This verb governs all the epithets of Damayantī in the preceding fifteen verses. It should be noted that in the original these epithets are in the accusative, and many of them are Bahuvrīhi compounds, which it would be too cumbrous to render as relative clauses as is usually done.

108. No king was there whose limbs, as he wondered at the beauty of her figure, did not leap up with joy, bristling with the rising tips of the hairs.

109. Who there, looking at Damayantī, did not snap his forefinger, its tip being pressed with the ball of the thumb and the middle of the middle-finger?

110. Or, who in that assembly was the king, who, on seeing her with eyes like Khanjana birds, did not raise his eyebrows high, nodding his head again and again?

111. Then the kings, noticing Damayantī as she came to the Svayaṁvara floor, said thus in joy, their tongues sluggish with disjointed words, owing to the troubled state of their minds.

112. "This maiden surpassing the nymphs in beauty has destroyed the distaste of the gods for the earth; the gods thinking, 'Let not the earth be empty on account of men travelling to heaven, having performed sacrificial rites, with the hope of winning the nymphs Rambhā and the others.'[71]

113. "That beauty of hers, hearing about which from people we have come from this and that corner of the earth, was far inferior to this cream of beauty which is now perceived.

114. "Where does the great ocean of the sentiment known as love exist? Or else, from what ocean did this Lakṣmī[72] emerge, a treasure-house of beauty's art?

115. "Damayantī's face is the 'nectar-rayed' moon itself, evidently the 'hare-marked' moon of heaven is called so by implication.[73] Her eyebrows form the real bow of Cupid, whereas flowers are called so on account of the existence (in them) of a mere touch of the excellence of her eyebrows.[74]

71. The gods attracted by Damayantī's beauty are fancied as coming to the earth to replace the mortal kings, who, in their turn, attracted by the celestial nymphs, go to heaven in large numbers by virtue of the religious merit accruing from the performance of sacrifices.

72. Damayantī is fancied as a second Lakṣmī. The traditional Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth and beauty, rose from the ocean of milk.

73. i.e., the word "moon" (सुधांशु "nectar-rayed") signifies primarily Damayantī's face; only secondarily by implication does it signify the moon of heaven, which is usually called शशाङ्क "hare-marked"; just as in गङ्गायां घोषः 'the cattle farm on the bank of the Gaṅgā,' the primary meaning of Gaṅgā is the river of that name, and only by implication (लक्षणा) it means गङ्गातट 'the bank of the Gaṅgā'.

74. See also Notes.

116. "Does the fair one hold her ear-rings as two ring-shaped targets for Cupid the archer? Do the arrows discharged by him, right and left, pass through them?

117. "She is spreading, alas, Cupid's disgrace in the shape of the two blue lotus blossoms decorating her ears; for verily will the wicked, on account of them, declare Cupid to have missed his aim, the ear-rings.[75]

118. "Let Cupid to-day welcome Damayantī's eyebrows as his bow, held in the middle inside his grasp,[76] forsaking his old flowery bow, full of dust, and frequented by bees and worms.

119. "Each year the Creator, laying by somewhere lotus blossoms in the winter and Khanjana birds during the rains, takes their quintessence from them. With it, richly he maintains the beauty of her eyes.[77]

120. "The Creator established in her eyes the umpireship of two bees, male and female, serving as her eye-balls, as if he thought, 'Let people ask this pair of bees the difference between lotus blossoms and eyes like these; they are familiar with the merits of both.'[78]

121. "Two palaces did the age[79] that is devoted to Cupid and Rati build for them, residing in her heart. Who does not guess

75. In the preceding verse the ear-rings have been described as Cupid's targets. Now it is fancied that, as lotus blossoms are often used by Cupid as his arrows, the two blue lotus blossoms, stuck round Damayantī's ears, will lead one to think that Cupid failed to shoot these arrows of his through the ear-rings with the result that they got stuck in her ears. The blue lotuses thus blacken Cupid's fame as an archer.

76. Lit. which in its middle portion holds the fist. Damayantī's eyebrows are fancied as forming Cupid's bow; but as there is a gap in the middle, it is explained that the middle portion of the bow is invisible, because it is held within his grasp.

77. Lotus blossoms and Khañjana birds are regarded as models of beauty for the eyes of a woman. Damayantī's eyes are, as it were, two lotus blossoms or two Khañjana birds; but as the former disappear in the winter and the latter migrate at the approach of the rains, the poet fancies that the Creator, at the approach of the seasons uncongenial to them, keeps both of them concealed, and taking the best portion of both, sustains in all seasons the beauty of Damayantī's eyes. Lit. nourishes her two eyes.

78. The idea is, the eye-balls are really two bees which have come to stay in Damayantī's eyes. Any one who questions these bees, who know all about lotus blossoms, about the difference between Damayantī's eyes and the latter will receive an impartial decision to the effect that it is Damayantī's eyes which have the superior beauty.

79. i.e., youth.

her breasts to be two rounded cupolas of gold flashing at their top?[80]

122. "Did her arms severally take from the vanquished lotus-stalk its flower as a tribute?[81] Who on the earth doth not regard this flower as Beauty's abode, and who are the people who do not praise it as her hand?

123. "The lotus that grows on water is a phantom produced by the lily. The (genuine) lotus is that which has its habitation at the fore-end of her arm;[82] for it is thorny with sharp-pointed nails by reason of its rising from a thorny stalk.[83]

124. "(To the question) if among mortals there is a maiden fit to be compared with her, the fact of our not getting elsewhere a worthy bride is the reply; if there were such a maiden in heaven or the nether regions, there would not be this concourse of people from all the worlds.

125. "Whether we salute Brahmā's hands or not, even his fancy touched not this work of art, much less his hands. Spoiled, indeed, it would be by a touch : worthy it is of Cupid alone owing to his incorporeal form.

126. "This tender maid was not created by the Creator with his hands, rough from handling Kuśa grass; nor did he create her even with his mind; she—a stream of the sentiment of Eros; he —a tree on a desert path for Quietude's repose.

127. "Did the Creator weigh her, raising her up with his hand, to see if she was heavy in the region of her hips or in her breasts? Did she for that reason have the graceful play of the three

80. i.e., the breasts are to be regarded as the cupolas of two palaces built inside her heart by Youth for Cupid and his wife Rati.

81. It is fancied that each of Damayantī's arms vanquished the lotus-stalk in a contest of beauty; and each, taking its flower—the lotus—as a tribute (कर), made it a hand (कर).

82. i.e., it is Damayantī's hand that is the real lotus; the lotus that originates from śambara (water) is but a phantom, Śambara being also the name of a demon famous as a magician.

83. A genuine lotus, originating as it does from a stalk which has on it small thorns, ought logically to be thorny, according to the principle that the properties of the cause are present in the effect; but the lotus that grows on water is without any thorns—a proof against its being genuine. Damayantī's hand, on the contrary, has thorns in the shape of its nails, a proof that it is the real lotus. The phrase उत्कण्टकात् नालात् "from a thorny stalk", applied to Damayantī's hand, means really "from the stalk (of the fore-arm) bristling with thrills", कण्टक meaning both "thorn" and "thrill".

128. "The moon, having created her, her limbs being made of the butter rising from its own nectar,[85] while her yellow tint beamed by degrees, itself became her face, not to be made with the drowsy lotus.[86]

129. "The beautiful Spring was her artificer; with the south wind did he create her breath; with flowers he made her limbs; her voice he made with the cuckoo's 'Fifth.'[87]

130. "She is Cupid's creation, not the Creator's; by no other craftsman can her artificer be surpassed; but the Creator is surpassed even by the age[88] that is Cupid's henchman in producing beauty.[89]

131. "Cupid's work it is to discipline the lips and throat of Bṛihaspati himself, while they describe her, by destroying the pride of their narrative power;[90] also to cause repentance to those who have attained salvation by forsaking the world."[91]

132. Then Indra, in order to describe Damayantī, whose entire figure was absorbed by the multitude of his eyes,[92] while the kings had their eyes fixed on each several limb of hers, adorned his moonlike mouth with the graceful play of the art of word-play, drenched with the nectar of a lyric verse.

133. "She is white with her smile, and a gazelle by her eyes; a lyrist with the beauty of her melodious voice; and nothing less

84. Four fingers pressed with force on a soft, fleshy surface would cause a swelling of the three intervening strips of flesh. The three fleshy folds of Damayantī's waist are fancied as being thus produced by the Creator while holding her up by the waist with his hands to measure her weight.

85. It will be remembered that the moon is believed to be full of nectar.

86. The moon, instead of itself becoming Damayantī's face, could have made it with the day lotus but for the fact that the latter shrinks up in the presence of the moon.

87. See Vocab. under पिकपञ्चम.

88. i.e., youth.

89. The Creator or Brahmā is the maker of childhood; it is Youth who is the Creator of beauty. As Brahmā is, in this respect, inferior even to Youth who is only a servant of Cupid, he could not have created Damayantī.

90. i.e., Cupid created Damayantī in order to wound Bṛihaspati's pride, by presenting him with something which it was beyond his power to describe.

91. i.e., by putting before them something more blissful than salvation, viz., Damayantī's beauty. Obviously the jīvanmuktas are meant.

92. Ref. to Indra's thousand eyes.

than gold by virtue of the lustre of her body: while by reason of the rest of her limbs no other slim damsel comes to my mind."[93]

134. Suspiciously looked at by Nala, while uttering this praise close by, Indra removed his suspicion by expounding, in respect of his statement, a meaning applicable to human beings.[94]

135. Alas, making himself the substitute of Nala, and even becoming Nala for the sake of the end in view, why did Indra, who gave an explanation like that, retain his original evil nature?[95]

136. 'There, there, she is going by that passage, beautiful in her dress; she is nearing, nearing the altar, this Urvaśī of the earth' —such joyful shouts made by the people thwarted the gain to Nala's heart from hearing those excellent descriptions of Damayantī.

137. Epilogue. [Śrīhīra, the ornamental diamond of the diadem of great poets, and Māmalladevī had as their son Śrīharṣa whose passions were subdued; in the beautiful epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him whose labours in the field of logic as well were unrivalled, the tenth canto, brilliant by nature, has come to an end].

93. The word-play referred to in the preceding verse consists in the fact that Indra is at the same time instituting a comparison between Damayantī and his mistresses in heaven, Gaurī, Hariṇī, Vīṇāvatī, Hemā and Menakā. See Notes.

94. When Nala heard the words Gaurī, Hariṇī, etc., he at once knew them to be names of nymphs and suspected the speaker to be Indra disguised as himself; but the crafty Indra quickly explained that Gaurī, Hariṇī etc., meant respectively 'white', 'gazelle' etc. (see the preceding verse), and had nothing to do with nymphs.

95. The idea is, Indra, though he assumed the form of Nala, did not have the purity of Nala's character; and, by giving a false explanation as described in Verse 134, betrayed his original evil nature. The verse indirectly refers to Pāṇini's rule स्थानिवदादेशोऽनल्विधौ. See Notes.

CANTO XI

1. Then Damayantī, in order to win the suitor cherished in her heart, came to that assembly of kings, which, like a goddess, had grace playing on the moonlike faces (composing it), and was in its eagerness beholding her with a steadfast gaze.

2. The youths (in that assembly) were immersed in the fair damsel, not merely with their eyes nor with their hearts only, but with their entire selves, in the guise of their figures reflected on the spotless surface of her limbs and the ornamental jewels.

3. On account of the aerial chariots belonging to those who came to witness the Svayaṁvara, the sky looked beautiful as that other heaven would have been, had Viśvāmitra built it between the (old) heaven and the earth.[1]

4. There the worship of the gods, going about in the sky to witness the scene, took place by means of the incense, that was transmitting its fragrance to the gust of wind from the moving Cāmara whisks of the kings.[2]

5. There a swarm of bees, going after the flowers falling (from the sky), wallowed in redolence, obstructing with its rows the current of air, that wafted the scent of the ornamental paint of sandal and camphor on the bodies of the assembled kings.

6. The rows of buildings, by means of their waving flags, displayed, I ween, before the people their skill in dancing, having demonstrated their excellent talents by the whole manner of their echoing the modulations of the rumbling sound of the auspicious drums.

7. In that assembly, standing on Damayantī's right, the mighty Goddess of Speech (Sarasvatī), worthy of the salutation of the people of the fourteen worlds, spake thus, after offering in a befitting manner her greetings to her whose shoulders were bent with courtesy.

8. "A crore of gods have come here, whose individual description will outlast a century. Choose amid them, pondering with thy mind, any one whom thy heart[3] doth seek.

9. "Beautiful one, just as this gaze of their eyes, caused by their eagerness to look at thee, hath come to be joined to the

1. See 2. 102.

2. i.e., the fragrance of the incense burnt on the floor of the assembly was wafted to the sky by the volume of air let loose by the moving 'chowries.'

3. Lit. mental function.

natural winkless state of their eyes;[4] similarly let their drinking of the moon's nectar be twofold by virtue of their drinking thy lips.[5]

10. "The tree that has all the jewels for fruit[6] is verily the hand of the mountain[7] of these gods, which in times of yore milked the earth in the form of the divine cow Surabhi. That tree, as if covered with the sprays of the ocean, shines forth, making pearls literally true to their name;[8] for it makes them grow like fruits."[9]

11. The gods in their mercy allowed her then to go to another part (of the assembly). She was furtively looking round for fear of the offence (of having rejected them), placing on her head her folded hands, apt to be mistaken for two day lotus blossoms with their petals closing in contiguity with the moon of her face.[10]

12. The conveyance-bearers, who were underneath her palanquin, did not directly perceive in the least her growing indifference to this and that suitor; but they came to know it, by surmising Damayantī's indifferent attitude, inferable from the melancholy faces of the heroes close by.

13. Seeing themselves without any protection among the (man-eating) Rākṣasa suitors, and noticing an inferiority in the Vidyādharas[11] in respect of Damayantī's figure, the vehicle-bearers turned their backs. Not discovering even a suspicion of a voice like hers in the group of the Gandharvas (the singers of heaven), they averted their faces.

14. The Yakṣas who keep a fruitless watch over their wealth while there are those who are poor, showed not their face to Damayantī for sheer shame; for did they not know her to be a

4. The gods by nature do not wink.

5. i.e., the gods usually drink the nectar supposed to be in the moon; let them now drink another kind of nectar provided by Damayantī's lips.

6. i.e. the all-giving Kalpa tree.

7. The mountain Meru.

8. i.e., making the designation of pearls as 'pearl-fruits' (मुक्ताफल) true to its literal meaning.

9. The reference is to the story of the mountain Meru, who, advised by king Pṛithu, milked out of the earth which took the form of a cow jewels and valuable medicinal plants. Here, the bejewelled Kalpa tree is fancied as the hand with which Meru had milked the earth.

10. Damayantī's face is compared to the moon, and her folded hands to two lotus blossoms with their petals folded up in contact with the light of the moon.

11. Horse-faced with a human body.

(wish-fulfilling) Kalpa creeper, descended on the earth, and devoted to an (all-giving) Tree of the gods?[12]

15. Like as the new rainclouds make the swans migrate to the lake of Mānasa from every other sheet of water, so, from the crowd of the gods to the presence of the lord of the serpents (Vāsuki), the bearers then carried her along, the beauty of whose feet and lips possessed the charm of a cloth dyed with madder.[13]

16. Ever bold in assemblies, Sarasvatī, of whose mighty self the entire range of speech is described by sages to be an evolution, once more said to the damsel, her brow superb as the crescent of the rising moon.

17. "This is the white-lustred Vāsuki, who, engaged in waiting on Śiva, occupies the position of his sacred thread, acquiring a crimson lustre from clasping (Pārvatī's) silk ribbon, owing to the saffron paint of Pārvatī's breasts being attached (to the ribbon) through its contact (with them).[14]

18. "On Śiva's hand this serpent plays the part of a bracelet, highly beautiful with charming gems.[15] Devote thyself to him, expert in doing for Śiva the functions of a cord for binding his matted hair, a string for his bow, and a sheet of cloth for wear during meditations.[16]

19. "It is this 'two-tongued' serpent, if any, who, holding with one tongue the nectar of Śiva's moon,[17] and with the other the quintessence of thy lips, would be able to find out the minute difference between the two, simultaneously tasting both.

12. i.e. the Kalpa tree which here refers to Nala. The verse contrasts the miserly Yakṣas with the generous Damayantī devoted to the equally generous Nala.

13. The rosy feet and lips of Damayantī are indirectly compared to the red feet and beak of a swan.

14. i.e., the white coil of the serpent Vāsuki, always in attendance on Śiva, looked as if it were his sacred thread. The crimson hue adhering to the serpent's body owing to its frequent contact with Pārvatī's silk ribbon smeared with saffron is compared to the scarlet colour of a sacred thread dyed with madder, as in the case of the Kṣatriyas. As Nārāyaṇa points out, Śiva is regarded in the Purāṇas as a Kṣatriya, and as such he may be supposed to have a sacred thread dyed with madder (मांजिष्ठ), which is here provided by the coil of Vāsuki, red in contact with Pārvatī's silk ribbon smeared with saffron.

15. In the case of the serpent, the gems believed to be on its hood.

16. i.e., he is variously used by Śiva as a cord, a bowstring and even as a strip of cloth.

17. i.e., the moon on Śiva's head. Vāsuki, being Śiva's attendant, would be able to taste the nectar composing the body of the moon.

20. "That this serpent 'whose venom is in the jaw' will give (amorous) bites to thy lips is not to be counted a peril; no power has he to do any harm to thy lips made of nectar's cream."[18]

21. The lord of the serpents, being ashamed, forbade his servants to dance, who were thinking of an emotional effect, on seeing her shudder and then her thrills caused by her terror at the sight of the serpent's moving hood.[19]

22. The other serpents, who saw this and despaired of being chosen (by Damayantī), created with their sighs something unfavourable to themselves; for alas, alas, the horses drawing their chariots, though willing to depart, did not approach the serpents owing to the evil omen of that adverse wind.

23. Like as the rays of the moon bring to the night lotus the lustre of laugh, removing it from the day lotus with its petals drooping low at dusk, so did the vehicle-bearers bring her to the concourse of the kings, removing her from the presence of the chief of serpents Vāsuki, whose hoods were shrinking with shame.

24. Then said the goddess, "Timid one, pay heed. Kings, behold the daughter of Bhīma. While you absorb her once more with your eyes, though once seen (by you), the desire to see her will not end even in tens of millions of years!

25. "Let Cupid who, with love's emotion, removed the intense, inmost quietude even of Brahmā, Viṣṇn and Śiva, create your joy, perturbing with his five arrows the five sense organs of the world.

26. "Thou with a slender[20] waist apt to arouse the emotion of love, look at these lords of the islands, whose power of self-possession Cupid hath verily consumed by force of Hum incantations,[21] uttered in meditation,[22] while showering his arrows.

27. "O thou with eyes able to put into the shade the lotus in bloom, let the joys of thy water-sports with king Savana prove charming in the sweet-watered ocean. Betake thyself to him, the lord of the Puṣkara isle.[23]

18. i.e., the nectar would counteract the effect of snakebite

19. The servants, noticing Damayantī's confusion, began to dance, thinking it was her emotion before their master, with whom she was apparently in love; but Vāsuki himself knew that she was really terrified at his presence.

20. Lit. two-atomed.

21. Mystic mantras like Hum, Phaṭ etc., are prescribed in the Tantras for the attainment of supernatural powers.

22. The reading जप has been adopted.

23. Situated in the 'sweet-watered ocean', i.e., the ocean of milk.

28. "Thou whose navel cavity is marvellous with its whirl, his land by itself is a mundane heaven . Wouldst thou not acquire his riches—a heavenly reign? Assume, then, the grace of a Śacī in his home.

29. "There doth the self-born god (Brahmā) live on the snowcold floor of a banyan grove. Looking at thee, his own creation, like to none, let him boast of his (creating) hand amid all artists that be.[24]

30. "There look at the banyan tree, which, as if from obstructing from below heat and the like coming from the sky, is called Nyagrodha 'that which obstructs (from) below.' With its prop roots, it seems to support its own weight,[25] and is by virtue of the lustre of its mellow fruits and azure leaves a sunshade of peacock feathers to that isle.[26]

31. "Should not Fame, the beloved mistress of this 'swan of a king',[27] be white or go over all the worlds? But strange that this Fame, making all things white,[28] doth not separate milk and water, the one from the other."[29]

32. But in that king, though valiant, and honoured first in the company of savants, though amiable with the play of the sentiment of love, and abode though he was of the arts, Damayantī found one defect: the soft name Nala was not his!

33. The clever maiden made the twist of her creepery eyebrows and then the writhing of her figure the index of her non-acceptance of him, while in the case of the king, too, the smoke of his pervasive gloom became the symbol of the fire of his grief caused by his failure to win her.

24. A more literal rendering would be: Seeing thee, his own creation...., let the self-born god, who himself lives there on the snow-cold floor etc., boast of his hand etc.

25. These roots grow from the branches vertically downwards, and on reaching the soil become thick and woody, giving support to the branches.

26. The spreading branches with their green leaves and ripe fruits are compared to a huge sunshade made of peacock's feathers with their green and golden spots.

27. Ordinarily राजहंस is to be translated as "a great king", but here the imagery is that of a male and a female swan.

28. Lit. bringing about the non-duality of whiteness. See Footnote on 5. 135.

29. Usually a swan, in the presence of water and milk mixed together, separates the milk from the water. The swan in the shape of the king's fame of course does not do so.

34. Then the servants, simply by their knowledge of her heart, took the moon-faced bride before another king; when there are clever servants, whose activity doth not depend upon others, verily there is no room for the master's words.

35. The mighty goddess said again; pointing to her another king, who surpassed the two Aśvins[30] by his perfect beauty, "O look at him endowed with lineage and character, raising the orb of thy face, bashfully drooping.

36. "In this atmosphere, laden[31] with the pomp of utterances of tireless panegyrists reciting before him, no room is there for my words; nor will they have any meaning, liable as they are to be called 'repetitions in sense.'

37. "Hath not thy heart been imbued with love for this king, ruler of the Śāka island, and famous here under the name of Havya, even on hearing the words of the panegyrists singing the might of his arms; (words) acting as nectar among the wise?

38. "There a Śāka tree, bearing a garland of leaves green as parrot's wings, will charm thy heart. The several directions do glimmer, famous in the worlds as 'Green', on account of the sweep of their embrace of its mass of leaves.[32]

39. "A breeze there coming from the leaves of that tree is said to create by its touch an inexpressible joy. Do thou, enjoying that wonder, once more put faith in a certain statement of Parāsara's Purāṇa.[33]

40. "Long-eyed one, there let the ocean of milk[34] imitate the play of the beams of lustre issuing from thy glances, by means of the beauty and stir of its dapple waves kissing the reflection of the line of woods fringing its shore.[35]

41. "In that ocean, Viṣṇu resides on the King of Serpents (Ananta), who has his massive body coiled up for ever, and is nourished by the never-ceasing, life-giving flow of milk proceeding from the movement of the waves.

30. These were famous for their beauty.

31. Lit. completely lacking in room.

32. हरित् means both "green" and "a direction". It is here fancied that the directions got this name by coming in contact with the green leaves of the Śāka tree.

33. i.e., the Viṣṇupurāṇa which refers to this pleasant breeze.

34. This ocean touches the Śākadvīpa on one side.

35. i.e., the white waves in contact with the reflection of the green trees on the shore would have a mixed hue resembling the glimmer of Damayantī's eyes.

43. "There let the rocks of the Mountain of the East twice experience an artificial crimson, produced by the rays of the rising sun, and then by the red lac[38] of thy toe-nails, melting away from the toes of thy feet, covered with sweat caused by thy graceful steps.[39]

44. "O thou of a graceful gait, there as thou walkest on the crest of the mountain of the East, let thy beauteous face, charming with saffron paint, give to the delighted folk the idea of the rising moon.

45. "When he first experienced the fire of his grief caused by thy absence, he felt in full measure his name to be 'possessed of Anvaya';[40] if thou (now) choose him, he would surely make his own self, too, 'endowed with Anvaya' by means of thy sons and daughters."[41]

46. But in that king, though the tree of his arm was the shelter of the creeper of prosperity, though his beauteous lotus face was the abode of the goddess of speech, she accounted one defect—the divine Indra had never come as a suppliant to him.[42]

47. Then, just as breezes carry fragrance elsewhere, extracting it from (the lotus), the chief among flowers, and the abode of the graceful presence of Lakṣmī; similarly the palanquin-bearers, removing her from that king, chief among the wise, and the abode of the play of prosperity, once more carried her elsewhere, renowned as she was on the earth for her merits.

48. Thereupon the goddess of universal speech again said to Damayantī, the lustre of whose body was comparable to gold, "Thou

36. Lit. a continuity of sleep.

37. i.e., Lakṣmī, fearing lest her husband Viṣṇu should take a fancy to Damayantī, would try to put him to bed to prevent his seeing the latter.

38. Ref. to the Alakta paint applied to the feet.

39. Lit. walking about.

40. "Havya" means a 'sacrificial offering made in the fire'; so, when king Havya was being consumed by the fire of his love for Damayantī, he felt that his name was true to its literal meaning.

41. There is a pun on the word अन्वय . The king has already felt that his name was "possessed of अन्वय", i.e., true to its literal meaning; now, if Damayantī marries him, he himself will be "possessed of अन्वय", which means in this case 'endowed with a family", i.e., he will have many children by Damayantī.

42. i.e., as he did to Nala, as described in Canto V.

with teeth akin to rubies in lustre, think of this one who, with his arms, hath many a time repelled his foes.

49. "With the grace of a fickle glance, look at yonder lord of the Krauñca island—Dyutimat by name, in whose kingdom shines the white flood of the Ocean of Spiced Curds, circular in expanse.

50. "There is a mountain begging for the graceful pace of thy feet[43]—the Krauñca. Vibrate it will, as if it wished to narrate thy virtues with its voice, the echoes of the cries of swans coming through the holes made by Kārttika's arrows.[44]

51. "Damayantī, in that land worship the moon-crested Śiva. By worshipping him even with a blade of Kuśa grass, a man doth never reappear in a mother's womb.[45] That land is the birthplace of men that have him alone as their god.

52. "There build for Śiva, who hath the child moon as his crown, a range of beautiful buildings, mountains as it were, adorned with liquid gold and decorated with golden cupolas; resembling[46] the Mount of Sunrise with the sun kissing its summit.

53. "Youthful maid, there, entering by the window, like a thief, let the breeze from those Cāmara whisks, the agile waves of the expanse of the Ocean of Curds, tear away thy adornment of pearls, namely, the drops of sweat caused by thy love sports.[47]

54. "Verily the fame of this king, ever, ever new, assuming the form of swans, acquires practice by swimming and going farther and farther on pools of water, in order to swim across oceans; from thence to travel unwearied to the limits of the regions, all of them."[48]

55. In that king, though full of countless merits, the slender maid found not her heart's desire; when fate stands in the way, even efforts, stern with endeavour, assume not, alas, the character of causes!

43. i.e., invites her to walk on its slopes.

44. Kārttika is for this reason called the Piercer of the Krauñca. The quacking of the swans is fancied as the voice of the mountain, while the holes made in it by Kārttika's arrows are fancied as its mouths, with which it will sing Damayantī's praise.

45. i.e., obtains freedom from rebirth.

46. Lit. stealing the character of.....

47. The sea breeze coming through the window is to remove the drops of perspiration as a thief does pearls.

48. A variation of the idea of 8.35.

56. Just as the servant gods brought the digit of the moon from the ocean to Śiva's head,[49] similarly the men who bore portions of the palanquin as ornaments of their shoulders took her from him to another king.

57. As she thus, leaving one king and approaching another, was forsaking the latter, too,—each possessing marvellous virtues, and free from blemish—Sarasvatī, whose lotus-feet are worshipped by the world, spake to her who was like Lakṣmī separated from Viṣṇu's bosom.

58. "O thou with hands like the lotus, if the lord of the island[50] marked with Kuśa grass be to thy liking, rejoice with him, Jyotiṣmat by name, on the forest-clad shores of the Ocean of Butter.

59. "There the clumps of Kuśa grass, their tops kissing the sky, will rouse thy wonder, wistfully looked at by thee, drenched as they are with water streaming from the expanse of clouds, pierced by their swordlike blades swaying with the undulation of waves of wind.

60. "Moon-faced girl, there with thy husband rejoice in graceful sports in the Mandara caves, whose rocks were sanctified by the touch of the lotus feet of Lakṣmī, emerging at the time of the churning of the ocean.

61. "Thou with a body akin to the golden Ketaka flower, there the mountain that served as the churning rod of the ocean seems to be ready for thy climbing—the mountain whose slope[51] appears to be adorned with a flight of stairs by reason of the series of furrows in its rocks caused by the friction of the hundred coils of Vāsuki.[52]

62. "Let that churnstaff mountain,[53] with white streams of fountain waters rushing into the furrows made[54] by the friction of Vāsuki's coils, give to thy eyes the illusion of its body being entwined by the serpent Ananta with the rest of its body, when pressed on its head by the mountain's weight.[55]

49. i.e., during the churning of the ocean.

50. Ref. to the Kuśadvīpa.

51. Lit. body.

52. The Mandara mountain served as the rod with which the ocean was churned, and Vāsuki as the rope coiled round the mountain. The grooves caused by the friction of the rope are fancied as a flight of stairs.

53. The Mandara mountain.

54. See Verse 61.

55. A serpent, when its head is trampled upon, coils round its oppressor with the rest of its body; and, the serpent Ananta, too, which bears on its head the weight of the earth, may be supposed to have done the same, when

63. "Fair maid, let the Mount of Mandara be readily reminded of the temples of the Airāvata elephant by thy breasts, of the leaves of the divine tree by thy hands, and of the moon by thy face: all these had emerged during the churning of the ocean."[56]

64. Just as the Mīmāṁsā philosophy[57] does not accept the exalted Śiva, the jewel of whose fame is composed by all the Vedas with their utterances, and whose eternal endeavour is spontaneous for the sake of others; similarly Damayantī did not accept that king, the jewel of whose fame was fashioned by all with words true as the Vedas, and who ever spontaneously strove for others.

65. Then just as a suppliant, withdrawing his prayer from a poor man, brings it to one who is known to be wealthy, the prayer which from its feminine nature moves on without any discernment;[58] similarly the servants, removing the slender damsel from that king, took her to another Kṣatriya prince, she having moved forward her feet, owing to her womanly nature (as a sign for them to go).[59]

66. Goddess Sarasvatī, who sanctifies (by her presence) the left side of Viṣṇu, said again to her, charming in her glory, "Favour, by marrying him, the many qualities of this king, who wields a sword merciless to his foes.

67. "Thou with a nose like a sesamum flower, he is the lord of the island known as Śālmala, encircled by the ocean that has wine for its waters. Dost thou not marvel at him, an ocean of virtues, Vapuṣmat by name? Art thou not fond of him?

68. "The ocean of wine was not afraid, when five other oceans were in terror, while the Brāhmaṇa Agastya was drinking up one of the oceans.[60] Do thou have sweet drinking bouts in it in company with him, and with thy maiden friends.

heavily crushed on its head by the Mandara mountain during the churning of the ocean. Sarasvatī means that, when Damayantī saw the furrows in the slopes of the Mandara mountain with streams of water surging through them, it would seem to her as if the mountain were encircled not by streams, but by the white coils of Ananta.

56. The Mandara mountain while acting as a churn-staff had of course seen these objects as they rose from the ocean.

57. See Appendix I.

58. The word याच्ञा is feminine. Being a woman, याच्ञा i.e., the prayer of a suppliant, directs herself to a man without considering whether he is rich or poor. Nārāyaṇa's explanation is different. See Notes.

59. i.e., being too shy to say, 'Move on'.

60. Agastya was drinking the salty ocean in order to expose to the gods the demons concealed there. The Oceans of Milk, Curds etc. were in terror, but that of wine was at rest; for a Brāhmaṇa does not take wine.

69. "There the mountain Droṇa, which looks like the lamp of that island from the lustre of its medicinal herbs, and is worth seeing with the sootlike clouds resting on its summit, will give thee a magic gift of herbs, affording luck, and obtainable by luck.[61]

70. "O thou, tender as the fresh cup of the lotus, there at the time of thy pleasure walks, fitting will be thy footsteps on the surface of the earth, soft with masses of cotton-wool—fine-scattered by the wind—from that huge silk-cotton tree, the emblem of the isle."

71. The palanquin-bearers, taking her from that king to another, did what was in conformity with her feelings, indicated by the shrinking of the fringe of her eyes, yawning as she was while listening to the merits of the king.

72. Sarasvatī spake to her again, "Damayantī, set thy heart on yonder king, who hath in the guise of the saffron paint (of his body) the love as it were of his subjects attached to him,[62] and whose arms are shining with the fame of his world-conquest visible in the shape of the sandal paste smeared on them.[63]

73. "Thou who art slow-paced as a lordly elephant, this king, Medhātithi, rules over the island that is fig-tree-marked;[64] so, on his bosom do thou shine, causing his joy, even as Lakṣmī herself shines on Viṣṇu's bosom.

74. "There thou, too, wouldst surely take a fancy to play, when thou seest the mighty fig tree, like a sunshade of the earth—the tree that is loved by the people, whose limbs all move to and fro in swings hanging from its branches.

75. "Thou with eyes tremulous as a scared Cakora bird, drinking the nectar of thy lips, yonder moon of the earth[65] will have no liking for the taste of the waters of the Ocean of Sugarcane juice, which assume the form of a halo round the isle.

76. "There the people know no god but the moon, and take no food without looking at the moon, just as the worshippers of the sun do not without looking at the sun. Worshippers of the moon, they

61. The Droṇa mountain containing many life-giving magic herbs was brought over by Hanūmat to Laṅkā for the cure of Lakṣmaṇa.

62. राग meaning both 'love' and 'redness', the former is often described as red.

63. Fame being 'white', the sandal paste is fancied as the symbol of the king's fame.

64. Ref. to the Plakṣa island, marked by a Plakṣa tree.

65. i.e., king Medhātithi.

will not have their religious vow broken, even when they eat on the Amāvāsyā night, as a result of looking at thy face.[66]

77. "Ah, let the row of fresh lotus blossoms growing on the river Vipāṭ of that isle—the river that overflows not—adore thy eyes, whirling like lights round them![67] On this radiant king set thy heart at once.

78. "All waters being turned into milk by the fame of this king, let the swans turn stupid in the matter of distinguishing milk and water, the one from the other;[68] let also the dual sense of the words Kṣīra and Payas, treated in the homonymous lexicons, become a falsehood to-day![69]

79. "What else shall I say of him who is perfectly willing to challenge even Nala? (Once) Nala and he simultaneously sent each his own Fame to perform the feat of ascending the coastal mountain on the other shore of the expanse of the ocean serving as a boundary between their respective isles."[70]

80. But youthful though he was, and though he had conquered the three worlds by his beauty, the fair-browed maid of Vidarbha, lovely as the inner sheath of a lotus, looked at that king in a manner stern with indifference, as did the eyes of Śiva at the 'flower-bowed' Cupid.

81. Just as the upgrowth of the religious merit of the anxious night-lotus bed extracts from the sun the emerging digit of the moon,[71] similarly the bearers who had on their shoulders the equal

66. i.e., looking at Damayantī's moonlike face would be equivalent to looking at the moon, and at the sight of this moon the people would be entitled to eat even on the moonless Amāvāsyā night without infringing the rule that requires the moon to be seen before eating.

67. The lotus blossoms are fancied as lights which it is customary to wave before an object of worship during the ceremony of नीराजना (see Vocab.); it is imagined that the flowers would move round and worship the eyes.

68. The "white" fame would make all waters white, i.e., turn them into milk, so that the swans would no longer be able to separate milk from water as they usually do. Cf. Verse 31.

69. क्षीर means both 'milk' and 'water', and so does पयस्; but, as henceforth there would only be milk and no water in existence, the two words would no longer signify both 'milk' and 'water', but 'milk' only.

70. The Jambū and Plakṣa islands. It will be remembered that these so-called islands stand for divisions of the earth.

71. It is believed that the moon enters the sun on the Amāvāsyā night and comes out by degrees in the "white" fortnight that follows. Here, the night lotus which blooms at moonrise is fancied as extracting the moon from the sun by dint of its religious merit.

poles of the palanquin, drew her along from the presence of that king, too, the unique light of the world.

82. Then the gazelle-eyed maid, who did not pay the slightest heed to those kings, was addressed again by the wondering Sarasvatī, the rich quality of whose voice[72] set at nought the sound of the lyre in her hand.

83. "Here is the Jambūdvīpa; of it thou appearest the crown-jewel; it is radiant with these youths assembled for thy sake, as if the world of Cupid dropped below, torn forth from the sky by excessive swinging, trembling for fear of Śiva.

84. "Princess, surrounded on all sides by retinue islands, it[73] doth shine as their king; in the Golden Mountain[74] it possesses a great parasol with a shaft of gold, and has as its (royal) emblem a ring of Cāmara whisks, formed by the mass of rays emitted by the (white) Mount of Kailāsa.

85. "Youthful maid, a great rose-apple tree shines as its emblematic tree. Discerning its fruits resembling huge slabs of stone, the wives of the demigods Siddhas say to their husbands, 'By what path did these elephant hordes climb this tree?'

86. "Thou with a neck like a conch, born of the juice of those rose apples, the Jambū river with nectarlike waters flows on the border of this island; the river, all the magnificent silt of which has come to be famous in the world as gold, surpassed in splendour by the lustre of thy body.[75]

87. "Thou with thighs like the banana plant, here do thrive a thousand kings; among them, whose enemies with their wives are drenched with tears of blood, I will with pleasure cite a few, whose beauty will captivate thy heart. Gracefully look at them.

88. "Damayantī, likest thou this one—Avantī's king, the resting place of trains of virtues, the sun of whose valour steals away[76] that emerging mass of darkness, the Tamāla wreaths forming the ornaments of the young wives of his foes?[77]

72. Lit. the uprise of the merit of whose voice etc.

73. i.e., the Jambūdvīpa.

74. i.e., Meru.

75. Gold forms the mud of the Jambū river; so it is called Jāmbūnada "belonging to the Jambūnadī."

76. Lit. is the thief of.....

77. i.e., being made widows by the king, they no longer wear any ornamental wreath.

89. "There, during thy water sports, embracing thee with wavy hands, the river Śiprā will be thy friend, its lotus face charming with a continuity of laugh.[78] In the woods on its banks ascetics and Brāhmaṇas dwell.

90. "Gazelle-eyed one, by long worshipping Pārvatī, crown wreath of beautiful maids, who is ever awake, inhabiting the city of Ujjayinī belonging to this king, thou, too, wilt become her disciple to unite with thy husband half thy self.[79]

91. "We do not know what Lord Śiva says there about the use of his having burnt Cupid's body, when he sees him fearlessly springing forth in the hearts of fair-eyed women, by virtue of the shower of nectar of the rays of his moon.[80]

92. "The mistresses of this king with their passion aflame say not a rough word to him, even if he commits a hundred offences; for (from that city) never departs the one digit of the moon resting there on Śiva's head, the emblem of the lunar day that is the cause of the cessation of studies."[81]

93. But the daughter of the lord of Kuṇḍina did not look at that king, deeply attached to her; or perhaps, for aught I know, it is better not to look at a person at all than to look at him with disgust due to one's attachment to some one else.

94. Though the persons below who were carrying the palanquin knew in no wise Damayantī's feelings directly, yet did they come to know them from the reflections[82] in the gems of the ornaments of the kings near by in front.

78. The waves are fancied as the hands of the river; the blossoming lotus-bed as its laughing face.

79. It will be remembered that Pārvatī, represented with half her body joined to her husband Śiva, is the deity of conjugal love.

80. The constant growth of Cupid in the hearts of the women, though he was once burnt by Śiva, is fancied as being due to the balmy effect of the moon resting on the head of Śiva, ever present in Ujjayinī in the temple dedicated to him.

81. Literally, the mistresses do not "read one rough letter" to the king in spite of his giving them cause for jealousy, the reason being the presence in the city of the new moon on Śiva's head; for it is forbidden to read anything on the night of Pratipad, when the new moon appears. Thus, there being, so to say, a continual Pratipad in Ujjayinī, the women cannot "read" any rough word to their lover. In other words, the constant presence of the moon being an incentive to love, the women forgive all offences of their lover.

82. i.e., the reflections of the various signs of her disgust.

95. Just as the light of the dynasty of Raghu[83] brought to the earth the Gaṅgā, the two jars of whose breasts were suckled by Bhīṣma,[84] and who was adorned by her association with the crest of Śiva's head,[85] similarly the bearers brought Damayantī to another king; the two jars of her breasts were yellow as gold, and she was adorned by the presence upon her of a pearlstring and a diadem.

96. Then the mistress of the spoken word[86] spake to her whose eyebrows were illumined by the lustre of Cupid's slightly drawn bow,[87] "Shame-benumbed girl, give some sign if thou hast in thy heart any longing for joys with this one—the Indra of Gauḍa.

97. "Verily his fame has turned into grass the spotless masses of the rays of the moon;[88] so it is proper that an antelope lives in the moon, a nectar-watered sea, wishing to feed on that bed of young shoots of grass.[89]

98. "Embraced by thee, let this dark-complexioned king with lotus figures in his hands,[90] enrobed as he will be with the lustre of thy body resembling a Campaka wreath adorning Cupid's hair, shine like a dark, new-risen raincloud, accompanied by watery hailstones, and embraced by the peak of the (golden) Mount of Sumeru.

99. "Let loose by him with strokes of his sword, the pearls inside the temples of the elephants, coming forward (in battle), looked as if they were drops of perspiration shed by Prosperity pertaining to hostile kings, she utterly unable to bear the heat of his arms.

100. "It is a wonder—the might of this king, originating from his arms which reach up to the knees, has reached the farthest limits of the regions; and the sheet of his fame, emanating from 'seven-threaded' sacrifices performed with a pure heart, hath extended over fourteen worlds."[91]

83. Ref. to Bhagīratha.

84. Ref. to the Gaṅgā, the mother of Bhīṣma.

85. The celestial Gaṅgā is supposed to live in Śiva's matted hair.

86. i.e., Sarasvatī.

87. i.e., the eyebrows were beautiful like.....Beautiful eyebrows are compared to Cupid's flowery bow.

88. i.e., has surpassed the moon in purity.

89. Cf. footnote under 22. 137.

90. A sign of luck.

91. An apparent wonder is implied by saying that something issuing from a mere couple of arms has pervaded the earth, and that a cloth made only of "seven threads" has covered the fourteen worlds. "Seven-threaded" (सप्ततन्तु) signifies a sacrifice. See Vocabulary.

101. Then, perceiving that the vacant look[92] adopted by Damayantī's eyes, owing to their consciousness of her indifferent attitude, was falling on this king, on their own initiative, the servants took her to the presence of another king: the mere suggestion of one's feelings serves the purpose of words.

102. Again did Sarasvatī speak to the young and clever maiden, "Lotus-faced one, ardently practise on this king sprightly embraces of thy eyes, which bear the semblance of the lotus in bloom.[93]

103. "Here is the lord of Mathurā, Pṛthu by name, a churning mountain, churning the ocean of hostile kings.[94] The moon, whose body is stained with its dark spot, resembles not his beardless lotus face.

104. "O young maid, who hast surpassed diverse corals with thy lips, on his hand look at that gem—a magic charm for the conquest of the world—acting like a comet on the throng of enemy kings; for it is tinged with the scar produced by the strokes of his bowstring.[95]

105. "Verily the scar produced (on his hand) by the string of his bow is a streak of smoke, the emblem of the fire of his valour emerging from his flint-like arms[96]—a streak of smoke which, meant for the mosquitoes that are his enemies, served to bring tears to the lotus eyes of the wives of his foes.

106. "There in the centre thou wilt see the Yamunā, like a line of hair on the surface of the earth. The river is darkened, as if by the musk-paint of the women of Mathurā washed away in its water, and looks as if it had a navel in the shape of the great lake (at its bottom) belonging to the serpent Kāliya.

107. "In company with this king, do thou without fear enjoy the pleasures of sylvan sport in Vṛindāvana, dense with fragrant

92. Lit. imprint, impression.

93. Lit. eyes expert in cultivating friendship with the lotus etc.

94. The king is compared to the Mandara mountain with which the ocean was churned.

95. The gem worn by the king on his wrist is compared to the bright nucleus of a comet, while the scar on his hand caused by the friction of the bowstring is compared to the "dusky" tail of a comet which is called in Sanskrit धूमकेतु "smoke-marked." The gem together with the scar is fancied as a comet bringing disaster to his enemies.

96. Lit. fire-sticks (अरणि), viz., his arms.

flowers. All serpents are banished therefrom by the strutting of flocks of peacocks[97] on the Govardhana hill.

108. "Though thy hand hath nails for sprouts and buds, easily perceptible will it be among the leaves of the Vṛindāvana creepers; for it will be marked with an ivory bracelet, looking as if it were the moon, the best portion of which had been taken away from within it by thy face.[98]

109. "The breeze of it—a thirsty traveller—moving about and limping on the expanse of thy breasts, profusely thrilled with the joy of the end of love's dalliance, would without any scruple drink even thy musk-soiled[99] sweat.

110. "The hands of learned men—hands that are busy with the worship of the gods, and endowed with a lustre pure as the lotus, that have palms white as the clear seed-pod of a lotus, daily look beautiful with the gold bestowed by him.

111. "The one hero of the earth, he is not content in the least: no more battles to fight against the prosperity of his foes. Winning thee (now), let him be content, as if from drinking the honey dripping from the oncoming (flowery) arrows of Cupid."

112. But Damayantī, removing her eyes from that king, looked at the way by which the kings were going to and fro, one after the other, while the bearers carrying her palanquin manifested by their action[100] their skill in knowing her feelings.

113. Once again Sarasvatī spake about (yet) another king to Damayantī, fickle-eyed as a timid Camūru deer. "Thou with eyes beautiful like Khanjana birds, do thou delight thy eyes, looking at the splendour of this one, the king of Kāśī.

114. "Kāśī is this king's dynastic capital, Śiva's boat of piety for traversing the span of worldly existence. Even those whose hearts are full of sin become pure on coming here, casting off their ever-recurring sin.

97. These are described as feeding on serpents.

98. The ivory bracelet is compared to the orb of the moon, the middle of which is imagined to be empty owing to its essential portion being taken away for making Damayantī's face. Cf. 2. 25. Lit.....imitating the beauty of the moon etc.

99. Lit. sweat muddy with the musk-paint (applied to the breasts). The idea is that of the cool breeze removing her perspiration.

100. i.e., by taking her to another king.

115. "In times of yore, seeing the future miseries of the world to be created by Brahmā, Śiva wept from pity. It was a mere pretext when he said, ('I am weeping) because I want a name'; for it was he who created this city—a boat for conveying (travellers) across the world.[101]

116. "Kāśī doth not exist on the earth; to live there is to live in the world of the gods. That is why salvation comes to those who breathe their last at its sacred sites; in what other way could a dignity superior to that of heaven come into being for the joy of men?[102]

117. "Damayantī, just as the root as becomes the same as the root bhū on reaching the Aorist, capable of denoting the past, similarly the creatures of the ocean of this world, on coming to this city, become one with Pārvatī's consort, Śiva.

118. "A man and his wife living in Kāśī, after they have enjoyed worldly pleasures without a break, and indulged in mutual gaieties as they would, obtain at death absolute unity (with Śiva) —something more than the union of Śiva with Pārvatī,[103] something blended with waves of bliss.

119. "If thou believe me not, let me keep silence. Thy own inmost feeling should say whether the heaven whose king is Indra 'with the cloud-adorning bow'[104] is not far inferior to Kāśī.

120. "Blessed one, thou dost excel in knowledge; in Kāśī thou shouldst do pious deeds. No need to say more. Here is an asylum of immortality, granting to mortals eternal security even against death; and there is another[105] which flows on, an unfailing source of water, never turning suppliants away.

121. "Be unto this king a Rati incarnate; let him, too, be unto thee an incarnate Cupid. Let both of you shine as Cupid

101. It is said that Śiva, as soon as he was born of Brahmā's forehead, began to weep. On being asked why he was weeping, he said 'I want a name', and Brahmā accordingly named him Rudra 'one who weeps.' It is, however, fancied here that he was really weeping at the vision of the future miseries of the world, his sympathy with the world being later proved by his founding of the sacred city of Kāśī that grants salvation to all comers.

102. i.e., death in Kāśī gives direct salvation, which is something higher than heaven. Cf. 6. 100.

103. Śiva and Pārvatī form each one half of the other's body, but he who dies in Kāśī attains absolute unity with Śiva, the Supreme Being.

104. i.e., the rainbow.

105. Ref. to the Gaṅgā.

and Rati, as if they had descended to that city speedily to appease Śiva who was offended in bygone days.[106]

122. "Let this king, well-versed in a hundred treatises on the art of love, adore thy breasts with secret nail-marks rivalling the digit of Śiva's moon, tinged with the saffron-paint of Pārvatī's feet, when she is in ire.[107]

123. "Holding thee in his embrace, let him remove the heat of Cupid that is in thee. His bow is beautiful with those Cāmara whisks, the mass of his fame.[108] His might emanates from 'razor-tipped' arrows,[109] which cut off the rod-like necks of his enemies who meet him in battle.

124. "His bosom, falling on which his enemy's weapons turn blunt, acts like thunder; not rent even by the fierce grief caused by thy absence. The fire of the valour of his arms, owing to their being fresh sprouts growing from the root of his bosom (of thunder), is not extinguished even by the tears of the mistresses of his foes.[110]

125. "Are there not a hundred thousand trees in the world, bringing with their fruits enjoyment unto cuckoos and crows alike? But admirable is the Kalpa tree, giving its fruits[111] to the gods who live on nectar alone.

126. "Should not other kings pay him tribute, since his own sword became a surety for it? Whenever they perchance fail to render their due, there rises his grim impulse[112] to grasp his sword.

127. "The pride of Indra's horse hath been destroyed by the chargers of his army, which owing to their love of speed do not

106. i.e., by Cupid.

107. It is fancied that Śiva, in order to appease the offended Pārvatī, falls at her feet, and while he does so the saffron-paint of her feet is attached to the digit of the moon on his head, making it rosy. The nail-marks given by the king, made rosy by the presence of saffron on Damayantī's bosom, would thus resemble this rosy digit of the moon. Nail-marks have already been compared to the half-moon. Cf. 6. 25, 66.

108. i.e., his bow is adorned with his military fame.

109. See Vocab. under क्षुरप्र.

110. The arms being the offshoots of the thunder-like bosom, the fire of their valour, like lightning, is not extinguished by water, which in this case is provided by the tears of the widows of his enemies.

111. Lit. which makes the gods' the recipient of its fruits. See Vocab. under संप्रदान.

112. Lit. his lack of compassion. (अस्य कृपा=इदंकृपा, न इदंकृपा=नेदंकृपा).

complete even the momentary contact of their hoofs with the earth.[113] The continuity of their gallop, (as if) only through the air, is worthy to be observed with care."

128. (But) Damayantī rejected that king, busy as she was in looking at the elegance of the people who had arrived at the time when he was being described. Neglected in the assembly of kings by her who knew how to appreciate merit, the proud king darkened, as if from disgrace.

129. Having (thus) met all those valiant gods and kings—countless they were and lucky, hopeful in heart and unequalled in merit—but forsaking them all at the same time, the beautiful Damayantī, of hidden feelings, aiming only at one man, Nala—an ocean of knowledge, a man whose beauty was beyond the range of speech and joy unbounded—resembled, in being wholly devoted to him, the doctrine of the Upaniṣads. (This, too, is sound[114] and contains hidden thoughts, and by forsaking, simultaneously, universal air and earthly objects accompanied by watery objects and light, together with the sky, including time, and including the directions together with the mind—all things possessing diverse qualities—devotes itself to the One Being, whose form is beyond the range of speech, who is an ocean of consciousness, and an infinite joy).[115]

130. Epilogue.

.....In his epic, the beautiful Story of Nala, the moon of the nectar of the sentiment of Eros, the eleventh canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

113. i.e., the hoofs just touch the earth. Lit. the momentary character of the duration of the contact etc.

114. Lit. fair-limbed. See Notes.

115. Damayantī's devotion to Nala is compared to the devotion of the Upaniṣads to the Absolute. The epithets within brackets are conveyed by means of word-play.

CANTO XII

1. Then delaying for shame before their wives,[1] more and yet more kings, uneasy in mind, but full of graceful movement and rich in chariots, came from the farthest corners of the earth[2] to that assembly which adorned the city of Kuṇḍina.

2. Damayantī's Svayaṁvara then continued in that gathering, surrounded by sighing kings who had arrived earlier,[3] and by new-comers who looked like sparkling oceans of joy, having noticed her indifference to the former.

3. In the midst of the royal crowd the bearers, moving along, set the damsel, whose motive had been made clear by the hint present in the pressure of her feet. Guilefully they said, "Aweary she is, even while being carried."[4]

4. The eternal Sarasvatī spake the following words concerning the kings who adorned their seats—(words) that were thoroughly drenched through playing in pools of nectar, and thereafter upward rose.

5. "Choose thou Ṛituparṇa, who, for his complexion's sake, is esteemed more than the colour of the golden Ketakī bloom. Even of his own holy city, Ayodhyā, this king doth never think, absorbed as he is in thee!

6. "With the tongue of a Cakora bird, wilt thou not somehow drink the moonlight of his moonlike face?[5] Why dost thou not make the eyes of the Cakora bird, set in thy face,[6] drink for ever this light of the moon?[7]

7. "In thy water sports (with him), let the floating mass of bubbles on the water, produced by the Sarayū's noisy waves,

1. i.e., the shame of seeking another wife.
2. Lit. from as far as the ocean.
3. These were the rejected suitors.
4. Lit.....while going in a conveyance. This was a pretext. The bearers understood Damayantī's hint that they should set her down to let her have a look around.
5. The Cakora bird is said to feed on moonshine. Damayantī is to drink in the beauty of king Ṛituparṇa, just as the tongue of a Cakora bird drinks in the light of the moon.
6. Lit. touching thy face.
7. Damayantī's eyes are fancied as the Cakora bird's eyes attached to her face; they are to feast on the king's beauty, just as the eyes of the Cakora bird delight in the lustre of the moon. On the beauty of the Cakora bird's eyes see 7. 35.

assume a pearlstring's grace,[8] heavily breaking against the bank of thy firm, high and rounded breasts.

8. "In his dynasty was the ocean dug[9] and filled with the Gaṅgā[10]; (in his dynasty) forcibly will it be bound[11]; and, (now) it is traversed by his pervasive fame. Lo, the might of the good sets forward to encounter the great!

9. "The words of poets, plunging into the flood of the milk-ocean of his fame, fall into an unfathomable depth; and, the casting of figures to reckon his merits wears out the fame of his foes,[12] like chalks.

10. "A scion of the dynasty of the sun, how can this hero be described? In wars the three crores and a half hairs on his body serve as the sprouts of his valour.[13] The mystic formula, namely, the letters of his name, brought by panegyrists to the ears of hostile kings, paralyses in battle those serpents, the pillar-like arms of the kings.

11. "What mode of expression does the Sun of his valour not transcend,[14] obscuring the sky-pervading stars which are the fame of the multitude of hostile kings? I see the hand of this Sun in the creation of the day of Brahmā, so very long.[15] The submarine fire, I ween, is the reflection of this Sun in the bosom of the waters of the sea.

12. "On the battlefield, the Gaṅgā, namely, the vista of fame produced by his arms, came in contact with the Yamunā, the disgrace of his foes. There, diving deep, Kṣatriya warriors evinced

8. Also: produce the illusion of a pearlstring.

9. The reference is to the wellknown story of the sons of king Sagara digging up the earth in the course of their search for the sacrificial horse stolen by Indra.

10. i.e., by Bhagīratha.

11. i.e., by Rāma in the Tretā age. It will be noted that the events are taking place in the Satya Yuga. Cf. 1. 7.

12. i.e., an enumeration of his merits serves only to obscure the fame of his adversaries, just as a lengthy calculation wears out a piece of chalk.

13. The thrills coming over the body during a fight are fancied as sprouts of the tree of heroism.

14. i.e., it is beyond the range of expression. Lit. Of what words does the sun of his valour not reach the (other) shore?

15. The sun makes the day, but the day of Brahmā is so long that the ordinary sun could not possibly make it. It is, therefore, fancied that it is made by another sun, viz., the sun of king Ṛituparna's valour.

an exuberance of desire for the gaieties of the garden of Nandana, the home of the delight afforded by Rambhā's embrace."[16]

13. But Damayantī, having thus appreciated with her ears the eulogy of his virtues, rejected him, a descendant of the dynasty of Manu, with that very side-sweep of her head, which had been formerly caused by wonder at Sarasvatī's words.

14. Then Sarasvatī, mistress of speech, surpassing the inebriated cuckoo bird with the nectar of her voice, spake to Damayantī, whose countenance was akin to the moon, about another youth, stretching her hand in his direction.

15. "Gazelle-eyed maid, wishest thou not, if only with one eye, to drink in this king, the ornament of the land of Pāṇḍya? Across the corner of an eye, do thou ripple the beams of thy eyes, to look at him whose face is bright as the moon.

16. "Lo, Fame the dancer, after traversing the earth, busily engaged in ceaseless effort,[17] in order to walk in the sky without any support, dances merrily, resorting to yonder high-born prince.[18]

17. "For fear of him, kings went from wood to wood, and regained after a long space of time each his own city, turned into a perfect wilderness; and, once again they occupied their palaces of pleasure.

18. "Who hath ever been greater than this hero, whose fame is an ornament, even like a paste of sandal applied to the circle of the earth through its entire range? The might of his bow is unceasingly sung by the people living on the seven sea-shores. The moons, his toe-nails, heartily rejoice in the diffusion of light by their star wives, the innumerable crown jewels of kings, simultaneously falling at his feet.[19]

16. The limpid waters of the Gaṅgā mix with the dark waters of the Yamunā at Prayāga, to which is compared the battle-field where the pure fame of the king comes in contact with the dark disgrace of his defeated enemies. The warriors going to paradise to sport with the nymphs by virtue of their heroic death on the battle-field are indirectly likened to those who bathe on prescribed occasions in the confluence of those two rivers, and go to heaven as a result of the ensuing religious merit.

17. Lit. devoted to a continuity of practice.

18. महावेश "highborn" means also "a tall bamboo", which brings into relief the idea of dancing on the top of a bamboo pole, a feat practised even to-day in India.

19. The nails of the feet are fancied as moons (cf. 7. 106), while the crown-jewels of the kings bowing at his feet are imagined to be stars coming to meet the moons. The expression करपरिचरण means also "serving with

19. "The fire of his might plays amid those groves of ebony trees, the rows of soldiers of hostile armies, full dark with the ink of disgrace from their defeat. Verily the (third) eye of Śiva, situate on his forehead, the sun and fire itself, and the thunder of Indra, are sparks that fly up from the fire of his might and flash out in the heart of the world.

20. "At the edge of the battlefield, king Pṛithu, present amidst the line of gods come to witness his fierce battles, sees the entire earth enveloped by this king's troops of elephants causing one to mistake them for clusters of moving hills, and thinks of uprooting the mountains again."[20]

21. Then a maidservant who knew Damayantī's feelings said to her,[21] "Mistress, here, see something funny, the eagerness of a crow to set its foot on the moving fringe of the banner dancing at the top of yonder palace."[22]

22. The assembly was then whitened[23] by the laugh of the members of the assemblage caused by these irrelevant words; and, so the gloom of the king was clearly visible. Black amidst white would, indeed, be perceptible with ease.

23. Then at that moment the inscrutable goddess, the sole object of the world's veneration, whose true nature consists of the highest knowledge, spake to the damsel[24] about the lord of the land of Mahendra, pointing her forefinger directly at him.

24. "O choose thou the lord of the Mahendra mountain, who hath come to this festive ceremony of marriage-by-choice; and, there, listen to the quarrel between the temples of the elephants of the land of Kaliṅga and the beauteous form of thy breasts.[25]

25. "In vain did his enemies fly to the woods in fear, at the voice of the citizens crying, 'Here he comes'; even in the woods the hands", which makes vivid the idea of the star wives waiting upon their husbands, the moons.

20. King Pṛithu had uprooted the mountains, which could formerly move about, in order to make the earth fit for cultivation. He now comes to witness the battles of the king of Pāṇḍya in company with the gods.

21. Lit. A maidservant, acquainted with feelings, said to Damayantī.

22. This was meant both as a diversion and a sarcasm.

23. In Sanskrit poetry a laugh is always white.

24. i.e., Damayantī.

25. It will be remembered that the breasts of a woman are often likened to the temples of an elephant.

were they scared by their own ravings in sleep consisting of these very words, being heard and repeated by parrots.[26]

26. "Mistresses left behind by kings running away, afraid of him, were seen by women of the woods; and, when asked to tell of some wonder of their native land, they spoke of the cool nature of the light of the moon.

27. "Urvaśī of the mundane sphere as thou art, utterly dominating him by merit alone, dost thou not prove even a greater hero than he, who subjugates (other) kings, with bows, bowstring and arrows?

28. "Wives of enemies, afraid of him, and passing their days in mountain caves, bitterly wept, coming out of them, while they were repeatedly asked for the rising moon by their children obstinately clinging to the illusion of the moon being their playing swan. But the women found solace and at the same time heaved sighs at the laugh of their children, who were delighted at the presence close by of the reflection of the swanlike moon present in their mothers' tears.

29. "When he sets about on the conquest of the world, the earth, wife of some hostile prince, goes through an emotional tremor, hoping intently, 'May he be my lord.'[27] The enemy kings, about to start on their upward travel, having fallen, confronting him in battle, see their way (heavenward) in the form of an opening in the sun.[28]

30. "If some warrior, eminent in the world for his renown, angrily comes back (to fight), after the entire terrified host of this king's enemies have fled from the battlefield, he, too, despite his coming to the fore, shows his back, with his head quickly cut off and detached with a thud owing to the rush of the king's knife."

31. Putting her lotus-stalk finger on her lotus mouth,[29] as if in wonder at the merits of the king, Damayantī, whose gesture was full of art, said to Sarasvatī, 'Grant silence.'

32. Then, Sarasvatī spake to her about another king, great waves of her glances playing in his direction, (a king) who domin-

26. Lit. even in the woods were they scared by parrots repeating their ravings in sleep consisting of those letters and heard (by the parrots).

27. A king being the 'husband' of the earth, the latter quivers with emotion at the prospect of having a new lover. The earth quaking owing to the commotion of the king's battles is fancied as trembling with emotion.

28. This is the traditional reward for being killed in battle.

29. It was a sign to Sarasvatī to discontinue her speech.

ated the earth with his fierce might, and compared with whom Cupid was not worth even a straw.

33. "Why dost thou not do what the king of Kāñcī desires, expressed by the mouth of his messenger? It will not matter—pray, let him forcibly tear away the girdle of thy robe.

34. "Holding his bow and shooting his arrows, he seemed to teach his enemies this precept well: 'Only by submission to me can stability be won; by obstinacy, all (fugitive) routes must be traversed'.[30]

35. "Those serried[31] swans, his fame, play in the fountain of tears shed by the wives of his enemies, taking away (for food) those lotus-stalks, the broken conch bracelets of the young wives of the heroes fronting his campaigns.[32]

36. "If the suns of the warlike valour of all the Kṣatriyas go down when his elephants, reaching unto the bosom of the sky, rush on eager for the commencement of battle, (elephants) whose heads are beautiful with the gleam of vermilion, and who bear a dark tint[33] up to their shoulders—it is because those suns, we know, are then reminded of the evening twilight mingling with the darkness of the gloaming.[34]

37. "To-day the goddess of prosperity (Lakṣmī) reposes on his bosom.[35] She hath forsaken her home, the bosom of Viṣṇu; and, so the Kaustubha gem looks like a cobweb made by spiders settling there, evidently on account of the open void.[36] She hath deserted also her lotus home, (now) clearly enveloped by cobweb threads.[37]

38. "He hath created a miracle, the pool of his fame, sacred, and vaster than the ocean, (the pool) where the (three) worlds come to bathe. What poets are not silent about it? The moon possesses

30. Lit. The direction alone is traversed.

31. Lit. The row of swans.

32. The tears shed by the widows of the enemies killed by him in battle are fancied as a pool of water where the swans of his fame live, while the conch bracelets cast off by the widows are imagined to be the lotus-stalks, on which the swans feed.

33. i.e., collyrium paint.

34. The collyrium paint applied to the huge bodies of the elephants is likened to darkness, and the vermilion paint of their heads to the glow of sunset.

35. Lit. between his arms.

36. Lit.....Viṣṇu's bosom, of which the Kaustubha gem is becoming a cobweb made by spiders, clearly settling owing to its defect of being a void.

37. The lotus fibres are fancied as cobweb threads, the flower being deserted by the goddess.

the beauty of a drop only of this pool.[38] Plunging into its waters, and becoming invisible, the Kailāsa mountain, 'the abode of crystal', takes the place of the water deity Yāgeśvara.[39]

39. "We know not how Ananta, the lord of serpents, manifests joy while listening to his fame; for with tears of inward joy he doth not cover his eyes, being about to hear with them;[40] being hairless, he exhibits no joy-rooted series of thrills on his limbs; nor does he wave his head, fearing the (possible) destruction of the earth.[41]

40. "Vigorous in conquest as he is, in the thick of the fight he plunged his firm spearshafts, up to the very tip of their feathers, into the temples of the crowds of elephants of hostile kings. That was his great service to thee. Why dost thou not therefore show thy favour to him, despite his having inflicted this furious punishment on the temples (of the elephants) that were eager to vie with thy breasts?"

41. With the grace of a smile lurking round the corners of her lips, and given out as if from delight at the merits of the king, Damayantī was really laughing at him. His greatness was after all capable of being sung; but Nala's might was beyond the range of words.

42. Sarasvatī then spake to Damayantī, the beauty of whose eyes surpassed the beauty of the eyes of young fawns,[42] about another king, honoured by the assembly, directly indicating him with eyebrows gracefully inclining towards him.[43]

43. "Alas, alas! thou hast no pity on any of these kings, who look at the earth with drooping heads. Let the corners of thy eyes be bees drinking in the king of Nepāla, worthy of one's gaze.[44]

44. "His long numerous arrows are bold. The utterly deadly activity of them consists of direct hitting, noiseless course, and the reaching of the border of the archer's ears.[45] It is meant to do harm to enemies alone.

38. Fame being "white", the moon is described as a mere drop of the king's fame.

39. i.e., the white ocean of his fame is so profound that the white Kailāsa mountain can lie submerged in it, as if it were the crystal phallus of Śiva, known as यागेश्वर See Vocabulary.

40. Serpents are believed to hear with their eyes.

41. It will be remembered that Ananta bears the earth on his head.

42. Lit.....laughed at young fawns.

43. Lit. already indicating him with eyebrows, the seat of the grace of moving in his direction.

44. Lit. worth drinking in.

45. i.e., while being drawn by the archer.

45. "Though his vow is to please all men, his vow was not broken, even when he met his foes; for, highly vexed though they were, he thickly painted them with blood, putting them to the sword in battle.[46]

46. "If haply the sun should fall into the fire of his valour, completely would it suffer the fate of a moth. Perhaps the Creator, unable to create his fame, somehow made the ocean of milk to take its place.[47]

47. "The fame of this king spreads as far as the Bridge of the South[48] and the Mountain of Snow, which serve respectively as a line of hairs and a scarf to the two regions, inhabited by the scions of Pulastya's family.[49] It spreads as far as the mountains[50] that look like pillars marking the commencement of the two cities of Indra and Varuṇa, lords respectively of the east and the west; (mountains) whose peaks are endowed with a crimson beauty by[51] the lustre of the morning and evening twilights, acting as banners.

48. "By force he made the heads of his enemies roll along the ground, heads of those who fell fighting, loosing showers of arrows, in the forefront of the battle, or who fell forward at his feet, surrendering their arrows, upon realising the measure of difference between themselves and him;[52] heads cut asunder and lying low, or drooping under the weight of terror.

49. "The eyes of man do not see his arrows, while they are pulled out of the quiver, nor when they are joined to the bowstring, nor while being drawn up to the ear-tip.[53] They are nowhere seen in the sky, nor earth nor target. But, their presence is inferred from the gashes in the breasts of enemies fallen in battle."

50. A witty serving maid, who knew Damayantī's heart, then said to the goddess, "How much wilt thou speak of him? Say

46. There is a pun on the word रञ्जन which means both "pleasing" and "colouring." His vow being to "colour" or "paint" all men, he painted his enemies with blood.

47. Lit.....its substitute.

48. Setubandha.

49. The bridge built by Rāma to cross over to Laṅkā is fancied as a line of hair on the body of the south, while the Himālayas are imagined to be a scarf worn by the north. "The scions of Pulastya's family" are Rāvaṇa and Kubera. The former's home is in the south, while the latter is the regent of the north.

rather, while the wide world is there, merits merely suffer from congestion in him."

51. The people restrained the followers of the king, who were angrily shouting, "Ho, this is a fine assembly! Here a slave girl says anything, proper or not, and (now) this one, baser than the other, proves insolent in the extreme."[54]

52. Then the kind goddess of speech spake to Damayantī about another king who, like Purūravas, surpassed Cupid in beauty, her face confronting his direction.

53. "Discarding shame, under some pretext look at the radiant king of the Malaya mountain, with the white streaks of moonlike radiance playing in thy eye-corners, (streaks) redolent with the fragrance of thy lotus eyes.

54. "In vain does an arrogant foe running away from battle seek his own home, leaving this king hostile to him. Little does he know that even an inaccessible mountain tract[55] cannot protect him from the king.

55. "The 'distant' mountain of Vidūra, deprived of suppliants[56] by this king, and so mellow with jewels that grow at the rumbling of clouds, will be so near as to become thy pleasure hill.[57]

56. "Fawn-eyed one, the row of this king's toe-nails looks like the moon on account of the presence of a beelike hue, the gloom of the lotus faces of hostile kings bowing (at his feet).[58] He carries two warlike serpents, his arms, well-nourished by the profuse drinking of waves of nectar juice, namely, the life-breath of insolent foes.[59]

57. "The expanse of his fame, in what world does it not exist? It is the substance that completes the incomplete digit of the moon on Śiva's head. It forms an assemblage of corporeal forms match-

54. See Verse 21.

55. Means also: "even the goddess Durgā, the daughter of the (Himālaya) mountain," Durgā being a form of Pārvatī.

56. Lit. "rendered unlucky in the matter of suppliants," who are attracted away by the king. The Vidūra mountain, also called Rohana, produces jewels which are taken away by suppliants.

57. i.e., the mountain believed to be in the south is so overgrown with its unwanted jewels that it will extend some day as far as the king's dominions, also in the south, and be at the disposal of Damayantī.

58. The outline of the king's toe-nails is compared to the moon, while the gloomy appearance of the defeated kings as they fall at his feet is likened to the spot in the moon. Lit. he is one, the row of whose toe-nails looks like the moon owing to the insertion of a bee-born hue etc.

59. Serpents are supposed to feed on air.

ing with the numerous hoods of the serpent Ananta.[60] It is a plurality of forms assumed by the ocean of milk, a device to do away with the fear of being drunk up by the sage Agastya from the hollow of his palm.[61]

58. "What can a hundred kings do to him that wields the Hundred-killing weapon? What can a hundred thousand do to one who is unerring in his aim?[62] Billions can do nothing to one that surpasses the 'Billion flower'[63] by a mere glance. Nor can a hundred thousand millions of millions do anything to one who destroys the entire race (of his enemies). Alas, his enemies have no other course than to get beyond the range of number itself."[64]

59. Then a girl friend, acquainted with Damayantī's feelings, said to Sarasvatī with a smile, "Look also at the other suitors impatient to be described by thee."[65]

60. A frown from their master restrained the king's attendants who were saying, "The goddess is here authorised to speak. Slave girl, who art thou, slut, to give a reply?"

61. Sarasvatī then spake to Damayantī about a king, full noble and worthy among kings by virtue of birth and character, who was brought to notice by the figure of the goddess slightly moving towards him.

62. "Why hast thou thus resolved not to look at the suitors that are come? Let thy vision be slack after at least drinking in Mithilā's lord.

63. "The heads of his enemies lie on the battlefield, biting the lips with their teeth in anger, saying, 'Lips, because you did not say to him, save, save, this hath happened to us.'

64. "In a great fight, though his right arm retreats (from the bow frame), taking with it the bowstring along with the

60. i.e., the pure 'white' fame of the king could easily provide a thousand bodies to match with the thousand white hoods of Ananta.

61. i.e., his fame looks like several oceans of milk put together, so that the ocean of milk need not be afraid of Agastya, who is reputed to have drunk up one ocean only.

62. There is a pun on लक्ष. A लक्ष (hundred thousand) can do nothing to 'one who pierces his लक्ष (aim).'

63. पद्म means both 'lotus' and the numeral of that name. The apparent meaning is: "(Enemies) numbering 'padmas' can do nothing to one who conquers 'padmas' (lotus blossoms) with his eyes."

64. The last line means also: "his enemies have no other course than to flee from the battle." See Vocabulary under संख्य.

65. Lit. Look also at the haste of suitors other than this one for being described through thy mouth.

arrow, the bow seems to be eager to embrace the advancing left arm in an ecstasy of joy.

65. "The fame of this king is ready for a joint sovereignty with the full moon, (a fame) that banishes the pride of the all-bright Kailāsa mountain in its white radiance. Is it the reflection of a conch, a continuous mass of beautiful[66] rows of autumnal clouds, a complete replica of the milk of the ocean of Milk?

66. "What men have not noticed his hand, which scatters around the mass of pearls found in the hollow region of the bony frame of the temples of the foeman's elephants, pierced by his sword? His hand seems to sow the seeds of the tree of Fame on the earth, cleft by the hoofs of galloping horses, in campaigns[67] undertaken with armies composed of men, elephants, chariots and chargers.

67. "Let the (all-giving) Kalpa tree manage somehow to live, bending under the pretext of the weight of fruits accumulating owing to the lack of suppliants, since this king is there, profuse in his charities. But, how will the Jewel Mountain,[68] high-crested with the uprise of its unspent wealth of jewels, manage to live, utterly disgraced by the scandal of its desertion by suppliants?"

68. The bride's aversion for the king was noticed, when she turned aside[69] to smile, a girl friend of hers having asked her with signs, 'Shall I interrupt the eulogy of the king?'

69. Then the sweet-voiced goddess of speech pointed to another king with her eye, with a view to describing him, and flooded Damayantī's ears with words that were nectar streams of the moon, her mouth.

70. "Here is the lord of Kāmarūpa, superior to Cupid in beauty. He is not, alas, even looked at by thee. Thou art his beloved, worthiest of all. A woman[70] possessing a lustre rivalling thine is very rarely found.

71. "Lo, without any armour, his enemies, pierced by un-barbed arrows, crossed the ocean of existence, sinking low in battle, and piercing their way through the entire solar orb.[71]

72. "As the heat of this king's arms creates a veritable summer in the habitation of his enemies, should not likewise the poor wives of the foemen create there reservoirs of water with the tears of their lotus eyes?

73. "On battle fields, who, looking at the unequalled martial commotion of his expeditions, leading to universal conquest, did not mistake the volume of dust raised by the hoofs of the horses in his vanguard to be the profuse smoke of the burning fire of the uncurbed might of his arms, that is fed by raw bamboo fuel, to wit, his enemies with blood gushing from the sword cuts given by him?[72]

74. "What are the worlds whose inhabitants, taking two pitchers, their own thirsty ears, immersed in the nectar stream of the poetry celebrating his fame,[73] did not inaugurate the coronation of his Fame, which built a throne, to be occupied by itself, on the Ocean of milk, after the gods, churning the 'waters' of the Ocean of milk, had made them solid?

75. "The panegyric of his fame seems to be engraved on the stony hearts[75] of a hundred thousand gazelle-eyed mistresses of hostile kings, which were not quickly rent at the news of the death of their husbands in battle; (engraved) with such chisels as the sharp finger-nails of the women piercing[76] their own bosoms while they beat their breasts."

71. i.e., went to the highest heaven as a reward for being killed in battle. See Verse 29. For the puns see Notes. The imagery is that of shipwrecked persons coming ashore without any helmsman or favourable winds or oars. It is also implied that the king does not use barbed arrows, being averse to cruelty, while his brave enemies do not put on any armour.

72. The imagery is that of smoke produced by fire kindled with raw bamboo.

73. Lit.....nectar streams of its poetic character.

74. Lit.....the gods having created the designation of curds. The fame of the ruler of Kāmarūpa is fancied as a king, who, being pure and white, establishes his throne on the ocean of milk. The poet then describes the coronation of king Fame performed by the inhabitants of the three worlds. As the pouring of water with pitchers on the head of the prince to be installed is an essential feature of a coronation, the people are fancied as doing so, using their own ears as pitchers, which are accustomed to listen to the poetry occasioned by king Fame.

75. Lit. heart-stones.

76. Lit.....thrust (व्यस्त) during the beating of breasts.

76. Then a maid, the bearer of the betel casket, who understood Damayantī's feelings, taking a betel-roll in the fold of her hand, said to Sarasvatī, "Do thou lighten the fatigue of thy mouth with this."[77]

77. Sarasvatī stretched her hand towards another Cupidlike king. Then to the bride, who was so pleasing to the people in the assembly, and had eyes resembling those of a young, timid fawn, she said.

78. "Thou pool of beauty's nectar! Here is he whom the land of Utkala loves for the multitude of his virtues. His eyes are fondly anxious to look at thy face. Verily, let the undulations of the radiant ripples of thy glances stretch out to him.[78]

79. "The Wish-cow and the Kalpa tree, whose suppliants have been attracted away by him who makes all suppliants content, satisfy their passion for charity; the cow offering pourings of milk to the tree, and the tree morsels of leaves to the cow.

80. "Clearly visible is that rosy hue of his hands and feet, caused perhaps by the rays of the rubies on the crowns of kings, who fell at his feet, and whom he raised with his hands.

81. "It is but proper that the sun doth not remain steady in any direction, and the forest-fire resorts to dense woods as its sole refuge; since they are vanquished by the valour of his arms. But, fie on the submarine fire that hath for fear entered into the waters, its enemy.

82. "The sprays of water from the trunks of the advancing war elephants of this king having brought about, I ween, the season of mist, should not the soldiers of hostile kings shudder in their hearts? Should not the lotus faces of their wives fade away? Should it not be a gloomy day for them all?

83. "It was highly befitting this king who hath accumulated all virtues in him that he whose arrows are efficient in war, leaving all other limbs of his enemies, cut to pieces the vital parts of their hearts and shoulders; (hearts) that were arrogant over and again, (shoulders) that did not bend.

84. "The Fame of his arms having gone afar like a champion warrior,[79] conquering all objects proud of their own whiteness, the while it is brandished.[91] In battles it is a cause of terror to those of the kings who do not act as snake-charmers, putting in their mouth the joint of an unfailing medicinal creeper consisting of their own finger in token of submission.[92]

97. "This king is clearly famous as being the foremost among archers, though he handles the bowstring of an (apparently) faulty bow, which in battle shows its back to the ranks of hostile soldiers, becomes crooked towards himself, and being cruel, utters a ferocious yell.[93]

98. "The enemies as well as the arrows of this king make no hissing sound, nor do they tremble, when they come to the fore and fall in battle. Proper it is that, once let loose, they have no return. But the wonder is, the enemies pierce 'friends', and the arrows pierce foes.[94]

99. "This king hath engaged the world in the adoration of Virtue. The horse[95] he rides blinds the sky with dust, deafens the directions with the sound of its hoofs, makes the wind appear lame with the rush of its speed in war, and benumbs panegyrists with its merits. The horse disdains to touch the earth with its feet, rushing with continuous forward bounds.

100. "Lo, though the battlefield was crowded with onlookers,[96] none could see the amazing dance of those dancers, the able enemy soldiers with their throats severed by this king; because, there was a darkness caused by the battle-front's blinding streams of dust rising from the surface of the earth, quickly cleft by the movements of the hoofs of horses rushing at a headlong speed.

92. Ref. to a custom signifying submission.

93. गुणग्राहिन् 'one who takes hold of the bowstring', i.e., an archer, means also 'one who appreciates merit'. It is implied by pun that the king is foremost among those who appreciate merit, appreciating the merit (गृह्णन् गुणम्) even of those who have otherwise grave defects, namely, cowardice, insincerity and savage manners.

94. This is an apparent contradiction based on a pun on the word मित्र meaning both 'the sun' and 'a friend.' The real meaning is, the enemies "pierce the sun", i.e., being killed in battle, go to the highest heaven through the solar orb. Cf. Verse 29.

95. Lit. The horse occupied by this king who has engaged etc.

96. Lit. people looking at the battle.

waters, which are rich in fragrance on account of the unfolding of the petals of the graceful blue lotus blossoms. The tank is pleasing to the eyes of travellers whose fatigue is removed by its banks occupied by rows of trees full of fresh, green leaves in the cluster of their branches.

102. "That pool of water is an old fellow with a body wrinkled with ripples, and white with grey hair, the rows of swans on it. It is supported by a stick, the pole in the middle; it bears the burden of so many years.[97] It has a bald, gravely[98] moving head, to wit, its water worthily flashing in contact with brilliant moonshine.[99] Properly is it ever honoured by the salutation of pious men bathing in it.

103. "Young maid, in this tank, during the hours of water-sports, do thou play with this youth. There let the lotus-stalk be the only means of distinguishing the reflection of thy eyes from the blue lotus blossoms. Let the reflection of thy figure take the place of the water-deities of the tank. Let thy face be installed in the sovereignty of its blossoming lotus realm.

104. "All black things of the world have flown to fables for refuge, banished from the universe cleansed by the phenomenon of this king's fame. Lo, Disgrace had a terror of the far-famed king, for, dark as it was, it never appeared even in any mention of him."

105. At the sight of Damayantī's attitude towards this king, a girl friend of hers said, "If others do not want him to be subject to disgrace, I too certainly do not. I shall only make that disgrace a Tamāla spray decorating the ears of the assembly.[100]

106. "The spots of this king's disgrace, numbering millions and millions, and resembling the darkness seen by those who are born blind, are sung by a crowd of dumb fellows born of barren women, on the eighth note of the gamut, by the shore of the ocean of the milk of tortoise dams."[101]

107. With playful movements of her eyes, Damayantī surveyed the assembly composed of smiling faces astonished at these words. She looked also at the king to see whether he laughed or not.

97. Also: it has so great a multitude of birds.

98. Lit. suitably.

99. कं means both 'head' and 'water'. विकचा चन्द्रिका means both 'brilliant moonshine' and 'a hairless (वि+कचा) lustre' i.e., baldness.

100. i.e., make the assembly listen to his disgrace. Tamāla leaves are dark in colour.

101. The verse is a conglomeration of things that do not exist. It is intended to make Sarasvatī's solemn description seriocomic.

108. It was the dark pupil of Damayantī's eye that was guilty of looking at some one other than Nala. But the corner of her eye turned towards Nala near by, showed a devotion worthy of its white and rosy hue.[102]

109. Then did Cupid, having no limbs of his own, oppress that bride, turning himself into an archer with another's limbs, to wit, Nala's glancing eyes serving as arrows.[103] He took up also a bent bow, the circular mark of fortune on Nala's hands.

110. The extremely fair Damayantī, a golden Ketakī flower, was full of thrills as the flower is full of thorns. She had flashing, bright leafy designs painted on her body, just as the flower has graceful radiant petals. She had a fragrance, like the flower, and cherished a great love, just as the flower has pollen in plenty. As if on account of Śiva's wrath, she sought refuge with Nala, taking him for Cupid, Śiva's enemy.[104]

111. Plunging into an ocean of joy, Damayantī went far down, and caused one to take her for a girl of the nether world, because she adorned the bottom of that ocean. With her mind fixed on the real Nala, she could not even glance at the four (false) Nalas who were before her, in spite of their likeness to him.

112. The king, too, presented her, the treasure of his heart, to his eyes as a loving present, and received her undulating glance, a welcome guest hard even for the gods to obtain. But, pierced anon by Cupid with an arrow composed of the surge of a stream of nectar, he rendered futile with a certain blindness of joy other significant showers of her glances.

113. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra, etc. In the epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him whose head is a bee attending the lotus feet of his mother, the twelfth canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

102. It is implied that she looked at the Magadha king 'with the pupil of her eye', i.e., straight in the face, just out of curiosity. But her sidelong glances, expressive of love (6. 22), were meant for Nala. This verse contradicts the next canto, in which Damayantī is described as being perplexed in the presence of the four gods disguised as Nala, unable to distinguish the real Nala from them.

103. श्रुतिचुम्बिना 'ear-kissing' is to be applied also to 'arrow' i.e., an arrow which touches the ear of the archer as he draws the bowstring.

104. Damayantī is imagined to be a Ketakī flower, and as such she is hated by Śiva, the flower being excluded from the worship of Śiva. She, therefore, seeks refuge with Cupid, Śiva's well-known enemy; but, mistaking Nala for Cupid, she really betakes herself to Nala. For the allusion to the Ketakī flower see Notes on 1. 78.

CANTO XIII

1. Then the palanquin-bearers carried Damayantī away from that crowd of kings, and took her to the five heroes assuming the form of Nala;[1] just as the fragrance of flowers removes the bees resorting to it from all other trees of the Nandana garden, and takes them to the (five) Kalpa trees.

2. At that moment, Sarasvatī who perceives the conduct of the people of all the worlds spoke about Indra in such a way that the consort of Śacī was described, but his disguise as Nala was not revealed.

3. "Noble maid, shall I speak of the excellence of the army of heroes belonging to him whose prowess vanquished his enemy, the demon Bala; and whose martial splendour terrified the demons on account of Gaṇeśa and Viṣṇu living with him as warriors?

(Applied to Nala)—

"Noble maid, what shall I speak of his descent from king Vīrasena,[2] possessing as he does a might subversive of the host of his enemies? His martial splendour hath been perfumed in contact with the ichor flowing from the faces of elephants forming part of his troops.

4. "In battles and in processions, he[3] is followed by armies of gods rewarded with wars rich in spoils, (armies) on whom a sun-like lustre is shed by Indra's bow[4] present in the bosom of the clouds that carry the moon and the followers of Śiva.

(Applied to Nala)—

"In his royal assembly and in his processions, he is attended by maids carrying Cāmara whisks, who are adorned with profuse ornaments, and possess a sunlike lustre inwrought with (the colours) of the rainbow adhering to their mid-bosom, beautiful with pearlstrings shining white.

5. "Full mighty, he drew out the world submerged in an ocean of peril, clipping the wings of the extremely rugged mountains that carry crores of insolent elephants and lions.

1. Nala himself and the four gods Indra, Varuṇa, Agni and Yama disguised as Nala.
2. Nala's father.
3. i.e., Indra.
4. i.e., the rainbow.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Full mighty, he.....peril, destroying the allies of (hostile) kings, whose campaigns took a heavy toll of the lives of peerless white chargers, and who owned crores of insolent elephants and steeds.

6. "Thou with calyx breasts! know him to be none other than Indra, the conqueror of mountains, whose thunder in battles never fails. Dost thou not see this great marvel of his, the presence of his numerous[5] eyes miraculously concealed?

(Applied to Nala)—

"Thou.....breasts! think not that he is a sinner in any way. He is the conqueror of kings, and flees not from battle. Wilt thou not furtively glance at his highly marvellous arms and eyes?

7. "Broad-hipped maid, the gods, jealous of demons like Bala and others richly enjoying a prosperous sovereignty, lovingly take hold of his hands and feet. With Indra as thy consort do thou rejoice like Śacī.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Broad-hipped maid, his rosy hands and feet bear lines of fortune indicating a rich enjoyment of a sovereignty thriving with armies and the like. With him as thy consort do thou rejoice, as Śacī with Indra."

8. Hearing the whole of this speech applying equally to Indra and Nala, and perceiving the self-same beauty in both, the fair-toothed damsel received no conclusive evidence either from her ears or her eyes.

9. 'Is he Indra, or is he Nala'? Knowing Damayantī to be wavering thus, the great goddess once more composed a wreath of speech, pointing out to her the god of fire in the assembly.

10. "Here is the abode of heat. Ever upmoving is he. What hath not been acquired by this Conqueror of wealth![6] From him, brilliant, do thou acquire abounding gold. None hath a resplendent wealth of beauty like his.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Here is an abode of might. He thrives ever higher. What hath not been acquired by this conqueror of wealth?.....[7]

5. The thousand eyes of Indra.
6. An epithet of the fire god, who is believed to have produced gold.
7. The rest is same as above.

11. "Fair-eared one, the ashes left by diverse earthly objects falling victim to the great fury of his flames paint even the body of Śiva, ascetic though he is.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Fair-eared one, his prosperity resulting from the great campaigns of diverse kings falling victim to the great power of his arms excites the jealousy even of ascetics, and of those who are exceeding wealthy.

12. "Thou with a face like thy father's! The entire society of gods hath him for a mouth.[8] His seat is between Yama and Indra.[9] Betake thyself to this refulgent one, who doth ever possess a deep red beauty of lustre.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Thou.....father's! The entire council of the learned hath him as its mouthpiece. His impartiality is even greater than that of Yama and Indra. Betake thyself to this refulgent one, who hath ever beautiful hands with a deep crimson hue. , 13. "Powerful as he is, his brilliance is never slight on wood. When he abides amid fuel, the grasses are his enemies. Swift and rising, by what adversary can he be overcome on the earth?

(Applied to Nala)—

'Able as he is, he has no liking for those whose talents are poor. To him present in the thick of the fight the enemies are as straw. Progressive and quick, by what adversary can he be overcome on earth? "

14. Having listened to this speech common to Agni and Nala, Damayantī perceived no difference between them. Her mind said of the same one, 'He is Nala', and at the same time said something else, 'He is not Nala.'[10]

15. Then seeing her thus reduced to a state of mind tinged with doubt, amazement and fear, Sarasvatī began speaking about another lord of a cardinal point, the son of the god whose rays cause the day-lotus to bloom.[11]

8. As oblations to the gods are offered in the fire, the god of fire is called their mouth.

9. Yama is the regent of the south, and Indra of the east. Agni rules over the South East.

10. Means also: 'He is the god of fire' (अनल).

11. i.e., Yama, the son of the sun.

16. "Lo, because he wields his mace, the entire world, trembling with fear,[12] evades falling into sin. Is there any one free from death from the afflictions caused by him, which baffle even the Physicians of heaven?

(Applied to Nala)—

"Lo, because he wields his sceptre, the entire world.....sin. Is there a god marked by a lustre like his, which wounds even the pride of the Aśvins?[13]

17. "Saṁjña, the wife of the Sun, is heard to be the cause of his birth. But, Chāyā (another wife of the Sun) hath nowhere been known as such. Whose life does he not destroy? It is this Yama who practised religious austerities in conformity with rules.

(Applied to Nala)—

"His name when heard brings good to his friends. To whom doth he not act as a friend? Such gleam of beauty as his hath nowhere else been encountered. With self-control hath he practised religious austerities in conformity with rules.

18. "Moreover, his father is the beauteous-formed Sun that obscures by his lustre all the refulgence of the moon. At whom is his death-dealing power not aimed? He has one disgrace; he is the ordainer of afflictions in others.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Moreover, his father was a king who eclipsed by his power the might of all other kings, and whose figure was beautiful with robes and gems. Towards whom[14] is his death-dealing power not directed? He has the character of Kṛiṣṇa, being one who applies his mace to his foes.

19. "Fair maid, he alone doth wield power amid the dead. Know him to be the lord of human lives. Truly to him, the brother of the Aśvins, all creatures yield.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Fair maid, in the battle of enemies and others, he alone doth attain to power. Think of him as the lord of thy life. To him resembling the Aśvins in beauty, this earth among the primordial elements doth certainly yield."

20. This string of words, common to Yama and Nala, caused doubt in Damayantī's mind, already in doubt at the sight of more than one Nala. Verily it was something like crushing a thing already crushed.

12. Lit. whelmed with trembling.
13. The Aśvins are the divine physicians, famous for their beauty.
14. i.e., towards what enemy....

21. Perceiving in Damayantī, who was gravely in doubt, neither an affirmative nor a negative attitude towards Yama, the revered goddess began to speak in a worthy manner, stretching her hand with the fingers extended in the direction of Varuṇa.

22. "That army of his, composed of many an ocean, doth indeed thrive with the roar of marine animals, (the army) that confronts all directions, contains many a cavern, and is lost to view on the further shore.

(Applied to Nala)—

"That army of his, repository of many a sword, doth indeed thrive with hand to hand fights, (the army) that has an all-pervading front, and contains numerous archers. Any check to it from an enemy is inconceivable.

23. "Along the front rank of his army, the vast, deeply rumbling ocean brings him delight with ornaments of gems, (the ocean) that is inhabited by crocodiles and dolphins and Viṣṇu, and accompanied by woods (on the shore) containing lotuses in bloom.

(Applied to Nala)—

"On the boundary line of his vanguard, numerous trumpeting elephants gaily put forth their roar. They have smooth trunks and the flow of ichor. Their faces are covered with spots. They are bedecked[15] with ornamental gems.

24. "Graceful one, what river of his runs not along its banks with rapid streams? How can we speak of the river's sands, immense[16] as they are, occupied by hundreds of crabs?

(Applied to Nala)—

"Graceful one, what army of his, with horses accompanied by chariots, rushes not at foes? How can we speak of those 'sands'[17] of it, multitudinous as they are, accompanied by hundreds of white chargers?

25. "Beautiful maid, betake thyself to yonder lord of the waters. Look at his excellence, the river Śoṇa attached to his feet. Moreover, the river Sarasvatī is devoted to his service. What pools of water serve him not?

15. Lit. not lacking in.
16. Lit. owing to there being many.
17. i.e., the soldiers.

(Applied to Nala)—

"Beautiful maid, betake thyself to this lord of the earth. Look at the rosy hue of his feet. He it is, besides, whom the goddess of learning serves. Who doth not resort to him with the hope of riches?"

26. Should not this ambiguous speech promote the growth of the row of creepers of Damayantī's doubts about the several Nalas? But, nevertheless it was strange that the speech likewise increased doubts with regard to Damayantī in the minds of Nala and Varuṇa as well.

27. Seeing the damsel undeceived even by the crafty gods who had disguised themselves as Nala, the great goddess spake to her, pointing to Nala who was surrounded by the assembly of kings as by a halo.

28. "Dost thou not recognise this king, the abode of beauty, who hath achieved advancement in victory in mighty battles? Is there any one to whom he doth not appear to be Jīmūtavāhana by virtue of his benign activity, his liberality towards suppliants?[18]

29. "He is one who thoroughly studied Indra's law,[19] and whose radiance blossomed forth with his royal coronation. Commendable will be thy acceptance of Nala, who is now thus mentioned by me by name.[20]

30. "Knowing his wrath and his passion for warfare, as well as the generosity of his mind, thou shouldst offer thyself to Nala, the lord of justice, in the fullness of thy innate love for him.[21]

31. "Is it thy wish that his heart should not be bereft of the hope of marrying thee? What men living in the world does he not

18. The verse might refer to Indra also: "Dost thou not recognise this handsome, jovial Indra, who hath.... battles? Is there any one to whom he doth not appear to be the cloud-borne Indra by virtue of his malevolent activity towards hundreds of hostile demons?

19. Lit. way.

20. The verse might refer to Agni also: "He is one whose brilliance grew on account of his being drenched with the butter of Indra's sacrifices, into which he very often plunges. Commendable will be thy acceptance of the god of fire.....

21. Applied to Yama: "Angry one, knowing his passion for killing as well as the propitious character of the region owned by him, thou shouldst offer thyself to Yama who is not Nala..... (The region owned by Yama is the South).

protect? It is not fitting that thou shouldst have no liking for him."[22]

32. Sarasvatī spake again to Damayantī, who was in a fix, having perceived Nala's identity with Indra from the first of these verses, with Agni from the second, with Yama from the third, and with Varuṇa from the fourth.

33. "Loving Nala as thou dost, how will thy surrender to yonder four, Indra, Agni, Yama and Varuṇa, be to the good? By no means. They are shining in this assembly, assuming an identity of form.

34. "Wise maid, why dost thou not conclude this divine being to be Nala[23] nor choose him as thy consort? Certain it is, he is not the reed 'nala.' It would be an overwhelming loss to thee, if thou shouldst accept him not. Who else could be thy spouse?"[24]

35. Ascertaining these words about Nala to be common also to Indra, Agni, Yama and Varuṇa, the charming Damayantī, becoming restless, felt a certain grief, just as the tide of the ocean feels the submarine fire.

36. Just as in the presence of a diversity of doctrines, people do not believe in the truth of monism, the fifth alternative, though truer; four other theories, wishing to win this (faith), being engaged in preventing such a belief (in monism) from gaining ground: similarly Damayantī, in the face of this doubt about Nala, did not believe in the reality of the fifth alternative,[25] though more genuine than the rest, four other persons, desirous of winning her, having prevented her from acquiring such a trust.[26]

37. Kali will oppress Nala in the future, but Dvāpara[27] already made the beautiful damsel suffer. In this world, the two

22. Applied to Varuṇa: "Is it thy wish that his hand should be free from the (customary) noose 'in order to press thy hand' (in marriage)? What men going by water does he not protect? It is not proper etc.

23. Or, He is not a god. He is the lord of the earth. Why dost thou not conclude him (to be such) nor choose him etc.

24. The verse might be applied to each of the four gods, in which case the general construction would be:

"Wise maid, he is a god. He is not a lord of the earth. Why dost thou not conclude him (to be such).....? Certain it is, he is not Nala. He has a mighty radiance, looking like Nala to thee. If thou shouldst accept him not.....The अन्वय in this case is: विदुषि एष देवः, न धरा गत्याः पतिः।.....नायं नलः खलु। (अयम्) अतिमहाः, तव नलाभः (भवति)।

25. i.e., Nala.

26. See Appendix on philosophical allusions.

27. The hostility of Kali and his companion Dvāpara is described in Canto XVII. "Dvāpara" here means really "doubt", "uncertainty."

malevolent ages Dvāpara and Kali could not tolerate the marriage of Damayantī and Nala.

38. We know, at that moment, if ever, Cupid who has bewildering arrows, disquieting her simultaneously and separately with regard to each of the (five) Nalas, obtained a success for the number of his arrows.[28]

39. Damayantī never loved Nala for his beauty, she who rejected those gods who had Nala's beauty. Love of one being for another bursts into bloom, born solely of the maturity of one's deeds done in another birth.

40. "Where shall I get that bird[29] whom I might question? By its words I should know Nala as before." Thus the wavy-haired maid, her mind subject to Cupid, recalled at that moment the divine swan associated with Nala.

41. With a fervent ardour she looked at each of them over and again, but perceived no difference between them five. Then as if with a frenzied mind that raised a hundred doubts and again removed them, she said thus.

42. "There is a certain notion among people that there are two moons; but there is a cause for that error, the first being the pressing of the corners of the eyes, while the contiguity of transparent objects is the cause of the notion of image. But no reason is there for my illusion about the diversity of these.[30]

43. "Or, is the jovial Nala jesting with me, assuming a diversity of forms? Endowed with the power of knowledge, does he not perhaps possess this art, as he does the art of knowing the feelings of horses?

44. "Is one of them Nala? Is another Purūravas? Is another Cupid? Are the other two the Aśvins?[31] Am I not perhaps mistaking them for Nala, alike as they are by virtue of the pre-eminence of their beauty?

45. "Erstwhile too on every side did I see my beloved Nala, whelmed as I was with grief at his absence. Why hath that plight of mine returned again, by the play of which I see these unreal Nalas?

28. i.e., all the five arrows of Cupid seemed to have a simultaneous effect on her, a triumph, so to say, for the number five.

29. i.e., the golden swan.

30. She thinks she is suffering from a hallucination, in which Nala appears to her in five forms.

31. Cf. 10. 22.

46. "Why do I, deluded, thus make wrong surmises? Clearly it is such, a trick of Indra and the rest. For the goddess herself composed verses on them in such wise that they referred to the lords of the cardinal points[32] as well.

47. "How can any mortal sign be visible in my lord while he is amid these five who are deluding my mind? Alas, why is it that these gods bear not their distinctive marks, such as the possession of dust-free bodies?

48. "Shall I beseech the gods to give me Nala? Or, away with them, stubborn in spite of my daily worshipping them for Nala! Their hearts are dreadful, like caverns, the ocean of their kindness being dried up by the impact of Cupid's Withering Arrow.

49. "Ye gods, lords of the cardinal points, like as the beneficial mission of meritorious books, even after they have acquired a beauty of letters derived from reed pens, vanishes when the books fall into deep wells, to wit, into the possession of fools; so likewise, why hath your benevolent mission, virtuous as you are, disappeared, alas, even after you have assumed Nala's beautiful form.[33]

50. "What was written by God on the tablet of some one's forehead, though unsuitable, was bound to come about, removing something that was suitable for him. What desire should I now cherish in my heart? Not the rays of the sun, but snow consumes the lotus.

51. "That I am thus unlucky here I surmise from this: even the (all-giving) Kalpa tree when I ask for Nala becomes surely miserly towards me. Its hands, the tips of its leaves, have their fingerlike young shoots feverishly shrinking.

52. "Shall I put the garland of choice in the hand of the goddess,[34] saying, 'Whoever amid these is Nala, place it upon him'? But then I would make her the enemy of the gods, and I would not hurt a jewel of a friend for the sake of a mere straw, myself.

53. "What if I make the garland reach Nala, saying, 'Let him among these who is the real Nala accept this wreath in order that I may choose him' ? But how can I do so, discarding shame ? It would be ridiculous, alas, the entire assembly hearing my words.

32. Agni, Varuna, Yama and Indra.
33. Lit. a charm of complexion derived from Nala.
34. i.e., Sarasvati.

54. "But why does the last Nala, though just like the other Nalas, drench my heart with streams of nectar ? Or, perhaps, in spite of the similarity in letters between the first and the last word, the grace of the beauty of alliteration flashes in the last word[35] only."

55. Thus rejecting the surmises arising in her mind, Damayantī could not come to a conclusion with regard to any. Her face, with its joy marred by grief, resembled then the moon overpowered by the sun.

56. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra, etc. In his epic, The Story of Nala, full of sweet things, the thirteenth canto, an ocean of poetic emotion, has come to an end.

35. The last line of the verse is an example. Damayantī sets aside the possibility of the last one being the real Nala, as the last of a group has often a more delightful appearance than the rest.

CANTO XIV

1. Then in order to obtain Nala, Damayantī eagerly set about the gratification of the gods. The Creator made Surabhi the wish-cow of the gods; but he made the gratification of the gods the wish-cow for men.

2. The gods are a grove of all-giving Kalpa trees to us, bearing choice sweet fruits as a result of the provision of water-basins, namely, the ceremonial circumambulations to the right; and pourings of water, to wit, the offering of unguents and incense.

3. Full of faith, she bowed to the gods, uttering their names. The salutation of those who have faith in the gods is a synthesis of the components constituting an all-encompassing success.

4. As she, in her heart, visualised the omnipresent gods by force of meditation, her vision became to her a surety of the fulfilment of her desire. The gods, once seen, vouchsafe a noble boon.

5. There she worshipped them, while the people in the assembly looked on amazed. Flowers bloom when fruits are coming; the gods likewise rejoice when a result is about to be won.

6. She then worshipped them with hymns and bunches of flowers, fresh and delightfully soft; hymns pleasing by their clarity, and flowers by their purity; hymns joy-giving, and flowers sweet-smelling; hymns composed in metres regulated by syllabic instants, and flowers growing on Mālatī plants; hymns that had sixfooted verses accompanied by songs, and flowers that had singing bees.

7. Single-minded, she meditated on the gods, installing them on the lotus seat of her heart by mental concentration. The unclouded contemplation of the gods is the prelude to the attainment of a result desired.

8. Thereupon the four gods, pleased of themselves, were satisfied at that amount of her devotion. How much blowing would a fire need when it wanted to be manifest of itself?

9. Having obtained the favour of the gods, she recalled the manner of composition of Sarasvatī's pleasant speeches. The gods, indeed, when pleased, give nothing else than that they grant a well-ordered mind.

10. Keeping in view the last Nala,[1] she then connected with its special subject each verse, which was applicable to one or other of the gods, but was irrelevant with regard to any one else.[2]

1. i.e., the fifth or the real Nala.

11. At that moment she came to know that the verses (taken separately) referred to the womanly devotion of the regions of the sky to each of the divine regents[3] on account of the dependence of each region on one or other of them. But, taken together, they referred to Nala alone; even as the diverse regions, all combined, were subject to Nala alone.[4]

12. (Now) she surmised that each of the verses which was applicable respectively to Varuṇa, Indra, Yama and Agni, referred to Nala, when combined with the rest. Each one of the verses then served to single out a god who was not Nala.

13. When she concluded the last one to be the king, her heart was replete with joy. Pondering on Sarasvatī's way of speaking, she said with a mind submerged in an ocean of thought.

14. "Verily she has an extraordinary way of speaking. For she is Sarasvatī assuming a corporeal form. Speaking with a twofold meaning, she honoured Indra and the other gods, and singled out to me Nala as well.

15. "As a favour to me, she strung together four garlands of speech[5] to indicate Nala clearly. Two of them[6] could signify Nala. Lo, my own delusion was great.

16. "That those words of her conveyed a twofold meaning is verily the play of her poetic power. For even the divine lords of the regions, altogether different (from Nala), played the role of mortal kings.

17. "Did the goddess then approve the rejection of the four gods, Indra and the others, as they were being pointed out one after another? Did her pleasant speech, therefore, urge me towards Nala? O what a delusion came over me!"

18. At that moment Damayantī saw that the earth was not touched by the gods, who surely considered the Earth to be the wife of another holding with devotion the feet of her consort Nala.[7]

2. i.e., she now understood that the verses 13. 10 etc., though apparently applicable to Nala as well as the gods, referred only to the gods and not to Nala.

3. i.e., Indra and the other three gods.

4. i.e., while each of the divine regents ruled over one or other of the regions, Nala, being a king, was the master of all the regions.

5. 13. 28-31. 6. 13. 29, 30.

7. Nala being a king, the earth was his wife. The gods of course do not touch the ground when they are on the earth.

19. Coming to the fore, she saw in the gods no blink of the eyes, but noticed it in the king, as if it were saying, beckoning to her, "Come here, and be united with Nala."

20. The maiden perceived no dust of the earth on the gods, but saw it on Nala. Doubtless it was attached to him from the Earth while she gave him, her husband, an embrace.[8]

21. She saw on Nala, but not on the gods, perspiration that looked like a layer[9] of diamond on a beautiful surface of gold, as if it wished to abate within his frame, eager to embrace her, the heat caused by its separation from her.[10]

22. The maiden saw that the garlands of the gods were fresh; but that of Nala was fading, as if it thought, "Having won this tender maiden to-day, will Nala have any regard for me?"

23. She saw in Nala, but not in the gods, a gleam that seemed to declare, "How much will the gods assume of his beauty? Nala's gleam is still not theirs."[11]

24. The idea which had first risen in her mind about Nala corresponded with these signs. From the manifestation of these characteristics she knew also that she had obtained the favour of the gods.

25. Then love urged the damsel to place her wreath of choice on Nala, while shyness held her back. Equally did she bear the urge of both.

26. Eagerly she made a strenuous effort to make the wreath embrace her beloved. But from shyness and stupor, not even a slight stir was there in her lotus hand.

27. The beauty of an overlord came over the Sentiment of Eros abiding in her heart, which held a parasol, the dynasty of the moon,[12] and was made to rock like a swing by bashfulness and love.

28. Her hand, eager with the wreath of choice, going towards her beloved, stopped again. Her everchanging glance went half way towards her beloved's face, but back it came again.

8. Cf. Verse 18.

9. Lit. sprout.

10. Lit.....to abate the heat of his body caused by separation, (a body) desirous of embracing.

11. The gods have no shadow. Nala's shadow is fancied as a gleam. Chāyā means both 'shadow' and 'gleam.'

12. Nala, a scion of the lunar dynasty, is fancied as a royal umbrella under which love thrives like a king in Damayantī's heart.

29. Her heart had already reached her beloved, but her eyes could not move. The popular saying that shame abides in the eye was at that moment clearly made true by her.

30. Somehow casting a glance at the beauty of Nala's lotus face, the bashful maid half looked at that orb of the moon, Sarasvatī's face.

31. Perceiving those feelings of hers, the goddess spake thus to her feigning to be ignorant. "The screen of the wave of thy shyness doth not allow even me to discern thy thoughts."

32. No sooner did she whisper the letter 'Na', half of Nala's name, in the ears of the goddess[13] than she became overwhelmed with shame. She bent her head low, rubbing her fingers one against another.

33. Sarasvatī, taking hold of her hand, led her towards Indra with a smile. But Damayantī proved true to the significant name Perverse, common to women in general.[14]

34. The goddess started to take her to Indra (again), smilingly pulling her by the hand. At this she drew back her hand with a start, as if it had been placed by mistake on a serpent's body.

35. The goddess of well-being associated with the sovereignty of heaven grew jealous, when she saw Damayantī going towards Indra. But, affectionate to Indra, she was ashamed to see Damayantī then turn away from him.

36. "I heard thee say No in respect of Nala. So name some other suitor." Exhorted thus by the goddess,[15] Damayantī, tossed by the conflicting emotions of bashfulness and love,[16] indicated Nala with her eye.

37. While the gods laughed, placing their hands on the hands of the nymphs, Sarasvatī, fondly embracing Damayantī, and leading her to the middle of the passage running in front of the mortal kings and the divine lords of the regions of the sky, made her look like a travelling idol of the goddess Durgā.[17]

13. Lit. As soon as the letter.....was admitted into the ears of the goddess.

14. वामा "woman" means literally "perverse."

15. Damayantī had uttered 'Na' (न) in her attempt to name Nala. Sarasvatī pretends that it was a No, rejecting Nala.

16. Lit. Damayantī who was an arena of a duel between bashfulness and Cupid.

17. Durgā idols are still carried in procession in Assam and Bengal on the Vijayā Daśamī day. See, however, Vocabulary under पान्थदुर्गा.

38. Seeing her going unasked,[18] slowly and slowly in the direction of Nala, Sarasvatī turned her back from the middle of the way, wishing to take her again to those very gods.

39. But Damayantī repressed the close embrace of the goddess, even as a newly married bride does that of her spouse, briskly moving her lotus-stalk neck as she turned her lotus face away,[19] (a face) distinguished by[20] the humming noise of those bees who were her maiden friends.

40. The goddess, with the corners of her lips drenched with a smile, said then to Damayantī, who was by no persuasion willing to go towards the gods, "Thou with the orb of a face excelling the moon! what suspicion canst thou have towards even me?

41. "Without bowing at the feet of the gods, without fully obtaining their permission, how can thy desire to choose Nala as thy consort be proper in the face of the hostility of the gods?"

42. Once more taking Damayantī by the hand, who grew confident at these words, the goddess made her bow to the gods and said to them, "Your kindness she now deserves, devoted to you.

43. "Ye lords of the regions of the sky, this devoted woman chooses you not as her consort, for you are many; nor any one among you for fear of humiliating the rest. She seeks therefore to choose this king, who is but portions of yourselves combined in one.

44. "Long ago did the Creator bring about Damayantī's marriage by choice, through the (chance) contact of her wreath with Nala on the way as well as her dalliance of love through a (chance) embrace of Nala.[21] What then remains that you attempt so much to thwart it?

45. "Or, perhaps it was a desire to bring fame to Nala, never deviating, along with his subjects, from the path of observance of caste duties, that brought you to the earth, you who were pleased with this manner of his activity."

46. Sarasvatī took her to Nala, when the gods, on hearing these words, gave their permission with significant movements of their eyebrows, their lips playing with smiles in the orbs of their faces at these words of the goddess.

18. The reading अदेशिताम् has been adopted.

19. Lit. making her lotus face such that its stalk grew agile in turning aside.

20. Lit. marked by a symbol, the humming noise etc.

21. See 6. 49-55.

47. Sarasvatī brought Damayantī's hand, charming with a wreath of Madhūka flowers, near the neck of that moon of the earth.[22] Her hand was immovable even by Cupid, while she stood motionless with shame.

48. Round Nala's neck the bride then let fall the wreath of Madhūka flowers, decked with Dūrvā shoots, as if it were a line of letters offered in writing in token of her acceptance of him.

49. The king bore round his neck that wreath of flowers, looking like Cupid's noose, and beautiful with deep blue Dūrvā blades resembling in lustre the sentiment of Eros.[23]

50. Methinks, with a face downcast with offended pride, Damayantī jealously looked at that garland, which was flashing bright in contact with Nala's body, and had on it an emerging line of thrills, the tips of the Dūrvā blades.

51. From the mouths of the beautiful women of the city there went up a loud Ulūlu sound, a sort of auspicious song of theirs, the letters of which issued forth as if incoherent from joy.

52. The wreath of Madhūka flowers, resting on his spotless bosom, and mirrored on it, looked like a line of Cupid's arrows, partly lying on the surface and partly gone inside.

53. At that moment, while Damayantī's body bristled with thrills, all her hair seemed to stand on tiptoe, eager like children to witness the bridegroom's charm.

54. She, with the charming lips, brightly shone, all her limbs bristling with the tips of her hairs, as if she were Cupid's archery platform, bedecked with target poles.

55. At that moment did all her movements vanish, as if blown away by the gusts of wind loosed by Cupid's arrows. Or, perhaps were they for a moment cajoled away by Kali in order to make with them a vigorous effort to win her for himself.

56. While Cupid caused that perspiration in Nala's hand, which was touching the wreath bestowed by her, he was creating, as it were, the ceremonial palmful of water[24] for the coming marriage, a mighty festival.

57. Tender as she was, she resembled cotton wool. So it was natural that she should be shaken by the blasts of air from Cupid's

23. This is the conventional colour of शृङ्गार.

24. Ref. to the water poured on the bridegroom's palm by the bride's father in token of the bride being given away.

arrows. But a wonder it was that Nala, a great mainstay of the earth, should have a violent tremor on account of them.

58. The wreath of flowers, reflected in the tears of the (rival) kings, seemed to remain thrust in their very eyes, judging from the redness of them. But rightly were Nala's eyes wide open,[25] which seemed to drink in the wreath.

59. From the joy caused by the touch of Damayantī's hand, Nala was so greatly benumbed that he long resembled a pillar fixed for Cupid to aim his arrows at.

60. Close to him, the rulers of the regions of the sky, renouncing that beautiful form, now receding from them, assumed their own forms; just as someone resorts to begging, renouncing an empire; or goes over to old age, traversing the period of youth.

61. The erstwhile hidden (thousand) eyes of Indra, as he was casting off his disguise as Nala, appeared first, as if from a desire to see the beauty of Damayantī's emotions, each eye vying to be first.

62. She (now) saw an approaching sage, the founder of a family group, whom Indra, enemy to his own family, seemed to place in front of him as a noble friend, on account of the obstacle to Indra's marriage with Damayantī; for a marriage depends on the favourable character of the ancestral families of the bridegroom and the bride.[26]

63. Agni enveloped his body with shooting flames, as if he wished to destroy with torches the mighty gloom of the infatuation caused by his love.

64. Alas, Light, the companion of Agni, appeared faint in the day, as if it quickly hid itself from shame before the people, because Damayantī did not choose its master Agni.

65. Yama assumed a form, emitting gloom, and dreadful with eyes red as a cloth dyed with red lac, (a form) accompanied by a mace, as if he were then Wrath coming to occupy the hearts of the kings.[27]

25. Lit. The interior of the king's eyes rightly adopted a dilation. See also Notes.

26. e.g., the bride and the bridegroom should not belong to the same ancestral family or gotra. Indra, being a god, has no gotra: he is besides said to have destroyed his gotra, i.e., killed his kinsmen. Unable to satisfy gotra conditions, he brought with him a pravara or the founder of a family group as a substitute. See Notes for details.

27. i.e., the rejected suitors.

66. Citragupta, Yama's highly meritorious scribe, and the deep colour[28] of Yama's body which had been marvellously concealed came into view together. The former put ink on the surface of a writing leaf, which ink the latter claimed to surpass.[29]

67. The mighty Varuṇa shone forth, assuming his watery form, and bearing his noose fixed in his hand, the tie of his mind, slackened at that moment with regard to Damayantī.[30]

68. The lord of the waters was indeed without any companion, for he misunderstood the precept "One should come to a woman in the company of some one else", and thought "How can one, accompanied by one's wife, win another woman"?[31]

69. Thereafter Sarasvatī also manifested her divine form, pleasing to Viṣṇu. Perceiving her with her emblems coming into view, the maiden wondered no more at the manner of her speech.

70. Indra and the other gods, who were displaying this fun of transmutation of forms, in that onlooking assembly of heroes, caused, alas, the discomfiture of magicians, destroying the means of their livelihood.

71. Then looking at Nala and Damayantī, who attained the unattainable object of their desire, both charming with the emotion of their mutual love, Indra, the mighty sovereign of the Golden Mountain,[32] then said, delighted in his heart.

72. "Damayantī, so to thee is given this king, a boon that is rarely obtained. Nala, because thou sincerely executed thy mission,[33] here is my favour to thee—

73. "In sacrifices will I partake of thy oblations, assuming a form visible to the eye. Many doubt the existence of gods inde-

29. i.e., Yama's colour was blacker than ink.

30. Lit. bearing his noose fixed in his hand, as if it were related to the loosening of the tie of his mind, effected at that moment with regard to her.

31. Considering the weakness of human nature, moralists advise men to come to a woman in the company of some one else (सद्वितीय) Varuṇa, however, misunderstood the saying and took the compound सद्वितीय to mean "accompanied by one's wife", for the word द्वितीय means a wife. He thought सहद्वितीयः ससहायः meantद्वितीयया सहधर्मिण्या वर्तमानः. Varuṇa's epithet जलधिप "the lord of the waters" is here purposely used, as it sounds like जडाधिप "the lord of fools", "a master fool."

pendent of sacrificial formulas, not seeing any sacrifice partaken of by us.[34]

74. "When the end comes, be merged in Śiva and Pārvatī, thyself and thy wife. The anxiety 'What shall I be like at my death?' doth indeed oppress the heart of a sentient being.

75. "On the bank of the river Asi, near Vārāṇasī, a city will rise for thee to live in, called after thy name. For, if thou lived in Kāśī, desirous of salvation, the joys of Damayantī's company would be curtailed."

76. Then the god who is the mouth of the gods,[35] that are familiar with the taste of sacrifices, having wreaths of smoke for beard, said to Nala, "May thy prosperity be unbounded as the milk of that wish-cow, thy own vision of me.

77. "May my body which serves to burn and cook be subject to thy will. Becoming its master, do thou excel Cupid, whose body was destroyed by this very body of mine.

78. "Food, fish, drinks and the like, may they, prepared by thee, surpass nectar in taste. King, I know thy searching nature with regard to the culinary art."[36]

79. The god who is the son of the sun,[37] also pleased of himself, said to the king, "This my tongue hath long been eager to give thee a boon on account of thy deeds.

80. "Let all kinds of weapons along with their appurtenances appear to thee, the conqueror of enemies. Nothing higher than this is worthy of being attained by those whose life is consecrated to the hero's vow.

81. "Even if thou shouldst suffer the direst turn of fate, may thy heart not deviate from the law. The trio of virtue, wealth and desire appears to abide in the hands of one who forsakes not piety, and is not devoted to anything else."

82. Varuṇa, pleased at heart, spoke to the king words accompanied by a smile, "Having bestowed Damayantī on thee, I give thee now two boons by way of giving her a dowry.

83. "Wherever thou wilt, let there be water anon, even in a desert. Water doth maintain the life of creatures in the world in a way in which the other elements do not.

84. "At the mere exertion of thy will, let a desert, whose heat expands with the summer sun, turn into an ocean, and then again become the abode of camels as before.

85. "In contact with thy limbs, let there be freshness and a divine exuberance of fragrance in flowers. Nothing have I seen like flowers that produces both religious merit and bliss."

86. Smilingly did Sarasvatī, too, say in joy to the king, "Shouldst thou not accept something from me, bringing as I do delight to thy beloved?

87. "The wise should not despise a thing, though slight, which comes without one's asking. Offered by an honourable Fate, methinks, such a gift of love is worthy of a high esteem.

88. "King, reflect inwardly and meditate always on my pure mystic formula, which, without any form, embodies Śiva, and is accompanied by the moon,[38] and represents the form that goes by the name Pārvatī and Parameśvara, universal, but twofold owing to the union of two shapes, male in one half and female in the other.[39] May this formula prove effective to thee!

89. "The virtuous man who cherishes in his heart this my formula called Cintāmaṇi (Wishing-stone) becomes a master of eloquence with a speech drenched with the nectar of fully developed sentiments. He acts as Cupid in charming even the gazelle-eyed maids of heaven. No use speaking much. Whoso longs for a thing doth obtain it precisely with the help of this.

90. "If he who is solely devoted to me meditates on my figure composed of mystic formulas, concentrating his mind on me, and worshipping me with lovely flowers, perfumes and the like, as I ride my beautiful swan; and, if he, at the end of a year, puts his hand on the head of someone, whoever he may be, the latter, too, will of a sudden compose elegant verses. Worth seeing is the marvel of this particular form of mine.

38. The formula in question is ह्रीं which contains in itself Śiva's name ह्र minus the vowels. The formula being regarded as the embodiment of Śiva, it is described as being accompanied by the moon supposed to be on Śiva's head. The 'moon' (इन्दु) means also the Anusvāra of the formula.

39. The reference is to the Ardhanārīśvara form of Śiva, half male and half female. Sarasvatī's formula propounds the true nature of this form; and while repeating it, the devotee is to visualise in his heart the mysterious dual form embodying the male and female energy of the universe. See also Notes and Vocabulary under चिन्तामणिमन्त्र.

91. Ornament among kings! every day will I make Damayantī, famous as a woman, and an abode of virtues, devote herself more and more to the sport of clasping thy neck; cherished she is with emotion in thy heart. Everyday will I make also the Vaidarbhī style, famous among the styles, and an abode of merits, entirely devote itself to the game of word-play in the utterances[40] of the poetic narrator of thy life; it is replete with poetic emotion in his heart.

92. "For the joy of men, pure verses on thee will plentifully emerge from the mouth of the poet who, inspired by myself, will celebrate thy deeds. Like Viṣṇu, wilt thou be renowned as the holy-famed destroyer of the sins, brought by the Kali age upon the people of the mundane sphere."

93. The goddess and the gods then said (to Damayantī), "Say, what desired object shall we give thee, the crown jewel of the world? Nothing is unattainable to thee, who art chaste. Ah, let him who wishes to infringe thy vow be reduced to ashes!

94. "Astonished art thou to see us assume our (real) forms, discarding our disguise. In thy heart, too, let knowledge spring up to acquire its form, wisdom."[41]

95. While the gods betook themselves to the sky, having thus granted boons, there rose in a moment a mighty noise from the utterances of the attendants of the kings who were rising from their seats, the noise deepening with the sound of drums beaten by a multitude of gods.

96. The rival kings, in spite of their jealousy, did not impute any blemish (to Nala), which had no place in one who was virtuous and pure-famed; nor did they utter anything having semblance of martial ardour with regard to one who had obtained divine weapons by virtue of boons. But, with their sighs, they made Damayantī's heart full of a profound pity.

97. Turned by those kings into an incarnate deity of the river of the sentiment of pathos, Damayantī at once besought her father and made him give to them the worthy ones among her friends. The kings, too, held back their lives, which were bent on departure, because Damayantī was not theirs, out of consideration for those damsels, who constantly imitated their comrade, learning from her all her arts.

98. Alas, as Nala, equal to Indra in splendour and glory, was then about to start for his mansion, a shower of flowers fell from heaven, as if it were Indra's fame assuming a corporeal form, shedding tears,[42] to wit, the honey of the flowers, with bees dropping on it.[43]

99. At that moment the gods, leaving the king, a portion of their own selves, felt a pain that is caused by the mutilation of a limb. Sarasvatī, too, full of anxious thoughts as she was departing, looked at Damayantī, the abode of her own grace, turning and turning round.

100. On that festive occasion of giving a daughter in marriage, king Bhīma singly; Nala and Damayantī both, in order to wipe off the evil words of the (rejected) kings; and the kings, who were many, as they were going each to his own camp, all these played, played and played auspicious music in joy.

101. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra, etc. In the beautiful epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him, whose fine sayings are clear as the autumnal moonlight, the fourteenth canto, brilliant by nature, is finished.

42. Indra's fame is fancied as a woman shedding tears, because he was rejected by Damayantī.

43. The honey refers to the tears, and the bees to the collyrium paint applied to the eyes of a woman.

CANTO XV

1. The king of the land of Niṣadha,[1] honoured with that wreath of choice, then went to his tent,[2] showering vast riches on the panegyrists, particularly on those who sang Damayantī's virtues.

2. On the way he gave away gifts in such a manner that the heaps of jewels, left behind like straw by the minstrels feeling that tremendous burden, were long gathered in plenty by an eager crowd, as if they were grains of corn left behind by reapers in the fields.

3. "Should he[3] not be ashamed to have taken a woman in the open assembly?" "How can a person with excessive beauty be happy?" Such utterances of the sycophants of the (rejected) kings were drowned by the recitations of panegyrists and poets.

4. The imputation by enemies of petty faults that are untrue serve only to set forth the innocence of the good. If a charge were true, there would never be an attempt to attribute a false guilt.

5. The king of Vidarbha, too, in a cheerful mood, entering the inner apartments with his daughter, said to the queen who was in suspense, "Anxious one, accept thy son-in-law, Nala.

6. "In comparison with the lustre of Nala's body, Cupid is mere straw. He will sanctify our family with the splendour of his lineage. Our daughter alone knows how to single out such a suitor amid a gathering of the heroes of all the three worlds.

7. "Let gazelle-eyed women perform ceremonies, regulated by womanly convention, and befitting the auspicious occasion of a marriage. We shall carry out the injunctions laid down in the scriptures and the law books." Thus he said and went out.

8. The assembly of astrologers, looked at in the face by the king on going out, declared the astrological moment to be free from defects caused by the rise and fall of planets by virtue of its perfect qualities. Thereupon the king made preparation for giving his daughter in marriage.

9. He then sent word to Nala through a messenger, "Let my family and my daughter be favoured by thee. To-day, after a long space of time, let the sprout of our desire grow into leaf by virtue of the ceremonial water washing thy feet."

10. Hearing the echo of king Bhīma's words going up thus from the messenger's mouth as from a cave, Nala said, 'Here I go. I bow at the feet of my superior.' He sent back the messenger, liberally bestowing gifts on him.

11. The king of Vidarbha, when he heard the messenger's report, waited for Nala, full of esteem, even as the eager Cakravāka bird, hearing the crowing of the cock at the end of the night, waits for the sun.

12. At that moment, in one place, a woman expert in painting felt a certain pride, being selected (for the task).[4] Another, expert in making cakes, acquired a certain dignity by reason of her occupying a high seat.

13. The facades of all the houses of the city, tinged with a beam of joy, shone forth with the rays shooting from the gates of pearls and gems; (rays) assuming the sportive role of travellers.

14. At that moment, wreaths of flowers, out of season, and made with strips of cloth, were spread over the streets like a canopy, fearless of heat, and confounding even bees owing to their being so richly perfumed.

15. The citizens shone, covered with ornaments. The houses shone with their lustre heightened[5] by many-coloured paintings. In the city, the very form of the earth seemed to be transformed on account of the bejewelled floors of the houses.

16 Then rang bells in continual peals in the city. Harps sounded in highly swelling tones. Flutes reached a high pitch of intonation. Drums sounded unrestricted by any limit.

17. Lyres were not drowned by flutes, nor flutes by singers, nor singers by cymbals. Cymbals were not drowned by tabours, nor tabours by drums, nor drums by tambours, nor tambours by drums.

18. The far-spreading noise of the crowds, deepened by the sound of wonderful musical instruments, and mellow with its resonance on the waters of the ocean, more than filled[6] the ears of the elephants on the limits of the regions of the sky.

19. In conformity with family custom, lifting up golden pitchers, a multitude of matrons then bathed the princess on a raised platform, beauteously gleaming with decorative designs.[7]

4. Lit. put forward.
5. Lit. bathed.
6. Lit. was not contained in.
7. See Vocab. under चतुष्क.

20. With their mouths bent, the pitchers carried mango-tree sprouts, which seemed to be the gloom of their deep disgrace; for they were conquered and reduced by her breasts to the position of watercarriers, as if as a mark of their slavery.[8]

21. Drenched with water over and again, and becoming gradually radiant with a silk scarf shining white,[9] she, at that moment, perfectly resembled the meeting point of the rainy season and the autumn.

22. Radiant with a white-shining silk scarf, with her rain-cloud lock of hair dripping water, she at times resembled the sky, once made gloomy by rainclouds rent asunder, and (then) beautiful with the lustre of the moon.

23. Verily the lock of her hair, scattering for a moment clear running drops of water, shone forth, as if it were emitting white pearls of fame, earned by its conquest of the dark bushy tail of the Camarī deer.

24. Made brighter by the water on her body being wiped off with a tender cloth, she shone much like a golden image, glowing clear from being burnished with a stone.

25. If gold were to learn the art of being fragrant from the slightly opening flower-leaves of the golden Ketakī, it would acquire the grace of her limbs, redolent with beauty-paint, and shimmering with a gleam.

26. Expert in all the arts, the girl friends of Damayantī, who was taken to the middle of a bright platform, adorned her in a moment neatly on every limb by virtue of their long training in their art.

27. She who was beauty's climax even without any adornment was adorned by clever maids, and seen to be fairer. But who will have the skill to prove that she shone not by her adornment, but the adornment shone by her ?

28. On receiving an ornamental mark of red arsenic on the forehead, her face, embellished by her lips and eyes, surpassed in beauty the moon with a Campaka bud offered to it in worship,

8. Damayantī's breasts are imagined to have defeated the pitchers and made them their slaves. The customary mango leaves attached to the mouths of the pitchers represent the gloom of their disgrace.

9. Also,.....bright with the moon, her silken scarf.

after it has been worshipped with blossoms of the Bandhūka and the lotus.[10]

29. A certain damsel tied her lock of hair, a spray of flowers, softened by the smoke rising from the censer. Her hair was a mass of yarn for the making of the cloth of darkness enveloping the night of blindness brought by Cupid to her royal suitors.

30. It was after a long while that a girl, who repeatedly bound the fume of incense, taking it for a lock of hair, came to bind Damayantī's Cāmara-like hair, having inferred that mistake of hers from the smiles of her maiden friends.

31. Her wavy flowing hair, with buds of Karuṇa flowers then set in it, resembled the Yamunā undulating with dense ripples, that looks as if it were being dragged by Balarāma's plough.[11]

32. The gold band worn by her on the forehead was a flash of lightning accompanying the clouds, her hair. The lightning's permanence, maintained by nectar,[12] I surmise to be due definitely to its contact with the moon, her face.[13]

33. The curls of Damayantī's hair gleamed on the border of her brow-ornament, as if they were winding curls of sooty smoke issuing from that light, the ornamental mark of red arsenic on her brow.

34. The ornamental line drawn with collyrium (on her temple) brightly shone, reaching unto the corner of her eye. It seemed as if the Beauty of her youth[14] cast that thread to enlarge her eyes.[15]

35. That line was perhaps painted not with collyrium. It was a trail left by the sapphire-like pupil running to the eye-corner oft and anon with an amorous grace. Was it painted with the pupil's darkness-born gleam ?

10. The face with the ornamental mark on the forehead is compared to the moon worshipped with a Campaka bud, while the lips and eyes are compared respectively to Bandhūka and lotus blossoms.

11. See Notes.

12. Lit. The permanence of its life-span which resorts to nectar.

13. The face is the moon, and the gold band a flash of lightning made permanent by the nectar of the moon.

14. Lit. The second beauty of age.

15. The line in question is compared to a thread dipped in ink, which an artisan casts on a plane surface in order to have the impression of a straight line. Here the artisan is Damayantī's youth, whose motive is perhaps to reconstruct her eyes on a larger plane.

36. In contact with that line of collyrium, Damayantī's eyes acquired the beauty of two lotus blossoms, used by Cupid as his arrows, and imprinted[16] with the line of scars left by the bowstring on Cupid's hands.

37. The rent near the eyes of the black antelope bespoke the fact that the Creator wished to put out the eyes of the animal, thrusting his finger-nail into them, for their offence in bearing resemblance to Damayantī's eyes at the time of creation.[17]

38. Damayantī's ears, heavily pressed by the eyes,[18] installed on themselves two ornamental blue lotus buds, knowing them to be rivals of the eyes.

39. The two decorative lotus buds, worn by her, shone forth, as if they were the eyes of some onlooking appreciative swain, made blind by Cupid. The eyes dropped on her, and remained attached.

40. Cupid viewed Nala as his sole target, provided as he was with arrows, Damayantī's lotus eyes, appearing within the curve of a bow of Palāśa flowers, to wit, the radiance of the gems of her ear-rings.

41. Did her face, having conquered those moons, her jewel ear-rings, reported to be jealous of her face, bind them with the creeperlike ears, taking the ear-rings for two moons, without investigating whether the charge of jealousy was true or false ?

42. A girl friend, after she had made Damayantī put on the ear-rings, said to her, "Verily the contact of thy moonlike face with these ear-rings on either side will, in respect of the growth of love in thy beloved, have the same effect as the association of the moon with Venus and Jupiter[19] has with regard to the birth of a child."

43. The wax, applied to her lips for brightening the lustre of their red lac paint, shone forth, clinging to the border of her nether lip, eager to abide on the nectarlike lip, having forsaken honey.

44. Verily her throat resembling a young sapling, by virtue of its melodious voice, passed formerly for a lyre without any qualifying epithet. Then when it received seven pearlstrings looking like the strings of a lyre, it clearly shone forth, as a seven-stringed lyre.

16. Lit. touching.
17. Or, at the time of her adornment. Lit. at that time. Cf. 8. 38.
18. Eyes stretching as far as the ears are regarded as beautiful.
19. Supposed to bring luck.

45. The fair[20] maiden's arms, accompanied each by an auspicious conch bracelet, shone forth, as if they were each attended by a young lotus stalk to learn the art of being soft from the arms.

46. The fresh paint of red lac applied to her feet was at that moment surmised by people to be fresh sunlight, emerging after long embracing a pair of lotus blossoms, having parted with them at the coming of the night.

47. It was not red lac. It was clearly Cupid's glowing[21] fire, which, having offended the beautiful maid,[22] now[23] waited upon her feet, thinking of her union with her lover.

48. Since her limbs looked beautiful by themselves, and adorned each other, nothing could those adornments claim. Useless it was to make them.

49. Each successive feature of beauty, growing by degrees higher and higher, which she acquired in contact with her ornaments, broke the chain of the idea of limit, owing to (fresh) beauty coming and coming to the fore.

50. While she was looking at the reflection of her face on the gemlike surface of a mirror, she shone as if she, bringing her face close to the moon, measured the difference between the two.

51. The moon, defeated by her face, assumed a magic form, visible to those who have a notion of seeing two moons in the sky.[24] But, still was it defeated by her face, assuming a plurality of forms, in the mirrors, simultaneously displayed by two of her maiden friends.

52. (Amid the reflections) on the two mirrors held before her by her two friends, was only one her face, and the rest[25] lotus blossoms ? The flowers were seen to acquire a resemblance to her face, having ended their lives by nightly devotions in the midst of frost.[26]

53. She was surrounded by bows, the rays of the gems of her ornaments; (bows) with oncoming arrows, to wit, the bees coming

20. Lit. fair-toothed.
21. Lit. marked by redness.
22. i.e., while she was pining for her lover.
23. Lit. thereafter.
24. i.e., in order to surpass Damayantī's face, the moon assumed a dual form visible to certain people. See Vocab. under द्विचन्द्रधी.
25. Lit. the others which were many, i.e., the reflections of the faces of her friends.
26. Cf. 2. 39 and 7. 35.

to her, taking her for a wreath of Palāśa blossoms.[27] She then appeared to be guarded with hundreds of thousands of bows, because she was Cupid's treasure.[28]

54. Her beauty attained a rare excellence by her ornaments, as does the Gaṅgā with its special sites of pilgrimage; as does natural affection for someone by virtue of his merits; as does statecraft by brilliant turns of luck.

55. Wives of kings, who came to king Bhīma's great festival, bowed to Damayantī to avoid being made widows by Nala.[29] They bore on their heads the red lac of her feet, as if it were auspicious vermilion borne for the long life of their husbands.

56. Bashfully drooping, she then received, bowing as she did so, the blessings of her parents, Brāhmaṇas, and devoted matrons, which, by their unfailing nature, were equal to the utterances[30] conveying the boons of the gods when pleased.

57. At the same time, in the same fashion, servants expert in the art of decoration effected on their master Nala an adornment worthy of the festive occasion of his wedding.

58. The persons engaged in the work, pondering over and again, tied[31] the king's hair, which stole the grace of the feathers of moulting peacocks, left in deposit with it.[32]

59. Flower buds, coming in contact with his flowing hair, beautifully dressed,[33] acquired the beauty of Cupid's arrows, joined to the long polished string of his bow.

60. The king looked beautiful, adorned with a crown of priceless jewels on his head. A wishing tree he was to suppliants. So he seemed to put forth a charming spray of flowers.[34]

61. The halo of the moon, in the guise of a band of jewels attached to Nala's brow, shone forth, as if it could not encompass

27. Damayantī shining with gems is fancied as a garland of bright red Palāśa flowers.

28. Cf. 7. 19.

29. i.e., prayed that their husbands might not be killed by Nala in battle.

30. Lit. garlands of letters.

31. Also, "imprisoned."

32. Lit.....hair that concealed the fact of the deposit (with it) of the grace etc.

33. अजितमार्जनश्रिया is to be applied to both "hair" (कचेन) and "bow-string" (धनुर्गुणेन)

34. The jewels are likened to flowers.

his face,[35] which at that moment acquired a beauty greater than the moon's.

62. Verily, the circular ornamental mark on Nala's brow, near the eyebrows, looked like a shot kept ready near a bow;[36] (a bullet) of Cupid who wished to kill that swan, Damayantī's abounding strength of mind.[37]

63. The circular dot of sandal, which Nala's face surpassing a lotus blossom bore (on the forehead), resembled[38] some beauteous star abiding in the bosom of the moon.

64. 'Damayantī cannot be married to Nala until she goes through the ceremony of going round the fire'. Thinking thus, did Indra in despair[39] send the moon in the form of a dot of sandal, to decipher the Creator's script (on Nala's brow), and see whether she was 'on his forehead or not' ?[40]

65. At that moment, Nala's circular ear-rings, combined with their reflections on the surface of his cheek, acquired the beauty of four flashing wheels of Cupid's chariot.

66. The pearlstring attached to his neck, coming in contact with the fore-end of his chin, while he was bowing in homage to his elders and Brāhmaṇas, looked like a multitude of dense nectar drops oozing from the moon, his face.

67. Nala's arm, whence sprang his splendour, and by the resisting power of which he became powerful in battles, overcoming armies, and which fulfilled (the desire) of numerous suppliants asking for riches, assumed the character of the ocean. (The ocean, too, produced the goddess of splendour, Lakṣmī. By means of its elephant, Airāvata, Indra became powerful in battles. The ocean, too, fills up the clouds asking for water).[41]

35. Nala's face is the moon, and the jewel-band the halo of the moon. But as the jewel-band encompassed only the forehead, it is fancied that it could not encircle the whole face owing to the latter having a wider radius of lustre than the moon.

36. Nala's eyebrows are fancied as Cupid's bow, and the circular mark on his forehead as a shot kept near the bow. Lit. A shot in the shape of the circular ornamental mark.....

37. मानसौकसम् "swan" (acc.) qualifies also धैर्यभरम्—(भैम्याः) मानसम् ओकः यस्य धैर्यभरस्य तम्

38. Lit. made friends with. The last two lines of the verse may be construed as follows: (चन्दनबिन्दुमण्डत्वा) श्रियं श्रिता (सश्रीका) शशाङ्कस्य अङ्कवर्तिनी काचन तारका सखी कृता.

39. Lit. Indra's despair.

40. i.e., to see whether she was really destined to be Nala's. The expression is found in some modern Indian languages also.

41. The portion within brackets is derived by means of puns. See Notes.

68. Verily his arm became a divine tree, unceasingly fulfilling the wishes of suppliants. The pair of bracelets,[42] placed on his wrist, looked like a basin for water made round trees.

69. He shone forth, radiating his fame and might, in the guise of the white and crimson lustre of diamonds and rubies, visible[43] on the circle of his arm-ornament; (fame and might) earned by his conquest of the earth, and confronting all the ten regions of the sky.

70. When Nala saw the gleam of his appearance on the dense mass of the gems of his ornaments, which covered[44] all his limbs, he made useless the holding of mirrors before him by his expert attendants.

71. Not merely did the rejoicing people look at the gleam of the setting of his ornaments, the ornaments themselves, widening their gem eyes, seemed to look at one another's gleam.[45]

72. Delighted with the nuptial procession, and with his crown on, the king, who used to destroy in battle the conquering chariots of enemy kings, then mounted his chariot driven by Vārṣṇeya;[46] just as Arjuna, known as Kirīṭin, who killed in battle the enemy king Jayadratha, mounted his chariot driven by Kṛṣṇa and rejoiced in martial expeditions, accompanied by his followers.

73. The nymphs of the heaven Vidarbha, with their ornaments on, then brightened the highways evermore, coming from every house, to look in the eagerness of their hearts[47] at the radiant prince.

74. Eager to have a look, a certain woman of the city, without noticing even the scarf over her breasts, which was half blown away by the wind, displayed before him as he was proceeding the offering of an auspicious pitcher, her own bosom.[48]

75. A woman, while pointing out Nala to a friend, for a moment showered over him parched rice, namely, the pearls of her necklace, which got loose unnoticed by her, striking against the bracelet of her hand, which she had abruptly raised from her lap.

42. Lit. The bracelet having a second one.

43. To be connected with "lustre." Lit. present. 'White' refers to fame and 'crimson' to might.

44. Lit. clinging to.

45. विभूषणैरपि परस्परेण अन्योन्यस्य द्युतिरदर्शि Nārāyana.

46. Lit. that had Vārṣneya as the charioteer.

47. Lit. owing to the rise of emotion.

48. Lit. with one of her breasts.

76. The multitude of those young women served as auspices to the king while he was journeying,[49] for they had mirrors, their own flashing finger nails; lotus blossoms, their faces; flowers, their smiles; honey, their voice; and young leaves, their hands.[50]

77. Wishing to take the betel which was in her hand, a gay woman, whose lotus eyes were fixed in a gaze, thrust her toy lotus into her mouth, as if she were angry with it for rivalling her face in beauty.[51]

78. At that moment, a certain woman felt her view of Nala to be greatly obstructed by the daring embraces of a paramour, who joined her in the midst of the crowd while it was distracted, looking at Nala.[52]

79. Another woman with superhuman beauty,[53] who was eager to see, her eyes ceasing to wink, was prevented from passing for a nymph, simply because she touched the earth with the extremity of her feet.[54]

80. Another woman seemed to thrust[55] by force into her friends a joy exceeding the capacity of their hearts, with strokes of hands and shakings, calculated to warn them[56] that their ornaments had slipped off.

81. Did even the ears of the gazelle-eyed women who were absorbed in looking at Nala, turn absent-minded, gazing with their own eyes, to wit, the blue lotus buds decorating the ears? Was that the reason why their ears did not hear?

82. With their eyes[57] as with the hollow of a palm, drinking in Nala who seemed to be enveloped in clusters of ornamental gems

49. Lit. bent on going.

50. Lit.....women possessing mirrors in the shape of their....finger nails, lotuses in the shape of their faces etc. Mirrors etc. are lucky objects.

51. Lit.....as if in anger at its joint sovereignty with her face. The absent-minded woman swallowed the lotus instead of the betel.

52. Lit.....the crowd whose eyes were distracted through looking.

53. Lit.....possessing a physical charm ill-suited to mortals.

54. The woman was standing on tiptoe to look at Nala. But nymphs neither wink nor touch the earth.

55. Lit. caused to be contained as it were.

56. Lit. which were given by way of telling them that etc. The woman was drawing the attention of her friends to the ornaments which had slipped off in the bustle. She is, however, fancied as thrusting back into them their overflowing joy by jostling and striking them with her hands. The imagery is that of stuffing a receptacle with things beyond its capacity by thumping and shaking.

57. See Vocab. under चक्षुःप्रसृति.

up to the crown of his head, and mistaking him for Indra, the sovereign of the region that is the Veda-ordained result of the Soma and other sacrifices;[58] some of the women thought in their simplicity, 'Is he encircled,[59] by a thousand flickerless[60] eyes'?

83. The women said: "Perfect in his beauty, he hath now emerged to adorn the throne of Cupid, who was consumed by the fire of Śiva's wrath. With the lustre of his body he surpasses even Purūravas, Urvaśī's beloved, dear as her life, whose mother was king Sudyumna, transformed into a woman.[61]

84. "For the sake of this youth, rightly did Damayantī who is wise reject the suppliant Indra, the lord of all the gods. But, unbearable is the unbecoming attitude of the gods,[62] who, though known to be benign,[63] were annoyed[64] when she chose him as her consort.

85. "Why did not the lords of the cardinal points,[65] who witnessed Damayantī's wreath of choice playing round Nala's eager neck, rend with some weapon their bosoms, which burst not of themselves? How will Indra, alas, disappointed in his love for Damayantī, appease to-day his consort Śacī, bowing to her on his return, her lotus face turned aside?

86. "Think ye not, Damayantī is ignorant that fame is higher than pleasure. Rightly she refused to be made a second Śacī by Indra. Tell us, who ever composed a poem on the life of Śacī? But, who will not compose poems on her career, a current of the river of poetic emotion?

87. "Cupid of the earth, this youth delights our eyes with his beauty, created by Damayantī's religious austerities performed in many a birth. Let him to-day acquire a unique lustre,[66] enjoying his union with Damayantī, who was unattainable to Indra, the overlord of heaven, even with the wealth of his religious merit.

88. "Did the practice of the Creator, who unites man and woman, become mature in order to bring about the conjugal union

58. i.e., heaven. 59. Lit. embraced.

60. Lit. unwilling to wink. Nala adorned with gems is likened to the thousand-eyed Indra.

61. The king, while out in the forest hunting, was turned into a woman for entering a pleasure grove sacred to Pārvatī. Moon's son Budha happened to see him and begot on him or her Purūravas, the famous lover of Urvaśī.

62. i.e., the gods who had been Damayantī's suitors.

63. सुमनसः (good-minded) means also "gods."

64. दुमनसः (evil-minded)—here, sorry and angry—is contrasted with सुमनसः.

65. Indra and the other three gods.

66. Lit. a non-duality of lustre.

of this pair ? The creation of the profound love of this couple by Cupid was perfected by his play of inducing mutual love in men and women ever since the beginning of the world.

89. "We do think only those women whose eyes made the acquaintance of Puruṣottama occupying the platform, first of all, on the occasion of the great festival of the full moon in the month of Jyeṣṭha,[67] now see Nala going through the streets. The woman who bathed in the month of Māgha in the sin-destroying confluence of the Yamunā and the Gaṅgā, becomes (now) a queen[68] by virtue of those black and white whisks of Cāmara hair, to wit, Nala's glances playing [69] on her.

90. "On account of Damayanti's great love being directed to Nala, the course of her past action proclaimed the luck that attended him, the Indra of the entire circle of the earth; while the blessing given by Śacī, who was pleased, because Indra was not chosen, is a guarantee of happiness for the daughter of our king.

91. "Full of esteem for the kings, because they came for her sake, Damayantī rightly wiped away their disgrace, by rejecting the gods as well, even Indra.[70] Presenting herself to her husband as a gift from the gods, obtained through their favour, she removed all occasion for any talk of shame, anger or disgrace in respect of the gods as well."

92. Thus did the wives of the citizens speak, delighted to see that beauty of Nala, which was growing insolent on account of the perfect charm of the ornaments set on his every limb; who had hands fair as rubies, and went along, occupying a delightful chariot; even as the moon with rays fair as rubies goes to the pleasure hill of the east, on the border of the Nandana garden, riding on the air.[71]

93. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra, etc. In the epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him, mellifluous with profuse sentiments, the fifteenth canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

67. The reference is to a festival celebrated at Puri in Orissa, during which idols of Kṛiṣṇa, Balarāma and others are led out in procession on separate platforms. To witness this procession was to acquire great religious merit.

68. Lit. a woman king.

69. Lit. falling. The lucky woman who happened to be looked at by Nala with his dark and bright eyes is compared to a queen who is fanned with black and white tufts of Cāmara hair.

70. Lit. the gods including Indra.

71. I have followed the following construction — स्यन्दनं पवनमध्यास्य अधिष्ठाय आनन्दनं .. क्रीडाद्रिं यतः गच्छत इन्दोरिव. See, however, Notes.

CANTO XVI

1. Surrounded by chariots, the charioteer king[1] then started for the home of the king of Vidarbha, taking auspicious objects[2] with him, and in two ways putting the priest Gautama, a perfect knower of the self, to the fore.[3]

2. The mighty king was attended by moon-coloured Cāmara whisks, waved by gazelle-eyed maids, as if they were his own resplendent virtues, mirrored on his shining ornaments.

3. While Nala was proceeding, accompanied by forerunners who wore magnificent attire and ornaments, Indra, if he bore the name Sunāsīra,[4] did so by convention only.

4. That night the marriage procession, enveloped in darkness mingled with the dust raised by the army, shone forth, making lights superfluous, because of the jewels in the diadems of the kings forming Nala's vanguard.

5. The king of Vidarbha,[5] hastening on account of the close approach of the auspicious moment,[6] sent kings as heralds every moment, one after another, whose throng added to the immensity of Nala's army on the way.

6. The flags of the speedy-horsed army, billowed by the wind blowing in,[7] and looking like cloth-made lions, elephants and tigers, turned the sky into a woodland, animated by many-coloured China silk creepers.

7. The king then saw the entrance ground of king Bhīma's palace beckoning with the garland of flowers on the gate, which waved with the gusts of wind from the (flapping) ears of a row of elephants, as if it[8] were Damayantī's girl messenger calling him with her eyebrows.

8. Resonant with trumpets,[9] made to act as welcoming questions flashing across Damayantī's mind, the entrance ground shone

1. Nala.
2. Curds, rice, pitchers full of water etc.
3. पुरस्कृत्य meaning both "putting in the front" and "paying homage to."
4. i.e., Sunāsīra (one who has a good vanguard), an epithet of Indra, now befitted Nala more than Indra.
5. Damayantī's father.
6. The moment astrologically favourable for the marriage ceremony.
7. Lit. the blowing in of the wind.
8. "It" refers to the entrance ground.
9. Lit. Possessing the sound of trumpets which was made to act etc.

forth with the moving leaves of two posts of banana stems,[10] like a girl friend of his beloved, adorned with a flowing scarf.

9. In front of the royal palace the two royal armies, subdued with fear for their two disciplinarian masters, met each other without indulging in mutual slaughter, and uttered a swelling sound.[11]

10. The king of Vidarbha looked with joy at Nala, who politely came on foot from as far as the gate. Dama[12] welcomed him, going half the distance, and saying to him, 'This way', having indicated his kinsmen.

11. Rising and stretching out his arms in joy, king Bhīma then received Nala, now come, the worthy suitor of his daughter; just as the ocean, carrying a two-sided rush of waves, receives the flood of waters coming from the Gaṅgā.

12. Bhīma, the overlord of kings, master of vast armies, then fittingly gave his benign daughter, of perfect splendour, to the all-knowing benign Nala, the best of men.[13]

13. While Nala tasted the preparation of honey, curds and butter, offered to him, he gave rise to a surmise in the minds of the people, who were thinking of the future. "As he is going to drink honey, Damayantī's lips, he hath now made under that pretext an auspicious prelude."[14]

14. The bridegroom's hand had taken delight in slaying others.[15] The hand of the bride was a thief stealing the beauty of the lotus. Was it for this that their hands were tied with rough Kuśa blades, in the well-governed[16] kingdom of Vidarbha.[17]

10. It is usual even now, in some parts of India (e.g. Assam), to decorate the entrance ground of the bride's place with banana plants.

11. Lit. On the doorway took place the encounter of the two.....armies, (an encounter) which had no mutual slaughter, and in which there was the uprise of a widespread noise.

12. Damayantī's brother.

13. By means of puns, king Bhīma is indirectly compared to the ocean, "the lord of many a river," who gave Lakṣmī to Puruṣottama (i.e., Viṣṇu), and to the Himālaya, "the lord of the mountains," who gave Śivā (i.e. Pārvatī) in marriage to Śiva. It will be noted that वाहिनी means "river" in the case of the ocean, and "army" in the case of king Bhīma; while महीभृतां पतिः "the lord of kings" means also "the lord of the mountains."

14. i.e., Nala's tasting of the sweet 'madhuparka' is to be regarded as a ceremonial rite preliminary to his tasting of Damayantī's lips. See Vocab. under पुण्याहविधि.

15. i.e., enemies. पर means both "other" and "enemy".

16. Lit. that which has a good king.

17. The binding of the hands with Kuśa blades is a part of the marriage ceremony.

15. [18]

16. Nala's father-in-law gave him the wish-fulfilling wreath of Cintāmaṇi gems, worthy of the gods; which Śiva had given to king Bhīma, being his friend by virtue of the name 'Bhīma'.[19] The wreath was obtained by Śiva himself through his friendship with Kubera.

17. The wreath of Cintāmaṇi gems brightly shone, carrying within itself[20] all that is begged for by suppliants and due to them, in the guise of the reflections on it of the rare and huge mass of things, heaped up in order to present them to the bridegroom.

18. King Bhīma gave to the bridegroom Durgā's shining sword, which destroyed the Mahiṣa demon. Absorbed in dalliance with Śiva, the goddess had given it to Bhīma, who bore the same name as her consort.[21]

19. The bride's father[22] gave to Nala the sword which was formerly carried by Durgā, the enemy of the Mahiṣa demon. The sword, which rent asunder the foeman's limbs, was discarded by her right half, merged in the (left) half of her consort.[23]

20. The sword had a vow to become a mountain, where arose the sun of its valour. It had a woodland, the extremely dense pictorial designs on it. It had a brook, its blade made bright by whetting. It bore the morning twilight, the blood of wounded foes.

21. King Bhīma gave also a knife to Nala, which was beautiful with its sheath, and worthy of being grasped with the hand, as if it were Yama's tongue, sent by the eagerly suppliant god, to ask Bhīma for the hand of his daughter.[24]

22. The ornamental designs on the upper and lower portions of the blade of the knife[25] flashed, as if they were collyrium paint applied to the eyes of women, and decorative designs painted on their bosoms. It seemed as if those who were initiated into the vow of sleeping on the battlefield, as on the bare ground of a place of

18. Indelicate.
19. 'Bhīma' (terrible) is also an epithet of Śiva.
20. Lit. containing all that is begged for etc.....located within itself.
21. See Verse 16.
22. Lit. the giver of the bride (i.e., king Bhīma).
23. The reference is to the Ardhanārīśvara form of Śiva, half himself and half Pārvatī or Durgā.
24. Yama, it will be remembered, was one of Damayantī's suitors.
25. Lit. The upper and lower portions of the blade of the knife (with ornamental designs on them).

worship, presented these designs, which belonged to their own wives, as religious gifts to the knife.[26]

23. The chariot, which Agni had sent before to king Bhīma, professing friendship with him[27], being in love with his daughter, was now given to Nala by the king. It could traverse with ease mountains, oceans and impassable paths.

24. As the fact of this great chariot having an excellent charioteer was patent from Nala's connection with its poles,[28] so its excellence as great as that of Kubera's Puṣpaka chariot could be inferred from Kubera's own example.[29]

25. King Bhīma gave to Nala that jewel of a horse, which Varuṇa had formerly offered to him[30] to establish friendship with him; (the horse) who was originally given by the ocean to its master (Varuṇa) by deceiving Indra with the Uccaiḥśravas horse.[31]

26. The horse, who used to bring near by his speed the farthest limit of vision, making people impatient with an eager desire to look

26. The ornamental designs on the blade of the knife are fancied as the paint and pictorial marks no longer used by women, their husbands being killed by the knife in battle. As, however, the knife, by killing them in battle, sent them to heaven, the ornamental designs are imagined to be gifts made to the knife by the victims themselves, who are likened to persons engaged in religious rites.

27. See 5. 56.

28. Nala was famous as a charioteer.

29. There is a pun on पुष्पकप्रकृष्टता. It means both "an excellence like that of the Puṣpaka chariot" and "an excellence by virtue of (the possession of) the Puṣpaka chariot." It is fancied that the chariot given to Nala had the same qualities as Kubera, the god of wealth. Just as Kubera was पुष्पकप्रकृष्ट, (excellent on account of his famous Puṣpaka chariot), similarly this chariot also may be inferred to be पुष्पकप्रकृष्ट, which, however, means in this case "excellent like the Puṣpaka chariot." Throughout the verse an artificial comparison between Kubera and the chariot presented to Nala is sought to be established by means of puns. That is the force of कुबेरदृष्टान्तबलेन. The chariot was a महारथ (a great chariot); Kubera, too, was a hero known as महारथ (one who fights single-handed against ten thousand warriors). In the case of the chariot, there was "Nala's connection with its poles" (नल + कूबर pole + अन्वय); Kubera, too, had a paternal "relationship with his son named नलकूबर". One of the attributes of the chariot was "the quality of having a good charioteer" (प्र + सूत + वत्ता); Kubera, too, had "the attribute of having begot a child" (प्रसूतवत्ता = जनयितृता). Having thus compared the chariot to Kubera, the poet goes on to compare it to Kubera's Puṣpaka chariot. It may be added that, applied to Kubera, पुष्पकप्रकृष्टता means also पुष्पकविमानेन प्रकृष्टता तेनेद्यमानता.

30. See 5. 56.

31. i.e., the ocean gave the Uccaiḥśravas horse to Indra, reserving a better one for Varuna.

at him,[32] did not bring joy to their eyes so much as a great thirst,[33] through that same desire[34] to see him again.

27. King Bhīma gave to Nala a spitoon, which was very high and entirely made of rubies. Viśvakarman had cordially presented it to king Bhīma, perceiving Indra's esteem for him.

28. On account of its halo of rays, beautiful as the rising, high ascending sun, the people long thought, 'Is it full of the remains of chewed betel, thrown out by Nala, who is fond of betel'?[35]

29. The huge dish of emerald which the demon Maya, a worshipper of Lord Śiva, worshipfully offered to king Bhīma, who had the same name as his master Śiva,[36] was now given by king Bhīma to Nala.

30. The venom of serpents has no effect on peacocks, because they ever bear on their feathers the colour of this dish. Had Lord Śiva taken the Kālakūṭa poison on this dish, his neck would not have turned blue.[37]

31. That elephant whom king Bhīma gave to Nala, and who constantly poured rain, his ichor, as if he were the elephant of the sky,[38] was it the elephant of Indra, who fell from heaven, having offended the sage Durvāsas, rejecting the wreath of flowers offered by him?

32. With his flapping ears,[39] the elephant seemed to tell his fellows inhabiting the regions of the sky, even without any words, "Face me in the pride of your strength, or go afar off in terror, even beyond the border of the horizon, and live."

33. Verily the elephant bore his tusks as the root cause of his fame and his drops of ichor as that of the disgrace of his foes. With the toil of his ears,[40] he waited upon the Beauty of his head for her pleasure; (the Beauty) that had breasts, the temples of the elephant's head, and perspiration, the flow of his ichor.

32. Lit. making people slave to the eagerness of a desire to see.

33. तत्पांसुलकण्ठनालता means literally "the dusty-neckedness of them" i.e. the "thirst" of the eyes, the eagerness to see the horse again and again.

34. तयैव (दिदृक्षादरदासतया).

35. The ruby spitoon, though empty, seemed to be full of the scarlet remains of betel.

36. See Verse 16.

37. Lit. he would not have borne the attribute of being blue-necked.

38. i.e., the Airāvata elephant.

39. Lit. by means of the comings and goings of his ears.

40. i.e., with his flapping ears.

34. No one, however skilled, could count the horses given away by king Bhīma as ceremonial marriage gifts, nor the objects of gold, nor the spirited elephants, nor the heaps of jewels.

35. The Fire god, who had opposed the marriage of Damayantī and Nala, was afterwards appeased[41] and made agreeable by Damayantī. Then Nala, facing the fire god, went round him, keeping to the right.

36. Did the ceremonial utterance, "Be thou firm as a rock", after it had blessed Damayantī, quickly die away in shame?[42] A stone would move, even at a push given by mortals. But she was not moved from womanly dignity by Indra himself.

37. The priest (Gautama) then tied with a knot Damayantī's skirt to her beloved's scarf. All-knowing, he seemed to declare the future faithlessness of Nala, who would go away, cutting asunder the cloth (worn by them both).

38. Damayantī's consort, his eyebrows inclining towards her, pointed out the evening star and told her to look at it. Was not the tiny star[43] visible to her? Still the prestige of an act prescribed by the scriptures was maintained.[44]

39. The bridegroom indicated the Arundhatī star[45] to the bride, "Look at yonder Arundhatī, the devoted wife, diminished to an atom in the presence of one who hath spurned Indra for the sake of the king[46] cherished in her heart."

40. The grains of parched rice, let fall by her (on the fire), looked like flowers, while they were in her leaflike hands. Passing through the ether, on their way (to the fire), they acquired the beauty of stars. They flashed like a row of teeth in the fire, the mouth of the gods.[47]

41. The wreath of smoke from the burnt offerings, which she took up (with her hands),[48] acquired the beauty of musk paint on her cheeks. It looked like collyrium paint on her eyes. On her

41. Lit. was afterwards made favourable by propitiating.

42. The bridegroom asks the bride to stand on a stone, and be firm as a rock.

43. Lit. the smallness of the star.

44. Lit. proved true.

45. 'The morning star personified as the wife of Vasishtha'—Apte.

46. Nala himself.

47. Fire is so called, because offerings to the gods are made in the sacrificial fire.

48. This is a marriage custom.

ears it assumed the grace of a Tamāla spray. On her brow it looked like curls of hair.

42. The profuse perspiration on the hands of Damayantī and Nala, shy both of them, was lost to view, as it over and again mingled with the ceremonial water accompanying the gifts made by them. The streaming tears of emotion in their eyes were thought to be due to[49] the dense whiffs of smoke (from the marriage fire).

43. The beauty of their burgeoning thrills was lost amid[50] the thrills of the people, who saw then king Bhīma's liberality, as he gave away vast riches, as religious gifts.

44. The haste involved in the continuous performance of Vedic rites could not overcome the inertia that fell upon them; nor could the fire kept burning with sacrificial fuel, though it was in front of them, remove the vehemence of their tremors.

45. The priest (Gautama) brought the rites concerning Nala to a most successful issue, while he was married to Damayantī, even as the great sage Bṛihaspati did those relating to Indra, when he married Śacī.

46. Nala then went to the chamber of pleasure, which seemed to be turned into a thousand holes by women, in order to peep through them. Verily that chamber, occupied by the conquering hero, looked like the armour of the thousand-eyed Indra.[51]

47. The bride and the bridegroom did not eat with appetite from shame; nor did the one fully look at what the other did. For three days, as prescribed by the law, they slept with desire, but without enjoyment.

48. In one place, Dama, the young scion of the dynasty of Bhoja, made his subjects jest freely with the bridegroom's party, using a significant glance. In another place, he had the people coming with the bridegroom's procession served with food by maids who were nymphs of the earth.

49. To a certain guest he said, "Well, let some maids bring here some curry to suit thy taste. Let some give thee water, for thou art thirsty, and rice as well, just as thou wilt."[52]

49. Lit. were explained away by.....

50. Lit. was merged in the people who were thrilled to see etc.

51. Indra's armour had of course a thousand apertures corresponding to his thousand eyes.

52. Means also: "Let these maids here bewitch thy heart in a manner worthy of the beauty of their limbs. Desirous of kissing as thou art, let some offer thee their face, delightful in every way to the god of love." In this case,

50. [53]

51. A member of the bridegroom's party was saying (to two maids), "You two are my favourite mistresses." One of them, being told thus, put her pearlstring round his neck, saying, "Speaking like that, dost thou not look like a goat?"[54] Thereupon the other maid tugged at the pearlstring.

52. A girl, waving a feather fan over Nala, was laughed at by the people, as she cast off her skirt for fear of a lizard, which was secretly put on her feet by a maid of Dama, and which quickly went up the whole length of her leg.[55]

53. A mischievous maid spread out a seat of animal skin, meant for Brāhmaṇas, with the tail to the fore; and a simple Brāhmaṇa of the bridegroom's party seated himself on it. But, making him rise, pleading her ignorance, she laughed, adjusting the seat with the tail turned back.

54. A certain fellow had a mirror secretly put from behind by some one else between the legs of a beautiful girl of the bridegroom's party, whom he himself kept rapt in attention by his talk. Then smiling, he looked at the mirror.

55. Created by Cupid, those maids whose beautiful eyes were eager to entertain, and who banished the strength of one's patience with their graceful movements, frequently made the onlookers laugh, as they disturbed into emotion the members of the bridegroom's party.[56]

56. A youth smiled; and a maiden, who smiled, too, with the lotus-stalk neck of her lotus face sidewise moving, verily pierced a target without being in front of it, driving the smile into his heart.

57. Leaving what she should have done, a maid did something else. She restrained her eye, which was eager to see. That very fact, full of meaning, declared to her lover the entire message of her heart.

तेमनोपहार .....(तेमन+उपहार) is to be construed as ते मनोऽपहार....; अङ्ग रुचे: should be combined into अङ्गरुचे: (यथोचितम्); सवतोमुखम् "water" should be separated into सवत: मुखम्; while कामम् (adv.) ओदनम् should be combined into काम-मोदनम्.

53. Vulgar.

54. The man had said युवामिने मे. This, however, sounded like the bleating of a goat.

55. Lit. which had a speed traversing the length of her leg.

56. Lit. they from whom took place the emotional disturbance of the members etc.

58. A rash, venturesome fellow kissed the face of a girl while she in a bending posture gave him water. Applying a slow hand to his feet, while she poured water on them,[57] he waited for another opportunity to deceive the eyes of the crowd.

59. Looking at a youth, a clever maiden formed round her maiden friend, a moon as it were, a halo with her lotus-stalk arms. Lo, though it was loose, it assumed in his eyes the character of a fast embrace.[58]

60. Grievously hurt by Cupid's arrows, with tremors and thrills clearly visible, one fellow took shelter at the feet of a maid with smooth eyebrows while she gave him water, being mirrored[59] on the transparent nails of her feet.

61. A fair maiden smiled, inclining her face. Bashfully she remained with face downcast. She spoke in a soft faltering voice. This a youth took as a surety of winning her.

62. Looking at a maid who was waving a fan, a youth whelmed with emotion heavily perspired. He raised his neck, pretending to feel hot, and looked at her face, overcoming shame.

63. Made restless by the breeze of her fan looking like an agile leaf of her creeper arm, which softly touched her bosom, the youth resembled a bird, confined in a cage made of diverse reeds.

64. There was such a sweep of glances and such a manner of speaking that, in the mutual entreaties of the youthful couple, not even the slightest work was left for a messenger to do.

65. One fellow, in an ecstasy of joy, failed for a moment to drink the palmful of water applied to his lips.[60] Instead he kissed, on the water, the reflection of the face of a girl, who was beaming before him, with eyebrows like to Cupid's bow.

66. The members of the bridegroom's party got angry, when an emerald dish was put before them. But they were told, "It is not offered to you, full of raw vegetables. It looks like that because of its green colour."

67. A youth, who truly was polite, asked a woman something while she stood before him, smiling as he spoke, without looking at her face. His eyes were fixed on the middle of the space between her legs on the crystal floor.

57. Lit. the feet on which water was falling.

58. Lit. The halo formed by a clever maiden with her.....arms round that moon, her friend etc.

59. Lit. in the guise of his reflection on the.....nails of her feet.

60. Lit. mouth.

68. The people eagerly ate rice, which was unbroken and entire, with the grains distinct, and vapour playing over it, and retained its softness. It was excellent in taste, white, fine and fragrant.

69. While a fair youth cast repeated sidelong glances at a maiden, whose breasts were slightly budding with youth, a heavy-bosomed woman, deeply ashamed, took up the scarf of her own bosom, which was of itself slipping off her body.

70. The maids, serving milk-rice to the guests, made it look like an expanse of sand alongside streams of clarified butter, which was surely fragrant,[61] because in its origin the first cause of it was the divine cow Surabhi (Fragrant).

71. Butter may be inferred to be sweeter than nectar, though nectar hath never been drunk by mortals. For the gods, who feed on nectar, long for butter, even though its fragrance is destroyed by the sacrificial fire.

72. "She failed to understand my hint, hidden from her by her own bashfulness. Perhaps she knew it, but paid no heed." A girl, going a few steps, and turning back, destroyed this notion of a youth with the arrow of a wistful glance.

73-4. Who did not take there, with a hissing mouth, a preparation of black mustard containing curds, shaking the head, and scratching at an unsuitable time the head and the palate, owing to the sharp pungent taste?

The preparation was white, first mild, and then burning, as if it were a portion brought from the cold-rayed moon, whose beams become sharp, in order to consume separated lovers. It was like an insincere man, friend first, and then foe.

75. A couple, in their first youth, concealing their feelings, cast glances on each other's face over and again, after these had wandered over sundry objects at random.

76. Eagerly eating the mild curry, cooked with deer flesh, the guests seriously thought, 'Was it cooked with the nectar-juiced flesh of the deer in the moon?'

77. The closing of the eyes for a while by a youthful couple, whose mutual hints did a messenger's task,[62] made the people conclude that the hour of worshipping the god of love had arrived.

61. Lit. made it an expanse of sand on the bank of the stream of the mass of that butter which was fragrant etc.

62. Lit. the task of whose messenger took place from their mutual hints.

78. A gallant asked a maid whether the day or the night was suitable for love-play, putting his hand on the hot and the cold dishes by turns. The clever maid, bashfully rejecting both day and night, put her finger on her nether lip, sweet as the evening glow.[63]

79. [64]

80. A guest leaving some rice (on the dish), and drawing some towards him, asked a maid with this coming and going of the hand, "Shall I come, or wilt thou come?" At this she bent her face in shame.

81. As the guests mistook a preparation of meat for one without meat, and had the delusion that a preparation without meat was one of meat, the clever cooks, laughing at them, treated them to wonderful dishes, prepared with diverse ingredients.

82. Giving, with a fingernail, the shape of a lip to a tender piece of seasoned flesh under some pretext, a youth bit it with his teeth, and praised its taste; while he laughed looking at the waitress's lips.

83. The people ate many a seasoned dish, wondering at the things produced out of season, such and such being made by combining numerous ingredients, and such and such produced by cutting and pounding.

84. A guest, who had quenched his thirst, said to a maid, 'I am thirsty', looking at her face. She wished to take the water jug again in her hand, but abruptly turned back owing to the laughter of her friends.[65]

85. A youth, wishing to take up some clarified butter which was in a bowl, saw there the image of a gazelle-eyed maid. When he put his hand on the (reflected) knot of her skirt, the reflection of her figure showed distinct thrills.

86. A guest, pretending to take the broth, kissed the reflection of a maid[66] on the oil in the broth, repeatedly touching it[67] with the tips of his fingers, which on that account seemed to turn red, being put in his mouth.[68]

63. This indicated the evening twilight as the right time.
64. A variant of 78.
65. The guest really wanted a kiss.
66. Lit. a maid reflected on the oil etc.
67. i.e., the reflection.
68. रक्त means both "red" and "fond."

87. Far from being able to eat, the people could not even count the mild, savoury and flavoured curries, which were prepared with fish and the flesh of deer, goats and birds.

88. A certain fellow had been rejected before by a maid, slightly knitting her eyebrows, though he had made entreaties with flattering words and gestures. But she took pity on him, assuming again a gracious look, when he put his fingers into his mouth[69] by way of eating.

89. There the water, contained in a golden jar, was made cool as ice with draughts of air, and fumigated with fuel of aloe wood. Drinking it, the guests thus described it again and again—

90. "Creator, it was well that thou didst create water as 'nectar' and made it 'life'.[70] But in vain didst thou give it an all-confronting face; for those who drink it should also have been likewise formed."[71]

91. "Friend, give him rice"; "Give it to him yourself"—wrangling in this way, two maids served no rice to a guest who, shaping his hand like the cup of a lotus,[72] repeatedly asked for it, though there was sufficient (on his dish).

92. A guest looked at the covered bosom of a maid, who was giving him water, and thought 'How large are her charming breasts?'. To him her beautiful hands seemed to give a reply, upholding the golden jar.[73]

93. In king Bhīma's mansion, the guests, to their heart's content, ate sugar that seemed to be blended with a stream of snow, and curds prepared from the milk of buffaloes with fullgrown calves, as if it were the ooze extracted from a lake of nectar.

94. Resorting to magic, the Creator, his tongue moving with greed at the sight of curds, patently stole portions of them here and there, dotting the curds with holes through and through.[74]

69. This is regarded as a mark of humility. Cf. 12. 96.

70. अमृत (nectar) and जीवन (life) are synonyms of water.

71. सर्वतोमुख "water" means literally "that which has its face on all sides." The guests wish to have more than one mouth to enjoy the taste of the water better.

72. The breasts of young women are often compared to lotus buds.

73. This is one of the objects to which a woman's breasts are compared.

74. It is fancied that the Creator while creating curds could not resist the temptation of stealing portions of them, and so left behind the holes visible in a solid mass of curds.

95. "Thou dost not give what I like. Of what use is sugar that has no 'colour' ?" [75] To a guest, who spoke thus, a maid with Bimba lips gave a piece of meat, shaped like a Bimba fruit, and it proved appetising to him.

96. A man with insight, who simultaneously made gestures to two maids, both friends, gave up the one who responded to his gestures, and took a fancy to the other who, being clever, made no sign, and even deterred her fellow from so doing.

97. A maid, perceiving the gestures of a youth, said to her companion, "He does not tolerate thy desire to serve the dishes one after another. Why not give him, an eager suppliant, the preferred dainties in the opposite order ?"[76]

98. The feast,[77] adorned with cream-balls, shone forth with the reddish hue of the balls produced in cooking; as if it were the surface of a writing leaf, covered with circles, signifying that those who partook of the meal were coming to an end of their eating.[78]

99. Not only did a gallant kiss the features of a maid, an Urvaśī of the earth, mirrored in the cup before him. But he also repeatedly produced the sucking sound of kissing, pretending to drink the wine.[79]

100. The waiters, who were clouds, as it were, carrying rainbows, by virtue of the lustre of the ornamental jewels of their moving hands, showered before the guests sweetmeat balls with the scent of camphor, like hailstones with the gleam of the sun and the moon.[80]

101. The guests in satiety said again and again, "How many of these seasoned dishes are to be given to us?", whereupon the waiters skilfully gave them those balls of sweets, like numerous pieces of chalk, with which to reckon the dishes.

75. राग "colour" means also "passion."

76. i.e., all at once. The meaning implied by puns is obscene. See Nārāyaṇa's commentary.

77. This has been supplied. The subject (व्यञ्जनम् or भोजनम्) is understood.

78. Lit. occupied by a circular terminal script in respect of the eating of those who were eating. The cream-balls served at the end of the meal are compared to the circular marks resembling the Nāgari छ, which are put by scribes at the end of a manuscript.

79. Lit. beverage. The reference to wine is not clear. See also Notes.

80. श्रित-चान्द्र-सौरभा is to be construed also as श्रित-चान्द्र-सौर-भा. See Vocab. under चान्द्र.

102. A gallant composed a commentary on his own heart with hundreds of appropriate gestures in an attempt to solve[81] the riddle of a clever maiden's skill in concealing her feelings.

103. A youth placed two balls of sweets on the bosom of the gleaming figure of a woman, reflected before him on a bowl overflowing with clarified butter. Then he scratched the balls with his finger nails, and crushed them without pity.

104. A girl bashfully turned her face away, when a fervent lover looked at her with a smile. But her friend brought from somewhere a doll of sugar, and smilingly put it in his hands.

105. The guests, unable to eat more, having eaten much, left heaps and heaps of seasoned dishes. It seemed they did not eat at all, content to have looked at the beautiful waitresses.

106. A youth who had expressed his feelings with diverse gestures, was saddened by a maid, who remained indifferent to him. Despairing of her, he looked towards another. But, ah, when the first became angry at this, it was she who delighted him.

107. The banquet looked like a beloved woman, pleasing to the guests. The milk was its smile; the pastries its decorative scarf. The mass of lentil balls was its moonlike face. The plump sweetmeat balls were its breasts; the shining rice its pearlstring.

108. A youth, who besought a maid for a long while with hundreds of significant gestures, had long been rejected by her, making angry signs. But, when he folded his hands by way of washing them, she splashed him, slightly jolting the stream of water (which she poured out to him).[82]

109. During the banquet, the six varieties of relish did not bring to the gallants as much pleasure as the seventh one, which emerged freely, born of the graceful movements of the multitude of youthful maids, and moulded of a boundless sentiment of love.

110. The followers of Nala, after putting the betel in their mouth, threw away the betel leaf when they saw a scorpion made of spices, placed inside the betel-roll by Dama. Struck with terror, they made every one laugh at their mistake.

111. Showing two heaps of jewels, real and false, the one

81. The girl's uncertain attitude was the riddle which he tried to solve by appropriate gestures, i.e., he expressed his own feelings clearly to elicit a response from her.

82. i.e., in token of consent.

beautiful, but the other charming,[83] king Bhīma said to the guests, 'Take one of these.' When they wanted to take the latter heap, he laughed and gave them both.

112. Thus they passed a few days in joy, feasting on pure and delicious preparations, twice in the day; while at night they were gratified by the caresses of courtesans sixteen years old.

113. Nala stayed five or six nights in the house of the king of Vidarbha, after he had married the slender maiden. He then set out for the land of Niṣadha with her in a chariot, driven by Vārṣṇeya.[84]

114. 'None other has the right to touch her. My beloved is a child, and the chariot is high.' Saying thus, Nala himself made Damayantī mount the chariot. None could say that he embraced her in the presence of the people.[85]

115. 'Smooth and soft, she will slip from the embrace of her beloved. He fears to hold her tight with his arms'.[86] So thinking, the ready-witted Cupid made Nala and his bride rough with an exuberance of thrills.

116. Were Damayantī's parents aggrieved, after they had sent away their daughter nourished in their bosom since her birth, in the same way as they were, after they had bidden farewell to their son-in-law, whose merits were increased a millionfold by his modesty ?

117. Like as the ripples of a tank return from the shore, with the waters moving, after they have followed a (shoreward) wind, so did the king of Vidarbha, following Nala, come back from the boundary of his kingdom, with his face downcast, after he had a pleasant talk[87] at the time of return.

118. With tears in his eyes, he bade farewell to his daughter, saying, "Now is thy own religious merit thy father; forbearance thy remedy against peril; contentment thy wealth; and Nala thy all. From now, child, I am no one to thee."

83. Lit. extremely beautiful.

84. Lit. the reins of which were taken up by.....

85. i.e., in reality he embraced her while helping her to get into the chariot. Nārāyana says किलेति व्याजे । तत्त्वतस्तु जनसमक्षमालिलिङ्गैव.

86. Lit. her beloved, whose arms are afraid of pressing (her).

87. This is the meaning of चटुलापतां गतः, applied to the king of Vidarbha. Applied to कल्लोल, it means चटुला आपो यस्य तद्भावं गतः.

119. Doing only what pleased her, her beloved long solaced her in her grief, as she remembered her father. But the inner[88] fire of her grief, caused by her separation from her mother, subsisted even in the great ocean of her beloved's love.

120. Just as a mountain, adorned with numerous minerals, acquires a certain beauty from its valley, where antelopes gaze and elephants roam, and which runs along[89] bordering hills; so the king, adorned with many an[90] ornament, acquired a certain splendour in the company of Damayantī, who waited upon him at his feet, and had an antelope's eyes and a sedateness of gait.[91]

121. The goddess of prosperity, married by Nala long before, gratified Damayantī by all manner of fulfilling all her desires, renouncing a co-wife's spirit of rivalry, as if she wished to retain the affection of the king, now solely devoted to Damayantī.

122. Nala came in sight of his city. It had gates with rows of sapphire wreaths, as if it were his beloved consort, with the curls of her hair hanging in neglect, owing to his absence. Standing on tiptoe, the city seemed to look at him with its lofty houses.

123. The glance which Damayantī furtively cast at her beloved, thinking his attention was slighty diverted by looking at the city, met midway Nala's suddenly returning eyes.

124. Like as the spring accompanied by the beauty of flowers, meets the eagerly curious bees that come one by one; so did Nala, charming with his bride, meet his ministers on the way, jewels of the city, and eager with curiosity.

125. He told them, who were restless with eagerness to hear, something of the events that befell him; and hearing from them something of the events that occurred in his own land, he entered the city.

126. In every street, the unmarried daughters of the citizens, tender as lotus-stalks growing on waters full of nectar, then bowed to the king, saying 'Victory to thee'; while they adored him with grains of parched rice, which seemed to be[92] buds of flowers put forth by their creeperlike arms.

88. Lit. submarine fire.
89. Lit. serves.
90. Lit. adorned in many ways (बहुधा तु मण्डितः).
91. Lit. the abode of an antelope's eyes and an elephant's gait.
92. Lit. grains of.....rice resembling.....

127. For a moment, the 'moon-chambers', on the top floors of the edifices of the whole city, proved true to their name,[93] being in contact with the moonlike faces of the women of the city, eager to look at the newly wed Damayantī's radiance.

128. Yonder blue lotus blossoms, the eyes of the wives of all the citizens,[94] dusty dry with an unusual eagerness, drank in the nectar of the beauty of Nala's moonlike face; nectar that came through lotus-stalks, namely, beams (of their eyes) shooting through the window lattices of the buildings.[95]

129. Nala entered the palace, newly built for Damayantī, accepting the scented grains of parched rice which fell from the leafy hands of the crowds of women on the high buildings, like showers of flowers from the gods above.

130. The great gods, after they had cheerfully witnessed from the sky the wedding of Nala and Damayantī, their journey in the same car, and their mutual glances, slightly timid, seemed at last to make up their minds to go to heaven, full of joy.

131. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra etc. In the epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him, and honoured by the people of Kāśmīra, who are conversant with the fourteenfold science,[96] the sixteenth canto is at an end.

93. See Vocab. under चन्द्रशाला

94. Lit. blue lotus eyes.....with pollen flying up on account of their dustiness (i.e. dryness) caused by.....thirst.

95. On the beams of the eyes see Appendix I (8. 3). The imagery is that of drawing in water with the mouth through porous lotus-stalks during water-sports. It is possible also to take the rays as referring to sun-beams coming through the window lattices, against which the eyes of the women were set.

96. See Vocab. under विद्या.

CANTO XVII

1. The gods, after they had gone through the labour of running to the earth almost in vain, then went away as they had come, bearing the semblance of the waves of the ocean.

2. They never grieved for having given Damayantī to that king, though she was long cherished in their hearts; just as one feels no regret for having bestowed on a pupil knowledge, long stored in one's mind.

3. The radiant gods occupied brilliant aerial chariots, even as the reflections of the sun occupy the slopes of the Mount of Crystal.[1]

4. Their chariots, which forcibly dragged by force clouds behind them, with the gusts of air caused by their speed, seemed to declare their own speed to be greater than that of the wind.

5. The smallness of the forms of the gods, as they got farther and farther away, clearly looked, as if it were their power of becoming tiny, detached from the group of eight attributes[2] possessed by them.

6. At one point a streak of cloud, raked by the points of the chariot flags, provided their chariots with a yellow banner by a flash of lightning.

7. The rainbow across the ranks of clouds, which on the way returned again and again, became a decoration accompanying Indra's chariot.

8. The connection of clouds with thunder grew up, I ween, from the reflections of Indra's thunder, which then appeared in the waters of the clouds.

9. In one place, Yama's mace, coming in contact with the sun, made it look like the family umbrella of the kings of the dynasty of Manu.[3]

10. Varuṇa's noose looked as if it were an ear of Heaven, without any ear-ornament, which slipped off while the Heaven shook its head, amazed at the love of Damayantī and Nala.

1. The Kailāsa mountain.
2. See 21. 160.
3. These kings claimed descent from the sun. The mace with the sun above looked like an umbrella.

11. The fire-god, who, mounting the shoulders of the wind, appeared with his flames briskly dancing, made the gods think that he had won Damayantī as his bride.

12. On the way, Sarasvatī delighted the ears of the (four) gods, which suffered from the absence of Damayantī's voice, with the notes of her lyre, an inferior substitute.

13. The gods then saw an approaching multitude dazzling as a sword, like ether incarnate, coming with a fond desire to bid welcome to them.

14. The gods saw Cupid coming in the front of the crowd, as if he were put to the fore by Kali in order to teach people sensory indiscipline.

15. Cupid's companions are people who despise their lives for the sake of forbidden women. They disregard fear and shame. All their wealth is consumed by bawds.

16. Cupid assumes the role of the conqueror of the world, as if to rival Buddha.[4] He plays the role of the creator in the world, as if to equal Śiva, though he is devoid of any corporeal form.

17. Cupid has made woman his weapon, overwhelming Śiva's creation, the entire universe; as if he recalled his enmity with Śiva.

18. Cupid caused a distaste to the eyes of Indra and others, which had absorbed Nala's beauty, incurable even by the physicians of the gods.[5]

19. The gods then saw Wrath, flinging about anything and everything, trembling, springing up, and red, shouting abuse for miles.

20. Wrath was attended by people whose eyes seemed to learn their redness from the blood of their lips, cut by their own teeth.[6] They emitted gusts of breath which seemed to be hisses of snakes, their frowns.

21. Resorting to the invulnerable heart of the sage Durvāsas, impenetrable even to Cupid's arrows, Wrath desires to consume the worlds including Indra himself.

4. One of the epithets of Buddha was Lokajit "conqueror of the world." He was besides Cupid's adversary, having foiled him in his attempts at temptation.

5. The two Aśvins. They, too, were famous for their beauty.

6. Lit. the blood of the cuts on their lips caused by their teeth.

22. Wrath, though he produces a deep redness (in the complexion), brings paleness (in the end).[7] Though he burns aflame, he begets a darkness which envelops all the senses.

23. When Wrath subjugated Śiva,[8] while the latter was enraged at his own inability to conquer Cupid, he[9] adopted the precept which says, the right moment to conquer an enemy is when he is attacked by others.

24. In that crowd the gods saw also Greed stretching out his hands to the wealthy. He was timid and faltering in speech, expressing his plaint with significant gestures.

25. His followers are poor and thievish; always sick from gluttony. They cast significant looks at people who are eating.

26. Greed is a drought, drying up the ceremonial water preliminary to a gift, poured by the rich on the palm of a worthy suppliant.[10] Lo, he sells his poor[11] kinsmen to the rich like slaves.

27. Greed cares not a straw for Wrath, nor Cupid, who cause respectively one and two of the five great sins, while Greed prompts to commit all the five.[12]

28. Greed, though he abides in all the senses, resorts chiefly to the tongue, there to tutor suppliants in the art of flattery.[13]

29. Lo, they saw also blind Delusion, who never follows the right path nor the counsel of friends. Once he has clung to the void, he leaves it not.

30. The worshippers of Delusion are fools, immersed in the mud of worldly cares. They remember not Śiva, though life may depart to-morrow.

31. Delusion, like collyrium paint, manifestly soils even the radiant hearts of those whose souls possess the inextinguishable lamp of knowledge.

7. वैराग्य (lit. lack of colour) is contrasted with रञ्जन. It means usually "indifference"; here "repentance".

8. Lit. on account of his victory over Śiva.

9. i.e., Wrath.

10. Lit. Greed acts as a drought in respect of the pouring of the.....water by the rich, etc.

11. The reading निःस्वान् has been adopted.

12. The five great sins are (1) killing a Brāhmana, (2) theft of gold, (3) drinking wine, (4) adultery with the wife of one's teacher, (5) complicity in these. Of these wrath causes only the first, while Cupid causes adultery and the murder of the husband of the guilty woman.

13. Lit. in skill.

32. On him depend Wrath, Greed and Cupid, all three; just as religious students, recluses and ascetics depend on the householder for their living.

33. Delusion is sleep to those who wake; blindness to those who see; foolishness in the presence of scriptural knowledge; and darkness where there is light.

34. Cupid was not ashamed to conquer the world, already killed by Delusion who cultivates the principle of darkness; just as Arjuna was not ashamed to vanquish the army of the Kurus, destroyed beforehand by Śiva.[14]

35. Some of the persons (in the crowd) were recognised by the gods owing to their previous acquaintance with them; others were not, being black up to the crown of their heads with a cloak of sin.

36. Then when the army of Kali drew near like an overflowing sea, the gods heard some one's words jarring on their ears.

37. "Ye wiseacres, the truth of the scriptures propounding the results to be obtained from sacrifices, is like that concerning the floating of stones on water. What faith can be put in them? They have obstructed the path of desire.[15]

38. "A certain Bodhisatva[16] was born by virtue of his innate excellence to break up the mystery of the Vedas. For he said the world is transient.[17]

39. "Bṛihaspati says 'Oblation in the fire, morning and evening, the system of rules built up by the three Vedas, the carrying of three sticks tied into one, and the bearing of browmarks of ashes are the means of livelihood of those who are devoid of wisdom and manhood.'

40. "Since purity of caste is possible only in the case of purity on each side of both families of the grand-parents, what caste is pure by the purity of limitless generations?

41. "Who has not contracted sin in contact with women? Alas, people fast under a delusion, and bathe at sacred places. The world's religious vows have been destroyed by lust.

14. It is said that Kuru soldiers were pierced by Śiva with his trident before Arjuna hit them with his arrows.

15. The speaker is a Cārvāka or a heretic.

16. Buddha in a former birth.

17. i.e., everything being momentary, heaven and other results aimed at by Vedic sacrifices could not exist. The Cārvāka often cites Buddhist doctrines in his support.

42. "Fie on those who boast of family dignity! They hold women in check out of jealousy; but do not likewise restrain men, though the blindness of passion is common to both.

43. "Abstention from the wives of others? This hypocrisy was disregarded by Indra himself, eager for amorous dalliance with Ahalyā, Gautama's wife.

44. "Ye Brāhmaṇas, give up the notion that it is a sin to commit adultery with the wife of one's teacher. Your master himself had a violent mania for the possession of his teacher's wife.[18]

45. "The scriptures say, 'A person, when dead, suffers on account of sin, and enjoys happiness for religious merit.' But we ever see before us just the contrary. Tell us now which evidence is the stronger.[19]

46. "If sin is to be avoided inspite of the uncertainty of rebirth,[20] then O Brāhmaṇas learned in the Vedas, give up the long sacrificial sessions to avoid the risk of sin in killing animals in the sacrifice.

47. "Vyāsa himself, who deserves your homage, wellversed as you are in the three Vedas, said that it is commendable to accept a woman when she is under the influence of passion.

48. "Why do you esteem virtue, and not amorous dalliance? A man should do what tends to increase his happiness in the end.

49. "Commit sins by force. Will not your sins be deemed uncommitted? Manu declared all offences committed by force to be as if undone.[21]

50. "You who are in possession of traditional lore, doubt not this meaning of your own religious texts. Freely indulge in whatever pleasure you desire.

51. "Is there ever any unanimity among the learned in expounding the sense of the scriptures and the law books? Interpretation depends upon the force of intelligence. One that conduces to pleasure is not to be neglected.

18. The moon, called the king of the Brāhmaṇas, had amorous relations with Tārā, the wife of Bṛihaspati.

19. i.e., the direct perception of things actually happening in life is more conclusive than a dictum of the scriptures about events to follow after death.

20. According to those who believe in rebirth, sin is to be avoided, because the kind of birth in the next life depends upon the quality of deeds performed in this life.

21. The Cārvāka misinterprets Manu who meant offences committed under the force of circumstances.

52. "What have you to do with sin, once the body is burnt, about which body one has the idea that it is the self?[22] If there were a soul, the existence of which is testified to by a source of proof apart from the body, would not the results of one's actions appear anywhere and everywhere (in the next life)?[23]

53. "Away with the story of the wicked that after death one remembers one's past lives; that after death there are waves of consequences of one's previous deeds; and that the dead are satisfied when others eat for them.

54. "Strange. The scriptures, most cunning, prompt them who know the body to be the soul, to renounce the body; saying, 'Thou art not it'; and make them accept something else.

55. "Of two results in doubt, one is sure to be. When the desired one comes about, the swindlers[24] attribute it to their incantations and the like. When it is otherwise, they declare that these were incomplete in details.

56. "Coward, what burden will thy individual sin add to the One Soul, propounded by the Vedas, which is already sinking in eternal suffering on account of the sins of all?

57. "Of what use to thee are flowers removed from their stalks? It is on the stalks that they grow into fruits. Put them[25] on thy own head, if they are to be put on the head of a stone,[26] no way different from thy head.

58. "Spurn all censorious statements about women as not worth a straw. Why dost thou constantly cheat people when thou, too, art as bad as women?

59. "Ye fools, carry out Cupid's command, obeyed even by Brahmā[27] and other gods. The Veda is the command of the gods. Which of the two commands is then worthy of greater respect?

22. i.e., if one holds the view that there is no soul apart from the body, the question of rebirth and suffering the consequences of one's evil deeds does not arise, owing to the destruction of the body at death.

23. i.e., the souls being released from their respective bodies at death would lose their identity; and there being nothing to distinguish one soul from another, the consequences of the actions of one man would be suffered by anyone and everyone else.

24. i.e., the priests.

25. The reading followed is न्यस्य ते.

26. e.g., the sacred Śālagrāma stone or a stone phallus of Śiva.

27. See 1. 47.

60. "If you consider some portions of the Veda to be meaningless,[28] through what mischance do you not regard likewise the toilsome injunctions as meaningless?

61. "Ye whose intellects are fattened on the Mīmāṁsā philosophy, ye have faith in the scriptures. But misguided, you say yourselves, the scriptural injunction to give (to the priest) the cloth wrapped round the sacrificial post is an interpolation.[29]

62. "How can people believe in the other world on the authority of the Veda, which says 'Who knows what is in the other world?'

63. "Declaring that virtue cannot be acquired and vice cannot be avoided, Manu fraudulently seeks fines for the state. The learned have put faith in him in vain.

64. "Ye are experts in reasoning indeed. For ye put faith in Vyāsa[30] on his own word! Who will talk with you, fishes, fit to be advised by a fish?[31]

65. "Vyāsa was an intelligent poet, good at flattering the Pāṇḍavas. Did he not censure when they censured; and praise when they praised?

66. "Did not the same Vyāsa, out of lust, have relations with the wife of his brother? He was then attached to a slave girl. Did his mother enjoin him to do that as well?[32]

67. "Those who have for guide in worshipping gods and Brāhmaṇas the works composed by these very gods and Brāhmaṇas, have they not, bowing to a cow, clearly degraded themselves below the cow?

28. Certain statements in the Śruti literature, taken separately, appear to be meaningless; but these, too, are defended as forming Arthavādas with an eulogistic or commendatory design.

29. The Vedic text enjoining this gift is regarded as an interpolation made by the officiating priest for his benefit. The Cārvāka opines that it is absurd for those who have implicit faith in the Veda to treat some of its injunctions as interpolations.

30. This is a reference to the low origin of Vyāsa, the reputed author of the Purāṇas.

31. The reference is to the Matsya or Fish Purāṇa, revealed to Manu by Viṣṇu incarnate as a fish.

32. The Cārvāka misinterprets the Mahābhārata, according to which Vyāsa, at the request of his mother Satyavatī, begot sons on the widows of his half-brother Vicitravīrya who had died without any issue. One of the widows, however, sent a slave girl as a substitute, disguised as herself.

68. "Well indeed have those otherworldly fellows, ready to perform sacrifices, renounced their passion. For even after death they long for heaven, the quintessence of which lies in its gazelle-eyed nymphs!

69. "Ye arrant fools, of what use is quietude? Try to gratify your mistresses. Will a creature, once he is reduced to ashes, ever return?

70. "Even the sage Pāṇini opined that both sexes should indulge in passion, when he said that salvation was for eunuchs.[33]

71. "People who plunge into sacred pools of water to go to heaven[34] look like sheep stepping back to charge forward to the fray.

72. "Meaningless is the threat that a man becomes an animal (in the next birth) as a result of such and such sin. Even the harmless Rājila snake is like a king, happy with his own sources of joy.

73. "If persons killed in battle sport in heaven, let the demons killed by Viṣṇu fight with him even in heaven. For, though they were killed, they are just as before.

74. " 'During earthly existence there is the individual self as well as the Absolute, but when salvation comes the Absolute alone exists'—in this declaration that salvation is the annihilation of the self lies the skill of the exponents of Vedic lore.[35]

75. "He who propounded a system of doctrines to prove that the salvation of sentient beings is a condition similar to that of stones is exactly as you know him to be, a perfect ox, when you have examined him.[36]

33. Lit. the third sex. The Cārvāka misinterprets Pāṇini's rule अपवर्गे तृतीया, which says that the third case-ending is used to indicate the completion of an action (अपवर्ग). But as अपवर्ग means also 'salvation' and 'the third (sex)' refers to eunuchs, the Cārvāka interprets the rule as above.

34. This is sarcastic. Lit. people who "sink" in order to go up.

35. This is an attack on the Māyā theory of the Advaita Vedānta. The latter, however, does not propound the reality of the individual self, the annihilation of which is therefore a fiction.

36. The reference is to Gotama, the founder of the Nyāya philosophy. There is a pun on his name गो-तम, lit. a perfect ox. The Cārvāka ridicules his doctrine that the destruction of all particular attributes (pleasure, pain, etc.) is salvation; and compares this colourless condition to that of a stone.

76. "The wives of Viṣṇu, Śiva and others are entirely devoted to them. Why have they not attained salvation? Why are they in Cupid's prison?

77. "If there is an all-knowing kind-hearted deity with words that never fail, why does he not fulfil our desires, suppliants as we are, by a single word of his?

78. "Causing pain to worldly beings, even though it is caused by their own actions, God would be our enemy unreasonably; whereas others become enemies for some definite reason.

79. "Owing to the unstable character of all reasoning, is there any whose opinions, mutually opposed, being equal in force,[37] will not be baseless; like 'a fallacious inference with a contradictory reason on the opposite side'?

80. "The hot-tempered ascetics teach others abstention from anger! Themselves poor, they teach alchemy for money.

81. "Why be charitable? It is the miser whom the goddess of wealth favours. The foolish Bali, giving away all his wealth, made himself a prisoner.

82. "Everyone squeezes the rich and envies them at heart. Few if any are abstemious, and renounce the turbulence of greed.

83. "Abstention from stealing means a long lease of life to poverty, while the taboo on certain kinds of food involves cheating the stomach. So take to indulgence, the one root of the plant[38] of joy."

84. Hearing these evil words, Indra became angry. He said aloud, "Who, who is this cutting at the very vitals of religion?

85. "Who doth so speak, while I, Indra, with hands flashing with thunder's might, govern the three worlds, which see with the Vedas for their eyes?

86. "Thou wretch, see as a proof or otherwise of class purity or caste continuity the failure of Brāhmaṇa-murderers and the like to satisfy trial by ordeal.[39]

87. "That a person committing adultery with a distinguished

37. Lit. owing to the equality of each other.

38. Lit. sprout.

39. Or: take the failure of....murderers and the like to satisfy ordeals as a proof in the matter of class purity or caste continuity or otherwise, i.e., if class purity did not exist, the murderer of a high caste man would not be detected as such in ordeals.

woman, as a Brāhmaṇa woman, does not win in an ordeal, shows that the entire generation of that caste is pure.

88. "It is a shame that the correct finding of the ordeals of water, fire and the others, which were revealed by the Vedas, doth not remove the heresy from thy mind.

89. "Ye heretics, doth not the activity of the results of previous deeds shown by the uncertainty of offspring, although there has been intercourse, and cases like that, rend your hearts?[40]

90. "Why dost thou not believe the stories, known to the people of various lands, of spirits begging for the performance of Gayāśrāddha for them, entering into some one's body?[41]

91. "Why dost thou not believe the true stories of the other world, which people, taken away by the messengers of Yama owing to a confusion of names, relate on their return to the world?"

92. The god of fire blazed in anger, and said, rebuking the Cārvāka, "Ha, what sayst thou, what sayst thou so freely before us?

93. "Thou who faintest from the effect of a momentary fast! art thou not astonished to think of those who practice the mighty Parāka fast[42], and live by the sheer force of the revealed religion?

94. "Are not the sacrifices with visible results the suns of victory over those Mandeha[43] demons, your own doubts about religion—sacrifices for the birth of children, destruction of enemies, and coming of rain?"

95. Yama brandished his mace and covered the sky with sparks of fire; then uttered (fierce) gusts of words, as if stung by the Cārvāka's utterance.[44]

96. "Stop thou, stop. Here will I wound thy throat and lips by force; thine, thou cheat, wickedly haranguing this assembly.

97. "Thou heretic! Who will renounce his belief in the other world on thy word alone? It is attested by the Vedas, and like the Vedas, by hundreds of doctrines following them?

40. This is a reply to the Cārvāka's assertion that the results of one's deeds do not subsist after death.

41. This is a reply to Verse 53.

42. See Vocab. under पराक.

43. The Mandeha demons are said to attack the sun who has to conquer them before he can rise.

44. Lit. Yama, covering the sky with brandishings of his mace, gave rise to waves of words, as if pierced in the vitals.

98. "Why dost thou not follow the same path with regard to the other world as thou dost in this world: when thou art faced with a difference of opinion between two groups of travellers having an equal knowledge of the way to be followed; the one small, and the other large in number?[45]

99. "What man will not have a firm belief in the other world, having found a consensus of opinion among all, on the subject of marrying one's daughter to some one else?[46]

100. "Those who reject all established opinions lose their ground, when even one of these opinions happens to be true. In view of this, there might be (sometimes) a simple failure of a religious rite. But the mishap preventing success is never due to religion.

101. "From the unanimity of all in some matters, and on account of the risk from non-compliance in others, all ought to remain true to the Vedic religion as well as to its supplement;[47] for the latter, too, was produced by the former."

102. Then said Varuṇa, red with rage, in a merciless tone, "Thou wretched atheist, art thou not afraid of my terrible noose?

103. "Ye fools, how is it that the holy stone,[48] marked in its hollow with the figures of tortoises and the like, and impossible for men to make, does not make you believe in the traditional path?

104. "Ye heretics, how is it that the popular tradition about names such as Indra 'the performer of a hundred sacrifices', the Vaiśya caste 'originating from the Creator's thigh', has not astonished you by its conformity with stories found in the Veda?

105. "Why do ye disbelieve the Vedas, when ye even see spirits craving for the performance of Gayāśrāddha and other rites, having entered into possession of diverse persons?

106. "Renounce not the Vedas, since you see souls, who are taken to Yama through a mistake of names, and then come back to their respective bodies, and tell stories of the other world."

45. i.e., in religious matters it is safer to follow the opinion of the majority than sectarian doctrines like those of the Cārvākas.

46. i.e., one should acquiesce in the general opinion about the existence of the other world, just as one follows the general custom of giving one's daughter in marriage to some one outside one's own family.

47. i.e., the Smārta religion.

48. i.e., the Śālagrāma stone.

107. Some one then stepped forward from Kali's army, which was paralysed at the angry outbursts of Indra and the other gods. He said thus to the gods, holding his folded hands on his head.

108. "Ye gods, I am not guilty; I am subject to others. I am a panegyrist of the Kali Age. My tongue[49] is fluent in flattering him."

109. No sooner did he speak these words than the gods saw Kali, seated in a chariot, and another, Dvāpara, before them.

110. Surrounded by diverse Sins, Kali raised his neck like a sinner in hell, and looked at the gods who were astonished at the magnitude of his splendour.

111. He assumed first an attitude of utter contempt. But, overpowered by Indra's radiance, he bowed his head like king Triśaṅku.[50]

112. Approaching with an air of disdain, Kali, in the intoxication of his pride, addressed the gods, who were unwilling to look at him; just as a drunken Caṇḍāla speaks to Brāhmaṇas who disdain even to look at him.

113. "Hail, Indra! Art thou at ease, Agni? Friend Yama, art thou happy? Varuṇa, art thou enjoying pleasure?

114. "We are speeding to choose Damayantī as our bride in the Svayaṁvara festival. Permit us to follow the path which goes there direct."

115. The gods treated with contempt his baseless overweening pride. They spoke to him after a long while, smiling and looking at one another's face.

116. "Never, never say that again. How wilt thou marry, whom the Creator created as a devout holy bachelor?

117. "Brahmā will consider thee to be a rebel, when he hears that thou hast broken thy vow. But, even thy servants can transgress the Creator's command; why not thyself?

118. "We are coming from the Svayaṁvara. The event has passed, wounding the pride of the youths of three worlds.

119. "While serpents and gods in love looked on, Damayantī chose a great mortal king as her spouse.

120. "Damayantī considered the serpent kings to be mean;

49. Lit. mouth.

50. The king whom Viśvāmitra tried to send to heaven, but who was ousted by Indra.

the other mortals to be apes; and the gods to be lowborn. But she thought Nala radiant with virtues."

121. Hearing this, Kali became utterly blind with rage. Looking like Śiva on the night of the universal destruction, he spoke to them thus.

122. "Brahmā may sport with any damsel, and you yourselves may toy with celestial maids. But Kali should observe the celibacy of a religious student, or even die, to the utter satisfaction of you all!

123. "What line of conduct do you follow, preaching virtue to others, but yourselves doing all that the ears dread to hear?.[51]

124. "Nala obtained in the Svayaṁvara the beauty of the earth and you the world's shame. Your gain and Nala's, indeed, appears to be the same![52]

125. "Seeing us from afar, rightly you turn your faces away; for you are ashamed to look us in the face.

126. "Ye fellows, why did ye stand by, looking at that happening? Improper it was. Why did ye not consume the foolish girl with your eyes burning with rage?

127. "Strange; how did she accept Nala, fickle though great, taking a fancy to him, and slighting the highborn gods?

128. "How did you tolerate that weakling, the disdainful Nala, while he took for himself the gazelle-eyed damsel, who was being sought for by the lords of the regions of the sky, as you are?

129. "Why did not the terrible god of fire, though bearing witness to their marriage, act like a false witness, resorting to fraud?

130. "Alas, just as (the shadow of) the earth has become the dark spot of the divine moon, so your forbearance, even though you are valiant, has led to this disgrace.

131. "Why are ye jealous of me, while ye spare him whom she chose? Tell me. This very day I will by fraud tear her asunder from that guilty wretch.[53]

132. "Endeavour to help me. Let us five[54] enjoy her, sharing her among us, as the five Pāṇḍavas did Draupadī."

51. e.g., Brahmā's passion for his daughter, Indra's adultery with Ahalyā, etc.

52. This is a play on the similarity in sound between श्री (beauty) and ह्री (shame).

53. Lit. abode of guilt.

54. Kali and the four gods.

133. Unable to bear the stupidity of the loquacious Kali, Sarasvatī pierced him with her weighty and severe words as with arrows.

134. "It was to give fame and Damayantī and boons to Nala that the gods went to the Svayaṁvara. A superficial intellect doth not comprehend the cleverness of the wise."

135. Tongue-tied, and unable to answer the eloquent goddess, Kali spoke to the gods alone, passing over Sarasvatī with a playful look.

136. "I too have now renounced all desire for Damayantī. But I have not even a trace of kindness for Nala.

137. "What can I do, now the act is over, since I was not there at the time? But, hear now my timely decision.

138. "Ye who are wise, know this to be my vow, mine, Kali's, with regard to Nala. Deprive him I will of Damayantī, and his kingdom as well. Vanquish him I will.

139. "Lo, let the worlds celebrate my enmity with Nala, adorned as my valour is with a wild wrath, as they do the sun's hostility to the night lotus blossom."

140. With applause, Dvāpara inflamed Kali's perturbed mind. Indra then said, putting his hand on his ear.[55]

141. "Thou hast a mind to wonder at! Thou dost rightly discern shame in us. But the fact that one gives little to one who is great does put one to shame.

142. "Nala's pious devotion, a hundredth part of which gives the highest good, to wit, virtue, wealth, desire and salvation, became fruitless, being placed in us.

143. "Kali, unworthy is thy resolve towards the pure-hearted Nala. The moon of the land of Niṣadha is as great as the divine lords of the regions of the sky.

144. "For thee, Kali, we see no means by which thou canst get within the king's defence: he hath accumulated all religious virtues. Nor do we see any luck for Dvāpara's intent.

145. "Ah, the perfectly virtuous Damayantī cannot be oppressed by fellows like you, addicted to futile mischief; even as well-disciplined right knowledge cannot be disturbed by errors, grasping meaningless unrealities.

55. This indicates astonishment and horror.

146. "The Golden Age is worthy of vying with Nala, and the Silver Age with Damayantī, who as well as Nala doth possess a unique, shining religious virtue; but not ye two, Kali and Dvāpara.[56]

147. "Thou dost say 'I will surely do it.' But thou art wrong even though thou art purposing to do it. The seen and unseen causes of an effect are not under thy control.

148. "He who under a delusion would do wrong to Nala, would soon, by reason of the injustice, undergo the suffering resulting from that very crime.

149. "Kali, this thy grudge against him is not fitting. This enmity of thine with Nala will not be to thy good.

150. "At this very moment renounce the unholy idea, 'There will I go,' lest thou shouldst appear ridiculous in the royal court, when thou reachest there.

151. "Thou canst not enter into possession of Nala and Damayantī all at once, simply by going there; just as the letter 'ḍa' cannot at once get into the group of letters ṣaṇṇām, when it is read disjunct.[57]"

152. The other lords of the cardinal points approved these words of Indra. But the two Ages, Kali and Dvāpara, refused to accept them.

153. Then the gods, aiming at Kali, and Kali, aiming at the gods, alternately began thus a quarrel, accompanied by raillery, in identical language.

154. (Indra to Kali): "As she has chosen Nala, it is proper thou shouldst not go (to Nala's capital). Of what use is this disquiet or this swift aerial car?"

(Kali to Indra): "As she has chosen Nala, it is but proper thou shouldst be coming back. Of what use is this hidden worry lacking in dignity?"

56. The Golden Age or The Age of Truth and the Tretā Age (fem.) are distinguished by religious virtue, the remaining two, Dvāpara and Kali following on a descending scale. The first line means also: The two Aśvins may vie with Nala (in beauty), and the three sacrificial fires with Damayantī (in purity). See Vocab. under नासत्य and त्रेता.

57. i.e., with base and suffix detached. In the genitive plural of षष् (six), the ष् is first changed into ड् which again becomes nasal, giving the form षण्णाम्.

155. (Agni to Kali): "As she whom thou art going to choose as thy bride has already chosen some one else, this thy conduct is ridiculous and disgraceful."

(Kali to Agni): "As she whom thou went[58] to choose as thy bride chose some one else in thy presence, this has become ridiculous and shameful for thee."

156. (Yama to Kali): "She, for whom thou art journeying, having chosen somebody else as her consort; let there be a check to thy wrath, thou, unrelenting and falsely irate."

(Kali to Yama): "She, for whom thou hadst journeyed, having chosen another as her consort; who else has sunken lower than thou, impotent and falsely irate as thou art?"

157. (Varuṇa to Kali): "Conquering Cupid by thy beauty, thou art traversing miles and miles on a mighty charger. But thou art a fool. Lowborn wretch, art thou not ashamed that she has chosen some one else?"

(Kali to Varuṇa): "Shameless god, as she has chosen some one else, art thou not ashamed, thou who hadst gone, mounted on a mighty charger, delighting people with thy lustre?"

158. The gods resolved to return to heaven, when they saw the two Ages, the third and the fourth,[59] persisting in their rancour against Nala.

159. With Dvāpara as his sole companion, the stubborn Kali, senseless with jealousy, set out on his journey, which was destined to inflict suffering on Nala.

160. A cloud arose as an obstacle, hindering Kali from going to the land of Niṣadha, utterly inaccessible to him by reason of the plenitude of Nala's religious merit accruing from sacrifices and the charitable provision of wells, tanks and gardens.

161. The sinful Kali reached the holy kingdom of Nala to tarnish it by his possession of it; even as the sinful Rāhu reaches the spotless orb of the moon to overcloud it by an eclipse.

162. Then after a short space of time the dark, conceited Kali reached king Nala's capital.

163. Hearing there 'the detached text'[60] in the mouths of people

58. "tried", if we construe पुरा यासि as पुरा अयासि (त्वया).
59. Dvāpara and Kali.
60. Padapāṭha.

reciting the Vedas, dark Kali could not advance a single step further.[61]

164. He came to a standstill, when he heard in the city that order of reading known as Krama[62] on the lips of people reading the Vedas.

165. He kept up a swaggering pace so long as he did not hear the connected text of the Vedas while being recited by the readers of the Vedas.

166. His nose seemed to be destroyed by the smell of sacrificial butter. Hurt by the smoke from sacrifices, he could not open his eyes.

167. There the knave lost his balance on the courtyards of householders, which were extremely slippery to him on account of the ceremonial water offered to guests for washing their feet.

168. In contact with the powerful heat of the sacrificial fires, he felt himself to be heated, as if in wrappings plastered with mud. Every limb of his seemed to be cut asunder by gusts of wind from the fanlike ripples of tanks and pools dug for charity.

169. He was terrified to see there black sesamum grains, which seemed to be Death to him, while they were scattered by the four castes in every household in the course of their rites in honour of the Manes.

170. There he thought his heart was rent by the forehead-marks of religious bathers, as if they entered his heart, assuming the form of swords.

171. Kali was glad to see there a man telling a lie, but grew sad, when he saw him telling it to his wife (in jest).

172. He felt that the city which was covered with sacrificial posts bristled with spears. He thought the city which was full of religious people was occupied by ferocious beasts.

173. The wretch could not even get near persons observing the twelveday religious fast known as Parāka. He repeatedly stumbled while crossing the shadow of persons observing fasts lasting a month.

61. Verses 163-204 describe Kali's despair at the sight of the observances of piety and religion in Nala's capital.

62. In Kramapāṭha the words are repeated in succession, e.g., ओषधयः सं। सं वदंते। वदंते सोमेन। सोमेन सह। सह राज्ञा। राज्ञेति राज्ञा॥ Rigveda 10.97.22

174. There he saw goddess Gāyatrī, as she drew near from the orb of the sun, being invoked by Brāhmaṇas. Seen by her, he vanished in terror.

175. Nowhere did he find a rest for his foot; neither in houses full of householders, nor in woods full of anchorites, nor in any habitation of ascetics, nor in any temple.

176. Nowhere did he see any slaughter, dear to him, though he looked for it. Even in the mouths of fools he never found there his friend, dispute.

177. He rushed forward, rejoiced to see a cow meant for slaughter in sacrifice. But, devoted to the Religious Virtue inherent in the Soma sacrifice,[63] the cow repelled him, an ass, even from a distance.

178. He deemed the silence of people observing religious vows to be a rebuke aimed at him. He felt his head to be spurned by those who were bowing to men worthy of homage.

179. Seeing in the hands of sages seats of Kuśa grass, he thought 'They are going to kill me with iron clubs.' Seeing in their hands water while they were washing their face, he thought 'They are going to curse me with the water.'

180. 'They are coming to bind me with ropes and strike me with sticks". Thus he feared the Brahmacārins who wore girdles of Munja grass and carried sticks of Palāśa wood.

181. There he became gloomy with terror at the sight of sacrificial cakes before him. He shed tears, imagining the sacrificial ladles to be snakes.

182. He was rejoiced to see handling of wine by a Brāhmaṇa, but was sad to see him perform the Sautrāmaṇī sacrifice.[64]

183. As many palmfuls of blood shot up from his heart as he saw hands folded in religious devotion by those who were versed in the Vedas.

184. He knew that those who had gone through the ceremonial bath marking the end of Vedic studies were his executioners. He knew, those whose passions were subdued were like Death to him. He was fearful at the very sight of a devotee who observed the vow of silence, as if the latter were the god of death.

63. Also : attached to a gentle ox (सौम्यवृषासक्त).

64. The use of wine was permitted in this sacrifice. See Vocabulary.

185. Like a man looking for water but meeting with fire, the sinful wretch turned away in pain when he, looking for heretics, came across men learned in the Vedas.

186. He was rejoiced to see a man killing a Brāhmaṇa, but despaired[65] to find that he was performing the 'all-sacrificing' Sarvamedha sacrifice.

187. He seemed to be threatened by the bamboo sticks in the hands of ascetics. The various modes of reading the Vedas employed by householders distressed the malevolent creature.

188. He wished to leave the very kingdom, when he saw persons sleeping on the bare ground in course of religious austerities. He experienced thunder-terror at the sight of sacrificial Kuśa blades.

189. Looking for a Jaina, he saw deerskins used by religious students. Looking for a Buddhist mendicant, he saw the discipline of persons initiated into Vedic sacrifices.

190. At the sight of persons engaged in religious meditation, telling the beads in their rosaries, he turned his eyes in the opposite direction and felt the pangs of the wrenching forth of the soul by death.

191. He would rather uproot his own eyes than see there Brāhmaṇas recite the 'Sin-destroying' verses of the Veda at morn, noon and eve.

192. Going about with the object of inquiring about the existence of even the slightest trace of falsehood in Nala and Damayantī, Kali nowhere saw anything that was akin to himself.

193. Kali who is hostile to ascetics without rhyme or reason, was mortified to see in the city the prosperity of things averse to him, namely, religious meditation, study of the Vedas, and Vedic sacrifices.

194. There he was glad to see a man having amorous relations with all women that came to him. But he became dejected, when he knew the man to be a worshipper of the Sāma revealed to Vāmadeva.[66]

195. Purity, an enemy to him, allowed him no passage on the earth; while the sound of the Vedas permitted him no refuge in the sky.

65. Lit. felt feverish.

66. It was permissible to associate with women promiscuously during the adoration of this Sāma.

196. He was pained to see the New Moon and the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice. He staggered as he viewed the full moon sacrifice, and considered the Soma sacrifice to be Death himself.

197. He saw men who killed heroes (in battle), but none who "killed" the sacred fire (by allowing it to expire). He saw none who slept while the sun was setting,[67] but saw those who had attained salvation while living.

198. He was glad to see Brāhmaṇas eating in contact with one another, but became sad when he saw them taking Soma juice that had remained after oblations in the fire.[68]

199. He obtained satisfaction, hearing of a person who was smeared with dust; but felt distressed when he saw him exposing himself to the dust raised by cows and scattered by the wind.[69]

200. Joyfully he ran to where he saw a cow being killed. But the fool slowly turned back on learning that it was for guests.[70]

201. He was glad to see a Brāhmaṇa who was forsaking his daily and occasional religious duties. But he fled far away with a dejected look, when he concluded him to be a man engaged in performing a Vedic sacrifice.[71]

202. He was rejoiced to see in the city a man committing suicide, but was then pained to find that he was performing the Sarvasvāra sacrifice.[72]

203. Seeing in the Mahāvrata sacrifice[73] the dalliance of a religious student and a courtesan, the fool concluded sacrificial rites to be a haphazard wild dance of hypocrites.

204. [74]

205. Kali then came to see Nala, whom the evil-eyed could not look at with ease, while he was in the company of Damayantī;

67. Regarded as a sin.

68. Promiscuous eating was not regarded as a violation of caste rules on this occasion.

69. One of the recognised methods of bathing, known as 'wind-bath'.

70. In ancient times cow-killing for the entertainment of guests was not regarded as a sin.

71. A sacrificer is under special rules and temporarily exempted from his ordinary religious duties.

72. It was permitted to commit suicide in the Sarvasvāra sacrifice owing to some incurable disease and the like.

73. See Vocabulary.

74. The poet here refers to an indecent episode of the horse-sacrifice. Kali called the author of the Vedas a hypocrite on the strength of this episode.

just as the Sun, who cannot be looked at by those who have defective eyes, is accompanied by the Light of the sun.

206. At the sight of the depth of their love he felt as if he were pierced by a lance. He felt as if his vitals were torn away at the sight of the waves of their mutual joy.

207. Unable even to glance at them, Kali departed from the place because of his own jealousy and vices, and the perfection of their radiance.

208. Looking for a place of refuge, Kali, hostile to Nala, went with a sigh to the beautiful house garden of Nala, whose splendour equalled that of Rāma.

209. There was no hindrance to his entering the garden, though it was surrounded by a hundred thousand guards; for no ascetics were there. The proud Kali felt that the atmosphere in the garden was partly sympathetic to him.

210. But he could not there climb the trees, which had been planted by Nala with the object of worshipping gods and Brāhmaṇas with their leaves, flowers and fruits.

211. Then he saw a single Bibhītaka tree, which, though useless for religious purposes, was planted (by Nala) merely to render complete the presence of all species of plants in the garden.

212. Kali highly valued the tree as his shelter in the woodland. Close to Nala's palace, it served as a banner of the palace garden.

213. The Bibhītaka tree, because it there gave shelter to the helpless Kali, became not only 'Kali's tree'[75] but proved a Kalpa tree[76] to him.

214. Methinks, because Kali had made Virtue stand on one leg,[77] this tree was now his only place of refuge.

215. There, taking up his abode in that tree, he dreaded the Kṣatriya king, who maintained the sacred fire, and was initiated into sacred ritual; just as one who lives in a house of straw fears the dove, the bird with fire.[78]

75. The Bibhītaka tree which supplies the wood for making dices is also called 'Kali's tree' (कलिद्रुम).

76. The all-giving divine tree of that name.

77. Virtue is believed to have only one foot in the Kali age. Kali had made him stand on one leg (पद), but now he himself had only one पद, which means in this case 'footing', 'place of refuge'.

78. A dove perching on the roof of a house is regarded as an evil omen involving risk of fire.

216. Thus staying, having occupied the Bibhītaka tree, Kali could not overcome the holy king who was Damayantī's beloved.

217. When Kali obtained that place of refuge, he lived there many a year, looking for some sin in Damayantī and in Nala.

218. In that wood, there was the phenomenon of the Kali Age, sleepless in his eagerness to beguile Nala; just as there were creepers with sleepless buds of flowers.

219. Wishing to know of any offence committed by Nala, Dvāpara roamed over the earth, thinking "No one is free from blemish in the opinion of the crowd." But his hope was futile.

220. Taking up his abode in the garden, which ever rivalled the moon with its flowers blossoming on account of the constant application of fertilising processes, Kali looked like the emblematic deer in the moon by reason of his possessing a lustre glossy as the gleam of the (dark) wings of Kādamba geese.

221. In Nala's city, which was so vast, long was the sojourn of Kali in the garden. But he met with a serious obstacle on account of the religious merits of the people. Meanwhile, with a boundless joy in his heart, Cupid made the tip of his bow touch the top of his ear[79] to wait upon Damayantī and Nala.

222. Epilogue. Śrīhīra etc.

In the epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him, very similar to the sister work, The Panegyric of (king) Chinda, the seventeenth canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

79. i.e., drew it full length.

CANTO XVIII

1. Nala then made Damayantī enjoy love's dalliance, after he had thus won her, the best of wives. She was to him a boat for crossing the ocean of pleasure, the third object of human endeavour.

2. A knower of the self, he acquired no sin, though he enjoyed pleasure with her day and night. An artificial devotion to worldly pleasure taints not one whose mind is purified by knowledge.

3. Entrusting his kingdom to his ministers, eagerly did he worship Cupid in the company of his beloved, in his golden-storied mountain-high palace, with floors made of crores of multicoloured gems.

4. The palace surpassed the mountain of the gods, by virtue of having objects coming at its will, owing to the power of the string of divine gems which adorned Nala's neck.

5. The interior of the palace was incessantly perfumed with the best of dark Agaru wood, and was cooled by a breeze, mellow with the camphor and sandal powder applied to the windows.

6. At one place, the palace was brightened by lamps with highly fragrant oil, having wicks made of the incense known as 'Cupid's arrow'; (lamps) that seemed to be sprouts of the might of Cupid's flashing arms.

7. The floors of the palace, with beautiful bejewelled pavements, shone forth, plastered with a paste of saffron and musk. They were washed with water scented with camphor, and had wreaths of mountain flowers scattered in the corridor.

8. In one part of the palace, a bed made of flowers assumed the beauty of an ornamental brow-mark on the floor. It had charming hues, softness and fragrance mellow from the pressure of Nala's limbs.

9. In another part, the waves of fragrance from masses of opening flower buds in the house garden near by, were perfectly like Damayantī's breath.[1]

10. The wind worshipped the Prāṇa breath, chief among the

1. Lit. adopted a kinship to Damayantī's nostrils. See also Vocab. under कुटी.

breaths[2] of those who lived in the palace, with offerings of sprays of the honey of mango blossoms rent by parrots living in the garden,[3] that had trees of all the seasons in their glory.

11. In one place, all the parts of the edifice were made of gold. In another it was made of immaculate jewels. In one place were picture galleries made. In another it was a magician with its unsteady shapes.[4]

12. The Creator, a king among artists, was supposed to be suffering from gout owing to his old age, while he shook his head (in wonder), repeatedly looking at the palace, which contained multiform images reproducing the beauty of diverse wonderful objects, worthy of being reproduced.

13. The palace provided amusement in the form of mysterious talking and the like by persons kept hidden in chambers inset in the walls. It had numerous puppets causing wonder by their peculiar movements controlled by means of strings.

14. Even on dark nights it had profuse moonlight from the rays of jewels set in its walls.[5] Even in the summer it utterly dispelled drowsiness caused by heat with showers gushing from water spouts.

15. There a house sparrow, expert in the art of love, occupying an ivory perch, observed what modes were followed in the dalliance of Damayantī and Nala, and what were not.

16. There, at one place, the eyes of Nala and Damayantī met with the amorous gaiety of pairs of swans adorning a pool of water; just as they did the repetitions of the sensual sports indulged in by frenzied sparrows.

17. There, their murmurs of love were drowned by the notes of lyres and the sound of flutes, by the cooings and hummings of cuckoos and bees in the pleasure garden, and by the noise of bracelets and other ornaments of dancers.

18. Even in the interior of the inner apartment, they heard the whistlings of the unsuspecting idols[6] of Cupid and Rati in-

2. Lit. chief of its family. The Prāṇa or life breath passing through the nose is the chief among the five vital winds (Prāṇa, Apāna, etc.).

3. i.e., the inmates of the palace could inhale the fragrance of the mango blossoms wafted by the breeze.

4. The reference seems to be to the play of light and shade.

5. Lit. jewel-rays present on the walls.

6. Idols consecrated with mantras are supposed to have life (cf. प्राणप्रतिष्ठा) stalled in the palace, through windows stripped of their curtains[7] at night.

19. In the front of the palace, a unique rivulet, sweet and bright-watered, curved like the horns of the black antelope, and resonant with the beautiful songs of Kinnarīs, never ceased to flow day or night.

20. There on the walls were legends depicted in pictures in their entirety: Cupid laughing at Brahmā's egregious rashness, his passion for his own daughter (Sarasvatī).

21. The rash act of adulterous frolic of Indra, the paramour of Gautama's wife,[8] was engraved on the walls; (an act) that proclaimed Cupid's triumph.

22. The Fame of the edifice, acquired by surpassing Indra's palace, and resembling an autumnal[9] full moon night, brightened the world, disguising itself as the bevies of pigeons flying over it.

23. In the courtyard of the palace were enacted plays based on the story of the moon's amorous wantonness in regard to Bṛihaspati's wife; (plays) that were nectar streams of the art of Bharata.

24. The golden dove-cot of the palace was engraved with beautiful utterances strung together by Śukrācārya, on the subject of Śiva's amorous enjoyment in the Devadāru grove, and Kṛiṣṇa's sports with the cowherd maids.

25. A parrot, going about there, sang of the sage Parāśara who caressed in broad daylight the fisherman's daughter[10] on the Yamunā, being made restless by Cupid who respects no time, place nor object.

26. There at one place were sages depicted in pictures, supporting themselves on the pitcherlike breasts of nymphs, without crossing the ocean of austerities, whose shore had come well within reach of their hands.[11]

7. This is the alternative meaning of कपटकुड्य given by Nārāyana. The sentence might also mean: .....windows which were made to give up the character of counterfeit walls at night, i.e., the windows of the sacred chamber were opened at night, but kept closed during the day when they looked as if they were part of the wall.

8. Ahalyā.

9. Lit. belonging to the month of Kārttika.

10. i.e., Satyavatī.

11. The reference is to the stories of sages yielding to the temptation of nymphs. The imagery is that of a swimmer exhausted before reaching the shore, and supporting himself on a floating pitcher.

27. At the rumbling sound of drums, the peacock of the palace danced with the idea: "My master, and I who carry him, have both conquered Cupid who is so powerful, because we abstain from amorous dalliance."[12]

28. There, as if out of rivalry, Nala and Damayantī played the role of Cupid and Rati in order to conquer their conquerors, Cupid and Rati, who were yielding to passion at the sight of them both.[13]

29. In that palace, resembling the mountain of the gods, there took place their sports of love, unseen even by great poets, unlearnt even by courtesans.

30. What fear did Damayantī have for her husband, Nala, a manly youth; while she was a girl who had not yet passed the years of her maidenhood!

31. Because she had formerly confessed her love to her beloved, when he met her during his mission,[14] she knew not for shame what to do, thinking of the liberty she had taken.

32. Because she had hastily chosen Nala of her own accord, discarding all shame in the open assembly; recalling her rashness, she could not now look him in the face.

33. She did not even glance at the direction, which Nala occupied, on a seat covered with the rays of its gems; as if she were offended, becoming jealous of it.[15]

34. Bowing her head so low as to plunge into the river of bashfulness, and looking like a puppet on the doorway, she turned a deaf ear to a hundred invitations of her consort.

35. For fear she entered not her consort's apartment. When persuaded to enter it, she occupied not the bed. Though induced to occupy the bed, she did not lie close to him. Though persuaded to lie down, she turned not her face towards him.

36. Not only did Damayantī feel deeply shy before Nala; but Cupid himself, overpowered by Dame Shyness in Damayantī's heart, was positively ashamed for a long space of time.

12. Kārttika, whose conveyance is a peacock, is a chaste bachelor, while the peacock is said to have offspring without sexual connection.

13. i.e., the deities of love, who had made Nala and Damayantī suffer the pangs of love, now themselves yielded to passion at the sight of the newly married couple.

14. See Canto IX.

15. Direction (दिश्) is feminine in Sanskrit and often described as a woman.

37. Even when she herself wished to do something, she who was fair as Pārvatī desisted from the attempt, when her consort besought her to do it.

38. When he recalled her feelings towards him, which he had ascertained during his mission to her; he suppressed in his mind, which suspected a coldness in her, the apprehension caused by her indifference to him[16] from excessive shyness.

39. At first he had let her come to him in the company of her girl friends; then in the company of only one. Full of wiles, he sent away this one, too, on some errand, and reduced Damayantī to the position of having him alone as her companion.

40. A master of the art of love, he drew his beloved near with the circle of his embrace with the manner of one still far away,[17] though she had been placed close to him by her maiden friends.

41. As she was drooping with shame, he kissed her first on the forehead; then on the cheeks, as she by degrees bent herself less. Then as her confidence grew at this, he smiled, abruptly kissing her on the face.

42. Child Cupid, just when he was astir a little in her heart, again sank low, admonished first by Shyness coming to her heart; and then threatened by powerful fear.

43. During love's revelry, each one of her beloved's arms, which wanted to clasp her round by force, was long resisted by the maid who left no entry for them, pressing herself close against the bed.

44. Feigning a curiosity to look at the beauty of her pearl-string, her consort touched the extremity of her neck with his hand, which passed close to her bosom.

45. He touched her budlike breasts, as he put his pearlstring (round her neck), saying, "Since thou didst honour me with thy wreath in the Svayaṁvara assembly, it is proper that I, too, should pay my homage to thee."

46. While the fair maid was unconscious with sleep at night, his trembling hand, which he had placed near the knot of her skirt, was pushed back[18] by her, when she was awakened by the movements of his hand to and fro.

16. Lit. caused by her who was indifferent.....

17. Lit. as if he were at a distance.

18. The reading अपासयन्निजम् has been followed. Lit. he had his hand removed by her who was awakened, etc.

47. The king smiled, gazing at the silken scarf of his beloved's thighs. Overwhelmed with shame, she covered it with the fringe of her cloth, as if she were nude.

48. Clever as he was, he thus a little removed her fear by degrees. In her mind, too, Cupid slightly suppressed her bashfulness while he bent his bow.

49. She smiled, but laughed not; amused though she was by his witty remarks. What woman doth show to others the two rows of her priceless ruby teeth?

50. At the sight of Damayantī's breasts, marked with the imprint of the gems of her necklace pressed into them, her maiden friends guessed (in the morning) that the fair damsel had undergone the ardour of her beloved's embrace.

51. When (in the morning) she asked her friends, who helped her to dress, to tighten the knot of her skirt, they guessed with a smile: "Here took place some frivolous act of her consort's hand."

52. Concealing her feelings somewhat out of shyness, and somewhat manifesting the grace of them with good humour, she, a woman of the Lily class,[19] resembled a lily with buds and full-blown flowers.

53. Cupid urged the fair-browed maid to look at Nala; but shyness prevented her looking at him. Her looks ran towards her consort; but turned back from their path over and again, full of shame.

54. She brought her consort neither within the range of her sight, nor placed him beyond it; for she fixed her eyes on diverse objects, by looking at which he could be looked at as well.

55. Impatient of separation during the day, she had longed for the night, the time when to meet her beloved. But abashed at her consort's dalliance at night, for shame she wished for the coming of the day again.

56. "I only will do what thou dost allow. Be not shy. Away with fear. I am just like thy maiden friends." Thus did Nala reassure her ever and anon.

57. The fire of her love, which had remained smothered by the magic herb of bashfulness, was stirred again by effective invocations, her beloved's loving words.

19. पद्मिनी, the best of the four classes of women.

58. Firmly she covered her breasts with her arms, turning back her beloved's hand placed on her bosom. It seemed as if she, discarding her beloved from shyness while he was by her side, embraced his image that was in her heart.

59. "Once will I drink of thy lips; nothing else do I beg of thee." Thus saying in a low plaintive tone, he tasted her lips, crushing them with force.

60. "I, thy slave, have drunk the wine of thy mouth. Now I should do my duty. So I will render service to thy thighs." Thus saying, he placed his leafy hand on them.

61. "Was there anything wrong during kissing and the like? Now, too, do not fear in vain." Thus saying, he effected the first unloosening of the gazelle-eyed maiden's girdle.

62. Then did she experience a dalliance that had in it plenty of resistance and curiosity, perspiration and tremors, fear and desire, pleasure and pain.

63-4. "Proper it is that thou shouldst be abashed. For to thy mind new is thy union with me. But, even my mind, shameless because of constant union with thee (in dreams), yields now to shame!" Thus he, being clever, ridiculed her in such wise that she was ashamed even to feel shy before him; though she had been overwhelmed with bashfulness,[20] full of resistance to him at the beginning of the dalliance.

65. Even during the day, when hustling people were about, he said to her by signs when he saw her, "I long for the clasp of thy arms and the fragrance of thy mouth; the joy of thy hips and the contact of thy bosom; and the curve of thy legs."

66. At morn, holding her back when she would leave his bed, Nala, the Indra of the earth, compelled her, the Śacī of the earth, to give him a pleasure, to wit, the reposing of her face on his own and the like; something which he at other times could never compel.

67. At daybreak, going forth from her consort's bed, she was ashamed to see the joy of her fair-browed comrades, spontaneously remembering her own recently finished gaiety of love.

68. Making himself invisible by virtue of the boon of the gods, he stood by and overheard her talk with her friends. Then did he emerge into view, laughing at her, while she narrated to a maiden friend the doings of herself and her beloved at night.

20. See Vocab. under लज्जित.

69. She was laughed at by her consort, as she was struck with fear when she saw female Cakravāka birds part with their mates. But the mind, perturbed about something without any cause, doth speak of events yet to come.[21]

70. That she did not draw back her face when kissed, showered nectar in her consort's heart. No longer she pushed back his hand when he placed it on her. Was not his whole being gratified at this?

71. He could place his hands only on her arms, with which she had covered her bosom; then on the scarf of her bosom without her arms on it; and then even on her uncovered breasts.

72. When she refused to give him a scratch with her finger nails despite his entreaties, he made her distracted with talk, and was delighted to scratch himself with her nails, while taking hold of her hand to place it on his bosom.

73. He, being the master, could take off by force the fair damsel's scarf, the outer covering of her bosom. But never could he remove the inner screen of her maiden shame.

74. Brightly she shone, a frail maid who could not be made to shun bashfulness and patience even by mighty Cupid. Even without raiment might one appear to be beautiful, but not by discarding patience and shame.

75. Shaking her head, she turned him back, who was eager to make her talk. He said thus to her, "Since thou dost not say 'no' to me when I ask thee for love's satiety, clearly hast thou given thy consent to me.

76. "Have I not grasped the meaning of the shaking of thy head, meant to express a 'no' ? The equal number of the negatives does clearly express an affirmative, thine own longing for love-play.[22]

77. "Wilt thou not speak? Wilt thou not? Should I not then hear thy words?" Thus saying, he related in her own gentle words what she had told him, when he had gone as a messenger to her.[23]

78. Formerly she had firmly restrained his hand when he placed it on the border of the knot of her skirt; but thereafter she did so with a languid hand. By degrees, she came to thwart him, by saying merely No, No, No.

21. This was a tragic foreboding of how she would one day be forsaken by Nala in the woods.

22. She had shaken her head twice, which Nala interprets as two negatives making one affirmative.

23. See Canto IX.

79. Everyday she came to him ever new, displaying her art separately in her beauty, her dress, her clothing, beauty paint, ornaments and the like; an art which caused one to mistake her for a nymph.

80. She charmed him ever more, manifesting the ocean of her love by the expression of her feelings; her power of appreciation with pleasing words; and her devotion with constant service.

81. Though she appeased her beloved, when he was angry at her refusal to offer herself to him; she did not yield so far as to allow him to enjoy her by force, when he besought her again.

82. Offering her tender limbs to her beloved with a great reserve, she preserved for them the same affection from him as on the first occasion of dalliance; for they were made inaccessible by her stubborn pride, resistance, and bashful nature.

83. Devoted to her husband, she dallied with him, creating by her religious austerities (magic) forms one after another, and all that was fitted to accompany such forms; forms for her consort, beginning with that of Śiva and ending with that of a tree; forms for herself, beginning with that of Pārvatī and ending with that of a creeper.

84. There was no earthly spot nor ocean nor wood nor tableland nor province nor region of the universe where she did not sport with him. No mode was there in which she did not unite with him.

85. Bending herself, she blew out the burning light with the breath of her mouth, when her beloved pulled her scarf. But, with wonder she saw the regions around her lit up by her consort's crown gem.

86. When she placed her lotus ear-ring on her beloved's head, wishing to cover up the gem, it seemed as if she worshipped Cupid disguised as her beloved in order to sport with her.

87. She was glad to have covered up the gem. But when she saw a light emerging on either side of her, she was so confused that[24] the sentiment of her love was merged in a commotion of curiosity, wonder, shame and fear.

88. She saw that, when she put out one of the lights, the other, though she had already put it out, burnt again. Then recalling the fire god's boon[25] to Nala, she merely closed her eyes, shaking her head.

24. Lit. had a state of mind where the sentiment, etc
25. See 14. 77.

89. "Timid girl, see thou canst not be seen by me, since thou hast closed thy eyes!" Thus mocking her, he enjoyed the bashful maid, bringing on darkness again.

90-1. "Here I kiss thee; here I scratch thee with my finger nails. Here I clasp thee round; here I carry thee on my bosom. I will do thy behest alone. But leave me, o leave me. I am thy serving maid." Thus, during love's career, feigning to be entirely submissive in her caresses, she, a cunning maid, played a trick on her beloved and on shame itself; while she gave him kisses and the like. What, indeed, is inconceivable to those who have a clever mind!

92. In the dark room, with the help of a lightninglike lamp, no sooner lit than extinct at his will, he enjoyed the pleasure of looking at her facial expression born of a dalliance free from diffidence.

93. While she knit her eyebrows during love's union, it seemed as if Cupid bent his bow.[26] The moaning sound which she then made was Cupid's hum while discharging his arrows.

94. While she shook her hand, her lips being hurt by her beloved's teeth, she was seen to give lessons to Cupid in dancing, who was at that moment transported with joy.

95. Embracing her beloved, she could not clasp round his spacious bosom; nor could he the bosom of the maid with arched eyebrows, widened as it was by her breasts, high and plump.

96. The circle of their creeper arms locked in an embrace which held fast both of them, was truly Cupid's noose made of stalks of golden lilies.

97. On the beloved Damayantī's bosom, the resting ground of Cupid and Rati, her breasts pressed by her beloved's embrace[27] looked like[28] two pillows, round and contiguous.

98. Damayantī's thighs shone forth with the gentle nailmarks given by Nala, as if they were two golden triumphal pillars of Cupid and Rati with their panegyric engraved on them.

99.[29]

100. Her breasts, stout and firm as a pitcher, transmitted the lustre of the pearlstring over them to her beloved's tender lotus hands,[30] which wanted to squeeze them in their grasp.

101. With Palāśa blossoms, his own finger nails, he worshipped the breasts of his bride, which had a blue and red hue, embellished with musk and saffron, and grew up spontaneously on his beloved's bosom.[31]

102. Then Nala's face like the lunar orb, while it kissed the face of the maid whose face was like the lotus resembled the moon not fully risen from the ocean, and joined to its own reflection on the water.

103. During their delights, they perfectly enjoyed the pleasure of wine drinking with the nectar of their lips; (nectar) reddened by an excess of betel in their mouths, and perfumed with the camphor known as the Rising Sun.

104. At that time, making a whistling sound, and passing through violent emotional tremors, the fair damsel declared, even without the medium of language, that her consort's mouth while kissing was like the cold-rayed moon.

105. The orb of Nala's face, while it came in contact with his beloved's breasts, in order to kiss them, resembled the moon with two golden pitchers attached for filling them with the moon's own nectar.

106. Looking and looking again at her, he looked at her more and more in joy. Embracing her more than once, he embraced her again. Though he had kissed her, eagerly did he kiss her again. But in no wise was satiety to be found.

107. The beautiful fair-eyed maid, with her bosom spotted with drops of sweat, did not long notice the wide circle of the pearlstring on her bosom, though it was torn asunder by the sportive movements of the dance of dalliance.

108. "Merit" was the reason why the pearls of her pearlstring could abide on her bosom. Otherwise, at that moment, stripped of their "merit,"[32] why could they not remain there?

109. At that time, the pearlstring resting on one of them became by reflection an ornament of the other's bosom, which was flooded with perspiration, and had its own pearlstring torn asunder.

30. Lit. struck her beloved's.....hands with the lustre of the pearlstring.

31. The breasts are indirectly likened to two phallic forms of Śiva. See Notes.

32. There is a pun on गुण which means both "merit" and "thread"; here, the thread with which the pearls had been strung together.

110. She ranged unto the farthest limit of all joys, while her budding youth was enjoyed by Nala, who kept a nightlong watch over her face, and destroyed Cupid's pride of beauty with utter disdain.[33]

111. In contact with her limbs, Nala felt his inmost heart to be solaced. To look at her was to him the feasting of his eyes on the quintessence of nectar.

112. He was first delighted with the ornaments of his beloved. But he was sad to think they were standing in the way of his looking at parts of her body, screening them from view.

113. They regarded even the interval caused by their thrills during embraces as one of miles. While looking at each other, they felt even the blink of their eyes to be an interval of years.

114-17. [34]

118. The scratches which they gave to each other with their finger nails in their frenzied joy, when they reached the culmination of their passion, was like a seasoning of molasses with red pepper sprinklings, giving relish though sharp.

119. Her beloved was not tired of looking at her, when she was for a moment languid with the exhaustion caused by love's exertion, eyes half closed and pupils rolling.

120. Her exhaustion led her beloved to fan her for a while. A wife like her, a goddess of worldly happiness, makes even the Creator lose the stability of his mind.

121. With drops of perspiration on the tip of her nose; with the red lac paint of her nether lip gone; with thrills half dying on her cheeks, her face brought indeed delight to Nala.

122. To her beloved's mind, owing to her love, her face was at that moment worth a million; deeply abashed it was, imbued slightly with passion, heavily weary, and tinged with joy.

123. Strange that the thirst of Nala's eyes was not quenched, in a measure proportionate to their drinking in the pores of his beloved's skin filled with perspiration!

124. He sank in an ocean of delight at the sight of her shining armpits made visible by herself, when she threw back her hands to bind her lock of hair that had no longer its wreath of flowers.

125. The slender-waisted maid could not help smiling at the sight of her consort's nether lip, which was beautiful with the collyrium paint of her eyes attached to it, and looking like a red Bandhūka blossom with a bee clinging to it.

126. Seeing her turn back and smile, her consort asked her the cause of her mirth, whereupon the bashful bride gave him a reply, putting a mirror into his lotus hand.

127. When she saw his face, the brow charming with the red lac paint of her feet attached to it, while he kissed them, she recalled the rising moon with its crimson hue still remaining, bending and bending her face in shame.

128. Drooping with shame, she with her extremely gentle breath, removed the erotic langour of her beloved, while she saw him reflected on her perspiring bosom; as if he lived incarnate in her heart.

129. Finding on her nether lip a cut left by her beloved's teeth, she gently touched it and was surprised; it was causing a pang hitherto unfelt, owing to the freaks of Cupid's commands.

130. Ever looking at the playful nailmarks[35] left by her beloved on her breasts, she cast a look at her smiling consort; the corners of her eyes shrinking with a gentle wrath.

131. Seeing that his beloved's face seemed to be tinged with ire, he said to her in a voice somewhat tremulous with fear, "Slender one, I know not who made thee angry.

132. "Slender maid, let not this untimely colouring with a thin paint of the saffron of anger, appear in thy silent drooping face, worthy of the moon's respect.

133. "Let this wish-fulfilling wreath of gems clasping my neck, shower sprays of nectar, besought to do so by me. Let it remove thy pain anon, caused by my finger-nails and teeth.[36]

134. "My hand which produced rainbowlike nailmarks on thy bosom wiped off its offence by its service of fanning thee. Let it again, if need be, caress thy feet.

135. "Fair maid, if it was improper for my mouth cruelly to bite thee with its teeth; why not, say, take revenge on it, biting my lips in thy turn?

136. "Let my crown gem, which rendered futile the putting out of the lights by thee, while I was stripping thee of thy vesture, bow low at thy feet. Compensation alone will not make amends for its offence."

137. After he had spoken these gentle words, bowing low on the bed;[37] he brought the stream of the beams of his crown gem in contact with her crimson lotus feet.

138. Combined with his own reflections on all her toe-nails, he looked like Cupid, as if the latter assumed eleven forms in order to overcome the manifold forms of Śiva.[38]

139. He said to her, "Cease thy wrath. Look, the brief vernal night decays. Wilt thou another night choose to pursue for a moment the remainder of this same wrath?"

140. Then the fair damsel gratified her consort, hiding with her hands her lotus feet;[39] while she showed a smiling face, whose sensitive pride was swept away by his obeisance.

141. By virtue of the elixir of their mutual love, they became desirous of union again; but could not fulfil their wish. Shortlived was the lowborn night.

142. When they occupied the bed for sleep, the lover freely spoke to his beloved, his words being interrupted at intervals by the revelry of biting and drinking her lips.

143. "Let lifelong devotion be the apology of Nala, who cruelly gave so great an offence to thee, fearing to deviate from the path of virtue, having undertaken a mission on behalf of the gods.

144. "Fair maid, it is a carnival to look at thee. Whatever delights thee I value as if it were a mighty realm. The joy of embracing thy limbs is an ablution of nectar to Nala.

145. "What happiness is there in Viṣṇu's installing his beloved on his bosom, or in Śiva's union with the half of Pārvatī's body? But, slender maid, during love's revelry, I wish thee to be united with me as a river is with the ocean.

146. "It would be unseemly to say to thee, 'Devotedly consider me to be thine own.' With the price of thy kindness hast thou bought me, spurning Indra like a straw.

147. "When overhearing thy conversation with thy maiden friends, more than once have I seen thee restless with fear on hearing the story of Sītā, fated to be forsaken by Rāma without cause.

37. Lit. he whose hair kissed the bed.
38. i.e., the eleven Rudras.
39. i.e., by way of preventing him from touching her feet.

148-9. "When thy friends spake of their terror, caused by the shrub which shrinks up when its leaves are touched, and by the quivering flesh of turtles, and the chameleon which keeps moving its head; I have secretly heard thee say thine own fear was caused by the chance of separation from me. But never will I part from thee." This boon he uttered, for he was afraid of speaking falsely.

150. "Sleep seems to flee from us to-night, angry with us, saying, 'Alas, you are devoting my time of repose to your love-play, though I helped you to live during your separation, uniting you (in dreams)'."

151. While her beloved spake thus, she lightly closed her eyes in joy; just as the night lily closes its petals, owing to its keeping awake at night, when at dawn the cuckoo sweetly sings.

152. Then they slept, pressing each other with the fold of their embrace, and beholding their mutual acts in dreams; thighs interlaced and lips conjoined.

153. In joy slept the couple, the oneness of their life's breath being clearly declared by the ceaseless mingling of the currents of the gasps caused by their lovelorn langour, which could be noticed from the rapid intake and outgoings of their breath; while the king's bosom, imprinted with the figures of elephants and dolphins that were among the pictorial designs painted on his young consort's bosom, symbolised the unity of their hearts.[40]

154. Epilogue.

Śrihīra etc. In his work, the epic "Story of Nala", praiseworthy for its relationship of a good brother to the sister work "Śiva-śakti-siddhi", the eighteenth canto is at an end.

40. Lit. the couple whose hearts had a unity symbolised by the king's bosom, etc.

CANTO XIX

1. As the night declined, bards, wishing to awaken Nala, Cupid of the land of Niṣadha, lying by the side of his beloved, chanted forth strains lavishly drenched with distinct poetic sentiments, and accompanied by a variety of emotions, and expressed with the art that is in melodious wreaths of words.

2. "Victory, victory to thee! Mighty king! Richly reward the beauty of the morn, glancing with thy slightly weary lashes.[1] Quickly rising from bed, let Damayantī be the first sight of good omen to thee. Yea, no benign agency is there more potent than a dear one's lotus face!

3. "The Region that is Indra's queen[2] shows now a smiling face, her clear aspect, as if she were looking at the moon while he visits the Region that is Varuṇa's wife;[3] (the moon) grown nude by the gradual loss of his raiment of rays.

4. "Such stars as are not very large are no longer visible to the eyes. Gradually the rays of the sun pervade the sky, proceeding in an endless chain. Yonder moon, too, decaying in life, speaks of the weariness of his rays that fight with the gloom of the night.

5. "In contact with the rays of the sun surpassing the lustre of red lac, the mass of darkness is glistening bright like an expanse of clay, clearly pecked by the quick beaks of numerous white-winged birds. The bee, though it thinks it is black, flashes as if it had a purple hue.

6. "The limpid water drops lying on the tips of young Kuśa blades, accumulated by a succession of drops of dew, which look like sprays emitted by the Night, have surpassed pearls in beauty, marvellously fitted by a pearlsmith into the sproutlike tips of iron pins.[4]

7. "The stars in the sky are being carried away to serve as neat and clear Anusvāras[5] in the Om syllables preceding those

1. Lit. by giving the eyes which have.....lashes.
2. The East.
3. The West. The East smiles at the setting moon visiting the West like a paramour.
4. The water drops are compared to pearls and the Kuśa blades to iron pins.

Ṛigveda verses, the rays of the sun. Doubtless for the formation of the accents of these verses, the rays have been taken away from yonder orb of the moon on account of their being placed high aloft in the sky.[6]

8. "The sun is speedily killing the night, catching it by its lock of hair, the darkness. Seeing this, the night lotus falls into a swoon. Thou, Nala, art covering thy eyes (with thy hands); and, the moon is completely bereft of its strength: just as Indrajit killed the magic Sītā, while the monkey Kumud, seeing this, fell into a swoon; the monkey Nala closed his eyes; and Sugrīva's spirits were greatly quenched.[7]

9. "In the sky, the pleasure bed of divine couples, the galaxy of planets doth assume the rich beauty[8] of a part of the flower wreaths cast off during amorous dalliance. And the full moon, filled inside with masses of cotton wool, its tender rays, bears[9] the semblance of a pillow.

10. "Verily the rays of the sun now adorn the neighbouring region, assuming forms that are apparent manifestations of the thousand ramifications of the four Vedas. It is their echo, consisting of the words of the Vedas, that goes up on the highway from the mouths of those who recite the Vedas.[10]

11. "Lord Sun, the natural friend of the day lotus to some extent makes the terrace of Indra's palace his foothold. His tireless revolution round the Mountain of Gold is crowned with success, because he hems in Darkness, his receding foe, in the region of the western sky.

12. "Concluding from the hoverings in yonder sky of those hawks, the rays of the sun, killing the crows of darkness, that the sun is going ahunting; the moon betook himself to the west for fear of his hare[11] being killed; while those pigeons, the stars, flew away on receiving the news.

6. उच्चैरुदात्ततया is explained by Nārāyaṇa as उच्चैर्नितराम् उद्ऊर्ध्वमात्ततया गृहीततया, अथ च .....उपरिस्थिततया वा. The sentence means also: The rays have been taken away.....doubtless for the formation of the high-pitched acute accents (उच्चैरुदात्ततया स्वरविरचनाय). It is fancied that the lunar rays are suitable for serving as the straight lines indicating the Udātta or acute accent in Vedic verses.

10. The so-called thousand rays of the sun are pictured as the texts of the thousand schools of the Vedas, while the voice of the people reciting the Vedas is imagined to be the "echo" of these rays representing Vedic texts.

13. "The stars had densely filled the sky, the courtyard of the gods, as if they were pearls dropped from the pearlstrings torn asunder during the amorous sports of the gods. Now, at morn, owing to the cleansing by the sun,[12] the sky doth look different with the beauty of its natural state.

14. "The sky first welcomes the rays of the sun with unbroken grains of rice, the stars; variegated with joints of Dūrvā blades, the surrounding expanse of gloom. It then offers a hospitable entertainment with barley flour mixed with water, to wit, the flakes of powdery snow hovering in the sky.[13]

15. "If Śukrācārya, the preceptor of the demons, were not afraid of breaking the vow of silence during early morning prayers, would he not utter the charm that brings back the dead to life and plays in his throat, in order to restore Darkness to life as he did Kaca; (Darkness) friendly to the demons, who hath met with death at the hands of the sun?

16. "At this moment, during the night's battle with the day, the peaks of the Mount of Sunrise, where the sun now roves, bear streams of red chalk melting with heat. Garuḍa, the younger brother of Aruṇa, having come there out of his eagerness to salute the rising Aruṇa, the charioteer of the sun; should there be assumed, on account of the meeting of the two, the presence of a rampart of newly baked brick.[14]

17. "Now surely do the mares of Indra's army have an amorous desire for the horses of the sun's chariot, seeing them near.[15] Now does the female Cakravāka bird, deep in her love, have an amorous passion for her mate,[16] her heart yielding to Cupid's arrows.

18. "Swishing their tails, colts neigh gently in hunger, desiring to have milk, having been without any food during the night.

11. Hawks are called "hare-eaters" (शशादन).

12. See Vocab. under बहुकर.

13. The imagery is that of receiving a guest with offerings of rice, Dūrvā blades and barley flour.

14. The golden body of the bird-king Garuḍa glistening with the rays of the rising sun is fancied as producing a flaming wall round the top of the Sunrise mountain.

15. Indra's position being in the east, his mares come across the horses of the rising sun.

16. Lit. master.

A troop of horses, hastily rising from their places (in the stable), and making a low sound, desire to have salt; for they are known to be fond of licking the rocky salt found in the Maṇimantha mountain.

19. "Is it not right for the assembly of stars, nor proper for the night that they now refrain from looking at their consort, the Moon, whose rays now wane? But, the Moon's heart is clearly made of stone, its dark petrified look coming into view. For, alas, the heart was not quickly rent asunder even when they were separated from him.

20. "The Sun, I ween, is wedding yonder Dawn, who offers the stars as grains of parched rice as an oblation in the fire, the glow of the sun. Like her, the Sun too will go round the wedding fire. Who is not eager to look at his hand with the nuptial thread attached?[17]

21. "You two who have the beauty of Cupid and Rati[18]! Since we master bards are fully responsible for imparting friendly advice,[19] we boldly speak unto you. Even though our harsh words are a hindrance to your pleasure, which is contrary to religious virtue, will they not (in the end) lead to your good humour, even to joy?

22. "Let thy beloved quickly part from thee. Thou who art pure with austerities, say thy morning prayers. How is it that this morning twilight, sister to the night, prompts thee not? Only a few moments will the sun remain mature in the womb of the east. Then must he initiate the day.

23. "O Damayantī, strange it is that an utter neglect of religious observance appears even in Nala to-day, his heart being distraught[20] by thee, the abode of arts! For, though he makes the morning twilight barren,[21] he counts it not as an offence, nor would he now salute the sun.

24. "Thou who art high-minded, no woman is there wiser than thou! Be not the cause of thy husband's sin of deviation from the established rites. By reason of his not leaving thee for a moment, reckless slanderers of a truth will call him happy in a woman of passion.

17. Also: Who is not eager to look at his rays with pleasure?
18. Lit. the couple Cupid and Rati.
19. Lit. pleasant words.
20. Lit. stolen.
21. i.e., by failing to say the morning prayers.

25. "Sire, leave thy consort for a moment, best of woman though she be. The sky paints itself with the rays of the sun which slowly unfold. The deities of beauty, going in joy from the night lotus to the day lotus, cherish a desire to see yonder pitcher of gold, the sun emerging from the sea.[22]

26. "The rays of the sun, after they have had an unclouded vision of Indra owing to their being travellers of the east,[23] will soon after see thee here. Ah, let them then skilfully judge the prosperity of Indra and thyself; for they can elucidate and eliminate, by virtue of their possession of effective power.[24]

27. "At the approach of the dawn, the bees, mature in strength, because they are male, forced their entry into the tip of the lotus, not too soft, and went out with something in their mouths. They fed their wives with fresh food, giving them the honey of the lotus which they had brought.

28. "At daybreak, with a single petal unfolded first, the lily gives the onlooker to think, 'About to feed on the expanse of the rays of the sun, is the lily first hollowing its palm to take the water hallowed by the Āpośāna formula?'[25]

29. "Now, in pools of water, the sleep of the lily, the shrinkage of its flowers, hath come to an end, as if at the combined chirpings of bevies of birds on the trees on the bank. The bee drinks the honey of the lotus, sweetening it ever and anon with the nectar of the lips of its bride.

30. "Now come bees with their fellows to full-blown lotus blossoms, from inside the lotus buds which had closed up from pity at the decay of the day agone. The bees were confined in the

22. The night lotus shrinks at sunrise and Beauty leaves it for the day lotus. It is auspicious for travellers to see a pitcher full of water before starting.

23. Indra's home is in the east.

24. ऊहा means 'supplying an ellipsis'; in the case of the rays of the sun, 'bringing to light things not visible before'. अपोह means 'the refutation of an argument by means of a counter-argument'; here, the repelling of darkness by the sun. By means of puns, the rays of the sun are described as being expert in reasoning, hence able to evaluate the relative prosperity of Nala and Indra

25. It is the custom before meals to drink some water from the hollow of the palm by stretching out the little finger, while the other fingers are kept closed. Here the lotus plant is described as being about to feed on the rays of the sun; and the first petal to unfold itself is fancied as an outstretched little finger. See also Vocab. under आपोशान.

nestlike buds (during the night). Now are they seen to break their fast with honey.[26]

31. "The thin-starred regions of the sky are whitening at the disappearance of gloom. What pool is there that appears not white with the laugh of the lotus? Only the zenith turns blue with deep disgrace, because it welcomed the light which destroyed the darkness that had taken refuge in the sky.

32. "Should not the beds of the day lotus laugh, the sun, their ally, being up? Should not the night lotus slumber, the moon, its friend, having lost its radiance? Perhaps the day lotus blossoms have exchanged their sleep for yonder smile of the night lotus bed;[27] (the smile) that resembles the Himalayan rocks[28] in beauty.

33. "It matters not whether the new come swarm of bees drinks the day lotus honey. They are satiated with the honey of night lotus blossoms. But the Cakravāka birds, having passed the night in thirst,[29] suck now the honey, namely, the nether lip of the lotus mouths of their brides.

34. "The Cakravāka couple alone in the world is well versed in the art of love. Parting and parting with each other,[30] mutually do they enjoy as new the pleasures of love. Likewise the mighty Śiva, the lord of the gods, swallowed poison, because he was satiated with nectar, the selfsame food from day to day.

35. "The Cakravāka birds now repeatedly call their ever-distraught consorts by name, their tongues glib from separation. The heat of their grief is about to leave their hearts for the solar gem.[31] Separation from a young wife hath now become the lot of the moon, forsaking the night.

36. "Doth any one blame the night lily for choosing to remain blind, who looketh not at the sun with her bud-shaped eyes? But, hear ye. Hear. In the works produced by the genius of poets, wives of kings are written and read of as 'not being in the habit

26. Lit. Now is seen the breaking of their fast with honey by bees, coming .....from the lap of lotus buds.....to full-blown lotuses, (bees) that had entered a nest (during the night).

27. Lit. the day lotus blossoms have acquired yonder smile of the night lotus bed in return for their own sleep.

28. i.e., the smile is "white" as snow.

29. i.e., being separated from their mates at night.

30. Cakravāka birds are believed to be separated from their mates at nightfall.

31. i.e., the sun-stone heated by the sun.

of looking at the sun.'[32] Will she not then be so, too, being the wife of the moon?

37. "The bees shine forth in the sky, as if they were drops of water slipping from the hands of the sun through the space between his fingers, for he hath drunk up the ocean of darkness from the hollow of his palm. Then by clinging to both sides of the streams of honey dripping from the lotus blossoms, the bees give me the idea of their being the ooze of the ocean of gloom.

38. "Rejecting the beauty of the rows of saffron blossoms; the perfectly young rays of the sun, ranging over the surface of pools of water, adopted the beauty of the clumps of (red and black) Gunjā blossoms; because the rays were dappled by the bees, flying up with the joy of lotus scent.

39. "Yonder pool, with its expanse whitened by masses of white lotus buds bursting into bloom, verily hath become diverse of hue; for the perfectly young sunbeams redden it; while a swarm of bees, about to settle on it, strives to turn it blue.

40. "Behold! in doing good to the day lotus, the Sun fulfils a magnanimous mission. He benefits the eyes of men, which are compared to the lotus by poets, desirous of expressing the presence of beauty. He lets alone the eyes of owls, because they are not like the lotus.[33]

41. "Thou traveller on the path of sacrificial rites, if a profound devotion to the sun be thine, worship him quickly, as he emerges. At this moment, the palmfuls of water, thrown up in worship, towards the sun, act like watery thunderbolts on the Mandeha demons.[34]

42. "Verily, I know not who brought into view yonder orb of the sun, an inexhaustible mine of rubies, its own newborn rays, situate on the peak of the Mount of Sunrise, removing the covering rock of night, black with gloom.

43. "Once did Indra take as a gift from Karṇa a pair of earrings. Truly he gave them then with pleasure to the East; for 32. This is the literal meaning of असूर्यम्पश्या 'a woman keeping indoors to avoid the look of men'. The expression राज्ञो दारा: 'the wife of a king' means also 'the wife of the moon', the word राजन् having both meanings.

33. Lit. for not being so.

34. These are supposed to attack the sun when it rises.

he is her lord. One of them was seen there, the rising moon. The other, streaming with the gold of ever new rays, is now seen, the gem of the day.[35]

44. "The devoted Light had entered the fire, when the Sun, her husband, went down, having reached the hour of decline of the byegone day. Now she appears as the image of the vow of a devoted woman; for she hath brought about the ascent of the sun to heaven, forcibly raising him from the world below.[36]

45. "It is but true, the saying of the wise that the blackness of the complexion of a child is due to his father's food, black, green or the like. For from the Sun's darkness-absorbing body, though it has a spotless lustre, Yama, Yamunā and Śani came forth black.

46. "Bringing into being Kāla consisting of the day, over and again, on the decay of each night, the time-producing divine Sun acquired such a lasting practice that, in times of yore, on account of it, he could not certainly give up this habit, even while generating Yamunā and Yama.[37]

47. "What wicked person will not laugh at us (for praising the sun)? For the Sun himself is ridiculed by the wicked thus. 'He has fine feet! His chariot is furnished with the beauty of his charioteer's thighs! He produced, indeed, two sons Yama and Śani to protect the world! He is an ocean of kindness to Cakravāka birds, and a friend even to human eyes!'[38]

48. "There rises the sun. He has a round of benevolent activities. He giveth warmth, for the happiness of creatures suffering from cold, and water for the relief of those whose mouths are dried by his scorching rays. He giveth heat to those who are afraid of water, and moisture to those who are subjected to heat.

35. This is the literal meaning of दिनमणि 'the sun'.

36. The sun is believed to set in the evening, leaving its light in the fire. The light is here fancied as the sun's devoted wife who, on the death of her husband, commits suicide by entering the fire and brings about his resurrection next morning by virtue of her religious merit.

37. Kāla means both 'time' and 'black', and the colour of Yamunā and Yama is black.

38. The whole of this is sarcastic. The sun's feet are abnormal, being a thousand in number; while the contemplation of his feet in prayers is believed to cause leprosy. As regards his charioteer Aruṇa, he has no thighs at all; while Yama and Śani, sons to the sun, are the most dreaded of the gods. Then it is a bird that the sun has chosen for his special favour, for he reunites the Cakravāka couple after their separation during the night; while his friends are inanimate objects, namely, the eyes of men, which he enables to see.

49. "Who is not astonished that the rays of the sun, which drank up in a moment the expanses of darkness abiding in the bosom of all the four regions, were powerless to destroy the shaded darkness, which managed to live, taking shelter under the trees?

50. "The two Aśvins seem to practise the art of healing, having studied the science of medicine under their own father, the Sun, he who cures darkness in the world, and the swoon of the day lotus beds. But the Sun is also the father of Yama, the god of death. So is it not natural that he should rise cruel to bring about the untimely end of the night lotus blossoms?

51. "The moon had oppressed the sun's wife, the day lily, left behind by her consort; and the night lily had laughed at her. So both of them crouch in fear, I surmise. For the new risen sun, gleaming red like a plum, doth now advance forward.

52. "Every night I know, Ananta, the king of serpents, with his two thousand eyes, hears separately and sees simultaneously at close quarters the thousand accented and shining ramifications of the rays of the sun, journeying by the underground passage of the earth; (the sun) whose body is composed of the Vedas.[39]

53. "Coral-hued are the rays of the sun, the friend of the lotus. Verily they appear to have numerous finger-nails at their tips. It is proper that parts of them, long as they are, will assume the beauty of fingers, entering through the windows.

54. "From the window of the top chamber, quickly look at the fingers of the sun's hands, like stalks of the lotus that have come inside. Laden with moving atoms, they seem to whirl with speed. Are they not perhaps once more placed on the lathe by the carpenter of heaven?[40]

55. "The day, like a barber, banished the Night, lopping off her braid of darkness, with sharp razors, the rays of the sun. Verily the surface of the earth doth glisten black with masses of hair falling in consequence all around in the guise of diverse shadows.

39. As the sun journeys through the nether world, the serpent Ananta who upholds the earth on his thousand hoods looks at the sun, whose "thousand" rays represent the texts of the thousand schools of the Vedas. As the serpent has two thousand eyes, two on each hood, he surveys with one set of eyes the thousand Vedic texts in the shape of the solar rays; while with the other, he "listens" to each of the texts, serpents being believed to hear with their eyes.

40. i.e., Viśvakarman, the father-in-law of the sun, who once did this to make the sun's heat more tolerable. Cf. 21.18.

56. "Nala, the conch blown for luck we call thy fame. The moon, brother of the conch, is in the sky clearly engraved. Behold the decay of its rays, which doubtless makes one believe in their kinship. Behold also the moon's dense area of gloom, its deer-shaped stain.

57. "The moon is heavily pressed by the rays of the sun, advancing with might and main; (the sun) that is overshadowing the Viśākhā star and opening the lotus. The moon hath already half set, resembling at this moment a conch-cutting saw turning white with the paste of conch-dust, produced by the water applied to the conch for cutting it through.

58. "The sun frees the eyes of men from sleep at the same time as he bursts open the lotus; and Viṣṇu completed with his eye[41] the (required) number of a thousand lotuses (while worshipping Śiva). So there is a real kinship between lotus blooms and eyes. Based on this, the comparison of the eyes to the lotus is esteemed highly by poets.

59. "I know the night lotus kept a nightlong watch over the day lotus bed, opening its petal eyes. At the advent of the day, it now enjoys the pleasure of sleep deep with snores, the hum of the bees moving inside its petals.[42]

60. 'Say, what are the two original forms, for which Tātang is substituted in the Mahābhāṣya?' Thus asked by the crow whose voice is characterised by a form of the interrogative pronoun Kim, the cuckoo at dawn gave reply in the form of its sound Tuhī.[43]

61. "Yonder dove was certainly a student of Pāṇini's system of grammar. It has[44] on its neck an ornamental sign, the remains of numerous chalks worn out in the course of forming heaps of words.[45] Having forgotten everything it had learnt, it now shakes

41. i.e., by uprooting it. See Notes for the story.

42. The day lotus closes at night, while the night lotus opens at night and closes in the morning.

43. The crow is fancied as crying Kau, Kau (कौ) which in grammar is the dual of किम् and means 'which two?'. It is imagined that the crow wants to know the two original forms for which the verbal suffix तातङ् is substituted; whereupon the cuckoo, crying Tuhī, Tuhī (तुही), replies that the forms in question are Tu and Hi (तुश्च हिश्च तुही). The grammatical rule referred to is that तातङ् (तात्) may be substituted for the imperative suffixes तु and हि to denote benediction, e.g., भवतात्.

44. Lit. is accompanied by an adornment, etc.

45. The streak of white on the neck of a dove is fancied as caused by the dust from the writing chalk used by it in the course of its grammatical lessons.

its head, shouting forth the grammatical term Ghu, which it has by chance remembered at dawn, owing to the previous impression left on its mind by its reading from wooden slates.[46]

62. "In the east the sun, a golden pitcher over Indra's palace, charms one's heart with the amassed newborn beams of the palace-banner possessing the smooth beauty of saffron. Proper it is that the rays born of this pitcher should drink up the ocean of gloom.[47]

63. "Even two or three of its rays, acting like a conflagration in consuming the Tamāla forest of darkness, gave to the assembly of lotus blossoms the festival of day. So in vain the sun now hastily expands a flood of rays that is merely crushing the already crushed evil of darkness lingering on the surface of the earth, and in the directions and the sky.

64. "The sun, the submarine fire of the ocean of darkness, hath ascended far, an entertaining jester for the languid day lotus bed. How is it that the sun still assumes not its refulgent whiteness, and the expanses of solar rays still redden the sky?"

65. The minstrels then put on a set of ornaments, which the maids of the inner apartments placed before them, saying, "Pleased with this description of the morning, the queen has given you these presents, ornaments from her own person." The set of ornaments was chasing poverty away with the glare of its eyes, red with an impulse of wrath; (the glare) consisting of the lustre of its rubies.

66. Then the king, after he had performed his morning ablutions in the waters of the celestial Gaṅgā, his exit from the palace being unknown to the bards who came later, came in joy, occupying his chariot, superior to Kubera's Puṣpaka car, which he had obtained as part of his consort's dowry; and obtained in a moment the hospitality of the eyes of the bards describing the dawn.

67. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra etc. In the epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him who is engaged solely in creating new things, the nineteenth canto is at an end.

46. 'Ghu' is the natural sound of the dove (cf. Bengali घुघु). It is here imagined to be the grammatical term Ghu which the bird repeats as the last remnant of its knowledge of grammar. See Vocab. under घुसंज्ञा.

47. The sage Agastya, also born of a pitcher, had drunk up the natural ocean.

CANTO XX

1. Like a cloud from heaven, the chariot,[1] its speed increasing with the wind, reached the bejewelled floor of the mountain-high palace, a plateau with numerous minerals.

2. Damayantī then went up to receive her approaching beloved, as the waves of the western ocean do to receive the moon at dawn.

3. He who had seen the beauty of the golden lotuses of the celestial Gaṅgā perceived in her face, his looks full of love, a deep loving welcome.

4. Holding in her hand the lotus given to her by him as a message from heaven, she shone like Lakṣmī, her eyes resembling fullblown lotus blooms.

5. Though of little value, she valued it highly, because it was given by her beloved. She considered it worth a million, though it was worth a cowrie.

6. Her beloved said to her, "Slender one, if it please thee, let me finish the remaining rites[2] which prevent me from clasping thee round."

7. "Why does so much pleasure-restricting ritual fall to thee today?" Thus she said to him in anger in her mind, though not in words.

8. At that moment Kali said in his mind, "Foolish girl, thou art vexed even at a rite that separates thee from thy beloved for a moment. But do I not purpose to sever thee from him for good?"

9. She then went from the king to a lotus-faced companion of hers, as if disdainfully; just as Beauty goes from a night lotus bed to a neighbouring day lily.

10. Nala gratified the Triad of sacrificial fires in the daily session of Agnihotra oblations, as if he thought, "Let not them also be hostile to me like Kali and Dvāpara."[3]

1. Lit. chariot-cloud.

2. e.g., the Agnihotra oblation.

3. The word त्रेता meaning both the Tretā age and the three sacrificial fires is played upon. At first sight the sentence means: 'Let not the Tretā age also be hostile to me like Kali and Dvāpara'. The hostility of these two Ages to Nala has been described in Canto XVII.

11-12. After he had finished the morning rites, he went behind her, and closed her eyes with his hands, forbidding her girl companion to warn her with his hand. Damayantī's laughing comrades watched him, as if he were measuring the extent of his beloved's eyes with his outstretched palms.

13. "My dear, I recognise thee." Half uttering these words, she knew the touch to be another's as she unloosened the grasp of his hand. She then remained silent, assuming an air of being offended.

14. But he said to the fair one, "Thy anger is out of place, beloved. Should I not observe the religious austerities, by virtue of which I won thee?

15. "If it is thy purpose to take offence, because I greeted thee not after bathing, although I was thy slave during the night; then tell me, I bow to thee."

16. With fear and anger, resisting her consort's hands, with which he was about to touch her feet, she charmed him with her glances.

17. Bewitched by the dazzling in the corners of her eyes, Nala spake to the slender damsel thus.

18. "Have thy eyes, speedily going afar by casting side glances, turned back in fear at the sight of a pitfall, thy ears?

19. "Angry though thou art, thou dost bring me delight, o thou with lotus eyes! The light of the sun, though hot, creates the fragrance of the lotus.

20. "The Creator, whose creation varies from object to object, marked the moon, I fancy, with a dark spot, in order to remove all confusion between the moon and the orb of thy face.

21. "Thy words, clear and sweet, perfectly rival the pearls found on the banks of the Tāmraparṇī river; pearls that seem to be born in the womb of the moon.

22. "Thy words rose from the ocean of milk together with nectar. Lo, even to-day they are accompanied by smiles which look like jots from a flowing expanse of milk."

23. Bringing his beloved to his lap, he then adorned a couch, just as the moon, embracing the moonlight, adorns the mountain of the east.

24. Like as the mellow raincloud clings to the sky at the beginning of the rains, so he, loving as he was, long embraced his beloved to alleviate the pain caused by his absence from her.

25. Whelmed with emotion, he kissed her smiling face, as does the sun the flowering lotus, while reflected in its honey.

26. Beckoning to a maiden friend of his beloved, Kalā by name, he made her sit before him, and spake to her, making her a witness of his jesting.

27. "Why is it that Damayantī, thy lotus-faced comrade, takes no pity on us? Loving you all as she does, she, I fancy, values others lightly.

28. "But does she not, telling a lie, deceive even her friends, when she says, 'I favoured my beloved at night, surrendering myself to him?'

29. "She says to her friends, 'I have none but Nala in my mind.' But it is untrue; for Cupid 'who abides in the mind' is in her, his presence being inferred from her youth.

30. "If thou shouldst describe the beauty of her face, I would listen to thy words; for that beauty is unseen to me even now, her head being bent with shame.

31. "She looks at her comrades straight in the face;[4] but she casts merely a hasty look at me with the atom of a corner of an eye, as if I were an offender.

32. "Since she does not look at me now, methinks she has forgotten me, such being her attitude. But she did look at me when I went as a messenger to her.

33. "With nectar streams of words pleasant and true, she shows affection for her comrades. But, assuming a sullen pride, she does not tell me 'Thou art mine.'

34. "Kalā, whom among her friends does she not call by name? But she fights shy of my name 'Nala.'

35. "In her heart, cruel to me, and enveloped by her plump breasts, there is not the slightest room left. Where will she give me a place?

36. "Knowing her heart to be such, I realise why her hard breasts turn away from me, though their action is something which befits them."

37. When Nala became silent, having spoken thus ironically to Kalā, she said to him with a smile imitated from Damayantī's face.

38. "Rightly dost thou think she is cherishing for thee an

4. Lit. with both eyes complete.

affection that is fresh. But her feeling towards us her friends is in keeping with an affection that is old.[5]

39. "How can our newly married tender friend tell us how she was enjoyed by thee, thou, an adept in the art of love?

40. "Sire, the worlds celebrate thee as one who speaks truth; a wife who spoke otherwise would not be worthy of thee.

41. "Cupid is, indeed, in her mind. But, sire, Cupid is thyself; for our friend's mind is thy place of sojourn day and night.

42. "Cupid is thine own reflection, thine, who art in our friend's heart. Otherwise how doth Cupid resemble thee in beauty?

43. "Or, perhaps she cherishes both of you, Cupid and thyself, in her mind, there being a doubt about the identity of each, owing to your similar beauty. But it is thou she longs for.

44. "Seeing that it is hard to draw back one's heart once it is set on thee, the lotus-eyed maid, being afraid, casts only a glance at thee.

45. "From the moment of her seeing thee, thou hast been inseparable from her eyes. If there be doubt, look for thyself.[6] What faith is there in the words of others?

46. "When she transferred to thee the saffron of her breasts while embracing thee, really she said 'Such is my heart's love[7] for thee.'

47. "Our friend's throat is devoted to uttering in silent prayer thy name, a hymn of love. It has a rosary disguised as her necklace.

48. "We say, our comrade's heart being occupied by thy majestic self, her breasts came without, having no longer any room in her heart.[8]

49. "Hurt and scratched by thee (at night), how can her plump faultless breasts appear before thee,[9] covered as they are with shame?"

5. Verses 38–49 form a reply to what Nala had said to Kalā about Damayanti.

6. The girl playfully suggests that Nala should look into Damayanti's eyes and see his image in them.

7. There is a pun on राग meaning both "redness" and "love", which suggests that the saffron was the emblem of her love.

8. See Verse 35.

9. Lit. show their face. In Verse 36 Nala had complained of the वमुख्य or averseness of her breasts. वैमुख्य means literally "turning away of the face".

50. When he was thus drenched by Kalā with nectar-showering pleasant words, he asked his beloved, raising her face, "Is this really so?"

51. Nala's hand, while raising his beloved's face, shone forth like a day lotus, reconciled after long with the moon (by chance).

52. At that moment, smiling and bashful, Damayantī brought an intense delight to her consort, bowing her face once again.

53. Being in the company of his beloved, the king smilingly spoke to Kalā, her friend, desiring to have the pleasure of jesting again.

54. "Let thy comrade try to forgive the offence given to her by the day, in that she cannot practise on me the meaning of the verb niśi (to kiss), in the day, as she is wont to do at night.

55. "If the day has eclipsed the moon, the friend of her face, it has brought about the splendour of the day lotus blossoms, also the friends of her face.

56. "Having played with me, she has already overcome her bashfulness with regard to me. So ask her, for whom it has come back now.

57. "Let her not be angry with me for biting her lips at night: does ever a Bimba creeper get angry with a parrot which pecks at her fruits.

58. "Look, her breasts stole the beauty of an elephant's temples. The marks left by the driver's goad can be clearly traced on them.[10] Should I not then punish them, being a king?

59. "My mouth might be guilty of drinking the nectar of her nether lip. But what is the offence of my head that it is debarred from bowing low at her feet?

60. "Ask her then if I have offended her by paying heed to thy words. The lyre, indeed, sounds now harsh to me, while the cuckoo sounds cruel.

61. "With thee, her friend, let her have companionate talks (as she likes). But why does she forget the affection which she had cherished for us?"

62. Kalā then whispered something in Damayantī's ears, on the pretext of bringing her ear near to Damayantī's face.

10. Lit.....the beauty that is well marked by the traces left by the goad. The reference is to the nail marks on Damayantī's breasts.

63. "Well, wicked girl, thou didst not tell me anything about thy secret doings. Wait till I make the amiable king himself relate what thou didst do.

64. [11]

65. Damayantī remained silent. Kalā, pretending to hear words from her, made an affirmative sound at frequent intervals, and went on speaking.

66. Damayantī, however, struck her with the toy lotus of her hand, whereupon she stepped forward and spoke to the king, describing Damayantī's maturity in the art of love.

67. "Sire, look, look how she strikes me and threatens me with her frown; for she is angry because I pleaded for thee.

68. "She says to me, 'By what sign dost thou know that he is Nala? I fear he is Indra coming in a magic form.'

69. "Besides, as a proof that thou art Indra she contends that thou didst give her a lotus from a golden lily of the river of heaven as well as that thou hast come from heaven.[12]

70. "She says, 'I have seen how Indra assumed Nala's beautiful form by magic.'[13] She says also, 'I have heard how Indra wronged Ahalyā, Gautama's wife.'

71. "Damayantī's intelligence is keen as the tips of Kuśa blades! She fancies thou art Indra, because thy lotus hand has a sign like the thunderbolt[14] in it.

72. "So if thou art the real Nala, remove her suspicion by relating to her face those secret doings, witnessed by none except thyself and her."

73. Hearing these words, the falsity of which was concealed by Kalā's skilful delivery, Nala said to Damayantī, being unable to ascertain her feelings.

74. "Dost thou remember, while feigning to be asleep, thou wast thrilled with joy when I put my hand on thy navel? It looked like a lotus (on account of the bristling hairs).[15]

11. Indelicate.
12. See Verse 4 and 19. 66.
13. See Canto X.
14. Lit. infers thee to be Indra from thy lotus hand which clasps the thunderbolt. Indra is the wielder of the thunderbolt, while the 'thunder-sign' on the palm of the hand is a mark of sovereignty.
15. Lit. thou didst become lotus-navelled.

75. "Dost thou remember, o tender maid, in love's new revelry while thou wast whelmed with bashfulness and fear, I let thee go for fear of hurting thee, though I had only half completed my course with thee.

76. "Recollect, once when I came after winning a battle I pinched thee with my fingers amid a dense crowd, while thy hand was about to touch my feet in obeisance.

77. "Thou dost know, once after a love quarrel, grieved to have left me, thou didst draw and look at a picture depicting thyself and me in the company of each other. When I discovered thee, thou didst sever the figures by drawing a line between them.

78. "Thou hast not surely forgotten how enraptured by our joys of love, I drank thy tongue, not content with thy lips.

79. "Thou mightst remember how I told thy smiling comrades that a fresh nail-mark, imprinted on my bosom from thy breasts, while I embraced thee, was given by thee.

80. "Thou dost know, in convivial drinking bouts, while jesting with other maidens, I was angrily looked at by thee, and lay prostrate at thy feet before them.

81. "Thou dost know, once on my return from abroad, while I looked at thee with my heart full of love, thou didst embrace and kiss a comrade of thine in expression of thy sportive delight in her.

82. "Dost thou recollect, after passing bits of betel from my mouth into thine I justly demanded them back.

83. [16]

84. "Remember the joy of our mutual company when we never turned our backs on each other even during sleep. For we turned our backs at night, only after exchanging places with each other.

85. "Only remember, even in the presence of people, at a moment when their eyes were distracted, looking at something else, thou didst threaten me, pointing to thy nether lip which I had bitten.

86. "Remember, on seeing this, I appeased thee by folding my hands under the pretext of revolving the stalk of the toy lotus in my hand.

87. "Thou canst not remember, I fancy, an occasion when I offered thee betel without giving thee a nail-mark on thy lotus hand; nor can I remember one, when thou didst the like.

16. Indelicate.

88. "Remember how thou didst join thy friends, leaving me when I told some lie. When I followed thee there, thou didst gracefully rend a blade of grass in twain before me.

89. "Beloved, thou mightst remember, when thou couldst not proceed with love's course for a second time, I called thee in jest 'a summer night[17] resounding with the notes of the cuckoo.'

90. "Thou mightst remember thy anger, when, on seeing me partake of fresh Nimba fruits in the spring, thou didst suspect that I loved thy co-wives, and didst give me more of them to eat.[18]

91. "Remember how, after tasting a sugared dish, I praised it because it was prepared by thee; and how I feared thy nether lip which seemed to turn red with anger, because I disparaged it (by praising the sweetness of the sugar)."

92-96. [19]

97. Whelmed with shame while her beloved was thus relating her secrets, she covered her friend's ears with her hands in the midst of his speech.

98. It seemed as if those red lotus blossoms, Damayantī's hands, pressed her girl companion's ears, seeing that the girl's blue lotus eyes also "pressed"[20] her ears.

99. Damayantī (while she covered her friend's ears with her hands) seemed to cover up her consort's words which had got into her companion's ears, with the object of confining her secret in them, on account of her shame.

100. While Nala laughed aloud, seeing his beloved's prank, other companions of her smiled at a distance, even without knowing what the matter was.

101. Fairies of the earth as they were, they fondly showered on husband and wife flowers of their smiles, fragrant with their breath.

102. The smile of the girls, occasioned by Nala's laugh, beamed as if it were the blooming of a night lotus bed brought about by the light of the moon.

17. Summer nights are proverbially short.

18. Damayantī interpreted Nala's liking for the bitter Nimba fruit as a degeneration in taste, which led her to suppose that he was likewise fond of her co-wives.

19. Indelicate.

20. i.e., reached as far as the ears.

103. Among them, the clever Kalā recognised the voice of an intimate friend, ringing with laughter, and became bolder still.

104. Calling her aloud, Kalā said to her, "Come, fair maid, thou art deprived of a celestial joy. Drink thou the moon's nectar streams, these words from the king."

105. The slim-waisted girl had, however, heard a portion of the king's words, though she was at some distance from him. Just so people in the sacred Badarī, a little place, hear the tiny noise of the (adjoining) Kalpagrāma site.[21]

106. Kalā then saw that the expression of Damayantī's face, who was at her back listening to Nala's words, was reflected in Nala's crown gem.

107. Kalā seemed to be[22] hearing Nala's words still (though Damayantī had covered her ears), for she was mimicking her friend's bashfulness and other expressions of her feelings, inferring them from Damayantī's facial expression, reflected in Nala's crown gem.

108. Assuming similar airs again and again, she said to Damayantī, "I heard all that the king said. Let my tutelary deities prove false, if thou shouldst think I am telling a lie.

109-10. "Sire, thou shouldst check thy beloved. Her hands will merely ache from pressing my ear-rings hard." Thus saying, Kalā set free her ears from Damayantī's grasp. The latter also obeyed her consort when he asked her not to fatigue herself in vain.

111. The sound produced when Damayantī abruptly let go Kalā's ears seemed to be a clapping of the hands marking the termination of the continuous rumbling sound in her ears while they were kept shut by Damayantī with her hands.

112. Kalā stepped aside a little; then smiled and rejoiced. She then went near a comrade and pitifully entreated her thus.

113. "I will tell thee their secrets, all that I have heard. Come, friend, tell me what thou hast heard; exchange news with me."

114. Damayantī and Nala, who had been astonished while Kalā feigned to hear Nala's words, now shook their heads, when she entreated her comrade to tell her what she had heard.

21. Lit. Just as the tiny Badarī hears the small noise of.....
22. Lit. was inferred to be.

115. Nala said to her while she thus spoke to her friend: "Wait, I will teach thee a lesson if thou hast really deceived both of us with the audacity of a false oath."

116. Kalā replied, "Why dost thou suspect that I, thy beloved's serving maid, have spoken to-day a disgraceful falsehood?[23]

117. "I really heard something then; but it was the rumbling sound in my ears. Besides, I said simply 'I heard', but did not say I heard thy words.

118. "It is true that an oath in the name of the gods, though true, brings evil in its train. So, sire, with thyself as my witness I declare that my oath was not meant to be taken seriously.[24]

119. "Alas, I am blamed when I play a hoax upon you two. But why do both of you deceive me by saying that you never dallied with each other?"

120. Both the girls then whispered in each other's ears what they had heard (about the amorous play of Nala and Damayantī). They expressed their surprise ever and anon, and smiled profusely.

121. Then said Kalā, "Damayantī, be not angry with me. I whispered thy secrets in her ear, concealing them even from her other ear."

122. Nala then said to his beloved, "Thou hast seen the skill of thy comrades in deception. So beware of relying entirely on thy maiden friends."

123. But Kalā, too, said to her, "Friend, forsooth, thy consort never reveals thy secrets anywhere! Such a gallant personage is to be trusted, indeed!"

124. When she retorted in this way, Nala said to his beloved, "Say, Damayantī, I will turn out these two wicked girls from the room."

125. When the fair Damayantī delighted him with her consent, nodding her head, Nala, raising the empty hollow of his folded palms, showered water over the girls.[25]

126. Though they were at a distance, their robes were completely drenched by showers of water multiplying at Nala's will, while they stood agape with wonder.

127. With torrents of water easily accessible to him by virtue of Varuṇa's boon, he drenched their bosoms with water as he imbued their hearts with wonder.

128-9. With joy he then asked Damayantī to look at the two girls, who did not retire even at this. "Slender maid, look at these comrades of thine. They have been turned into Jaina ascetics[26] by the water, drenching their clothes before me. Their breasts are now open to view without let or hindrance, in spite of their wearing silken robes."

130. When their limbs were laid bare by the water, though they were covered with clothes, it seemed to be a magical illusion due to the fact that water is called Śambara.[27]

131. Or, perhaps their limbs became visible, because clothes are called Ambara, a name of the sky; while the beautiful gems in their pearlstrings were the stars visible in the sky.[28]

132. The two girls then went out ashamed, when they saw their condition; while the other girls, all of them, went out one after another, eager to look at the other two.

133. The girls, when they were out of the room, said to Damayantī, "O thou who hast studied the science of polity, those two comrades of thine are not to be neglected even now; for they are acquainted with thy secrets."

134-36. The king, however, shouted to the girls, "Your comrade Damayantī says: They two heard my secrets, but I saw theirs. Never believe their words, for they are hostile to me; the Creator himself installed them on the throne of falsehood and fraud. With ink drops of falsehood, who doth not, besides, play the artist in besmirching the spotless character of an enemy, cleansed though it may be with showers of fame?"

137. But the two girls replied, "We shall not speak much. We shall only tell the reason why[29] we have been all expelled."

26. The reference is to Digambara ascetics who do not wear clothes.

27. Śambara "water" is also the name of a demon famous for his magical powers. See Vocab. under शाम्बरी.

28. Lit. Or, perhaps owing to the clothes being Ambara, this invisibility took place, characterised by the vision of stars, namely, the beautiful gems.....

29. Lit. the purpose for which.

138. The girls did not notice[30] even the waving of hands with which chamberlains, whose hands quivered with age, forbade them to speak such words.

139. "Saucy jades, away hence. Fie on your foul speaking!" When the chamberlains so said, the girls ran away in fear; and the former retired as well.

140. Nala then said to his beloved, who stood with her face downcast, ashamed at the words of her comrades, "Never was there a girl companion so shameless and false.

141. "Ah, thy beautiful face looks abashed; harsh words would not come forth from it, even if thou shouldst suffer a mighty grief."[31]

142. He then lay down on the bed, placing her on his bosom. He closed his eyes, and enjoyed the softness of her limbs.

143. Placing his hand on her breasts, and passing it over the knot of her skirt, he rewarded the toil of his hand in taking hold of her hands during the marriage rites.

144. Carrying her with delight, seated on his bosom, he clearly declared that he had gone through the ceremony of "carrying her aloft."[32]

145. On account of the musk paint of her bosom being erased in contact with his perspiring fingers; that he had kneaded his beloved's breasts was likely to be echoed round among her maiden friends.[33]

146. He started up while giving her a scratch with his finger-nails on her bosom. When she looked at him, he said, "Has it not hurt me, abiding as I do in thy heart?

147. "Ah, it was improper that my sharp finger-nails should have left on thy spotless bosom a bloodstained mark;[34] just as

30. Lit. did not notice the prohibition made with the waving of hands....

31. Means also: Ah, the gold of thy face was burnt, enclosed in an earthen case (i.e., refined); silver would not come forth from it, even if it should be oppressed with intense heat.

32. This is the literal meaning of उद्वहन "marriage".

33. Lit. he made his beloved's breasts such that (the fact of) their being kneaded was liable to be echoed.....

34. Lit.....a mark was made in such a way that blood was in it.

harsh-speaking knaves fabricate a scandal about an innocent man, as if he were a sinner.

148. "Thy scarf kisses thy hips and thighs, and embraces thy bosom. Excellent, it enjoys something in keeping with its auspicious luck."

149. Looking at her perspiring, slightly visible hips, with her silken scarf lying flat on them, he cursed with a sigh the length of the day.

150. He bit even the portion of his beloved's face near her lips; and even there he imitated the movement of sucking her nether lip.

151. "Unbearable is the pain which Cupid's arrows inflict on me; have pity, have pity on me, o thou with nimble glances." Thus he teased her while she was in a pleasant mood.

152. Nala's eyes moved from the beloved's lotus face to the expanse of her bosom, and from there to her hips ever and anon.

153. Damayantī, however, quickly got up, and anxiously followed her friends, fearing the rashness of his impatience.

154. Damayantī's breasts and hips, which gently moved, seemed to retard her movements as best as they could; for they were eager to have the loving touch of Nala's limbs.

155. Though he had arms strong like the posts to which elephants are tied, and though she walked slowly owing to the weight of her hips, he could not catch hold of her, paralysed as he was by the touch of her limbs.

156. She crossed the doorway, turning back and smiling, as she saw her beloved, his words unfinished: "Embracing and embracing me o slender maid.....

157. The shy maid, sad in her heart, because she was cross with her beloved, could neither go to her comrades nor could she return.

158. A fair woman bard, coming near the door, then announced the midday to Nala. "Victory to thee, o king! The earth, arid with the heat of the noon, desires to drink the water in which thou bathest thyself.

159. "Conch-white water has been brought from the Gaṅgā. In contact with the ripples of thy hair, it desires to acquire the beauty, which it would by mingling with the (dark) Yamunā, uneven with ripples.

160. "Mounting the crest of the world, the sun now radiates its heat, possessing as it does a stupendous might, like thine own. But, after worshipping and meditating on Śivā, thou wilt see the sun brought low by thy religious merit."

161. At the approach of the time for worshipping and meditating on Śiva, the king, though morose at his beloved's absence, seemed to call up joy with an effort, and rose to go out; while he turned his eyes ever and again in the direction of the side-door, thinking of the possible return of his beloved who had abruptly gone out.

162. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra etc. In his epic, The Story of Nala, which describes emotions and topics not attempted by others, the twentieth canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

CANTO XXI

1. The kings, who paid their homage to Nala as he went out of Damayantīs bejewelled palace, demonstrated once more their feudatory status[1] by offering their hands to him.

2. On either side the kings, as they bowed to him, covered the passage with the wreaths of their heads; as if they thought it was too hard for his feet, though overlaid with China silk tapestries.

3. Rewarded with the high honour of being looked upon by him, the kings quickly offered marvellous jewels from their own countries, made all the more marvellous by the excellence due to the skill expended on them.[2]

4. There were kings who received from him as a sign of his favour the jewels presented to him by other kings; he indicating his offer of them by pointing his finger, or with a gleam in his eye or a movement of his eyebrows.

5. Like a father, he sent them away, after they had been gratified by his unceasing queries about their welfare conveyed in words pleasant and true.[3] Then he whose valour was beyond measure, trained those brought to him by a sense of discipleship, in the practice of weapons for hurling and weapons for striking.

6. He taught his able students an art of wielding weapons, not prevalent among mortals. Breathing restlessly, he longed for a bath, his forehead spotted with drops of sweat.

7. His body was first gently rubbed with the fragrant 'Yakṣa paste',[4] while his head was smeared with musk. High-bosomed women poured on him perfumed water, which attracted bees.

8. There helped him to bathe a friendly holy priest. The king was full of a mighty religious virtue. The priest poured over him ripples of sacred water streaming down from jars.

9. While Nala bathed, his lotus hands looked beautiful with blades of ceremonial Kuśa grass held in each; as if they carried streaks of smoke issuing from the fire of his absence from his beloved's bosom.

1. The word करदता means also "the offering of one's hand."
2. Lit.....excellence produced with care.
3. Lit. with pourings of pleasant and true words about welfare.
4. See Vocab. under यक्षकर्दम.

10. The water of the Gaṅgā, which he took in the hollow of his palm to rinse his face with, seemed to put heaven in his hand, reflected in the purity of the water.

11. The loving Earth, finding him, her husband,[5] separated from Damayantī, seemed to embrace her lover, limb touching limb, when he took up clods of earth softened by water.[6]

12. Blades of Kuśa grass sprinkled on his head sacred water, which seemed to be emitted by the waves of Gaṅgā, present in the bowl of Brahmā who lives at the root of Kuśa blades; waves present also at the feet of Viṣṇu who abides in the centre of them; and on the head of Śiva who lives at their tips.[7]

13. While he was engaged in the religious observance of holding the breath in the midst of the waters, his face looked beautiful as the moon, when it lived in times of yore in the waters of the ocean.

14. He, Cupid of the earth, put on a fringed cloth which was pure-shining and bright as the sky;[8] as if he wished to rival Śiva, whose attire consists of the ten regions of the sky.

15. An Indra among pious kings, did he not enwrap his bosom with the ambient of his scarf, as if he wished to restrain his heart which went forth to Damayantī ever and anon?

16. The lucky goddess of beauty presiding over his bath waited upon him. The bathing jars were her shining breasts; the ornamental dot of white clay on his brow was her moonlike face; and the drops of water which remained in his hair were her pearly teeth.

17. His nose tried[9] to smell the water, seeking its fragrance in vain; when it saw that his eye enjoyed the purity of the water;

5. A king is called the husband or lover of the earth.

6. It is the custom to apply sacred earth to the body while bathing, the colour of the earth depending on the caste of the individual. In the case of a Kṣatriya, the colour is red.

7. The water sprinkled by Nala on his head with Kuśa blades is fancied as sprays of Gaṅgā water supposed to lie hidden in them.

8. Designed to mean also: put on the sky itself, divided into ten regions, and possessing stars white-shining as mercury.

9. Lit. seemed. It is a part of the bathing rites to hold under the nose a palmful of water while reciting the अघमर्षण verses. The nose is fancied as trying, like the other limbs, to enjoy the properties of the water. As, however, water is odourless, its effort to smell it was in vain.

his body its coolness; his ears the mystic formulas invoking the waters; and his tongue the sweetness of it.

18. While the king was sprinking round the water which he had taken up with his hand, in order to worship the sun, the swirl of the spray in the flashing light of the sun suggested that the sun was once more moving on the lathe of the carpenter of heaven.

19. While he was telling his beads with care, the Vedic incantations seemed to resort to his lotus hand, assuming the guise of the crystal rosary; the pure, clear colour of the formulas appearing in the polished beads.[10]

20. The auspicious marks of barley sheaves on the joints of his fingers seemed to add to the grains of barley put by him in the water offered as a libation to the gods; while the mark of black sesamum on his hand was redoubled by the grains of black sesamum lying in the water offered by him as a libation to the Manes.

21. Going by a passage, perfectly clean, and untrodden by any one else, the sage king, with pure hands and feet, then entered the household temple,[11] where religious students acted as attendants.

22. There, at one place, over a large number of vases containing wreaths of flowers for the gods, there was in the air the smoke of incense provided by dark aloe wood, like a swarm of bees.

23. Lights were placed there, ornamental dots of gold to be put on the brows of the gods. On account of them, the night, become yellow like turmeric, its darkness destroyed by the lustre of the lights, looked as if it were putting forth young shoots.

24. There conch vases looked beautiful, filled with saffron powder, which seemed to be the symbol of the fire of their grief willingly borne out of love; grief caused by their separation from the pearls which had been inside them.

25. Vessels made of blue Garuḍa stones containing thick sandal paste resembled there Rāhu's mouth, with the moon falling an easy prey to its jaws.

10. Means also: Vedic incantations, 'the letters of which were lucid and clear owing to the presence of sacred mystic syllables' (e.g. ह्रीं, क्रीं etc).

11. See Vocab. under सुरार्चनवेश्म.

26. Vessels of silver full of black musk paste[12] looked like the moon with its bosom darkened by the deer serving as its emblem.

27. Rows of richly sugared curd-rice offerings, resembling Buddhist Stūpas, seemed like sprouts of piety emerging from that woodland of religious virtue.

28. At one place there an exuberance of Campaka blossoms surpassed in hue the golden Meru mountain, the abode of the gods; while a mass of Mallikā flowers excelled the crystal-peaked Kailāsa in whiteness.

29. The Earth there, hiding herself even in the presence of her beloved, the king, surpassed a matron in bashfulness, being without any space uncovered, owing to delightful offerings to the gods being spread out on it.

30. On the bejewelled pavements which had rays of sapphire inset in them like beautifully gleaming locks of hair, there appeared graceful movements on account of the trembling heads of singers being reflected therein.[13]

31. Nala, the moon of the earth, occupied an immaculate raised seat of gems in that chamber of worship, full of ornaments made of many-hued gems. It contained pure offerings to the gods, and was beautiful with heaps of multicoloured cloths.

32. While Nala worshipped the Sun perfectly and patiently, the deity thought that Karṇa's devotion to him was slight. The Sun concluded that even Sāmba (compared with Nala) had a heart believing only.[14]

33. During his repetition of the various mystic formulas dedicated to the sun, the wreath-shaped collection of rosary beads made of red sandal wood occupied his hand, as if to learn its deep rosy hue.

12. Lit. holding an interior thick with musk paste.

13. Lit. On.....pavements which had hair in the shape of the rays of sapphire, hair overlaid with lovely rays (also: hair pressed by a lover's hand), there appeared graceful movements owing to the reflection (therein) of the trembling of the heads of singers. The bejewelled pavements are fancied as young women, the bluish rays of sapphire being their hair. The movements of the heads of the singers reflected in the pavements are fancied as the movements of these women trying to get rid of the importunities of their lovers. See Vocab. under कुट्टमित.

14. i.e., believing, but not profoundly devoted. For the earlier and better reading see Notes. Sāmba was Kṛiṣṇa's son, a devotee of the Sun.

34. Śiva's idol then looked beautiful, worshipped by Nala with a Dhattūra flower, as if it were a flowery trumpet[15] acquired by Nala, defeating Cupid in a battle.[16]

35. Worshipping Śiva's hand with a smiling Nāgakesara flower, he seemed to decorate it with the white skull of Brahmā,[17] the ruler of the region which exists neither sideways nor below.[18]

36. Decorating Śiva's neck with a wreath of blue lotus blossoms, he made even the crystal frame of the idol accord with the name Blue-necked Śiva.

37. He burnt the incense 'Pura' and 'Cupid's arrow' before Śiva's idol, thinking that Śiva, the enemy of 'Pura'[19] and the enemy of Cupid, would be pleased if he did so.

38. He closed his eyes in the depth of his meditation, as if for fear of the moon[20] on Śiva's head; for even at that moment Damayantī's absence was unbearable to him.

39. He bowed to Śiva, lying prostrate on the ground, as if he were Cupid surrendering himself, leaving the flowers serving as his sword, bow and arrows at Śiva's feet.

40. [21]

41. Like a wreath of bees, the string of rosary beads occupied his hand graceful like a new leaf, while he, devoted to Śiva, was engaged in meditating on the Śatarudriya hymn.

42. The king then worshipped Viṣṇu with the rites connected with the Puruṣa-sūkta hymn. He bowed also to the twelve images of Viṣṇu uttering the 'twelve-lettered formula.'[22]

43. He looked at Viṣṇu's idol seated[23] on a winding wreath of Mallikā flowers, looking like a Duṇḍubha snake; as if he saw Viṣṇu himself resting on the coil of the serpent Ananta's body.

15. It will be noted that Dhattūra is a trumpet flower.

16. i.e., in a contest of beauty.

17. Śiva had cut off one of the five heads of Brahmā, and during the penance that followed he had to use the skull as a begging bowl.

18. i.e., the upper regions.

19. 'Pura' here refers to the three cities (पुर) of the demons destroyed by Śiva. See also Vocab. under पुर and कामशर.

20. It will be remembered that the moon is unbearable to separated lovers.

21. A variation of 39.

22. ओम् नमो भगवते वासुदेवाय.

23. Lit. placed on a seat made with a.....

44. Nala's votive garland made of blue lotus blossoms flashed on Viṣṇu's bosom; as if it were an endless succession of the wide flashes of Lakṣmī's glances, whose bejewelled home consists of the Kaustubha gem on his bosom.

45. With a wreath of gold, he made superfluous the hundreds of Ketaka flowers of golden hue, which were on the idol's head; with a wreath of silver the offering of white lotus blossoms; and with a wreath of rubies the Karavīra flowers.

46. By virtue of the offerings of boiled rice made by Nala, Viṣṇu became "one to whom the demon Bali was wholly devoted";[24] by means of the musk offered by Nala he became "Kṛiṣṇa";[25] while in consequence of Nala's worshipping him with water contained in a multitude of conch vessels, the idol "became provided with[26] Viṣṇu's emblems—the conch, the wheel and the lotus."[27]

47. While the king worshipped Viṣṇu, the smoke wreaths from the incense of black aloe wood went out through the windows; as if they were Śiva's snakes[28] darkened by the disgrace of their fear (of Viṣṇu's emblem, Garuḍa).

48. Covering the image[29] with thousands of smiling garlands of Mālatī flowers, interspersed with priceless wreaths of gems, Nala seemed to immerse it in the ocean of milk[30] abounding in gems.

49. The lotus seed beads in the rosary, coming into contact with his hand, while he was meditating on the Viṣṇu hymn, seemed to reoccupy for ever their lotus home.[31]

50. The long wreath of Mallikā flowers placed by the king in humility at Viṣṇu's feet with a bent head looked like the Gaṅgā starting for the earth,[32] followed by the suppliant Brahmā.

24. Means really: 'one to whom a plenty of boiled rice was offered.'

25. Means really: 'black'.

26. Means really: 'one whose worship took place with water contained in a multitude of conch (vessels).'

27. The verse is designed to mean at first sight by puns that Nala by his devotion endowed the idol with the characteristics of the real Viṣṇu. The puns have been explained above, but when the epithets are rightly construed the verse becomes a mass of meaningless repetitions.

28. Śiva's idol was obviously close to that of Viṣṇu. The bird-king Garuḍa feeds on serpents.

29. Lit: him. The original makes no distinction between Viṣṇu and his idol.

30. The natural home of Viṣṇu.

31. Nala's hand is the lotus.

32. From Viṣṇu's feet.

51-2. "The holy Viṣṇu, though he gave evidence of his love for the goddess of wealth Lakṣmī by placing her on his bosom, honoured Sarasvatī, the goddess of speech, placing her in his throat, above Lakṣmī's abode." Thus thinking, Nala, not content with worshipping Viṣṇu with plentiful rich offerings, adored him with gifts of pearlstrings of pleasant words.

53. "Thy praise is far beyond the range of words. The attribution by us of a visible form to thee is a reproach to thee. So do thou forgive my incoherent utterance." Having thus said, he spake these words.

54. "O thou who art self-manifest, is it not true that my desire to describe thee, foolish as I am, is like a desire of darkness to reveal the radiance of the sun?

55. "Thou art not comprehended by mind and speech; yet ought not these to direct themselves to thee? Clouds gratify the anxious Cātaka pair, though it reaches not the clouds.

The Fish Incarnation—

56. "While thou wast disguised as a fish, the waters of the ocean thrown up by thy tail dashing against them, perhaps became white in contact with the surface of the sky, and emerged as the Gaṅgā of heaven.

The Turtle Incarnation—

57. May thy Turtle Form, who art able to protect the earth, protect the world; a form marked with circles on the border of its back, as if they were scars left by the earth upheld through many a creation.

Boar Incarnation—

58. "May thy jaw, the abode of the world, gratify me; the jaw of thy Boar Form, whose four hoof marks in the regions are the four oceans, I know.

59. "Playful Boar, because thou didst embrace the Earth, slipping from thy grasp while she was being elevated by thee from the nether world; the orb of the universe, since thou didst transcend its limits, looked like a Kadamba flower wherewith to worship thee, on account of thy densely bristling hairs projecting forth from it.[33]

33. It is imagined that the boar was so gigantic that, while clasping the Earth, his erect hairs pierced through the orb of the universe, which in consequence looked like a Kadamba flower with its erect filaments blossoming in Viṣṇu's honour.

The Man-lion Incarnation—

60. "Protect me, O Lion, with thy roars, deep and fierce. Thou didst emerge from the woodland of the chief of the demons;[34] thou whose human half was created by the piety of the gods,[35] which acts as an armoury destroying their foes.

61. "May the five claws of thy hand protect us; (claws) with the demon's entrails resembling torn ropes attached to them, while thou didst seem to draw out Indra's riches fallen into the demon king's cavernlike belly.[36]

The Dwarf Incarnation—

62. "O Dwarf, give us the joy of our hearts, thou, a stripling, clever in cunning speech; for thou didst say, 'O Bali, thou dost fulfil the desire of all; why dost thou not fulfil mine?'

63. "I bow to thee, disguised as a dwarf. Bali said to thee with a thrill passing through him, 'Here I am. Ardently I long to bestow my wealth on thee, who art eager for a gift.[37]

64. "Dwarf, protect the world with such veiled words as these, 'Living for ever, thou wilt have home and family ties with happy beings in heaven and on the earth. Here is my hand; pour on it the ceremonial water.'[38]

65. "O Dwarf, sanctifier of the humble! Mayst thou protect us. Bali spake to thee thus, 'Ah, why dost thou hold out thy hand? I will give all to thy revered self.'

Paraśurāma Incarnation—

66. "Victory to thy arms, to thine, who wast incarnate as Paraśurāma! They were fitted to destroy that Kṣatriya race which

34. Might mean also: Thou didst originate in that primeval forest, namely, the demon (i.e., Hiranyakaśipu whose vicious oppression made this incarnation necessary).

35. i.e., this man-lion form was produced by the religious austerities of the gods for the destruction of the demon.

36. The imagery is that of a person pulling out a valuable object fallen into a well with a prong. The entrails of the demon are likened to the ropes torn in the process of extrication.

37. Lit. gift-water, i.e., the ceremonial water offered as a prelude to a gift.

38. The dwarf's words really meant: 'In the heaven of the nether regions thou wilt have thy abode and captivity, held fast by serpents for ever. Here is my hand, give the world to me!' The expression 'heaven of the nether regions' (क्षितितले दिवि पातालाख्ये वर्त्मनि) is either sarcastic or used as in 2.84.

had emerged from thine own arms, while thou wast creating the world in primordial times.

67. "Glory to thy assiduity in doing what is right! thou didst give the earth to the birds for food; the ever impure earth with many a husband. She had been cut into nine pieces by the Creator in his wrath.[39]

68. "O son of Reṇukā, being the destroyer of Kārtavīrya, thou couldst easily have slain Rāvaṇa. So I bow to the fact of thy re-appearance as Rāma, inexplicable as it is owing to the simultaneity (of the two incarnations).[40]

Rāma Incarnation—

69. "O Rāma, verily the Creator who surpasses all other artists created the first Rāma born of Reṇukā, merely by way of sketching practice with the object of creating thee.[41]

70. "Thou ornament of the world, o thou who art free from birth, thou mayst be born as the son of Daśaratha as thou wilt. No harm in it. Thine own might, o lord, is able to remove all harm.

71. "Hero among the Raghus, if thou dost not vouchsafe to me the knowledge of the supreme truth, give me even that delusion, as a result of which the army of Rāvaṇa, deluded in the course of the fight, saw the whole world pervaded by thee.

72. "Twice didst thou renounce 'the earth-born splendour.'[42] First at the command of thy father, then for fear of the ignorant.

39. The earth is fancied as a lewd woman who has many lovers in the kings who are styled 'husbands of the earth.' The earth divided into nine spheres (See Notes) is the body of the woman cut to pieces by the angry Creator and given to birds for food. The word द्विज 'bird' means also a Brāhmaṇa, and refers to the story of Paraśurāma annihilating the Kṣatriyas and presenting the earth to the Brāhmaṇas as a gift.

40. Kārtavīrya who was killed by Paraśurāma was even more powerful than Rāvaṇa, having once imprisoned the latter. So Rāvaṇa could easily have been slain by Paraśurāma, and there was in fact no necessity for the Rāma incarnation in order to kill Rāvaṇa.

41. i.e., Paraśurāma was created as a preliminary exercise in order to create his more perfect younger contemporary Rāma.

42. (1) The royal sovereignty which Rāma had to give up when banished by his father; (2) Sītā, born of the earth, whom Rāma renounced, believing popular gossip.

Didst thou not twice traverse the 'ocean'[43] that hath Laṁkā in the midst of its waters?

73. "'Let me not die from the arrows of the god of love by surrendering Sītā.' Thus thinking the monster Rāvaṇa chose a blessed death at thy hands,[44] making true the boon that he should not die at the hands of a god.[45]

74. "Is it not true that Śambuka's ocean-traversing fame is brighter even than a cluster of conchs, because he died by thy hand, which had destroyed Rāvaṇa with his army?[46]

75. "Having earned thy fame by striking terror into the heart of Rāvaṇa, terrible to Death himself, wast thou not ashamed to have renounced thy consort for fear of insignificant villains?

76. "O saviour of the helpless, be thou my refuge. Thou wast an ocean with a submarine fire, to wit, thy separation from thy beloved consort. But thou didst sacrifice thy life, like an offering of straw, in the fire of thy momentary separation from thy brother Lakṣmaṇa.[47]

77. "Moved to pity by thee, rightly did the first-born poet[48] compose a poem, an ocean of verses; the poet who had composed a verse in his grief even at the sight of a Krauñca bird's misery.

78. "Assuming the form of Lakṣmaṇa, didst thou not, knowing what was right, cut off Śūrpaṇakhā's ears? For thou didst

43. वारिराशिः refers to the ocean which was crossed by Rāma on his way to Laṁkā. When construed as वा+अरिराशिः it refers to the enemies subjugated by Rāma, i.e., the Rākṣasas who lived in Laṁkā in the midst of the waters.

44. Lit. purified himself with thy weapons.

45. Rāvaṇa had received a boon from Brahmā that he should not die at the hands of a god. It is here fancied that he allowed himself to be killed by the holy man Rāma rather than succumb to the arrows of the god of love, by returning the stolen Sītā to Rāma.

46. Śambuka, a Śūdra, was killed by Rāma to put a stop to the evils caused by his performing religious austerities from which Śūdras were debarred.

47. i.e., Rāma patiently bore the grief caused by his separation from Sītā, but he could not live without Lakṣmaṇa even for a moment. It is well-known how Rāma fell into a swoon at the news of Lakṣmaṇa being wounded by Meghanāda, and later drowned himself after Lakṣmaṇa had done so in the waters of the Sarayū.

48. i.e., Vālmīki who described Rāma's sufferings in the Rāmāyaṇa.

think, 'Earless' is her father's name, and it is not proper that she should have ears.[49]

Kṛiṣṇa Incarnation—

79. "May thy arms, thine, who art disguised as Yādava, destroy the creeper of my sins. Thy arms uprooted an all-giving Kalpa tree, as if because it vied with them in the pride of its charity.[50]

80. "At that epoch, during the sports of thy childhood, thou didst cut asunder the waves (of the Yamunā), striking them with pot-sherds; as if it were a prelude to thy subsequent sport of cutting off Bāṇa's arms. May that protect us.

81. "Salutation to thee! In order to baffle Karṇa's power (Śakti), thou didst provide Arjuna's chariot with a banner, namely, the monkey Hanūmat, who had extracted the spear from Lakṣmaṇa's body as he lay with the Śakti spear stuck in his bosom.

82. "Though Bhīṣma was devoted heart and soul to thee, thou didst not favour him by transporting him to heaven in his corporeal form, in order that he might abstain from union with the nymphs even in heaven for fear of breaking his vow.[51]

83. "Thou wast moved to pity by Karṇa, the son of the sun, whom[52] Arjuna killed with thy help; and didst gain thy object when Arjuna, born of the dynasty of the moon, defeated[53] Karṇa with thy help. Carrying the weeping sun and the laughing moon in the form of thy eyes, thou didst then exhibit both[54] sorrow and joy.

84. "O thou to whom Rādhā is dear as thy life! thy friendship with Arjuna, the enemy of Rādhā's[55] son Karṇa, was in no way fitting. But it is certainly proper that thou, the beloved of

49. The reference is to the temptation of Lakṣmaṇa by Śūrpaṇakhā. Her father's name was Viśravas which means literally 'earless.' She was disfigured by Lakṣmaṇa with whom Rāma is here identified.

50. Kṛiṣṇa transplanted the Pārijāta tree from heaven to the courtyard of his mistress Satyabhāmā, by defeating Indra in battle.

51. i.e., in order that Bhīṣma might continue to be a chaste bachelor even in heaven.

52. Lit. whom thou caused to be killed (by Arjuna).

53. Lit. on account of Arjuna whom thou caused to be victorious.

54. Lit. half. The sun and the moon form the eyes of Viṣṇu. Now, as the Sun wept at the death of his son Karna and the Moon rejoiced at the victory of his kinsman Arjuna, Viṣṇu appeared to shed tears of joy and sorrow simultaneously.

55. The name Rādhā is played upon. Karna's foster-mother Rādhā was not the same as Kṛiṣṇa's mistress of that name.

Śrī, the goddess of wealth, shouldst hold 'the child of Śrī'[56] incessantly on thy bosom.

85. "Verily thou art Balarāma, who is a white hair from that other form of thine (viz., the all-first Nārāyaṇa).[57] Balarāma again is identical with the serpent Ananta. It is proper that this incarnation of thine should be graceful like the grey hair of thy primeval form.[58]

86. "Thou[59] art the lord of sweet-smelling voluptuous women. Thou art infinite, though assuming a finite form.[60] Thou dost possess a charm made graceful by wine, the source of pleasure. Thou hast a beaming moonlike radiance.

87. "O lord of Revatī, thou fulfiller of wishes, it is proper that the beauty of thy azure clothing should be charming in contact with the (white) lustre of thy body. Thou art delighted when the earth is happy.[61]

Buddha Incarnation—

88. "Thou exponent of monistic being, the stream of consciousness is the only reality for thee. Thou art wise, even without being learned in the three Vedas. Thou didst reject the four categories of existence. Thou art conqueror of the five-arrowed Cupid and possessor of the six forms of knowledge. Do thou protect me![62]

89. "While thou, the conqueror of Cupid, wast realising the momentary character of things and the non-existence of the soul,

56. This is the literal meaning of Śrīvatsa which is really the footprint of a Brāhmaṇa on Viṣṇu's bosom.

57. The fair-complexioned Balarāma, here identified with Kṛiṣṇa, is believed to represent a grey lock of hair which the all-first Nārāyaṇa i.e. Viṣṇu plucked from his head.

58. Balarāma is usually regarded as an incarnation of the white-bodied Ananta who upholds the earth on his head. But he is here identified with Kṛiṣṇa and described as white like the grey hair of the all-first Nārāyaṇa referred to above.

59. Balarāma is the subject of Verses 86 and 87.

60. Means also: the form of the serpent Ananta (see above). शेष 'finite' is also a name of Ananta.

61. Lit. with the lustre of thy body, thine, whose delight is caused by the appearance of the joy of the earth (or by the blossoming of the night lotus). कुः पृथिवी तस्या मुदो हर्षस्याविर्भावेन भाविता उत्पादिता रुचिः प्रीतिर्यस्य तस्य। कुमुदस्य कैरवस्याविर्भावेन वा।

62. See Appendix I (Buddhist Doctrines) and Vocabulary under षडभिस.

Cupid's flowery arrows dropped (from his hand), like a shower of flowers from divine hands.[63]

90. "The tips of Cupid's flowery arrows became round in shape[64] because they turned completely blunt, when he discharged them at thy heart whose armour was its steadfast moral strength.

91. "Brahmā is called four-mouthed,[65] because he is eloquent in celebrating thy praise; while Śiva's throat is black, because he calls himself omniscient while thou dost exist, knowing all.

Kalkin Incarnation—

92. "Do thou uproot my tenfold sin,[66] through the agency of thy tenth incarnation Kalkin, who wieldeth in battle a sword dark as smoke, and destroyeth infidels, like the fire of the epoch of universal ruin.

93. "On account of thee, roaming over the earth, and white all over with the dust of battle, like fame incarnate and pervasive, the name of thy father Viṣṇuyaśas became true to its meaning.[67]

Dattātreya Incarnation—

94. "I bow to thee incarnate as Dattātreya, who followed the path of absolute monism. He gave Arjuna his fame.[68] His appellation 'Sinless' was occasioned by his Yoga meditations. He acted like the sun on the darkness of worldly delusion to which king Alarka was subject.

Diverse forms of Viṣṇu—

95. "Victory to thee! Incarnate as Rāma, thou didst kill Indra's son Vāli, having favoured the Sun's son Sugrīva. I bow to thee, Kṛiṣṇa; thou wast the ally of Indra's son Arjuna, and didst slay the Sun's son Karṇa.[69]

63. The idea is, the arrows of the baffled Cupid dropped from his hand and looked like a shower of flowers released by the gods in honour of Buddha.

64. Lit. umbrella-shaped. The reference is to the full-blown flowers serving as Cupid's arrows.

65. चतुरास्य 'four-mouthed' means also 'able-mouthed' (चतुर+आस्य).

66. See Notes.

67. Viṣṇuyaśas is the father of Kalkin. The word means "one who has a pervasive fame' (विष्णु व्यापकं यशो यस्य).

68. Lit. the cause of the earning of fame by Arjuna (Kārtavīryārjuna).

69. i.e., through the agency of Arjuna. Viṣṇu is here described as doing during one incarnation things diametrically opposite to what he had done during another.

96. "Victory to thee. Thou didst pervade the regions with thy form with the three steps, after thou hadst assumed the form of the tiniest dwarf. Salutation to thee, o thou who massacred one and all, assuming the form of Kalkin, after thou hadst become incarnate as Buddha, remote from all talk of slaughter.

97. "Thou with the three (all-pervading) steps, do thou purify me. Did Rāhu, coming into contact with thy foot, serve as thy shoe?[70] Did the bear Jāmbavat, circling round thee in worship, give thee an encircling noose while thou wast binding Bali?[71]

98. "Is it to be wondered at that one who had, with a semi-circular axe, lopped off the thousand arms of Kārtavīryārjuna,[72] cut off with an entire circular blade[73] the multitude of Bāṇa's arms?[74]

99. "Taking the Pāñcajanya conch and a lotus in thy hands, thou dost tell the demons, 'Ye are surely sentient. Look, even inanimate things have renounced their hostility to me.'

100. "On thy bosom with a shining sylvan wreath on it, the high-bosomed goddess of wealth abides, thrilled by her unbroken contact with thee; as if she were a Bilva twig with a pair of fruits attached to it.[75]

101. "The lotus forsakes not thy hand, as if with the object of learning its perfect beauty. The moon whose rays make the night lotus bloom waits upon thy face, its orb serving as thy (left) eye.

102. "Ah, glorious are the combinations formed by thee, those of Nara and Hari, which served to destroy thy arch-enemy Hiraṇyakaśipu and Rāvaṇa and the throng of the Kaurava heroes.[76]

70. When Viṣṇu disguised as a dwarf assumed the proportions of a giant, one of his footsteps was located in the sky which is, therefore, called Viṣṇu's footstep(विष्णुपद). The black Rāhu consisting of a severed head is here likened to a shoe.

71. The ceremonial circumambulation of the bear is likened to a noose.

72. During the Paraśurāma incarnation.

73. i.e., the Sudarśanacakra.

74. During the Kṛiṣṇa incarnation.

75. कण्टकित 'thrilled' refers also to the Bilva twig which, too, is कण्टकित 'thorny'.

76. In the case of Hiranyakaśipu, Nara and Hari mean Man and Lion, referring to the Narasiṁha incarnation; in the case of Rāvaṇa, Man (i.e. Rāma) and Monkey (i.e. Sugrīva); and in the case of the Kauravas, Man (i.e. Arjuna) and Kṛṣṇa. The word Hari has here three different meanings.

103. "Of what nature is the half-Śiva form[77] which thou hast assumed, magician as thou art? Surely thou art Śiva entire! The man who understands by means of the Vedas doth, however, know thee to be infinite, even though thou dost assume a finite form.

104. "The argument for salvation being meaningless on account of the concatenation of ever succeeding births due to deeds performed in previous births, no solution ever occurs to any one save intensive contemplation of thee.

105. "In order to assume the Hari-Hara form, didst thou divide thy body in two halves, vertically splitting it? But, during the Man-Lion incarnation, why didst thou split it from side to side? Indeed, what questioning is there of one who is free?

106. "Thou who hast realised all desires, why dost thou create the universe? Why dost thou destroy it, if it is made by thee? Why dost thou maintain it, descending to the earth again and again, if it must be destroyed by thyself?

107. "Rising from the waters of the ocean, the fickle goddess of wealth, Lakṣmī, settled on thee, thinking of her former companions—the Gaṅgā abiding at thy feet, the lotus in thy hand, the Kaustubha gem upon thy bosom, and the moon in thine eye.[78]

108. "Owing to the opposition of manifold objections based on reasoning, the phenomena of the world cannot properly be the basis of the diversities that exist. So it is at thy will that the universe has this and that (apparent) diversity coming into view. That is the meaning of the truth.

109. "Thou dost know which self of the sage Mārkaṇḍeya (after he had entered into thy stomach) went out of it, unable to distinguish between his two selves mingled together, having seen inside thy stomach the things of the universe just as they were outside.[79]

110. "Let the universe first rest on the foundation[80] of thy innate power, thou being the Absolute; then might it rest on the

77. The form known as Hari-Hara, half Viṣṇu and half Śiva.

78. These were in the ocean along with Lakṣmī before the churning episode.

79. It is said that during the universal deluge the sage Mārkaṇḍeya entered into Viṣṇu's stomach and saw there the whole universe just as it used to be outside. Here, the supposed confusion is between Mārkaṇḍeya's own selves: the one that was in Viṣṇu's stomach, like the rest of the universe, and the other that had just gone in.

80. Lit. creeper.

head of Ananta, the lord of serpents, or in thy own stomach[81] while thou art disguised as a child. Thou art in every way the support of the worlds.

111. "At thy feet is the river whose waters are the source of religious merit. On thy bosom the goddess Lakṣmī doth beam, the source of wealth. The god of desire is thy child. Thyself thou art the Absolute, giving ultimate freedom.

112. "It is hell that should fear those who utter thy name, even at random, destroyer of hell as thou art. Why should they fear hell?

113. "A man who is devoted to thee need not fear among the causes of death even the thunder. For, at such a moment, from a Vaiṣṇava's throat, thy name quickly goes up, even without any effort.

114. "A train of thought devoted to thee washes out the refuse that accumulates in the heart of man, even as refuse accumulates in the interior of a house which is being in every way cleansed.

115. "'Rāma', thy name, is an abode of virtues, incomprehensible though its particulars are to people such as we; otherwise, how is it that, in three generations, thyself didst adopt this name?

116. "Taking pity on me, devoted to thee, do thou deliver me from darkness, with thy right eye, the sun. With thy left eye, the moon, turned towards me, wilt thou not allay my heat, o lord?

117. "Shameless I am, desiring with mere words to receive thy favour, difficult to obtain even by austerities; I who, alas, daily transgress thy commands in the form of injunctions and prohibitions.

118. "Thou whose form is the universe, o thou Creator of the universe, in my tiny heart how much of the prodigy of thy might can I comprehend? How much gold does a poor man tie in his rags, when he acquires the Mount of Gold?"

119. After he had invoked Hari in these words, Nala became completely absorbed in meditation, while he did acts in keeping with his love and devotion to Viṣṇu, seen by him in a vision by virtue of contemplation.

120. Liberally he showered riches on the hands of Brāhmaṇas, and gave away to worthy recipients the offerings made in the sacrifice in honour of the Manes. He then entered his residence, full of humility, after he had, with beatitude, worshipped Viṣṇu in the Hari-Hara form.

121. After the midday rites, Nala, the moon of the earth, regaled with the nectarlike rice taken by him, adorned with his lustre his marvellous mountain-high chamber, which faced the east and approached Indra's palace in beauty.

122. Damayantī, after she too had finished her devotional worship of the gods, took her meal after her husband had eaten. With her limbs extremely languid on account of the weight of her ornaments, she occupied his lap which was eager to hold her in its bosom.

123. A maiden friend of hers followed her, carrying in her lotus hand a parrot's cage like a mass of beauty. The parrot's beak was clearly red as the ripe Bimba fruits eaten by it; while its feathers were deep green like unripe fruits.

124. Another girl followed her with a frenzied cuckoo perching on a crystal rod sidewise held; a singing cuckoo, which was, as it were, the climax of the blackness of the dark half of the month.[82] In it the word Kuhū and its meaning were clearly joined in mutual relationship.[83]

125. Damyantī's companions, daughters of the king of the Gandharvas, and disciples of herself in the practice of the arts, who were adept in playing soft music on the lyre, went over to the king, seated as he was, to sing to the lyre before him.

126. The lyre of the gazelle-eyed maidens shone forth, having just uttered an indistinct, soft and low air; as if it, at the outset, felt too nervous to produce any sound near Damayantī's creeper-like throat, so full of melody.

127. The lyre had joined itself to tunes in order to acquire resemblance to Damayantī, who was the abode of the perfection of all the arts and qualities possessed by her. So even now the lyre is known among people as 'Full of Disgrace'; for it had first occasioned a scandal, its own impudent act.[84]

82. Acc. to Nārāyaṇa: 'which represented the climax of the deep black of its wings.' See also Vocab. under बहुल.

83. Kuhū is an onomatopoetic word signifying the sound of a cuckoo, but it means also the dark Amāvāsyā night which the bird resembled in colour. Cf. 1. 100; 8. 65.

84. i.e., its audacity in vying with Damayantī's voice. परिवादिनी 'a seven-stringed lyre' means also 'scandalous' (fem.); परिवाद means both 'scandal' and 'the bow with which a lyre is played.' The epithet धृताखिलकलागुण..... refers

128. Like a female elephant, the lyre, resting close to the mighty king,[85] sent up a high-pitched note melodious with the Niṣāda tune; while it vibrated at its top to the accompaniment of quarter tones, and underwent a wondrous play of the hand.

129. Was not Damayantī's sweet-toned throat made by extracting the entire quintessence of lyres? Perhaps on account of this, the lyre, realising its inner hollowness,[86] kept to the corner in houses,[87] being ashamed.

130. The lyres then chanted forth songs of eulogy acting like honey on the ears of that couple, with the sequence of their letters perfectly distinct, in such wise that the tame parrot of Damawantī, the Rati of the earth, repeated all the songs thus, showering delight.

131. "Verily, from our own words will ye both know the shallow ford of our intellect, of high talents as ye are. Yet we sing your praise, lest even such knowledge as we possess should remain undiscovered by you, on account of our silence on an occasion demanding speech.

132. "The mountain-born Pārvatī occupies the lap of the moon-crested Śiva, who is beautiful with the forms of the serpents on his body. Thou, too, king's daughter, dost occupy the lap of this Crown-gem of kings,[88] who is lucky in the joys of life. A parallel indeed is this; but there is a difference. Even in this life, also to the lyre in which case the Guṇas are the strings and the Kalās the pegs of the lyre. See Notes.

85. Lit. the 'elephant' of the race of kings. कुञ्जर 'elephant' means in such cases 'great', but here the lyre sounding before Nala is likened to a female elephant trumpeting near her mate. The awkward comparison is due to the belief that the Niṣāda tune produced by the lyre had its origin in the roar of elephants. Applied to the female elephant, the epithets mean: 'resting close to a mountain-born elephant and shaking the head with the ears and moving the trunk in diverse ways.'

86. Apparently, worthlessness. Lit. tenuity. The reference is to the holes in the frame of a lyre.

87. Also: did not forsake its bow in the course of the cadences. कोण 'corner' means also 'the bow with which a lyre is played.' वा + आलयेषु (in houses) is to be construed also as वा लयेषु (during cadences).

88. i.e., Nala.

thou art the Satī[89] of thy consort, famed for participating in Indra's being.[90]

133. "Who ever fancies Damayantī is Rati (Cupid's wife); she whose lustre begets Rati (love)? Who again surmises thee to be Cupid, whose tenure of life as a god was cut short by (the fire of) Śiva's eye?[91]

134. "Thou art rejoiced at the sheen of her moonlike countenance. Her pearlstring has a gleam exceeding that of a stream. She resembles a sacrificial altar in the region of her waist,[92] and the middle of her body is delightful to men. Carrying her in thy lap, thou dost shine forth like the ocean, which carries the earth on its bosom. The earth has pearlstrings charming with their gleam, namely, the rivers; it is beautiful with the Antarvedi region (between the Gaṅgā and the Yamunā) ; it possesses the Middle Country (between the Himālaya and the Vindhya), delightful to men.

135. "This slender maid, with ornamental designs painted on her body, brings triumph to Cupid; her face being the moon provided with eyes. Is it on account of the extreme frailty of her waist that thou hast ousted Cupid, and dost thyself enjoy her?[93]

136. "Damayantī, thou art verily Cupid's capital, with a dolphin acting as the capital's banner, namely, the pictorial designs painted

89. The word सती is played upon. Pārvatī was called Satī in her previous life when she was born as the daughter of Dakṣa. Damayantī was a Satī (a devoted woman) not only in her previous but present life.

90. A king has in him portions of Indra and the other divine lords of the regions. Cf. 6. 94, 95. It is also implied that Pārvatī was Śiva's consort Satī in her previous life, in which case the epithet नाकपालकलनाकलित refers also to Śiva and means "known for carrying (Brahmā's) skull (in his hand)." See verse 35.

91. i.e., Nala exceeds Cupid in beauty, who was burnt by Śiva; just as Damayantī excels Rati.

92. i.e., she is slender in her waist.

93. The idea is, though Cupid triumphs over Nala with Damayantī as his weapon, it is Nala and not Cupid who enjoys her, probably owing to the frailty of her slim waist, which is fancied as a weak barrier unable to safeguard Cupid's possession. By means of puns the verse is designed to mean also: 'This slender damsel gives the victory to Cupid, assigning to him the document establishing his victory and making the moon-faced girls (her companions) her witness. Is it the result of the extreme weakness of the judge that (the right of) enjoyment here belongs to thee who hast ousted (or humiliated) Cupid?' In this case, Nala and Cupid contend for the possession of Damayantī's person, and the latter acting as the judge gives the decision in favour of Cupid. But it is Nala who takes possession of the disputed object, obviously owing to the weakness of the tender judge.

on thy bosom.[94] Young maid, who doth not call thy eyebrows a triumphal gate of the capital, which doth witness the festival of Cupid's momentous rise?

137. "Why is Cupid not tired, ever going from thee to her, and from her to thee? Perhaps your shadows remove Cupid's fatigue from journeying, as he thus keeps coming and going.

138. "Sire, the row of thy hairs, taking delight in its bath of perspiration, practises the devotion of keeping awake in the hope of dalliance;[95] and thou dost look beautiful in consequence, as if thy limbs were bristling with the filaments of Cupid's flowery arrows, stuck in thy body, and thickly coated with the honey of flowers.

139. "Sire, this lotus-eyed goddess of thy life is also beset with drops of sweat. Since the diverse arrows of Cupid consist of flowers, is perspiration likewise the blood of the wounds caused by his arrows?

140. "Have the west and the sun both turned red, perceiving the mutual love[96] of you both? And, at the sight of this, do the lotus blooms of your pleasure brook now assume a shape suitable for serving as Cupid's arrows?[97]

141. "So let this crowd of girl companions depart. They are an obstacle to your voluptuous abandon, mutually loving as you are. How can, indeed, Cupid the Maddener be maddening, if he does not make people cast off their raiments, or make them fight with finger-nails and teeth?"

142. When the parrot thus finished reciting, the girls, recalling the manifold evening duties of the king, went away on false pretexts. Damayantī, their friend, glanced at them in anger, as they then slunk away, as if they were lilies fading.[98]

94. i.e., the pictorial designs represent the dolphin supposed to act as Cupid's banner.

95. The hairs of Nala's body standing upright and wet with perspiration are fancied as keeping awake in the hope of amorous dalliance. They are besides compared to the filaments of the flowers serving as Cupid's arrows.

96. Designed to mean at first sight 'redness'. रागं means both 'love' and 'redness'.

97. The lotus blossoms closing in the evening are described as making themselves arrow-shaped for Cupid's use.

98. Lit. half looked at by the eyes of their angry friend, and shrinking as if on account of being lotuses. For a better reading see Notes.

143. The red-eyed cuckoo, whose beak was adept in repeating wreaths of words heard by it, with affection in its eyes, as if towards the king, then cried 'Stuhi' 'Stuhi,'[99] as if to the parrot which had recited Nala's praise.

144. Then, from her high palatial abode, Damayanti saw her pleasure brook, which looked extremely small and glistened with that gem, the reflection of the solar orb. The meandering stream was brought to notice by the pairs of Cakravāka birds with their cry of distress, fearing it was a snake, and flying away along its bank, openly parting company.

145. At the sight of a Cakravāka pair, red as if with blood, smitten by the entirely unbearable nature of their (impending) separation; she, with her sighs, then made even that sleeping hour of lotus blossoms[100] full of a lotus scent.

146. Damayanti said to her consort, "Merciful one, look at the plight of the Cakravāka pair. Ah, who will not weep, seeing their plight, which severs them from each other, and rends my heart?[101]

147. "The sun hath cherised a desire not to tarry, unable to bear the mirth to come of the night lotus blossom; and, do the birds chirp on the trees, with the dart of the Cakravāka's plaint thrust into their hearts?

148. "Alas, here is an instance in support of the inference that the actions of animate beings are determined by fate. These two birds bring ill to themselves, their own separation, guided though all their previous actions have been by a sense of their personal good.

149. "Wishing to tear asunder the Cakravāka pair, is the Creator whetting this visibly black sword, applying it to yonder grindstone, the sun, red with the filings from its brick frame, the scarlet of its rays? The grindstone is ceaselessly turned by Aruṇa, holding the strings; and shines with a 'rod'."[102]

150. Drinking the nectarlike wine of these charming words offered by the moonfaced lady's mouth, Nala said to her, with his

99. Means: 'Praise' (Imperative): but the words are onomatopoetic.

100. i.e., the evening.

101. Cakravāka couples are believed to separate at nightfall.

102. The evening twilight is the black sword, and the sun the grindstone. The glow of the setting sun is described as the filings from the brick frame. Aruṇa holding the reins of the sun's chariot is fancied as turning the grindstone by means of cords. 'Rod' (दण्ड), one of the attendants of the sun, is the rod to which the cords are attached. Cf. 1.92.

face inclining towards her, and tinged with a smile, "Clearly, so it is, so it is, as thou sayst.

151. "Thy eyebrows I know to be the two bent bows of Cupid and Rati, who have considered the propriety of conquering respectively all men and women. Two bamboo tubes of theirs I know to be disguised as thy nose, desirous as they are of letting go their arrows;[103] while two whiffs[104] of thy breath I know to be their airy weapon composed of vernal breezes.

152. "Yellow is the excellence of colour, and it is very sweet as it appears on thy body. Who does not, with esteem, celebrate as 'fair-hued' the gold that bears that colour? There is no need to describe other colours. In spite of its partaking of the nature of whiteness, a king among objects of vision, silver acquires the ill fame of possessing a tawdry colour.[105]

153. "If in a place where sugar forms the soil, and which is tilled after it has been gratified by rainclouds whose water is honey, there should grow a sugarcane plant, with cream cakes as a fertiliser; and if it bear fruit by virtue of being watered with vine juice, then to distinguish thy voice even from this, the superlative suffix would have the word 'sweet' as its base!

154. "If by revolving the 'Mountain of Sugar' included in religious gifts, like a churning rod; while using as a rope the creeperlike threads produced during the boiling of seething molasses; the nectar-fed Cupid raise up single-handed a new kind of nectar from the ocean of sugarcane juice,[106] that might perhaps rival thy voice,[107] a source of the highest delight to my ears.

155. "Sarasvatī dwells in thy mouth. It has the redolence of the toy lotus in her hand. The soft music of her lyre is present in thy mouth as the sweet gaiety of thy voice. In thy mouth are charming[108] lips, which are worthy of Sarasvati's pleasure walk, and seem to be made of red chalk and lime. And, do the two rows of thy teeth shine forth, acting as her necklace of pearls and gems?

103. See Vocab. under नालीक.

104. Lit. creepers.

105. Gold is called सुवर्ण 'fair-coloured', while silver is called दुर्वर्ण 'ugly-coloured'.

106. The gods combined had churned the briny ocean, using the Mandara mountain as the necessary churn-staff.

107. Lit. the product of thy tongue.

108. The reading रम्याधर has been followed.

156. "Thy voice is a river of love's emotion, Cupid's sacred resort. The sand of this river's shore is oftentimes described as candied sugar. Is it with the clay of its bank that pure and white ringlets of sugar are made? Its waters, are they nectar? Its confines, are they thy lips?

157. "Youthful lady, because young cuckoo maids cannot properly utter in song thy voice, a nectar river's stream; how many times do they not learn it by rote, in the mango grove of thy pleasure garden, in order to retain it in their eager throats!

158. "Beloved, thy upper lip is Cupid's bow made of a wreath of (red) Bandhūka flowers. The creeperlike outline of the lower border of thy nether lip is the string of that bow. Thy voice, too, is indeed Cupid's science of archery. Rightly is this science practised by lyres, possessing as they do bows, the bows with which they are played.

159. "Fair lady, he who does not reply, 'It is thy lips' to the question 'What is honey?'; he who does not reply, 'Thy person' to the question 'What is gold like?'; he who does not reply, 'Thy voice' to the question 'Of what nature is nectar?' is a rustic; he is ever an outcaste in the company of wits; Cupid's arrows disdain even to touch him.

160. "Thou art slender in thy waist. Thy hips are gravid and breasts high. Thou hast a watchful control over thy mind, and dost wield supremacy over me. Thy smiles are light. In elegant speech thou canst be as charming as thou wilt. Thy fame makes unimpeded progress in every region and quarter. Hence Śiva, pleased with thee, gave thee, his own creation, the eight supernatural powers, all of them.[109]

161. "We are not able to praise sufficiently thy voice; so we praise nectar instead. Rightly did Garuḍa and Indra, I know, fight for nectar; for thy voice was pleased to drench[110] with nectar thy words: thy voice which destroys the pride of fermented vine juice, and treats milk with utter contempt.

109. The eight powers of Śiva in the order in which they are referred to in the verse are अणिमा, the power of being small; गरिमा and महिमा, the powers of acquiring weight and height; वशित्व, self-control; ईशित्व, supremacy; लघिमा, the power of being light; प्राकाम्य, irresistible will, and कामावसायिता, going anywhere at will. See also Vocab. under भूति.

110. Designed to mean also: thy Voice was pleased to wash its feet with nectar.

162. "Fair one, if the grief of the Cakravāka pair is causing thee pain, say, I thy servant will go to the river and beseech the sun resting on its waters not to set.[111] If the sun proves obdurate and grants not my prayer, even when I fold my hands, then wilt thou see, I will come back here to thee, after offering to the Cakravāka pair the palmful of water meant for the sun.[112]

163. "So, for a moment, seek thy maiden companions who are in hiding somewhere here, amusing them with thy jests." On this pretext, making his consort eager to find her comrades, he went out, desiring to perform the evening rites.

164. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra etc. In his work, an entirely novel poem consisting of the narration of Nala's career, the twenty-first canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

111. Sunset is the time for separation of the Cakravāka pair.

112. Nala's words are an excuse for leaving Damayantī and going down to the river for the evening ablutions.

CANTO XXII

1. The king, after he had finished the evening rites, his mind at the sight of the western glow recalling his beloved's lips, came to the palace where[1] Damayantī was on the seventh floor.

2. He set himself upon a couch with a bed ready in the middle, which had been just left by his beloved, when she went forward to receive him. He caused her to sit as well, and described the evening twilight in verse.

3. "Grace with thy look the region that is Varuṇa's spouse.[2] It seems to be washed with liquid red lac, and covered with saffron paste.

4. "From the lofty summit of the sky, fallen is the sun, a rock of red chalk torn asunder. The dust raised by it, when it was dashed to pieces by the fall, now emerges as the evening glow.

5. "Has the west suddenly been reddened by the crests of the tame fowls belonging to the line of Śabara houses on the peak of the Sunset Mount; bristling up during their hourly crowings?[3]

6. "Look, the Evening twilight now takes up her position as doorkeeper of the night, the day being debarred from entry.[4] She holds a cane painted with vermilion, the rays issuing from the swiftly setting sun.

7. "Śiva the great dancer, after meditating on the mighty goddess of the evening[5] twilight, bright as red arsenic,[6] now perhaps dances in the glow of the (setting) sun; his body, the sky itself, garlanded with rows of stars.[7]

8. "Look, the moon-crested Śiva, the dancer of the eve, decorates the horizon with the broken pieces of his ornamental

1. Lit. which held.....
2. The west.
3. The top of the Mountain of Sunset (अस्ताचल) is fancied as being occupied by Śabara tribes with tame fowls in their houses.
4. Lit. Look at the exercise of authority by the evening twilight in her position as door-keeper....., from which the day is debarred.....
5. i.e., after the evening rites.
6. कुनटी 'red arsenic' means literally 'a bad dancer', which is contrasted with महानट 'the great dancer'.
7. The sky is one of the eight forms of Śiva. Evening being the time for Śiva's dance, he is described as dancing in his sky form, the twinkling of the stars being the rhythm of his dance.

wreath of bones torn asunder in dancing; these now assume the guise of myriads of stars.

9. "Death the Hunter slew the day, an elephant whose scarlet dots[8] are clearly visible. The beautiful evening twilight is his streaming blood, while the stars are the pearls which were inside his temples.

10. "In times of yore, while marrying Pārvatī, the mighty Śiva, whose clothing is the regions of the sky, wore, I ween, the region rosy with the evening glow, at the festal time of assuming flower-dyed crimson attire.

11. "Fair-eyed one, while marrying Satī and Pārvatī, did the sky-clad Śiva acquire as his attire both the red regions, east and west, in order[9] to use the two twilights as flower-dyed crimson vesture?

12. "The mendicant sun wanders through all the regions, taking with him a 'stick.'[10] Like an ascetic, he hath put on a scarlet robe, the evening sky, plunging into the ocean at dusk.

13. "Selling that lump of gold, the sun, that was tested on the touchstonelike Mount of Sunset, the evening glow being the trail left by the abrasion, the sky hath taken in return cowries, the stars!

14. "Death hath plucked yonder ripe pomegranate, the orb of the sun. Eating the seeds, he cast off its rind, the evening twilight; while he seems to have thrown out the starry stones of the fruit.[11]

15. [12]

16. "Look, the sky is decked with splinters of crystal rocks flying up from the Mount of Kailāsa, owing to the impact of Śiva's feet lighting upon it,[13] while he danced at the end of the evening rites."

8. In the case of the day, lotuses. The day being figured as an elephant, the lotuses are likened to the scarlet dots on the face and trunk of an elephant.

9. Lit. with a view to the two twilights, i.e., with a view to using the morning and evening twilights as ceremonial dress in the two marriages. See Vocab. under पुष्पसिन्दूरिका

10. The sun has an attendant named Daṇḍa (lit. stick) who is here fancied as the sun's travelling stick.

11. i.e., the stars are the stones ejected from the mouth after eating the fruit. Lit. he cast off the evening twilight, like its rind, etc.

12. The verse is a variation of Verse 14 and regarded as an interpolation by Nārāyaṇa.

13. The splinters of crystal rocks refer to the stars.

17. Thinking the evening twilight had departed, as if from shame caused by such a description, Nala said again, looking at the sky furrowed with stars and gloom.

18. "O thou with eyebrows like Cupid's bow, it is not the sky; it is the ocean with fishes and conchs mixed up with sharks. The ocean in bygone times upward shot, owing to the acute pain in its vitals, wounded by Rāma's arrows.[14]

19. "The stars, I ween, are the (flowery) arrows loosed by Cupid for the infatuation of gods and nymphs. Verily the word 'five' in the name of the 'five-arrowed' Cupid means 'wide' as in the 'wide-faced' lion.[15]

20. "The stars are tear drops shed by female Cakravāka birds living on the banks of the celestial river, whelmed with grief at separation from their mates at night; while streams of their tears come down in the form of descent of stars.[16]

21. "Methinks those stars are water animals frequenting the river of the gods—alligators, dolphins and crabs.[17] Clearly we discern them at the bottom of the river from here, diving deep for fear of the gods sporting in its waters.

22. "Is it Cupid's conch[18] that shines in the sky, to be blown in celebration of his conquest of the worlds? What other warrior could play music upon starry flowers?

14. Lit. owing to the acuteness of the pain caused by the wounding of its vitals by Rāma's arrows. The ocean is said to have shot upward to crave Rāma's mercy, when it was wounded by his arrows at the time of his throwing a bridge over it to reach Laṅkā. The stars are fancied as fishes and conchs, and the darkness as sea animals like whales and sharks, which were thrown up at the time.

15. Cupid is called Pañcaśara 'five-arrowed', but as one who has only five arrows cannot discharge as many of them as there are stars, the word is interpreted as 'one who has extensive arrows' on the analogy of the word pañca meaning also 'wide', as in pañcāsya 'wide-faced', a lion.

16. Lit. streams of tears fall in the shape of (downward) shiftings of the stars. The shooting stars seem to be fancied as streams of tears shed by the Cakravāka birds living on the banks of the celestial Gaṅgā. The word संक्रमण may be taken also in the sense of 'reflection'. In that case, the unsteady reflections of the stars on the waters of rivers and pools would be referred to as tear drops fallen from the sky.

17. Makara 'dolphin' and Crab are signs of the Zodiac; hence indirectly refer to the stars connected with them. Godhā refers to the polar region, or the lunar mansion known as Jyeṣṭhā. See Nārāyaṇa.

18. The Viśākhā star known as Śaṅkha 'conch' is fancied as Cupid's conch. Cf. 19. 57. See Vocab. under ताराशङ्ख.

23. "Is the night a woman, adept in mystic rites, who hath given life to Cupid, and made the day lotus faint? Yonder conch,[19] detached yet adhering to the sky, doth indeed proclaim her great mystic power.

24. "The night, a votary of nihilistic thought, declares the world to be false, though clearly visible, by pointing to the stars, the flowers of heaven, which are eclipsed during the time of right knowledge, the day.[20]

25. "The emblematic deer[21] in the moon of thy face was severely wounded by Cupid, who doth flash on thy face, and hath thy eyebrows for his bow. The deer went to the sky, with Cupid's arrow attached to him, visible in the form of a starry wreath of flowers.[22]

26. "The vault of the universe gleams, a primeval pavilion, serving as the abode of the worlds. Throughout its regions[23] are the stars, looking like incisions made by insects on timber, and emitting heaps of dust, their own beams.

27. "Look, Damayantī, in the region[24] that is Śacī's co-wife, thickly doth darkness spread; as if it were a flood of the streaming

19. The Viśākhā star mentioned above. Conch might here refer also to the moon. Cf. 19. 56. The mysterious 'conch' is fancied as being upheld by the Yogic power of the night.

20. The world is declared by the nihilistic school of Buddhists (शून्यवादी) to be a universal void. It is fancied that the night, too, does the same by citing the example of the stars (तारा: निदर्शयन्ती), which are visible at night, but invisible in the day; i.e., just as the stars, though they appear to have a real existence under cover of night, are found to be non-existent in the day, similarly the phenomena of the world, though they appear to be real in the state of ignorance, are found to be unreal when right knowledge dawns upon the mind. The stars have been purposely called here खपुष्पाणि 'flowers of the sky'. A खपुष्प is 'something which does not exist', 'a mare's nest'.

21. Or, 'the deer in the form of the lunar spot'.

22. Damayantī's face is the moon, but as the deer associated with the moon is not perceptible on her face, it is fancied that Cupid who is ever present on Damayantī's lovely face shot at the animal one of his flowery arrows; and the deer with the star-like flowers of the arrow attached to his body fled to the sky where he became the constellation known as Mṛigaśīrṣa 'deer's head' or simply as Mṛiga 'deer'. See also Vocab. under तारामृग.

23. अनुकाष्ठम् means also: on the wood, i.e., on its wooden frame. The vault of the universe is figured as an age-worn, dilapidated wooden building. The rays of the stars are fancied as the whitish yellow dust issuing from the incisions made by insects on old timber.

24. i.e., the east regarded as Indra's wife.

ichor of Indra's elephant. The flood breaks loose, because its dam, the day, hath burst.

28. "The buffalo, carrying the god of death, assumes the form of darkness, pervading the region[25] where Rāma's bridge looks like a line of hairs. Seeing it from afar, the sun seems to have departed, taking away his terrified steeds.

29. "The orb of the sun was perhaps a ripe Mahākāla fruit[26] on the slope of the Mountain of the West. Positively I know, the expanses of darkness are the (black) seeds of this fruit, split when it tumbled on the rocks.

30. "The musklike darkness of the region, which has pictorial designs painted on its body, namely, the garden of Kubera,[27] forms the disgrace of the Himālayas, neglected by the sun; since it revolves round the mountain of Sumeru.

31. "The sky was held aloft during the day, as if by the thousand hands of the thousand-rayed sun. That same sky, descending sunless, is coming to the closest proximity. How can there be darkness here?

32. "Yonder lamp, the sun, had left soot in the sky which resembles a vessel placed above it, mouth downward.[28] Has the soot now dropped on the earth as darkness, becoming heavy with its growing volume?

33. "Damayantī, thou mightest be jealous. At this moonless hour of the night the bashful regions of the sky, looking like maidens setting out to meet their lovers, are coming towards me. The darkness is their musk paint; the blue sky their apparel; and the stars the flowery arrows of Cupid hovering above them.

34. "Slender one, darkness we call the eyelashes of Viṣṇu, while he swiftly closes his solar eye, with both the lids pressed one against the other. They[29] surpass the lunar spot with the grace of their sombre hue.[30]

25. i.e., the south in which Rāma's Bridge (Setubandha) is situated. Yama is the regent of the south.

26. A kind of wild fruit, red in colour, with black seeds.

27. The north, of which Kubera is regent, is meant.

28. Soot is allowed to accumulate in a vessel placed over a lamp, mouth downward, for the purpose of preparing collyrium.

29. i.e., the eyelashes. The sun being Viṣṇu's right eye, the evening is fancied as being caused by his closing of his right eye, while the deep black of the eyelashes is imagined to be the gloom of the night.

30. Lit. eyelashes (sing. in the original) which conquered the lunar spot, etc.

35. "It seems that the sun took away the rays of men, also called eyes, which happened to be mixed up with his own thousand rays. Verily this blindness is due to that, not to the evening gloom.[31]

36. "O thou with beautiful thighs, in the quest of the nature of darkness, the Vaiśeṣika doctrine seems to me to be sound. Verily it is said this system of philosophy[32] was propounded by an owl; hence it is able to determine what darkness is.[33]

37. "This plethora of darkness, black and intangible, like the prosperity of the impure and untouchable king Triśaṅku,[34] brings delight to nothing but the eyes of owls.[35]

38. "Verily the light, in which the sheen of the stars is overshadowed by the radiance of the sun, the king of planets, was seen by the owls in the form of a clear-shaped darkness amid the day.[36]

39. "The darkness had employed shadows, attached to diverse objects, as its spies, in order to find out the movements of things during the day, its enemy.[37] It hath now recalled them[38] as if to question them (on the work they have done)."

40. The king then described in verse the rising moon, as if with a desire to appease it. It was red like a Japā flower, being enraged at his having thus described the darkness, its foe.

31. There is a pun on the word गो which means 'cow', 'ray' and 'eye'. The imagery is that of a cowherd who drives away not only his own cows, but those of others mixed up with his herd. The setting sun takes away his own rays as well as the 'rays' or eyes of men, i.e., their power of vision.

32. दर्शन means also 'eye'. The sentence means also: Verily they say, the eye of the owl is capable of determining the nature of darkness.

33. The idea is, the Vaiśeṣika system discusses the nature of darkness; and as this system is called Aulûka (lit. propounded by an owl), it is quite proper that the problem of darkness should engage its attention.

34. Triśaṅku was a king of the solar race, but became a Caṇḍāla under the curse of the sons of Vaśiṣṭha.

35. There is a pun on the word Kauśika meaning both 'owl' and 'the sage Viśvāmitra'. In the case of darkness, the word means 'owl'; in the case of Triśaṅku, it means Viśvāmitra who attempted to elevate him to heaven by force of his religious austerities.

36. The verse may also be translated thus: Verily the light that is the lustre of the sun, the king of the planets, (the light) that overpowers the sheen of the stars, was seen by the owls as (a sort of) diurnal gloom assuming a definite shape. See also Notes.

37. Lit. How do these fare during the day, my enemy?

38. i.e., the evening shadows. Lit. caused them to enter (the house).

41. "Look, beloved, yonder moon, though screened for a moment by the curtain of the mountain's tableland, dissolves into showers, filling the mouths of Cakora birds with its beams.[39]

42. "Imagine, the borders of the trees are maidens seeking their lovers. They came to the trysting place under cover of darkness. Discarding their blue robes, the shadows, they now depart, wearing scarves suited to the light of the moon.[40]

43. "O thou with thighs rounded as banana stems, with thy eyes, beauteous-shining as the night lotus, drink thou deep the moon, a mirror of the beauty of thy face; it is feeding the Cakora birds with its beams.

44. "The moon while living in the ocean doubtless emerged from the mountain[41] that churned the ocean in bygone times. For even now it seems to us to rise from a mountain, though it abides[42] in the sea.

45. "Did the moon's younger brother, the elephant[43] carrying Indra, the lord of the east, take the moon on his vermilion-painted head when it came as a guest to the east? Is it for this that the moon emerges with a crimson hue?

46. "Indra's mistresses kissed the moon with loving mouths, because it resembled their faces. So it rises with its orb reddened like a Bimba fruit, in contact with the crimson paint of their lips.

47. "Does the Creator fashion the faces of women, with their eyes and other features clearly visible, by means of yonder mould of gold, the moon, where eyes and like features are hard to discern, owing to the designs being carved in an inverted form?

48. [44]

39. Cakora birds are believed to feed on moonbeams. Cf. 12.6.

40. The borders of the trees enveloped in darkness prior to moonrise are fancied as young women secretly coming to meet their lovers, wearing blue clothing which makes them invisible in the darkness. After moonrise the borders glistening with moonlight are fancied as the maidens returning home with white scarves on, which now make them invisible in the light of the moon. The shadows cast by the trees are imagined to be the blue clothing discarded by the maidens when they changed for white. Lit. having discarded blue clothing in the guise of shadows.

41. The Mandara mountain with which the ocean was churned.

42. i.e., sets.

43. i.e., the Airāvata elephant who during the churning of the ocean came forth after the moon.

44. A mere repetition of Verse 47.

49. "A while ago the eastern sky was in the jaws of night. Coated with powdery moonbeams, surely it hath now assumed a crimson hue.[45]

50. "It seems as if the raw-smelling blood which Paraśurāma offered to the Manes by cutting off the head of the thousand-armed Arjuna, went to the world of the Manes and coloured the moon.[46]

51. "Lo, devoid of ears and nose, and burdened with a stain, is not the scarlet-rayed moon, resembling Śūrpaṇakhā's face, ashamed to see thy countenance, lovely as Sītā's own ?[47]

52. "Dusk the Impostor gave a counterfeit gold coin, the reddening moon, to the sky; and took possession of the sun, heaven's radiant gem. Forthwith the coin turned out to be a pale piece of silver.

53. "The orb of the moon is like a flashing silver top, let go by such a child as the time of evening is. In the course of its career it is discarding its redness, like a silken cord covering a top, getting loose in course of its whirl.[48]

54. "While the moon erased the panegyric of darkness, which the night had written on the black sky in starry letters of chalk, its own rosy lustre[49] paled.

55. While here the moon shines white, elsewhere it rises with a reddening hue. And so who knows the secret of radiance and pallor in the moon, the abode of arts ?[50]

56. "With moonbeams, the best of sandal, the maiden[51] regions of the sky gradually have painted their bodies, which were

45. The words अम्बर, पीत, रजनी and चूर्ण also mean respectively 'cloth', 'yellow', 'turmeric' and 'lime'. The imagery is that of a yellow cloth dyed with turmeric being reddened by applying a coat of lime.

46. The moon is the king of the world of departed ancestors. The story of Kārtavīryārjuna killed by Paraśurāma is referred to in XXI. 68.

47. The rising moon is compared to Śūrpaṇakhā's bloody face, without ears and nose which were cut off by Lakṣmaṇa. The compound लक्ष्मणाभिभूत: 'overpowered by a dark stain' is designed to mean at first sight 'vanquished by Lakṣmaṇa', which makes vivid the allusion to Sītā.

48. Lit. a cord covering made of silk threads discarded in course of its whirl. The ruddy film that appears to cover the rising moon is fancied as the coil of a red silk cord twined round a top; the moon casts off the red film, just as the top in motion discards the red string.

49. Also: hand. The imagery is that of the hand coloured white while erasing writings in chalk.

50. There is a pun on कला meaning both 'art' and 'a lunar digit'.

51. 'Lady' or 'woman' would be more exact.

burnished with the saffron rays of early eve, and bore the musk paint of gloom.

57. "Cutting and cutting the winter days, the Creator, with their inmost layers, makes the moonlit nights. If it were otherwise, why are these nights similar to winter days, and why are the winter days short in duration ?"

58. At the end of these words Nala said to his bride, who in listening to his beautiful utterances was silent with rapt attention, "Why, beloved, art thou silent about the moon, as if in dejection at the moon's jealousy of thy face ?

59. "Flood thou my ears with a wreath of words on this thesis of the moon,[52] a golden jar of the sentiment of Eros.[53] Verily the sugarcane is an imitation of grass growing on the bank of that stream of emotion, thy charming voice.

60. "On this very matter I desire now to hear from thee also words like honey." Thus exhorted by her beloved, she then began to praise the glory of the moon.

61. "In order to increase the tide of the ocean, how much water does the moon, I wonder, extract from moonstones, and how much from the eyes of Cakravāka maids[54] mourning their separation from their mates !

62. "The darkness, resembling a flood of the Yamunā that is the night, having subsided, the river's sandy island formed by moonbeams comes into view, with its flashing, pure shining lamp.[55]

63. "The gleam of the smiles of night lotus blossoms, all of them, made the world, I fancy, white as milk; for, during the day, when they are not in bloom,[56] the world shines not so, though the moon is still there.

64. "Living on the matted hair of the Death-conquering Śiva, the moon never dies; death being far away for fear of Śiva: nor does it grow, terrified by those Rāhus, the severed human heads in Śiva's wreath, which the moon's own nectar restores to life.[57]

52. Lit. on account of the moon.

53. Might mean also:.....with a wreath of words, a repository of the nectar (सुधा+आकर) that is in the golden jar of the sentiment of love.

54. These are believed to part with their mates in the evening.

55. The expanse of moonbeams is the island, and the moon the lamp.

56. Lit. they being with their mouths closed.

57. The reference is to the new moon on Śiva's head, which neither waxes nor wanes. See Verse 85 and 11. 92.

65. "The moon doth thrive, giving its beams to the Cakora bird, its nectar to the gods, and even a lunar digit, a part of its own body, to Śiva. Yet all this is scant charity on the part of one who is brother to the Wishing Tree.[58]

66. "Though Śiva honours the sixteenth digit of the moon by placing it on his head; (the moon) that carries a piece of musk, the lunar spot, and is purified by its nectar: yet he is not worth even a sixteenth part of the moon; (Śiva) whose neck is black with poison, and who is white with the ashes of cremation grounds.

67. "The moon with a black and white surface was made of Cupid's half burnt bones. For, though carried by Śiva, enemy to Cupid, on his head, it does what gratifies Cupid and strengthens his power.[59]

68. "Verily the monster Rāhu swallows the moon out of greed for the deer therein. But the moon, even at the risk of its own life, surrenders not the deer sleeping in its lap. So with pleasure doth Rāhu let go the moon.

69. "Proper it is that the gods render the moon empty, drinking it up. In times of yore, its father, the ocean,[60] was emptied too, by the sage Agastya drinking it up.

70. "Yonder moonshine, in its plenitude looking like the River of Heaven, and filling up the borders of the four regions of the sky, dispels the moon's grief caused by the termination of its life amidst the tides of the Ocean of Milk.[61]

71. "Let this moonshine, the moon's daughter, be dance-teacher to the ocean; let it be food to the Cakora bird, and friend to the eyes of men. Yet it is something beyond value to the night lotus bloom; its very name Kaumudī[62] says it is so.

58. Both the moon and the Wishing Tree rose from the ocean during the churning.

59. The love-inducing moon is fancied as being made of the bones of the god of love. Nārāyaṇa refers to a popular belief that he who takes shelter with another and yet helps the latter's enemy is in his next life made of the bones of that enemy. Here, the ungrateful moon lives on Śiva's head, but helps to reanimate Śiva's enemy, Cupid. Hence the surmise that the moon was made of the bones of Cupid.

60. It will be remembered that the moon was churned out of the ocean.

61. The moon is consoled by the fact that the white expanse of its light looks like its lost home, the ocean of milk.

62. Moonlight which makes the night lotus bloom is called Kaumudī which means literally 'something belonging to the night lotus (Kumuda).'

72. "The rays emitted by the white portion of the moon are gleaming upon the earth, with a lustre blended with the blue light coming from the lunar spot; for the moon's rays have gaps in them, disguised as the shadows of the objects located on the earth, which is milky white with the light of the moon.[63]

73. "Just as a certain portion of the sky hath been cleared up by the moon, dispelling the gloom, so hath it been blackened by the waters of the briny ocean stirred up by the selfsame moon.

74. "Why should the moon not be subject to waxing and waning, which are attributes of its ultimate source, the ocean? Strange that it exhibits them at intervals, and not daily like the ocean.

75. "Strange that the moon, though (clearly) visible like a mirror, is invisible throughout the Amāvāsyā night; though it has its abode on Śiva, it originated from the sage Atri's eye.[64]

76. "Yonder orb of the moon, with its store of plenty[65] meant for the enjoyment of the gods, is pure as a sacrifice. But just as the latter has an impure aspect, the killing of animals, so has the moon an unclean portion, its stain.

77. "The deer in the moon was the steed[66] of the Pravaha Wind; he got loose from his[67] chariot, desiring to drink. With an ever-sipping mouth he is in the desert[68] sky, drinking the nectar-drops oozing from the moon.

78. "But there was no deer in the moon while it was a child. When it grew to be a youth, its mistresses, the herbs,[69] sent the deer as a present. The moon, I fancy, held him on its bosom, as a message from the woods.

63. The shadows looking like gaps in the moonshine are imagined to be a kind of dark light emitted by the lunar spot.

64. The apparent meaning is: It is strange that though beautiful like a mirror, the moon does not possess a form beautiful like a mirror; though its abode is on the Three-eyed One, it originated from one who did not have three eyes. दृश्य means both 'visible' and 'beautiful'; आदर्श means a mirror, but in the second line it has to be construed as आदर्शम्—दर्शममावास्यामभिव्याप्य. अत्रिनेत्र means both न+त्रिनेत्र and अत्रि+नेत्र.

65. i.e., nectar.

66. Lit. conveyance.

67. Ref. to Pravaha Wind. For प्रवह see Vocab.

68. Lit. waterless.

69. The moon is regarded as the king of herbs and plants (ओषधि, feminine in Sanskrit). The deer or the lunar spot is clearly visible only when the moon waxes.

79. "The deer lives happily as the lunar spot, feeding on the leaves of the plants that come to attend on the moon; while he drinks the streams of nectar shed by it.

80. "Yonder deer, I fancy, took shelter in the moon, thinking it was the crown gem of Śiva, when he saw in terror the distressed 'Starry Deer' far away in the sky, chased by Śiva's arrows.[70]

81. "My lord, if thou dost think there may be a deer on the back of the moon like the one in its lap; do thou ascertain the truth from thy face, for it saw the moon's back in a contest of beauty.[71]

82. "Reason declares that the white-bellied hare, the emblem of the divine moon, has his face turned towards heaven.[72] On account of this, I would all the more believe that the divine cows, too, go about, facing heavenward,[73] as told in the Vedas.

83. "Verily the redness of the fur on the back of the hare, though it actually exists, is not visible to us; because those who are afar off see only blueness in a thing that is red and blue.[74]

84. "In the use of words, popular custom can destroy the pride of grammar. For the moon is not called Mṛigin, though it has a Mṛiga (deer); as it is called Śaśin, because it has a Śaśa (hare).[75]

85. "The ocean must have produced the moon in the same dimension as it is produced by the new moon night. The smallness of the moon taken up by Śiva on his head, when it rose from the ocean, is evidence here.[76]

70. When the sacrifice of Dakṣa was broken up by Śiva, the Sacrifice ran away in the form of a deer and ultimately became the constellation known as मृगशीर्ष or Deer's Head. See Vocab. under तारामृग. It is here fancied that another deer saw this and took refuge in the moon, thinking it would be able to protect him from Śiva who honoured the moon, having placed it on his head.

71. i.e., when the moon turned its back as a sign of defeat.

72. Lit. turned upward. The idea is that it is the grey back of the hare that is visible from the earth.

73. Lit. facing upward. Cf. 2. 105.

74. The verse explains why the fur on the back of the hare in the moon appears to be blue, and not red and blue, as it really is.

75. i.e., grammatically मृगी would be as correct as शशी; still popular custom accepts only शशी and not मृगी in the sense of 'the moon'.

76. Śiva bears on his head a single digit of the moon; hence the inference that the moon emerged from the ocean in this form; for it was at this time that Śiva took it up on his head.

86. "If yonder moon with leaf-shaped digits is imagined to be a Ketaka flower, the image will correspond with truth, owing to the redolence of the musk in the navel of the deer serving as the emblem of the moon.[77]

87. "The moon was globular as taught by the science of astronomy. Evidently it became flat, being reduced to the condition of an oil-cake, when its nectar was extracted by the crushing wheel of Rāhu's jaws.

88. "The moon is not Cupid's friend, for there is no resemblance between the two. Surely camphor known as 'the moon' is his friend; for the burnt Cupid and camphor when burnt both prove stronger than in their former state.[78]

89. "Or, perhaps the friendship of the moon and Cupid is quite fitting. Cupid was merged in Śiva's burning eye;[79] the moon is merged in Viṣṇu's eye, the sun, when the sun visits the Amāvāsyā day.[80]

90. "When, in times of yore, the moon became the lotus eye of the Primeval Being,[81] the lunar spot looked beautiful, as if it were the bee-like pupil of his eye.

91. "That very god[82] rightly employed the moon as his eye, and Garuḍa as his conveyance, having observed the similarity between the two. Both are 'two-winged'; both 'lords of the twice-born'; and both 'resorted to by Hari'.[83]

77. i.e., if the deer in the moon gives out any smell, it must be like that of the Ketaka flower owing to the resemblance of the lunar digits to its white, elongated petals.

78. i.e., Cupid, though burnt by Śiva, is more powerful than ever; and camphor, too, diffuses a stronger scent when burnt. It will be noted that words signifying the moon are used also in the sense of 'camphor'.

79. Cupid was burnt by a flame issuing from Śiva's third eye.

80. The sun is regarded as Viṣṇu's right eye: and on the moonless Amāvāsyā night the moon is supposed to be merged in the sun. Cf. 3. 33.

81. The moon is regarded as Viṣṇu's left eye.

82. i.e., Viṣṇu.

83. An artificial similarity is sought to be established between the moon, and Garuḍa by means of puns. Applied to the moon, 'two-winged' (उभयपक्ष-भाक्) means 'resorting to the two पक्षs or fortnights.' In the case of the moon, द्विज 'twice-born' means Brāhmaṇas, of whom the moon is supposed to be the king; in the case of Garuḍa, the word means 'birds', Garuḍa being the king of the birds. Lastly, हरिणाश्रित 'resorted to by Hari' i.e., as his conveyance, is true of Garuḍa only. Applied to the moon, it is to be construed as हरिण+आश्रित 'resorted to by a deer' i.e., the lunar spot.

92. "Methinks, those who inferred the existence of fire in snow, on account of the lilies being consumed by snow, opined also that the dark spot of the snow-rayed moon was a volume of smoke issuing from this fire.

93. "Pervaded by rivers, as if they were streams of perspiration, the earth, wearied by the world's weight over it, loses its fatigue, plunging into the moon, an ocean of nectar, in the guise of its shadow.[84]

94. "Such is my inference—the Golden Mountain (Meru) hath turned blue with the formation of a blue rust in the course of the ages. Otherwise its yellow surface would have been reflected in that portion of the moon which consists of the shadow of the earth.[85]

95. "The moon whose radiance makes the day lotus shrink may not enjoy the charm of being worshipped with blossoming day lotus flowers. But, I fancy, it enjoys that charm, being adorned with the eyes of the deer[86] serving as its emblem.

96. "What wise man ever wonders at the fact that yonder hare abides in the moon? In the bosom of the ocean, the father[87] of the moon, there was an elephant as well as a horse.[88]

97. "The dark night, a mistress of the moon, would shine most in the company of a husband who was white; while the moonlit night, another mistress of the moon, would shine most in the company of one that was dark. So the moon assumes a black and white form, as if with a desire to look beautiful before both.

98. "The moon I know to be a fullgrown mushroom among those tiny mushrooms, the stars, which grow on yonder mass of timber, the regions of the sky,[89] long exposed to rain and heat.

84. The lunar spot is sometimes supposed to be the shadow of the earth falling on the moon.

85. The lunar spot being the shadow of the earth falling on the moon, the golden Meru mountain reflected in the moon along with the earth would have left a yellow patch in the dark portion of the moon, had it not been covered with a blue rust.

86. i.e., the lotus-like eyes of the deer take the place of day lotus blossoms.

87. Cf. Verse 69.

88. The Airāvata elephant and the Uccaiḥśravas horse were churned out of the ocean and given to Indra.

89. काष्ठौघ means both 'a heap of wood' (काष्ठ+ओघ) and 'the multitude of the regions of the sky' (काष्ठा+ओघ).

99. "Since the sun sank low all of a sudden, at the end of the day, the eyes of the universe traverse the expanse of darkness, a river of peril, with the help of the moon at night.[90]

100. "Does not the moon exist even in our eye, a glimmering luminous dot, momentary and small? But proper it was that, in the eye of the great Atri, it was greater in size, and liable to destruction at the interval of a month.[91]

101. "Neither the herbs with their (medicinal) power nor the Brāhmaṇas with their mystic formulas could save their lord, the waning moon;[92] nor could the ocean with its gems save it, the ocean's child;[93] nor could nectar with its virtues save it, nectar's own home.[94]

102. "Or, perhaps it is false that moonbeams consist of nectar;[95] perhaps this nectar prevents not old age and death; otherwise, why is it that the Cakora birds are not free from old age and death, although they drink in the rays of the moon?"

103. With these mature expressions, Damayantī made the king benumbed with joy; and, for a moment she imbued him with a sense of wonder, like a cascade of snow.

104. "From this mouth arose this speech, sweet as a stream of nectar." Thus saying, he kissed the orb of her moon face, closely resembling day lotus blooms in beauty.

105. When her beloved thus lovingly spoke to her, she who was a pearl of the royal dynasty of Vidarbha emitted a jet of ray, her smile, like a shooting star descending from heaven.

106. She said to the king, "It is proper that thy moonlike mouth is wholly indifferent in praising the moon, having employed me to do so. For it is not proper for one to describe oneself."

107. Induced by the fair one, Nala, the noblest on the earth, and dear to her as her life, spoke to the lucky maid words brim-

90. तरणि means both 'the sun' and 'a boat', and उडुप both 'the moon' and 'a raft.'

91. The luminous halo that seems to appear at one corner of an eye when the other corner is pressed with a finger is here fancied as a miniature moon, which is contrasted with the fullsize moon said to have come out of the sage Atri's eye.

92. The moon is the king of the Brāhmaṇas and of the vegetable world (cf. Verse 78).

93. See Verse 69.

94. The moon is called Sudhākara 'a reservoir of nectar.'

95. The moon is called Sudhāṁśu 'nectar-rayed.'

ming with the spirit of jest, smiling as he spoke, about to describe the moon.

108. "Having listened to the erstwhile song of thy mouth, yonder deer in the moon, eager to hear it again, wishes never to forsake the moon, mistaking it for thy face, I know.

109. "Let thy tongue, with a song, attract the deer in the moon to thy face, which he might approach,[96] mistaking it for the moon. Perhaps thy ears took the form of a noose to tether this deer.[97]

110. "Oppressed by heat, Sound the Traveller travels not in day as much as he does at night, owing to his being refreshed by the rays of the moon, or on account of the coolness produced by the woodland of gloom.

111. "Having reached the climax of the enjoyment of sweetness, by listening to thy songs even from afar, the moon doth surely throw away its store of nectar, its beams, as if in disdain.

112. "Slender maid, the moon gives us no cause for wonder that it became the (left) eye of Viṣṇu. It is its nature, in keeping with its origin, born as it was of the sage Atri's eye.

113. "Slim-waisted maid, Night the Cleanser hath washed off in a moment yonder blue tint of the sky formed by the darkness, with these moonbeams that are like streams of milk.

114. "O thou with beautiful thighs, the autumn that removed the black of the clouds could not in the least wipe off the dark tint of the lunar spot.

115. "Eleven digits of the moon, when it sets, perhaps betake themselves to the heads of the eleven Rudras; while the remaining five, entering Cupid's quiver, become his 'half moon shafts'.[98]

116. "Slender maid, if another moon, without spot, were made by fusing together thousands of stars, it would have the beauty of thy face.

117. "Gazelle-eyed one, the hostility, I ween, between the day lotus and the moon[99] is caused by their desire to have the self-same object; for both the lotus and the moon wish to acquire the charm of thy face.

96. Lit. thy face which is fit to be approached.

97. Lit. Did thy two ears become a noose, being about to bind?

98. अर्धचन्द्र 'a kind of arrow with a semi-circular blade.' Cupid's arrows are described as crescent-shaped.

99. The day lotus shrinks at moonrise.

118. "Having drunk the nectar of the lips of thy moon face, the nectar which even the lord of the gods[100] could never drink, I have a disdain for the nectar of yonder moon, reduced to dregs by the gods, drinking it up.

119. "Bearing on his head this very moon, the lord of medicinal herbs,[101] Śiva swallowed the terrible ocean-born poison, and carries serpents about him, free from fear.

120. "See, no degradation did the moon suffer, though he had amorous relations with his teacher's wife.[102] Worldly actions fetter not those who have the Self for their light, and have reached the final stage of physical being.

121. "The moon's nectar decked with the hue of the lunar spot is but the water, variegated with sesamum seeds, and purified by faith, which offered by sons to their Manes, reached the moon; for it is the abode of the Manes.

122. "Look, on the waters of thy pleasure brook, easily perceptible by standing in this lofty edifice, a female goose is kissing the reflection of the moon, mistaking it for its mate which is long in the water, having dived into it.

123. "Yonder moon, made empty in the day by the gods drinking up its nectar, seems to lie immersed in thy brook in the guise of its reflection, being replenished with nectar at night.

124. "In this pleasure brook, the night lily's flowery hand hath come[103] into contact with the moon's hand, its light; and the spray of the honey of the flowers, like the ceremonial gift-water,[104] seems to declare the nuptial gaiety of moonlight and lily.

125. "Yonder night lily growing on the water is a hind living in the woods, with eyes, its flowers, blossoming, blue and large. She is looking at her mate, the deer, which she thinks is in the moon of thy face,[105] high up here.

100. i.e., Indra.
101. Cf. Verse 78.
102. Bṛihaspati's wife Tārā.
103. Lit. having come.
104. Lit. the shower of gift-water in the guise of honey. The "hands" of the night lily and the moon coming in contact with each other are fancied as those of a bridal pair during the ceremony of पाणिग्रहण or marriage. The dripping lotus honey is the ceremonial water confirming the giving away of the bride in marriage. It will be remembered that the moon is called the husband of the night lily.
105. Lit. the deer present in thy moon-face. The night lily is fancied as a hind who mistakes Damayantī's face for the moon and looks in it for the deer supposed to be in the moon.

126. "During the break up of the meditations of the night lotus blossoms, performing austerities in the midst of the waters, the moon, I am aware, is the face of a nymph, the night; (a face) with nectar for its nether lip, and beautiful with ray smiles.[106]

127. "The moon is Cupid's pool. The small lunar spot is the ooze of the pool, while the moon's nectar is its water. Cupid carries as his emblem a fish of this pool. It is deathless even in the absence of water, for it drinks the nectar of the moon.

128. "The sky clearly declared itself to be a form of Śiva. The stars are its decorative bones. It upholds the moon and the celestial Gaṅgā. It has a lustre brightened with ashes, the rays of the moon, and wears a necklace, the serpent Vāsuki, disguised as the galaxy.[107]

129. "The eye of the sage, which produced the moon, had but a single 'star'.[108] But the moon's wealth hath surpassed its father's; for it has seven and twenty of them.[109]

130. "Gazelle-eyed maid, since yonder orb of the moon is Cupid's parasol beaming white, the decay of the moon that follows the full moon night, is verily the decay of Cupid's sovereign power.

131. "Sensitive maid, the moon that could not be conquered by Rāvaṇa[110] in times of yore, even though he had conquered[111] the worlds, has yonder stain attached to it, being outmatched in beauty by thy face.

132. "All these days the moon hath been seen to wax.[112] But when, being full, it vies with thy face, immediately wilt thou see its decay.

133. "Just as Paraśurāma, the great Brāhmaṇa, after he had defeated all the Kṣatriyas, suffered defeat at the hands of the Kṣatriya Rāma; similarly the moon, after vanquishing all the day lotus blossoms,[113] is now defeated by thy lotus face.

106. The night lotus blossoms with their petals closed are fancied as ascetics engaged in austerities with eyes closed. The night, at the advent of which the flowers open, is imagined to be a nymph coming to disturb these ascetics in their meditation.

107. The sky is one of the eight forms of Śiva. White ashes, decorative bones, the moon and the celestial Gaṅgā, snaky necklace etc., are all associated with Śiva who is here figured as the sky.

108. i.e., the pupil of the eye. The reference is to Atri.

109. i.e., the twenty-seven main stars regarded as the wives of the moon.

110. The story is found in the Rāmāyaṇa (Uttarakāṇḍa) in a Canto regarded as an interpolation. See fourth N. S. ed., p. 1012.

111. Lit. even after conquering.

112. Lit. So many days the moon has been seen to surpass its former condition.

113. i.e., by making them shrink.

134. "Watchful maid, look, a white outline adorns the border of the moon. Look, the figure of a deer darkens its centre." Thus did Nala show to Damayantī now the border, now the centre of the moon.

135. "Is the moon called 'twice-born', because it was born of two, the ocean and the sage Atri's eye?[114] And, being thus born of (the Brāhmaṇa) Atri, has it finally attained the rank of a Brāhmaṇa?[115]

136. "Slender one, because Brahmā made the lunar orb, an abode of snow, with a deer in the middle, (and set it) in the sky, the pleasure ground of the stars, he became an ornament to the denizens of heaven, with Viṣṇu's assent, by virtue of that pious act.[116]

137. "O thou with a face resembling in beauty the orb of the moon, because the moon is called mere straw, compared with thy face, yonder deer clings to the moon owing to the eagerness of deer (for grass). In the consciousness of animals the influence of delusion never vanishes.[117]

138. "The Nectar of the moon was harrassed by Rāhu with threats that he would forcibly drink it up. So it left the moon, and

114. Usually the moon is called 'twice-born', because once 'born', it dies, and is 'born' again. Here a different explanation is suggested.

115. The moon is said to have issued from the sage Atri's eye. It is regarded as the king of the Brāhmaṇas. The second line may mean also: And, being thus born of two (द्वि+ज), why has it finally become (known as) born of Atri (alone)? There is, however, a pun on अत्रिज, and the sentence is designed to mean at first sight: Being thus born of two, has it finally become known as 'not born of three' (अ+त्रि+ज)?

116. The verse contains a reference to Buddhist ritual. It means also: Slender one, because in the shrine of the goddess Tārā, Brahmā made a circle of camphor, (like) a snowy tract, redolent with musk, he became an ornament to the denizens of heaven for that pious act, in conformity with Buddha's doctrine. The making by Brahmā of the orb of the moon, with a deer in it, in the midst of the stars is compared to the Buddhist ceremony of making a white circle of camphor mixed with musk in the shrine of the goddess Tārā. तारा means (1) the stars, (2) the goddess of that name. विहार मे. means (1) a pleasure ground, (2) a Buddhist shrine. चन्द्रमयी मण्डली means (1) the lunar orb, (2) a circle of camphor.

117. The idea is, people are wont to call the moon बहुतृण "slightly unfinished grass", "grass-like" (i.e. mere straw, worthless) in comparison with Damayantī's face. But the more explicit meaning of बहुतृण is "abounding in grass", misled by which the deer in the moon is still clinging to it in order to reap some day a harvest of grass in the moon! The word मृगतृष्णा, lit. the thirst or desire of a deer (in the present case, for grass), means really a mirage which points to the illusion of the animal.

resorted to thy nether lip ruddy with betel. It now hides its emblem of whiteness with the lip's crimson hue.

139. "The moon was defeated by thy lotus face; the moon that serves as Viṣṇu's left eye, and was born of the region that is Indra's wife;[118] the moon whose body hath been fattened by a deer or perhaps a hare[119] cast into its bosom. But the defeat of the moon was like that of a single person at the hands of a multitude numbering millions. Rāhu alone is a (fitting) adversary[120] for the moon.[121]

140. "Beloved, if it is true that the lotus with an indescribable beauty is thy face, the lotus which the lotus-born Brahmā adored with his lotus eyes;[122] then what is yonder moon? It is a crane living among the reeds in the wood along the bank of the celestial river, which abides on the head of Śiva, the hunter who killed the Sacrifice disguised as a deer.[123]

141. "Methinks, in the bosom of the spotless moon wandering in the east, all of whose digits are unanimously held to be white,[124] the lunar spot resembling a blue lotus came into being by chance; perhaps because the moon came into contact with the drops of ichor issuing from the cheeks and temples of the Airāvata elephant[125] owned by Indra, the conqueror of Bala.

118. i.e., the east presided over by Indra.

119. The moon is called both 'deer-marked' (मृगाङ्क) and 'hare-marked' (शशाङ्क).

120. i.e., the moon is fit to have as its rival the monster Rāhu, not the beautiful face of Damayantī.

121. The अन्वय is हर्यक्षीभवत:....अमुष्य (इन्दो:) त्वद्वदनाम्बुजात् यत् भङ्ग: अजनि तत् एकाकिन: पद्मात् (भङ्ग इव). The idea is, the contest of the moon with Damayantī's face is like that of one fighting against many. हर्यक्ष means also 'a lion', and पद्म in the third line means also 'an elephant'. By puns the verse conveys also the imagery of an elephant defeating a lion in spite of the latter being gorged with a deer or a hare. Nārāyaṇa says अथच हरिता हरिद्वर्णया हरे: सिंहस्य पत्न्या सिंहिकया प्रसूतस्य, तथा मृगं शशं वा यं कंचन पशुं जठरे निक्षिप्य भक्षयित्वा स्थितस्य, अत एव संजातपुष्टशरीरस्य, अत एव हर्यक्षीभवत: सिंहतां प्राप्नुवतोऽस्य त्वन्मुखाय : पराजयोऽजनि स एकाकिन : केवलात् पद्मादृगजादेव पराजय: । सिंहस्य गजादृभङ्गो यथा तद्वदेतन्महच्चित्रमित्यर्थ:

122. Brahmā was born of a lotus growing out of Viṣṇu's navel. The lotus being his progenitor, he worships it with his own lotus-like eyes serving as the requisite flowers.

123. While destroying the sacrifice begun by Dakṣa, Śiva cut off the head of the Sacrifice when the latter attempted to flee in the shape of a deer.

124. Lit. the creation of all whose digits is based on the unanimity about its whiteness.

125. Indra is the lord of the east. So the moon would come across the Airāvata elephant owned by Indra.

142. "The sixteenth part of the moon is called a digit, but only fifteen digits round off the moon, growing from the new moon to the full moon night. Was then the remaining digit, which had no lunar day allotted to it, taken out of the moon and made an ornament for Śiva?[126] And, in its place, do I see in the moon a dark cavity, namely, the lunar spot?

143. "Fair one, the moon desires to prevent thy face from surpassing it in beauty, because thy face has beautiful eyes.[127] So it feeds the young Cakora[128] with its rays, in the hope of obtaining from the bird its longdrawn eyes; the bird being cajoled into submission by the moon, which seems to[129] have the purpose of husbanding its resources. The moon tends also a deer in its bosom with care, in order to acquire[130] its eyes as well.[131]

144. "Thy face was made with the full measure of beauty, and the moon with what little remained of it in the vessel of beauty, and that, too, half soiled; because it was obtained by scouring the vessel. Having made the moon and thy face, the Creator surely washed his hands with water; and even now, with the particles of that beauty settling in the waters, lotus blooms are made.

145. "Thy face was made with the whole measure of beauty, and the moon with what little remained of it in the vessel of beauty.[132] .....

.....A mere digit of the moon, priding itself on its beauty, became Śiva's crest jewel; while the night and the day lotus became each the abode of beauty,[133] because they resorted to water, the resting place[134] of the moon.

126. Ref. to the digit of the moon on Śiva's head.

127. Lit. desirous of making thy face equal (to it) also in respect of the beauty of eyes.

128. Cakora birds are described as drinking the rays of the moon.

129. Lit. as if to increase its capital (मूलमुपजीवितुमिव).

130. Lit. to touch (or possess) that very thing.

131. The moon tries to acquire a pair of beautiful eyes in order to surpass Damayantī's face, and for that purpose tends a foolish bird and an equally foolish animal in order that it may snatch away their beautiful eyes on a suitable occasion.

132. Same as above.

133. श्री means both 'beauty' and 'Lakṣmī'.

134. The word पद is purposely used as it means both 'foot' and 'resting place', giving literally the sense: 'the night lotus and the day lotus became the abode of beauty, because they touched the moon's feet.' A hierarchy of beauty is established with Damayantī's face at the top, the moon and the lotus following in a descending order.

146. "Surrounded by the assembly of stars, the moon hath become a jar of sunstone for the convivial drinking bouts of the stars.[135] Look, beloved, poets who use the figure 'Poetical Fancy' can easily describe the moon as carrying a bowl of sapphire, namely, the hare in the moon, designed to draw its nectar with.[136]

147. "Fair lady, thy face was made, I fancy, by extracting from the lunar orb all its excellence; that is why yonder moon is called 'a storehouse of defects.'[137] A pair of charming eyes, I see, was then set in thy face, by removing them from the deer in the moon. Indeed, if the deer had eyes,[138] would he abide in the moon while thy face was here?[139]

148. "Slender lady, dost thou not think those numberless white-rayed stars on the surface of the sky look like the footprints of the horses of the sun's chariot, filled up by the nectar oozing nightly from the bottom of the moon?

149. "Set about the worship of Cupid. Let me be thy aid. Starry flowers are at hand. Offer the moon as a present; it looks like a rice-cake stuffed with sesamum.

150. "May the divine moon delight our hearts! In the gay festival of ceremonial bathing forming part of the marriage of Cupid with Rati, the moon, looking like a jar with a thousand apertures, showers[140] nectar, its beams, which fall through the holes bored in it by Rāhu's jaws, each time he comes to gorge the moon."

151. Epilogue.

Śrīhīra etc. In the epic, The Story of Nala, composed by him who is also the author of a Campū on the life of Navasāhasāṅka, the twenty-second canto, brilliant by nature, is at an end.

135. Lit. on account of the joviality due to drinking together.

136. The moon is a white jar of nectar and its black spot is a blue bowl from which the jovial stars drink the nectar.

137. दोषाकर 'moon' means literally 'the maker of the night' (दोषा+कर), but it is here interpreted as दोष+आकर 'a repository of defects'.

138. Lit. Being non-blind, would it abide in the moon (or take delight in the moon)?

139. As the eyes of the deer in the moon were taken away to serve as Damayantī's eyes, the animal became blind, and being thus unable to appreciate her beauty, chose to abide in the moon, though all its beauty had been taken away from it to create Damayantī's face.

140. Lit. the moon that has a shower of ray-nectar falling through the holes originating from the boring tool of Rāhu's jaws etc.

4. The apparent contradiction lies in the fact that by means of four special attributes superimposed on each of the 14 branches of learning, the king produced merely चतुर्दशत्व 'the attribute of fourteen' (चतुर्दशत्वमिति चतुर्दशानां भाव: Vidyā). But the word means really 'the quality of having four stages' (चतस्रो दशा यासां ताश्चतुर्दशास्तासां भावस्तत्त्वम्). Narahari says उपाधिभिर्विशेषणै:। समुदायपरिसमाप्तिपक्षे चतुर्दशानां विद्यानां षट्पञ्चाशता भवितव्यम्। प्रत्येकपरिसमाप्तिपक्षे तु एकैकस्या विद्याया अष्टत्वमेव, न चतुर्दशत्वं संभवति इत्युभयथापि चतुर्दशत्वं न संपद्यते। तस्मात् कुत: कृतवानित्याक्षेप:। यद्वा चतुर्दशसु विद्यासु चतुर्दशत्वं पूर्वमेव सिद्धम्। असावपि चतुर्दशत्वमेव कुत: कृतवान्। पिष्टपेषणमेव तद्व्यर्थमित्यर्थ:। यद्वा चतुर्दशसु विद्यासु चतुर्दशत्वं कुतो न कृतवान् कया व्युत्पत्त्या न कृतवान्, अपितु सर्वयापि कृतवानिति वेद्मि। चतस्रो दशा यासां ताश्चतुर्दशास्तासां भावस्तत्त्वम्। चतस्रश्च दश च चतुर्दश तासां भावस्तत्त्वमिति च।

उपाधिभिर्विशेषै: Vidyā. प्रकारै: N. विशेषणै: Malli.

9. Narahari explains the verse thus—स्फुरन् धनुर्निस्वनो यस्यां सा स्फुरद्धनुर्निस्वना, घना निबिडा ये आशुगा बाणा: तेषां प्रगल्भा दु:सहा या वृष्टि: सा घनाशुगप्रगल्भवृष्टि:, तेन नलेन घनाशुगप्रगल्भवृष्टि: तद्घनाशुगप्रगल्भवृष्टि:, कर्तृकरणे कृता बहुलमिति समास:। यद्वा स चासौ घनश्च नल एव मेघ इत्यर्थ:, स्फुरद्धनुर्निस्वना चासौ तद्घनाशुगप्रगल्भवृष्टिश्च तया व्यथितस्य निर्वापितस्य आत्मन: प्रतापाग्नेरङ्गारमिव परःशता: शत्रव: अयशो रणे विस्तारयामासु:। तथा स्फुरत् धनुरिन्द्रधनु: निस्वनो गर्जितं च येषां ते स्फुरद्धनुर्निस्वना: ते च ते घनाश्च तद्घना: स्फुरद्धनुर्निस्वनाश्च ते

10. Vidyā explains the verse thus—स भुवः पृथिव्या वलयं मण्डलं प्रदक्षिणेन भ्रमित्वा रराज शुशुभे। किंविशिष्टं भूमण्डलम्—ज्वलत् शोभमानम्। कैः ज्वलदित्याह—अनल्पानि बहूनि दग्धानि यान्यरिपुराणि शत्रुनगराणि तेषाम् अनलो वह्निस्तदुज्ज्वलैः प्रदीप्तैः निजप्रतापैरात्मीयतेजोभिः। कया शुशुभे—नीराजनया आरात्रिकविधिना। कीदृश्या—जयाय विजयार्थं सृष्टया रचितया।

12. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva, and Narahari read दिशां गणस्यावरणम् for दिगङ्गनाङ्गावरणम् found in Malli and N. Narahari gives the latter reading as a variant.

13. Vidyā remarks—राज्ञा हि चरैः सर्वं द्रष्टव्यम्। तथा च माघः—चारेक्षणो दूतमुखः पुरुषः कोऽपि पार्थिवः (2. 82).

Narahari says गन्धेन गावः पश्यन्ति ब्राह्मणाः वेदचक्षुषा। चारैः पश्यन्ति राजानश्चक्षुर्भ्यामितरे जनाः॥ इति। अत्र विरोधाभासोऽलंकारः। यदुक्तं वाग्भटेन—आपाते हि विरुद्धत्वं यत्र वाक्ये न तत्त्वतः। शब्दार्थात्त आभाति स विरोधस्ततः स्मृतः॥ इति। पूर्वोत्तरवाक्ययोर्हेतुमद्भावात् हेत्वलंकारश्च। प्रतीपभूपैरिवेत्युपमा इत्यलंकारसंसृष्टिः। प्रतीपभूपैश्च मेत्तृता त्यक्ता विरुद्धधर्मैश्चेति समुच्चयालंकार उपमालंकारश्चेत्यनयः।

16. Narahari says द्विफालेति त्रिविष्टपं त्रिभागशेषास्वितिवत् समासः। यद्वा द्वयोः फालयोर्भागयोर्बद्धाः (केशाः) इत्यर्थः।

20. Narahari remarks on शारद—शारदः शरत्संबन्धी पूर्णिमाचन्द्रस्तन्मुखदास्येऽपि अधिकारितां न गतः। यतः शारदः अप्रतिभः। 'प्रत्यग्रप्रतिभौ शारदौ.'

C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva, Narahari and Jina read पार्वण for पार्विक found in Malli and N.

24. C. P., Vidyā, Jina and Narahari read तर्जितम् for निर्जितम् found in Malli and N. Jina remarks on महीयसी महीयसामिति क्वचित्के पाठे कवीनामिति व्याख्येयम्.

35. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read कथानुषङ्गेषु for कथाप्रसङ्गेषु.

40. The verse is variously interpreted. Narahari's explanation is important—निमीलितात् नेत्रद्वन्द्वात् संगोप्य, तथा बहिर्भवानि बाह्यानि इन्द्रियाणि इन्द्रस्यात्मनो लिङ्गानि, इन्द्रियमिन्द्रलिङ्गमित्यादिना निपातितः,तेषां मौनं विषयेष्वप्रवृत्तिः तेन मुद्रितात् मनसोऽपि संगोप्य। मनसो मुद्रणं निरिन्द्रियप्रदेशे वर्तनम्। कदापि

Narahari's explanation is based on the Māṇḍūkya Upaniṣad 1. 5— यत्र सुप्तो न कञ्चन कामं कामयते न कञ्चन स्वप्नं पश्यति तत् सुषुप्तम् । सुषुप्तस्थान एकीभूतः प्रज्ञानघन एवानन्दमयो ह्यानन्दभुक् चेतोमुखः प्राज्ञस्तृतीयः पादः ।

C. P. finds no reference to सुषुप्ति in the verse. He interprets it as referring to dreams. In this case बाह्येन्द्रियमौन or the inertia of the sense organs (during dreams), and even of the mind (हृदोऽपि संगोप्य), as stated in Śrīharṣa's verse, may be explained with reference to Śaṅkara's remark in his Bhāṣya on the Bṛihadāraṇyaka 4. 3. 265— इन्द्रियोपरमात् । उपरतेषु हीन्द्रियेषु स्वप्नान् पश्यति.....तस्मादत्रायं पुरुषः स्वयंज्योतिर्भवत्येव, that is, the self-luminous Soul sees the dreams in spite of the temporary eclipse of the senses. See also C. P's explanation in the Extracts.

45. C. P. and Vidyā read वीरस्य for धीरस्य.

46. Narahari remarks on कञ्चुकम्—'कञ्चुको वारवाणोऽस्त्री' इत्यत्रास्त्रीति कञ्चुकपदेन वारवाणपदेन च संबध्यते । यतः 'कृणपदीपककञ्चुकवञ्चुकक्रमुकवाणककेलककोलकम्' इति बालभूषणकारः पपाठ । यद्वा अत्र कञ्चुक इति पाठः ।

50. C. P. and Vidyā read तनुजाम् for तनयाम्.

52. The verse is variously explained. Trans. follows Nārāyaṇa's construction—अयं नलोऽलीकवीक्षितां प्रियां प्रति यत् किंचित् बभाषे तदयेन दैवेन निह्नोतुं शशाक । वैणिकैः पञ्चमरागस्य मूर्छनासु आलपितासु सतीषु समाज एव सभायामेव यत् मुमूर्छ तदपि अयेन निह्नोतुं शशाक । See below for other interpretations.

54. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read अलं नलं रोदुमिदम् for..... रोदुममी-विवेकप्रमुखा गुणा नलमिदं चापलं रोदुम् अलं समर्था न अभवन्.

55. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read नैषधः for निर्जनम्.

56. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read पुरोपकण्ठं स वनम् for पुरोपकण्ठोपवनम् found in Malli and N. In verse 57 C. P. and Vidyā read क्षोभित for क्षोदित found in the later commentators.

59. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read कुद्दनोद्गतैः for कुद्दनोत्थितैः.

61. The phrase अध्वनि चक्रवर्तिनः is applied by C. P. to both Nala and the chariot of the Sun—महारथस्य नलस्य चक्रवर्तिनः अध्वनि परेषामन्येषामनपेक्षया उद्वहनात्। श्रीसूर्याश्वाः किल महारथस्य अध्वनिनि ध्वनिरहिते चक्रे वर्तते इत्येवंशीलस्य परापेक्षया उद्वहनं कुर्वन्ति, न त्वेकाकिनः।

66. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read स बाहुबाहोचितवेषपेशलः for स्वबाह.....Narahari has the former reading.

68. C. P., Vidyā and Jinā read प्रसर for प्रहर found in Malli and N.

73. Vidyā reads ताः सुशिक्षते for तासु शिक्षते found in C. P. and others. See Extracts below.

77. C. P. and Vidyā read उद्धत for उद्गत.

Narahari says वयसस्तारुण्यस्य अतिपाते अतिक्रमे उद्गतो यो वातो वातव्याधिस्तेन कम्पिते कर एव पल्लवे, अथ च वयसां पक्षिणामुत्पतनेन उद्गतो यो वातस्तेन कम्पिते पल्लव एव करे फलानि पुष्पाणि च समादाय स्थितैः शाखिभिर्महर्षिवृद्धसमूहात् वने तस्य नलस्यातिथ्यं शिक्षितम्। शाखिन इति वेदशाखाध्येतृत्वमिति व्यज्यते।

78. The ban on the Ketaka flower is explained in Śiva Purāṇa (ज्ञानसंहिता, chap. 30). It is said that once Sītā performed पितृश्राद्ध on behalf of Rāma during the latter's absence on the bank of the Falgu river. The Manes including Daśaratha manifested themselves to her, and asked the Ketaka flower among others to bear witness to their visit. When Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa came back, they refused to believe the story of the visit of the पितृs; and when Sītā appealed to the witnesses they denied having seen the Manes coming to the Śrāddha. At this Sītā cursed the witnesses and condemned the Ketaka flower to eternal exclusion from the worship of Śiva.[1]

80. C. P. and Narhari read दारुणायसे. Vidyā reads दारुणायते like N. Malli reads दारणायते—दारयतीति दारणः विदारकः छेत्ता। स इवाचरतीति दारणायते।

94. Vidyā and Malli read लसत् for ललत्. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read समुचरत् for समुच्छलत्. There is a pun on पल्लव and कण्टक—(माधुरफलं) वाराङ्गनाकुचसदृशम्। तेऽपि विलसतां पल्लवानां विटानां कण्टकैर्नखैः क्षता भवन्ति C.P.

1. There is an injunction in Padmapurāṇa (Kriyāyogasāra 12.55) that Viṣṇu should not be worshipped with Ketakī flowers in the month of Bhādra:

न भाद्रे केतकीपुष्पैः पूजितव्यो जनार्दनः।
यतो भाद्रपदे मासि केतकी स्यात् सुरासमा॥

97. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read पुरः for पुरा.

118. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read चक्षोः for चञ्चोः found in Malli and N.

120. Vidyā reads वृत्तेन for चित्तेन—वृत्तेन आचरणेन । यत्र भाविनि सुखादौ विधेर्वाञ्छा भवति तत्र तत्र तदनुरूपो जनस्याचारो भवतीत्यर्थः. C. P., Narahari, N and Malli read चित्तेन.

121. C. P. and Jina read रतक्रमालसः for रति ..... Vidyā reads रतक्रमालसः रतक्रमैः निधुवनपरिपाटीभिरलसो निश्चलः.

124. Vidyā alone reads मौलिना for मौनिना—मौलिना मुकुटेनोपलक्षितः. He remarks वामनोऽपि मौलिना पादेन च व्याप्तब्रह्माण्डोभयपार्श्वः.

129. Vidyā alone reads करपङ्कज for करपञ्जर.

135. Vidyā reads करुणाम् and explains the last two lines thus—तयोश्चैषोऽहमेव गतिः । एव इत्यत्रैव वाक्यच्छेदः । न हि मां विहाय तयोरन्यः कोऽपि गतिरस्ति । जनो लोको नल इति यावत् तं मामर्दयन् पीडयन् भो विधे दैव त्वां भवन्तं करुणां कृपां च न रुणद्धि, अपि त्वावृणोतीत्यर्थः । मां जनेन पीड्यमानं दृष्ट्वा तवापि करुणो-चितैवेत्यर्थः । रुधेर्द्विकर्मकत्वात् त्वां करुणां चेति कर्मद्वयम् । अथवा तयोरेष जनो मल्लक्षणो गतिस्तं मामर्दयन् भो, तथा भो विधे इति संबोधनद्वयम् । तदा करुणेति प्रथमान्तपाठः । कर्तृगुप्तकोऽयं श्लोकः ।

N also takes अर्दयन् in the vocative –तं मामर्दयन् पीडयन् हे विधे करुणा त्वां न रुणद्धि । अर्दयन्निति ' संबोधने च ' इति शता ।

138. C. P. remarks on वियोक्ष्यसे—वियोक्ष्यसे वियोगमवाप्स्यसि । ' प्रोपाभ्यां युजेः—'इत्यत्र 'स्वरायत्तोपसृष्टात् ' इति वक्तव्यबलात्, अथवा कर्मकर्तरि आत्मनेपदम् ।

2. The verse is found in Bṛhatsaṁhitā (Cal. ed.) 70.10, which, apart from minor variations, reads the last line thus— पादे पाणितलेऽपि वा युवतयो गच्छन्ति राज्ञीपदम् , and includes the verse in the chapter dealing with the characteristics of women.

140. C. P., Vidyā, Narahari and Jina (Text) read ही हतः for हा हतः— ही इति खेदे.

142. Vidyā explains the verse thus—

भो सुताः पुत्राः चिराय बहुकालं चुंकृतैः चुंकारैः आहूय आकार्य यूयं कथासु शिष्यध्वं कथाशेषा भविष्यथ। तत्र कमुदकं प्रति मुखानि वदनानि च कम्प्राणि चलानि विधाय कृत्वा यूयं कथाशेषा भविष्यथ इत्यनेन प्रकारेण निमील्य निमीलनं कृत्वा स हंसो बुबुधे जागरितः। कथासु शिष्यध्वमिति 'शिष असर्वोपयोग' इति विकल्पेन तत्र कर्मकर्तरि पञ्चमी। Jina, like Nārāyaṇa, gives an alternative explanation—कमाहूय कं च लक्षीकृत्य मुखानि कम्प्राणि विधाय कथासु शिष्यध्वं चतुरा भविष्यथ। कः शिक्षयेदित्यर्थः। शिष्यध्वमिति व्याप्ये कर्तरि प्रेषानुज्ञावसरे कृत्यपञ्चम्याविल्यनेन सर्वकालापवादभूता पञ्चमी।

CANTO II

22. लोकयुगम् is taken by C. P. and Vidyā in the sense of 'heaven and earth.' Acc. to Malli and Nārāyaṇa, it is मातृकुल and पितृकुल—लोकयुगमपि मातृकुलपितृकुललक्षणं व्यतिभाते परस्परोत्कर्षेण भासत इत्यर्थः This is certainly a better explanation. A beautiful woman is often described as the ornament of both पितृकुल and मातृकुलः Cf. कुट्टनीमत—तिष्ठतु सा पुण्यवती वंशद्वयभूषणं वरारोहा (Verse 167).

24. C. P. and Vidyā read अधरं किल बिम्बनामकं फलमाभ्यामिति for ..... फलमस्मादिति, and रदनच्छदे (neuter dual) वदत् for रदनच्छदं वदत्, found in later commentators. Jina says आभ्याम्, रदनच्छदे चेति पाठस्तु सर्वथाऽशुद्धः । ओष्ठोऽधरो रदच्छदः इति पुंलिङ्गनिर्देशात् । अतएव द्विवचनान्त-पाठाङ्गीकारेण यद्व्याख्यानं तदपि उपेक्ष्यम् । C. P. and Vidyā, however, quote प्रतापमार्तण्ड to show that रदनच्छद is used in the neuter also. See C. P. below.

Narahari who reads..... फलमस्मादिति and रदनच्छदं वदत् remarks—रदनच्छदे वददिति पाठेन 'वद स्थैर्ये' वदत् रदच्छदेऽभिधेये वदत् स्थिरीभवदित्यर्थः । आभ्यामिति पाठे रदनच्छदौ वददिति पाठः छदशब्दस्य पुंलिङ्गत्वात् ।

26. The reference is to a custom of warding off the evil eye by revolving round the face of a person a vessel smeared with cow-dung and containing flour water. The Creator is fancied as revolving the moon round Damayanti's face, like such a ceremonial vessel, the pale surface of the moon being likened to the flour water, and the lunar spot to the cowdung.

27. The verse refers to the procedure of the water ordeal. We gather from the Mitākṣarā on Yājñavalkya (व्यवहाराध्याय109) that the practice is to shoot three arrows, and send some one running to take up the one in the middle. Another swift runner stands ready at the place from which the arrows are shot, and at a given signal runs to the spot where his predecessor waits with the arrow in his hand. Simultaneously with this, the person undergoing the ordeal dives in a pool of water; and the person who was waiting with the arrow in his hand now comes running to the scene of diving: if he finds the diver under the water, the latter wins; but if he is found above the water level, he is declared to have lost his case. Keeping above the water is thus a sign of defeat; so the poet says that the lotus blossoms, which engage in a contest of beauty with Damayanti's face, declare their own defeat by keeping afloat on the water.

17. A गता

18. Quoted in Kāvyaprakāśa (Chap. 7) to illustrate न्यूनपदं क्वचिद्गुणः.

30. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read कृतसीम्नि for कृतसीम्नी found in Malli and N. C. P. says शिशुता च तदुत्तरं तस्याः उत्तरं वयः यौवनं चेति शिशुतादुत्तरे वयसी बाल्ययौवने तस्यां सुदृशि दमयन्त्यां विभज्य प्रकर्षेण शरीरविभागं कृत्वा न रज्यतः रागं न प्राप्नुतः। किंभूतायाम्—विधिना विधात्रा अथ च शास्त्रोक्तेन प्रकारेण रोमरेखया कृतसीम्नि अपि। लोमरेखैव सीमा तस्यां कृतायामपि न मिलित्वा भुक्तिं कुरुतः।

32. Usually the properties of the constituent cause or समवायिकारण (e.g. clay) are found in the effect (e.g. a jar), which, however, does not partake of the properties of the accessory cause or असमवायिकारण (e.g. the potter's rod). Here it is fancied that the jar has become Damayantī's breasts, and in its new form it has somehow acquired even the properties of its former accessory cause (i.e. the potter's rod).[1] Now, the function of the potter's rod is to turn the wheel (चक्रभ्रमकारिता); the 'jar-breasts' (कुचकलस) also revolve, as it were, a circle of streaming lustre (प्रभाझरस्य चक्रभ्रममातनोति), i.e., a halo of lustre encircles the breasts.

If we construe प्रभाझरचक्रभ्रममातनोति as प्रभाझरे चक्रभ्रममातनोति, the sentence will mean that the 'jar-breasts' give one the idea of (i.e., look like) two Cakravāka birds in a stream of lustre. This is a better explanation, as the breasts of a woman are often compared to a pair of Cakravāka birds. But in this case, there will be no connection between the 'jar-breasts' and the potter's rod, except by pun. Both produce चक्रभ्रम, though it does not mean the same thing in the case of both. Examples of such artificial comparison based on word-play are very common.

1. Nārāyaṇa gives this as the निमित्तकारण (instrumental cause)

The meaning suggested in the Footnote to the Trans. follows N, who says प्रभाप्रसरेण चक्रभ्रमं कुलालचक्रभ्रमणमर्थात् दृष्टेः करोति। सुन्दरवस्तुदर्शनेन दृष्टेर्भ्रमणं भवति।

Narahari says घटे चक्रभ्रमकारितागुणो दृश्यते स निजस्य घटस्य हेतुभूताद्दण्डाज्जातः किंतु। अन्यत्र समवायिकारणगताद्गुणात् कार्ये गुणोत्पत्तिः। अत्र निमित्तकारणादण्डादपि गुणोत्पत्तिराशङ्क्यते। कार्ये घटे चक्रभ्रमकारिता कथमित्यत आह—यतो हेतोः स घटस्तस्या दमयन्त्या उचकुचौ भवन् उचकुचतां प्रतिपद्यमानः प्रभाप्रवाहचक्रवाकभ्रान्तिं तनोति। दण्डोऽपि चक्रस्य भ्रमणं करोति।

34. All except N read स्फुरदङ्गुष्ठपर्वेण for स्फुटद ..... C. P., Vidyā and Malli read चतुरङ्गुलि for चतुरङ्गुल. In the latter form, तत्पुरुषस्याङ्गुलेः संख्याव्ययादेः इत्यच्. The construction of चतुरङ्गुलि is, acc. to Malli, चतसृणामङ्गुलीनां समाहारश्चतुरङ्गुली। 'तद्धितार्थ—' इत्यादिना समाहारद्विगुरेकवचननपुंसकत्वे।

40. Vidyā remarks— सदसत्संशयगोचरोदरीति वाक्यार्थः अभिहितस्तेन अत्रौजो गुणः। यदुक्तम्–अर्थस्य प्रौढिरोजः। यथा–अथ नयनसमुत्थं ज्योतिरत्रेरिवेति कालिदासः। सहृदयेन वक्रोक्तिजीवितकारेण चैष पर्यायवक्रताप्रकारः कथ्यते। यथा–कृष्णकुटिलकेशीति वक्तव्ये यमुनाकल्लोलवक्रालकेत्युच्यते।

C. P. also remarks कृशोदरीति वक्तव्ये इयमर्थस्य प्रौढिरोजः। वक्रोक्तिजीवितकारेण चैष वक्रताप्रकारः कथ्यते।

62. Malli alone reads अधिसाधय साधयेप्सितम् (अधिसाधय गच्छ ईप्सितं साधय) for the more melodious अयि साधय साधयेप्सितम्.

70. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read झगिति for झटिति. The meaning is the same. Vidyā and Jina, probably C. P. also, read झंकारित for झांकारित. Malli is alone in reading स्यदझांकारि-पतत्रिपद्धतिः for स्यदझ(ं)कारितपत्रपद्धतिः. His explanation is स्यदेन वेगेन झांकारिणी झामिति शब्दं कुर्वाणा पतत्रिपद्धतिः पक्षिसरणिः यस्य स हंसः.

Narahari reads स्यदझांकारितपत्रपद्धतिः like N and others, but he mentions Malli's reading as a variant.

79. The reflection of the buildings on the large pool of water is compared to the heavens, while the surrounding water not occupied by the reflection is fancied as the moat of heaven.

81. Jina's explanation of this verse is different from that of other commentators—तलमध्योपरिपूरिणां पातालभूमिस्वर्गनिवासिनां जगतां जनानां या नगरी अखिला समस्तापि अद्भुता आश्चर्यरूपा अजनि अभूत्। कैः कृत्वेत्याह-धरा च अम्बरं च धराम्बरे च क्षितिगर्भधराम्बराणि तेषु विद्यमानैरालयैः विवरगृहैः भूगृहैरुपकार्याभिश्च कृत्वा इत्यनेन विभूमिकप्रासादोपेतेत्यर्थः। कीदृशैरालयैः—पृथक् निजचिह्नानि स्वस्वलक्षणानि धारयन्त्येवंशीलास्तैः। पातालगृहाणां निम्नादि लक्षणं तत् पातालगृहेष्वस्ति। अम्बरगृहाणां चन्दनादि लक्षणं तदम्बरगृहेष्वस्ति। अतएव सारैः श्रेष्ठैः।

84. Nārada's statement occurs in Viṣṇupurāṇa, Part 2, chap. 5.

85. Malli and Narahari read सक्तुसौरभे for सक्तुसौरभैः. Malli connects सक्तुसौरभे with प्रतिहृष्पथे—सक्तूनां सौरभं यस्मिन् प्रतिहृष्पथे तस्मिन्.

90. Narahari reads अभिसायम् for अनुसायम्—सायं सायमभिसायम्। 'अभिरभागे' इति वीप्सायां कर्मप्रवचनीयसंज्ञा.

92. Vidyā alone reads अवेत् for अवैत् in जनारवैरवैदपि. He says अवेदिति विदेर्ह्यस्तनी.

Jina remarks—केचित् अवेदिति, पाठमङ्गीकृत्य विदे रूपमिच्छन्ति, तत्तु यमकव्यागादुपेक्ष्यम्.

93. N. and Jina read सकलाहं ज्वलनाहितोष्मणा. C. P. and Vidyā read सकलाहज्वलना . . . . . On this Jina remarks सकलाहज्वलनेति रोऽसुपि इति रः इति केचित्, तदुपेक्ष्यम्. Malli reads सकलाहज्वलना.....(राजाहःसखिभ्यष्टच्, रात्राह्नाहाः पुंसि इति पुंल्लिङ्गता। अत्यन्तसंयोगे द्वितीया। योगविभागात् समासः Malli). Narahari reads सकलाहम् like N. He says सकलं च तदहश्च सकलाहः। 'राजाहःसखिभ्यष्टच्'। सकलाहं ज्वलनेनाहित उष्मा यत्र तेन रविकान्तमयेन सेतुना वर्त्मबन्धेन।

95. Vidyā relates the following story about the Mahābhāṣya—आदौ भाष्यं प्राप्य वक्तुकामेन शेषनागेन शिष्येण सह संकेतः कृतः यद् भाष्यं व्याख्यायमानमपि विषमत्वात् या फक्किका त्वया न बुध्यते सा फक्किका व्याधुट्य त्वया न प्रष्टव्या। शिष्येण च तथाङ्गीकृतम्। ततो व्याख्यां कुर्वता नागराजेन याः फक्किका व्याख्याता अपि शिष्येण न ज्ञातास्ताः कुण्डलिताः। इदानीमपि तास्तथाविधा लिख्यन्ते। परं कस्यापि मनोगोचरा न भवन्तीति वार्ता।

Narahari explains the verse thus—या पुरी परिखावलयव्याजेन कुण्डलनां प्रापिता फणिना शेषेण भाषिता भाष्यफक्किका भाष्यग्रन्थ इव विषमा परेषां शत्रूणां शेष-व्यतिरिक्तानां च ग्रहणे साधने बोधने च गोचरो न भवति। पूर्वं वररुचिना अबुध्यमाना भाष्य-ग्रन्थाः कुण्डलीकृताः। अतस्ते कुण्डलिग्रन्था इति लोकप्रसिद्धिः। C. P. also says पाणिनेरुपरि महाभाष्यस्य फक्किका विषमत्वात् कुण्डलीकृताः सन्ति.

73. C. P. and Vidyā read शङ्कितधिक्क्रिये for शङ्कितविक्रिये.

81. Narahari and Malli read द्वयमेव शेषः for द्वयमेकशेषः. Malli takes द्वयम् in the sense of द्वयोरन्यतरम्.

Narahari says अद्य मम तस्य नलस्य प्राप्तिः प्राणपरित्यागो वा तवैव हस्ते द्वयं शेष आस्ते। एतत् द्वितयमवशिष्टं त्वदधीनमित्यर्थः। एकशेष इति पाठे तव हस्ते द्वयमेकशेषस्तिष्ठति एकशेषसमासतुल्यस्तिष्ठति। एकश्चासौ शेषश्चेत्येकशेषः। एकं शेषरूपतया तिष्ठतीत्यर्थः। द्वयोर्मध्ये एकं त्वया कर्तव्यमित्यर्थः।

83. C. P. and Vidyā read आश्रितपालनोत्थम् for आश्रुत..... found in later commentators.

86. C. P. reads त्वदृणानि शोद्धुम्[2] for त्वदृणान्यशोद्धुम् and gives ऋणेषु as a variant. Vidyā reads त्वदृणेष्वसोढुम्. Malli reads त्वदृणेष्वशोद्धुम्. Jina reads त्वदृणान्यशोद्धुम्, but thinks त्वदृणेष्वशोद्धुम् (त्वदृणेषु विषये शुद्धिविहीना भवितुमित्यर्थः) is a better reading.

Narahari says त्वदृणेषु त्वत्कृतोपकारेषु अशोद्धुम् (असोढुम्?) अनिस्तरीतुम्.

90. Trans. follows Nārāyaṇa's second explanation. The verse has two meanings. (1) The bird (विः) becomes the ultimate cause (मूलम्) of the रण (noise, anxiety or restlessness) produced all of a sudden by Cupid (अकाण्डमेव आत्मभुवा कामेन अर्जितस्य), i.e., Damayantī began to pine for Nala when she heard the bird's story. The bird is now asked by her to apply sandal paste to her heart, i.e., to calm her anxiety by bringing Nala to her (नलदत्वमेत्य).

(2) The bird is to solace Damayantī's heart by becoming, as it were, the root (मूलम्) of the वीरण grass used as a sedative. This grass, says D, was made for her by the Creator without any joints (मयि निमित्ते अकाण्डं पर्वरहितम् आत्मभुवा ब्रह्मणा अर्जितस्य). By becoming the मूल or root of वीरण, the bird would naturally act as नलद which is the same as वीरणमूल. By pun, however, the bird is asked to give Nala to her (नलदत्वमेत्य and नल+दत्वमेत्य).

Vidyā reads अकालम् for अकाण्डम् and explains the verse thus —

भवान् विः पक्षी नलदत्वमेत्य मे मम हृदो हृदयस्य चन्दनलेपस्य कृत्यं कार्यं किं न कर्ता किं न करिष्यसि। चन्दनलेपो हि सदा शैत्यं कुरुते। तदा नलदो भूत्वा त्वमपि करिष्यसीत्यर्थः। नलदोऽप्युशीरमपि शैत्यं कुरुते। किं कृत्वेत्याह—मयि विषये रणस्य रणरणकस्य उत्कण्ठायाः मूलं कारणं भूत्वा। त्वया हि नलगुणा मदग्रे प्रकटितास्ततश्च रणरणकं जातम्। तस्मात् तस्य त्वमेव मूलमित्यर्थः।.....कीदृशस्य—अकालमेव अप्रस्तावमेव आत्मभुवा स्मरेण अर्जितस्य कृतस्य। एतेन कामकृतं रणरणकत्वं त्वत्कृतमित्यर्थः। (पक्षे) वीरणस्य आत्मभुवा ब्रह्मणा असमये कृतस्य। वीरणं तृणं हि शीतकाले भवति। अत्र श्लोकः।

94. C. P. and Vidyā read रुषा for कृपा found in later commentators.

Malli seems to be alone in reading विज्ञापनीया न गिरो मदर्थाः for त्वया निधेया न गिरो मदर्थाः.

2. C. शोद्धुम् (सोढुम्?).

98. Malli alone reads स्मरस्पर्धितया for परस्पर्धितया. His reading is corrupt. The idea of the verse is, Śiva and Cupid wish to excel each other in jubilation, the one being the rival of the other (परस्पर्धितया). स्मरस्पर्धितया can be applied to Śiva only, and does not convey the idea of Cupid's rivalry with Śiva.

105. C. P. and Malli read न चित्तमाक्रामति तत्र चित्रमेतन्मनो यद्भवदेकवृत्ति for न चित्रमाक्रामति तत्र चित्रम् etc. The former reading makes the last two lines extremely simple. C. P. says—तत्रार्थे चित्रमाश्चर्यं चित्तं मनः न आक्रामति यत् यस्मात् एतस्य मनो भवत्यां त्वयि एव एकस्यां वृत्तिर्यस्य तत्तथा, नान्यत्र वर्तते. Narahari's reading is same as that of C. P. The accompanying Text has न चित्रमाक्रामति तत्र चित्तम् etc. Narahari says एतस्य नलस्य मनः.... भवत्यामेका मुख्या वृत्तिर्यस्य तत् ईदृशं जातमिति यत् तत्र तस्मिन्नर्थे अस्माकं चित्तं कर्तृ आश्चर्यं कर्म वैपरीत्येन वा नाक्रामति न प्राप्नोति. Trans. follows the following construction—भवदेकवृत्ति एतन्मनो यच्चित्रमाक्रामति यत् (भवत्याः) चित्रमाक्रामति (अवलोकयति) तत्र चित्र न.

109. C. P. and Vidyā read तथैव for वृथैव found in later commentators.

114. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read पुष्यतु for पुष्यतु (N and Malli).

118. Narahari and Malli read रचना for वलना found in C. P., Vidyā and N. Jina seems to read रचना, though in the accompanying Text वलना is found.

126. The verse refers to a custom of testing bamboo before using it for the frame of a bow. Vermilion powder seems to have been rubbed into a piece of bamboo; if the powder adhered to the bamboo, it was considered fit for use. Nārāyaṇa says कषणधारया धनुर्योग्यवेणुपरीक्षायां निघृष्यमाणं सिन्दूरं चलति चेत्तदा परिपाकी ज्ञेय इति धानुष्कप्रसिद्धिः. Jina says लगति for चलति, which makes the meaning clear. Here, Damayantī's rosy silk ribbon is compared to the trail of vermilion when applied to a piece of split bamboo.

Narahari says असौ स्मरः त्वां धनुर्लतां प्राप्य हृष्यति । कीदृशीं त्वां धनुर्वल्लीं च—पश्चाद्भागे ईषदम्बमानया निवसत् सिन्दूरसौन्दर्यं यस्याः सा तया सिन्दूरवदरुणयेत्यर्थः । ईदृश्या श्रीवालंकारपट्टसूत्रलतया कबरेखयेव भ्राजमानाम् । धनुःपक्षे पृष्ठभागे किञ्चिदायतया वनिसत्सिन्दूरसौन्दर्यया कबरेखया पट्टसूत्रलतयेव भासमानामित्यन्वयः । धनुर्योग्यवंशपरी-

127. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read लासिततम for लालिततम found in Malli, Narahari and N. C. P., Narahari and Malli read भुज्यमान for भज्यमान.

128. C. P., Vidyā, Malli, Jina and Narahari read निर्विद्याश्रयदाश्रमम् for.... दाश्रयम्. Vidyā and Jina read तर्जितः for तज्जितः. Malli reads यज्जिताः.

131. C. P. and Vidyā read तस्या दृशाधिपतिबन्धुमनुव्रजन्त्याः for तस्या दृशो नृपतिबन्धुमनुव्रजन्त्याः. C. P. says—तस्या भैम्या दृशा दृष्ट्या अधिपतेर्भर्तुः बन्धुं तं हंसम् अनुव्रजन्त्याः सत्याः न चिरादेव बाष्पवारि नयनजलमवधीबभूव.

Jina reads तस्या दृशोऽधिपति.....—अधिपतिबन्धुं नलमित्रं तं हंस-मनुव्रजन्त्याः तस्या दृशो भैमीनेत्रस्य.

Malli and Narahari read—तस्या दृशो वियति बन्धुमनुव्रजन्त्याः. The latter says तस्या भैम्यास्तं बन्धुं हंसं नभसि अनुव्रजन्त्या दृशो नेत्रस्य.

132. C. P., Vidyā, Jina, Malli and Narahari read आख्याता for आख्यातुम्. Vidyā takes it as a लुट् form; acc. to others, the suffix is तृन्.

135. C. P. and Vidyā read माध्वीकमन्तः for.... माध्वीकमत्तः found in other commentators. Jina, however, criticises the earlier reading— माध्वीकमन्तरिति पाठं पठित्वा अन्तरन्तःकरणे अधिगतम् अन्तःकरणे सान्द्रा-नन्दमाध्वीकरूपं वा तद्भाषितमिति केचित् व्याकुर्वन्ति। तत् तकारनकारयोः सादृश्य-भ्रान्त्या पाठापरिज्ञानविलसितमित्युपेक्ष्यम्. Malli reads माद्वीक for माध्वीक. Narahari says सान्द्रसुखमधुना मत्तः। माद्वीकेति पाठे मृद्वीकाया विकारः। इदं माद्वीक द्राक्षामधु। 'मृद्वीका गोस्तनी द्राक्षा'। तेन मत्त इत्यर्थः.

CANTO IV

13. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read आगमितं मुखम् for आगमि तन्मुखम्. The latter reading is artificial.

16. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read स्मरकृतिम् for स्मरकृताम्.

63. अमीकृता—Acc. to Nārāyaṇa, who reads अमा कृता, अमीकृता इति पाठः क्लिष्टकल्पनयोपेक्ष्यः. C. P., Vidyā and Īśānadeva read, however, अमीकृता. Malli reads अमा कृता. Jina does the same, but he explains the reading अमीकृता. Malli explains अमा कृता thus—सा च तिथिः अमा अमितिर्बहुमानस्यास्यामिति व्युत्पत्त्या अमा अमानामका कृता किम्। मातेर्भावार्थे सम्पदादिक्विप नञ्समासे मत्वर्थीये चाकारप्रत्यये यस्येति लोपे अजाद्यतष्टाप्। न त्वमा सहभावोऽस्यां सूर्याचन्द्रमसोरिति व्युत्पत्त्या इत्युत्प्रेक्षा। अमेति सहार्थे अव्ययं ततो भावप्रधानान्मत्वर्थीयाकारात् टाप्। For C. P's explanation see Extracts.

66. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read मधुजितम् for मधुभिदम् found in Malli and N.

68. C. P. reads धृतिभिया for मृतिभिया (N and Malli). The former reading is given by N as a variant.

70. C. P. and Vidyā read द्विजराजभिया for.....धिया. The latter reading is given by C. P. as a variant.

73. C. P. and Vidyā read वियोगिवधागसा for..... वधैनसा found in N and Malli. The former reading is given by N as a variant. Jina reads..... वधाहंसा and gives..... वधागसा as a variant.

76. The verse is variously explained. See C. P's explanation in the Extracts.

Vidyā alone reads परिष्णुत for परिष्णुति C. P., Vidyā, N and Jina agree in reading निरैष्यत. Malli and Īśānadeva read निरैक्ष्यत, but the latter explains the reading निरैष्यत also. Acc. to Jina and C. P. निरैष्यत is the लृङ् form of इण् भावे, preceded by निः Acc. to Nārāyaṇa, it is the भावे लङ् of the आत्मनेपदी root इष सर्पणे. Īśānadeva derives it from इषु गतौ (दिवादि). Jina mentions the reading निरैक्ष्यत and says निरैक्ष्यतेति यथाकथञ्चित् कर्मणि.

Acc. to Nārāyaṇa and Jina, "to be three-eyed (त्रिनेत्र)" means "to be angry". Jina says also that the "third" eye might refer to ज्ञानचक्षु (नेत्रद्वयं प्रसिद्धं तृतीयं चान्तरं ज्ञानरूपम्).

Narahari says त्वयि अक्षिगते दृश्ये सति द्वेष्ये सति च कस्य जनस्य त्रिभिर्नेत्रैर्न निरैष्यत न प्रादुर्भूतम्, अपितु सर्वस्यापि जनस्य। त्वयि ईदृशे सर्वेऽपि क्रुध्यन्तीत्यर्थः। अथवा त्वयि अक्षितां गते कामो नामैकं नेत्रं मनोरथरूपत्वात् सर्वस्यापि जनस्य त्रिभिर्नेत्रैः प्रादुर्भूतम्। अतो हरस्य प्रयासो वृथा जात इत्यर्थः।

77. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read त्वयि च सति for त्वयि वसति.

90. Some read अङ्ग विगर्हणम् for अङ्गविगर्हणा. Malli reads अङ्ग-विदारणम् and explains it as शरीरविपत्तिः.

91. All read दुर्नय for the incorrect दुर्णय found in N. See Pt. Sivadatta's note on the verse.

96. The विरहिन्, in order to avoid looking at the rising moon, turns his back at the east; and the south wind (दक्षिणपवन) which might mean also 'the wind from the right' comes and touches him on his left, and not on the right (दक्षिण), because he faces the west.[1] The दक्षिण wind is thus not दक्षिण. The real meaning is,

1. Narahari says प्राच्यां हि चन्द्रोदयः। तद्विमुखस्य पश्चिमाभिमुखस्य दक्षिणः पवनो दक्षिणो न भवति वामभागवर्तित्वात्।

however, that the south wind, though called दक्षिणपवन, is never दक्षिण (favourable) to forlorn lovers. The epithet शमनदिक्पवन 'the wind that comes from the South, the region ruled over by Yama' is purposely used; such a wind, of course, cannot be pleasant or favourable (दक्षिण). If, however, we insist on calling it दक्षिण, we must suppose it to be the right (दक्षिण) arm of Cupid. Throughout the verse the word दक्षिण is played upon.

The idea of forlorn lovers turning their backs at the moon is found in Kādambarī— इन्दुद्वेषपरिवर्तितदेहतया पृष्ठभागनिपतितैः....छिद्रितमिव शशिकिरणैः.

102. इतोऽष्टसु वक्रोक्तिः C. P. Vidyā says इतः सकाशादष्टसु वाक्येषु श्लेषवक्रोक्तिरलङ्कारः। यदुक्तं रुद्रटे—वक्त्रा यदन्यथोक्तं व्याचष्टे वान्यथा तदुत्तरदः। वचनं यत् पदभङ्गश्लेषा सा श्लेषवक्रोक्तिः॥

110. C. P. and Vidyā read अनुपपत्तिमतीमपि दुःखिता for अनुपपत्तिमतीमतिदुःखिता. Malli and Jina also read अपि.

111. C. P., Vidyā and Jina (Text) read बिसम् (शम्) for हिमम् found in Malli, Jina and N. The latter, however, gives बिसम् as a variant.

112. C. P. reads जलजबालमृणालजलानिलैः for जलजनालमृणालजलादिभिः found in Vidyā and N. C. P. remarks जलादिभिरिति पाठान्तरम्। नालमृणालेति पाठान्तरम्. Jina (Text) has जलजबालमृणालजलादिभिः, but Jina reads नालमृणाल, and remarks that, though नाल and मृणाल mean the same thing, we have to suppose a difference in shape. Malli reads जलजजालमृणालजलादिभि and says जलजजालैः पद्मसमूहैः.

113. C. P. mentions जलपलता as a variant for कल्पलता.

115. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva, Malli and Jina read सुतालयमेतवान् for..... मीयिवान् found in N. Malli reads द्रुततरः for भृतदरः found in C. P., Vidyā, N and Jina.

117. Narahari reads भेदव्यपाकृतमिथःप्रतिघातम् for भेदव्यपाकृति मिथः-प्रतिघातम्. He says ताभ्यामक्रमेणाभिधीयमानमपि तद्वचः भेदेन वक्तृभेदेन अर्थभेदेन वा व्यपाकृतो दूरीकृतो मिथःप्रतिघातो विरोधः प्रतिबन्धो वा अश्रवणं प्रतीत्यजनकत्वं वा यत्र तादृशमेवाभूत्। तथाहि द्वाभ्यां सकृदुच्चार्यमाणयोः परस्परमन्यार्थत्वं वा स्यात्। अन्योन्य-

पराहत्या अश्रवणं वा स्यात्। अर्थप्रत्यायकत्वं वा न स्यात्। तदत्र किमपि नास्तीत्यर्थः। C. P., Malli and Jina read भेदव्ययाकृति for भेदव्यपाकृति.

121. Vidyā, Malli and Narahari read भवद्विधाभिधाभिः for भवद्विधाविधाभिः found in C. P. and N. C. P., however, mentions the former reading. Narahari says अथ संबोधने। तस्मात् भवद्विधानामभिधाभिर्वचोभिः हेतुभिरपि कशिम्नः शमना तया हेतुभूतया अनया भैम्या रुचिः स्वाभाविकी कान्तिः प्राप्तुमुचिता। कशिमानं शमं नयतीति वा। कशिम्नः शमनं यातीति वा। कशिमशमनया रुचिरिति रुचेर्वा विशेषणम्। See also Extracts.

Malli and Narahari follow the same reading as C. P. except that they read विगाहमाना.

15. C. P. Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read प्रसादैः for प्रसादात् (Malli, Narahari and N).

30. C. P. and Malli read तच्चिंतया for तच्चिन्तया found in Vidyā, Īśānadeva, N and Jina.

32. Vidyā and Īśānadeva read प्राणानपि स्वान् सुदृशः like N, Jina and Malli. C. P. reads प्राणानपि प्रांशुदृशः.

36. Vidyā, C. P. and Malli read उपल्यकासु for अधित्यकासु. Nārāyaṇa admits that उपल्यकासु इति पाठः साधीयान्.

Vidyā reads अधत्त for व्यधत्त—विश्रान्तिमधत्त स्थितिं कृतवान्.

45. हारिद्रभङ्गाय—Nārāyaṇa explains it as हरिद्राच्छेदाय सुवर्णच्छेदाय वा. Vidyā takes हारिद्र in the sense of 'gold' only.

48. C. P., Vidyā and Malli read विवेद for व्यवित्त.

51. आलिङ्गितालीक ..... Acc. to Vidyā, आलिङ्गितमलीकमसत्यं परस्परमन्योन्यं येन तत् आलिङ्गितालीकपरस्परम् एवंभूतमन्तः मनो यस्य नलदमयन्त्योर्युग्मस्य तत्तथाभूतम्। एतेन अलीकभैमीगृहीतचित्तेन नलेन भैमी आलिङ्गिता। भैम्या अलीकनलगृहीतचित्तया सत्या नल आलिङ्गितः। परमन्यत्रवदीक्षमाणत्वात् सत्यं ज्ञानं न बभूवेत्यर्थः। Nārāyaṇa's explanation is simpler—आलिङ्गितं यदलीकं परस्परं तस्यान्तर्मध्ये तथ्यं सत्यमपि मिथः परस्परं परिषस्वजाते आलिलिङ्गतुः.

53. See Extracts for variants.

54. Malli alone reads सर्वत्र संवाद्यमबोधमानौ—तौ सर्वत्र सर्वविषयेषु संवाद्यं मिथःसंवादार्हं परस्परानुरूपमित्यर्थः। अलीकमसत्यं परस्परन्तु आलोक्य अबोधमानौ मिथ्येत्यमन्यमानौ केलिरसात् विरन्तुं न शेकतुः. सर्वत्र संवाद्यमबाधमानौ is the common reading.

C. P. reads रूपश्रिया तथ्यकरम् for रूपश्रियातिथ्यकरम्[1]. Vidyā has the latter reading like Nārāyaṇa and Malli; but, unlike N, he takes अबाधमानौ as intransitive. This makes the verse very simple—तौ भैमीनलौ अलीकं परस्परमन्योन्यमालोक्य दृष्ट्वा तु पुनः केलिरसात् क्रीडानुरागात् विरन्तुं न शेकतुः। कीदृशमन्योन्यमित्याह—सर्वत्र संकेते संवादं, यथा नलेन श्रुता भैमी तथा दृष्टा, यथा भैम्या नलः श्रुतः तथा दृष्ट इत्यर्थः। तथा रूपश्रिया लावण्यशोभया परमुत्कृष्टम् आतिथ्यकरं लक्षणया विलोकनीयम्। किमिति केलिरसात् विरन्तुं न शेकतुरित्याह—अबाधमानौ अप्रतिषेधौ। न हि तयोरलीकं परस्परं विलोकमानयोः बाधास्ति स्वेच्छया विहरणात्. Jina's first explanation is like Nārāyaṇa's— (परस्परम्) अबाधमानौ सत्यत्वेन मन्यमानौ. His second explanation is like that of Vidyā—अथवा परस्परमलीकमालोक्यावगम्यापि अबाधमानौ पुनः पुनः प्रवर्तमानौ सन्तौ केलिरसात् क्रीडाकौतुकात् न विरतौ. Īśānadeva simply reproduces Vidyā's interpretation.

56. Vidyā and C. P. read पुनः पुनस्तत्र पुनः for पुनः पुनस्तत्र पुरः found in Malli and N.

57. C. P., Narahari, Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Malli read विदर्भराजप्रभवानिवासम् for..... भिरामम् found in N.

66. Vidyā, Īśānadeva, C. P. and Malli read हरभीतिगुप्तेः for हरभीतिगुप्ते found in N. The former seems to be the more natural reading. Malli says हरभीत्या गुप्तेः गुप्त्यर्थमित्यर्थः संबन्धसामान्ये षष्ठी. Vidyā says हरभीतिगुप्तेः ईश्वरभयगोपनात्.

Nārāyaṇa expounds the compound as हरभीतिगुप् ते—(स्मरः) ते (पयोधरे) हराद् भीतिस्तस्याः सकाशादात्मानं गोपायतीति हरभीतिगुप् एवंभूतः सन् खेलति. He takes गुप्त as a क्त form also, but his interpretation is farfetched—हरेण पार्वत्याः सकाशाद्भीत्या गुप्ते अमर्दिते...अस्पृष्टेत्यर्थे कुचविशेषणं वा.

Jina reads हरभीतिगुप्तः—हरात् वा भीतिः तस्याः सकाशात् आत्मानं गोपायतीति हरभीतिगुप्तः एवंविधः सन् स्मरः.....। हरभीतिगुप्तेरिति पाठे हरात् भीतिः हरभीतिः तया गुप्तिस्तस्याः आत्मरक्षणात् कारणात्।

Narahari reads हरभीतिगुप्तेः, but says हरभीतेर्गुप्तिः रक्षणं तस्या हेतोः। गुप्ते इति पाठे गुप्तं रक्षणं तन्निमित्ते। यद्वा हरभीतेः सकाशादात्मानं गोपायतीति हरभीतिगुप् क्विबन्तः ईदृशः स्मरः ते तव पयोधरे खेलति.

1. Narahari reads रूपश्रिया तृप्तिकरम्.

71. C. P. and Vidyā read ससज्जे for स जज्ञे found in Narahari, Malli and N. C. P. and Vidyā take the compound स्वघात.... हसः as a कर्मधारय. Nārāyaṇa takes it as a बहुव्रीहि qualifying Nala.

76. C. P., Narahari, Vidyā and Malli read भैम्याम् for भैम्याः.

83. देवे धवे—Vidyā and Malli read देवे भवेत्; C. P. reads देवे वरे.

96. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Narahari read नैन्द्री for मैन्द्री—इन्द्रसंबन्धिनी दया माम् अनुतापिका नाभूत्.

99. C. P., Vidyā, Malli aind Narahari read आयतिम् for आयती and connect द्वे with शर्करे.

100. C. P., Vidyā and Īśānadeva read कर्मकृष्टेः for कर्मकृष्टे found in Malli, N and Narahari. The latter says कर्मणा पुण्येन आनीते आयुषि विनष्ट एव यः स्वर्गः नरान् प्राप्नोति.

102. C. P. and Vidyā read अनादिधा विश्वपरम्परायाः for अनादिधाविः-स्वपरम्परायाः found in Malli and N.

C. P., Vidyā, Narahari and Malli read पर्यनुयुज्य कार्यः for पर्यनुयोगयोग्यः. See Extracts.

Jina reads अनादिधाविस्वपरम्परायाः, like Nārāyaṇa, but remarks आदिं दधातीत्यादिधा न आदिधा अनादिधा आदिरहिता एवंविधाया विश्वपरम्परायाः हेतुस्रजः स्रोतसि इति केचित्। मीमांसकसिद्धान्ते अदृष्टसहकृतस्य जीवात्मनः कारणत्वम्। वेदान्तनैयायिकादिसिद्धान्ते अदृष्टसहकृतस्य ईश्वरस्य कारणत्वम्।

Narahari who reads अनादिधाविस्वपरम्परायाः says न विद्यते आदिर्यस्मिन् कर्मणि तथा धावन्तीत्यनादिधावीनि वस्तूनि तेषां परम्परा तस्याः। यद्वा अनादिधाविनां स्वेषामात्मनां नलभैमीलक्षणानां परम्परा। युगे युगे हि नलभैमीसंबन्धः श्रूयते, न त्विन्द्रभैमीसंबन्ध इति हेतुस्रजः हेतूनां कर्मणां स्रक् तस्याः स्रोतसि प्रवाहे निरन्तरप्रवृत्तौ

P.'s reading as a variant अनादिधाविश्वपरम्परेति पाठे अनादिं धत्ते इत्यनादिधा अजन्तः स चासौ विश्वपरम्परा च तस्या इत्यर्थः. Iśānadeva explains both readings and remarks on अनादिधा—तद्धितानामाकृतिप्रधानत्वात् संख्याया अन्यस्मादपि धा.

105. C. P., Vidyā and Malli read परिहारयन्ति for परिहापयन्ति.

107. C. But this is hardly the meaning of the verse.

CANTO VII

6. C. P. and Vidyā read पान्थी for पान्था. Jina remarks प्रियाङ्गपान्थीति क्षीवन्तः पाठश्चिन्त्यः.

12. C. P. reads नवां स कामः, like Nārāyaṇa. Vidyā, Malli and Jina read नवामवाप्ताम्.

14. C. P. says अपितु पुनरमीषां वस्तु सदृशं चन्द्रादिकम् उपमा उपमानं यत् सा अपमानः। उपमाया अपमान इति वा. Viśveśvara says अमीषामज्ञानामुपमा समीकरणं वस्तु यथार्थस्तु अपमानो लघूकरणम्.

17. C. P. reads असंबाध for असापत्न्य found in Vidyā, N and others.

24. Most commentators including C. P. reads पुष्पम् for पौष्पम्.

29. C. P., Īśānadeva and Narahari read प्रांशुद्युति for प्रान्तद्युति (N, Malli and Viśveśvara). Vidyā reads पाण्डुद्युति.

32. Vidyā says निमेष एव यन्त्रं तेन कृत्वा। यः किल इक्षुप्रभृतीनां सार आकृष्यते स यन्त्रेणाकृष्यत इत्यर्थः। तत्र चक्रोरनेत्रहरिणनेत्रयोः निमेषः प्रसिद्धः। पद्मनिमेषः (दल)राशेः संकोचः।

37. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read सहोज्झिहानाम् for सहोज्झिहाना. See Extracts. Malli alone reads सहोज्झिहानम्.

38. Most commentators read सुधाभूर्बिम्बस्य for सुधाभूर्बिम्बस्य found in N, though some read मुखेन्दोः for मुखेन्दौ. Narahari says अस्या मुखेन्दोः संबन्धी सुधास्थानभूतोऽधरः बिम्बस्य बिम्बीफलस्य प्रतिबिम्बः सदृशः। अथवा न युक्तः। तस्य बिम्बीफलस्य द्रुमवति देशे वृत्तिः लतासंबन्ध एव शोभमानत्वात्। अन्यत्र त्रुटितविशीर्णशुष्कत्वात्। अस्याधरस्य तु सा कान्तिर्विद्रुमे प्रवाले द्रुमरहितेऽपि संभाव्यमाना। अतो न युक्तः प्रतिबिम्बभाव इत्यर्थः। See also Extracts.

43. For निमिच्छय see Extracts. Malli alone reads निमिल्य (निक्षिप्य). "डुमिञ् प्रक्षेपणे"।

44. Trans. follows Nārāyaṇa, but Vidyā's explanation of the verse is simpler—बिन्दुवृन्दं बिन्दुसमूहो रदावलिद्वन्द्वति दन्तपंक्तिद्वयमिवाचरति। केषां बिन्दुवृन्दमित्याह—चन्द्रात् अधिकमतिरिक्तं यदेतत् अस्या दमयन्त्या मुखमानन-

Jina while explaining this verse copies Vidyā.

53. C. P. seems to read पौर्णमासम् for पूर्णमास्यम् found in N. N says पूर्णमा आस्यं प्रारम्भो यस्य (हिमांशोः),यदुदये पूर्णिमास्ति i.e., the full moon. Vidyā also reads पूर्णमास्यम्, but his derivation is different. See Extracts. Viśveśvara, Malli, Jina and Narahari read पूर्णिमास्यम्. Jina says—कीदृशं हिमांशुम्—पूर्णिमास्यं पूर्णिमायामास्या स्थितिर्यस्य तम्। पूर्णिमाया आस्यमिवेति वा। पौर्णमास्यमिति पाठे प्रत्ययदिचन्त्यः। दिगादिदेहांशाद् य इत्यनेन वा दिगादित्वात् समर्थनीयः। पौर्णमासमिति पाठस्तु संबन्धमात्रेण अणप्रत्ययेन समर्थनीयः।

Īśānadeva reads पौर्णमास्यम् (पूर्णमासीभवम्), and this might be the reading of Vidyā as well, in spite of my manuscript.

In भ्रूलक्ष्म खण्डं दधदर्धमिन्दुः, all except Nārāyaṇa take भ्रूलक्ष्मखण्डम् as a single compound. N, however, connects it with अर्धम्—अर्धखण्डमिन्दुः भ्रुवावेव लक्ष्म कलङ्कं दधत्.

Viśveśvara says—अस्या मुखस्य पूर्णिमायाः पौर्णमास्या आस्यं मुखं हिमांशुं चन्द्रं जित्वा पूर्णस्य प्रवृद्धस्य सतो महिमा महत्त्वमस्तु न। नेत्यत्र काकुः। महत्त्वमेवाह—भ्रुवौ एव लक्ष्मखण्डं लाञ्छनशकलं दधत् दधानो यस्य मुखस्य तृतीयो भागो ललाटमर्धमिन्दुः खलु। मुखस्य भागाधिक्यात् महत्त्वमिति भावः. Narahari remarks मुखस्य तृतीयो भागश्चन्द्रस्यार्धम्। अतश्चन्द्रात् मुखमधिकमेवेत्यर्थः.

65. C. P. and Narahari read चिपिटौ and take it as a noun. See Extracts and Vocab. sub voce. Nārāyaṇa reads चिपिटे and takes it as an adj. qualifying कर्णलते. Vidyā reads चिपटौ, while he seems to read भ्रुवौ for भ्रुवोः. Nārāyaṇa gives चिपिटौ as a variant. Acc. to Vidyā—अस्या दमयन्त्याः कर्णलते कर्णपाल्यौ तस्य कामस्य चापयोः धनुषोः किं ज्ये मौर्व्यौ। अस्या भ्रुवौ तच्चापयोश्चिपटौ दण्डभागौ। चापट इति लोके। कीदृशौ चिपटौ—वंशस्य वेणोस्त्वग्भागो यत्र तौ तथा। स्मरस्तावच्चतुर्भुजः, उक्तकारणत्वात् तस्य च धनुषी तयोश्च गुणौ दमयन्तीकर्णलते, वंशभागौ च दमयन्तीभ्रुवावित्यर्थः।

Nārāyaṇa's explanation is cumbrous—अस्या भ्रुवोस्तच्चापयोः भ्रूरूपयोर्द्वयोः स्मरधनुषोः चिपिटे विस्तृते कर्णलते एव वंशत्वगंशौ वेणुत्वग्भागौ ज्ये किम्। मैम्या

भ्रुवौ कामधनुषी कर्णौ मौर्व्यौ. Malli and Viśveśvara also read चिपिटे, but they make it qualify ज्ये. Malli says स्मरस्य चापयोरस्या भ्रुवोः अस्या एव कर्णलते वंशस्य त्वगंशौ त्वग्भागमयौ चिपिटे अनते ऋजू ज्ये किम्. He reads, however, चतुर्दोरुचिरः for चतुर्दोरुचितः—चतुर्दोर्भिः चतुर्बाहुभिः रुचिरः.

66. Malli and Narahari read सरूपता for सुरूपता. Their reading hardly gives any sense. Narahari says ग्रीवा आलिङ्गयताम् आलिङ्गनयोग्यतां दधत्यपि सरूपताभागखिलोर्ध्वका समानं रूपं यस्य सरूपस्तस्य भावस्तत्ता तां भजतीति सरूपताभाक् अखिलः ऊर्ध्वकः उपरिभागो यस्याः सा.

71. C. P. and Jina (Text) read करस्पर्धनगर्धितर्द्धिः for ...गर्धनर्द्धिः. Vidyā and Jina (comm.) read गर्धऋद्धिः.

Narahari reads करस्पर्धनगर्धिऋद्धिः—करस्पर्धनं गर्धयति गृध्यतीति वा करस्पर्धनगर्धिनी। 'गृधु अभिकाङ्क्षायाम्'। गर्वे अभिकाङ्क्षायां वा। ईदृशी ऋद्धिः शोभा यस्य ईदृशो यः पल्लवः।

78. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Narahari read क ताभ्याम् for न ताभ्याम्.

80. C. P., Vidyā and Narahari read स्तनातटे for स्तनावटे and लेखाः for रेखाः. Īśānadeva and Malli also read स्तनातटे. Jina reads स्तनान्तरे, which is given by C. P. and Īśānadeva as a variant.

82. All except Nārāyaṇa read अङ्गदीप्तेः for अङ्गयष्टेः.

85. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Narahari read रोमदामा for रोमराजिः.

87. पुष्पाणि बाणाः....—केचिदिमं श्लोकं न पठन्ति C. P.

89. Malli alone reads यदि for युधि.

93. Trans. does not bring out the meaning fully. Usually a पत्र (lit. leaf) "a document asserting one's superiority" is delivered to a rival. Here the banana plant instead of delivering the "challenge leaf" to its rivals, viz., Damayantī's thighs, covers its own body with "leaves", obviously because it cannot distinguish between its own stem and her thighs owing to the perfect resemblance that exists between them. Vidyā remarks येन कारणेन अनयोरूर्वोर्भ्रमेण भ्रान्त्या स्वस्यैव आत्मनः प्रकाण्डस्योपरि पत्राणि ददाना ददती जागर्ति स्फुरति। प्रकाण्डस्योपरि किल पत्राणि भवन्ति। तत्र कविः शब्दच्छलमाह—नह्यात्मन उपरि केनापि पत्रं दत्तमस्ति। किं तर्हि विपक्षस्योपरि दीयते। ऊरू च रम्भैव। अतो रम्भा किमात्मनः प्रकाण्डमपि न जानातीत्यर्थः। See Vocabulary under पत्र.

Viśveśvara explains the verse thus—

रम्भा कदली आत्मनः स्वस्य प्रकाण्डं स्कन्धमेतस्या ऊरू च स्वेन आत्मनैव न चिह्नयति न लक्षयति किम्। कुत इत्याह—येनाचिह्नेन अनयोः ऊर्वोर्भ्रमेण स्वस्य आत्मीयस्य प्रकाण्डस्य एषोपरि पत्राणि दलानि जेतव्यस्योपरि दातव्यानि ददाना अर्पयन्ती सती सा रम्भा जागर्ति। रम्भा ऊरुभ्रान्त्या स्वस्योपरि पत्रालम्बनमकरोदिति भावः।

99. C. P. reads सिद्धिः for लब्धिः which he gives as a variant.

106. C. P. and Vidyā read बदेदम् for मुदेदम्.

3. On the ray of the eye see Appendix I.

5. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva, Narahari and Jina (Text) read पुनः स्म तस्यां वलतेऽस्य चेतः, पुनश्च दृश्येन बलान्न्यवर्ति for पुनः स्म तस्यां वलतेऽस्य चित्तं, दृश्यादनेनाथ पुनर्न्यवर्ति (N).

6. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read स्मरं तमाशङ्कत कापि कन्या for तं कापि मेने स्मरमेव कन्या (Malli and N). In 7 they read न शक्नुवल्यः for न जातु शेकुः (Malli and N).

14. C. P., Vidyā, Narahari, Īśānadeva and Jina (Text) read सगन्धबन्धम् (i.e., सगोत्रसंसर्गम्) for सबन्धुबन्धम् found in Malli, N and Jina. N remarks सगन्ध इति पाठे सगन्धो बन्धुरुच्यते.

17. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read प्रमाणमेनस्यपि दृश्यवृत्ति for प्रमाणमास्ते यदपेऽपि धावत् found in Malli, Narahari and N.

19. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read अथ स्वरेणैव विभावयन्ती, भावं निजं सा मृदुगद्गदेन for व्यर्थीभवद्भावपिधानयत्ना, स्वरेण साश्रुगद्गदेन (Malli, N and Narahari). The former reading is given by N as a variant.

20. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read उक्त्यापि युक्ता मधुपर्कतृप्तिं तद्विरस्त्वादृशि धृष्टता मे[1] for प्रियाक्षरालीरसधारयापि, वैधी विधेया मधुपर्कतृप्तिः. The latter reading is given by C. P. as a variant.

C. P., Vidyā and Jina read also अतिथीनाम् for अतिथिभ्यः.

---

1. This reading is given by Narahari as a variant. He reads प्रियाक्षराली etc., like Malli and N.

22. C. P., Vidyā, Malli and Jina read स्वसंभृतिप्राञ्जलतापि for स्वसंभृतिः प्राञ्जलतापि. Jina (both Text and Comm.) reads सज्जनेन for सज्जनेन. The former might be the reading of C. P. also. See Extracts.

27. C. P., Vidyā and Jina (Text) read लक्ष्यः for मन्ये found in N and Malli. The latter, however, reads हेतुम् for हेतुः. Narahari also reads हेतुं मन्ये, but remarks हेतुर्मन्य इति पाठे मन्ये सुकृतानि हेतुरित्यन्वयः.

31. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read इतीरयन्ती for भूयोऽपि बाला (N and Malli).

35. C. P. and Vidyā read बलाकाः for वलक्षाः found in later commentators.

36. C. P., Vidyā, Malli, Jina and Narahari read नखकृंतवेन for नखवेषधारी. Malli alone reads जेतुस्समेतत् for रतीशजेतुः, and remarks रतीशजेतुरिति देशान्तरपाठस्त्वयुक्त एव प्रकृतार्थस्य सर्वनामोपादेयस्य स्वशब्दोपादाने पौनरुक्त्य-दोषादिति.

37. C. P., Vidyā, and Jina read दृश्येतरतामिषेण for दृश्येतरतां किमेत्य found in Malli and N.

38. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read

विधाय चित्रे तव धीर नेत्रे
किं कृष्णसारस्य दृशोर्मृगस्य ।
अदूरजाग्रद्विदरप्रणाली—
च्छलादयच्छद्विधिरर्धचन्द्रम् ॥ instead of कृत्वा दृशौ ते बहुवर्णचित्रे
किं कृष्णसारस्य तयोर्मृगस्य ।
अदूर.....प्रणालीरेखामयच्छद्विधिरर्धचन्द्रम् ॥ (Malli and N).

The older reading is much the simpler. Narahari and Iśāna-deva's reading is same as that of C. P. except that they read वीर for धीर.

47. C. P. and Jina read महीमहेन्द्रमहः for महीजगत्यामहो which they give as a variant. The former reading is mentioned by N— महीमहेन्द्रवत् नलवत् महस्तेजो यस्येति संवृद्धिः.

51. C. P. reads आमज्जमामजत् for अमज्जदाकण्ठम्. Narahari, Jina and Malli read आमज्जदामजम्. C. P. mentions आकण्ठम् as a variant.

Vidyā and Jina (Text) read आकण्ठमामज्जत्. All except N read वदनान्निपीय for वचनं निपीय.

52. C. P. and Vidyā read अह्नांपतिः for अह्नःपतिः, and स प्रतीच्छन् for संप्रतीच्छन्. Malli and C. (Text) read अहर्पतिः.

55. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read त्वदर्थम् for त्वदीयम्, and बहुना for गुरुणा found in Malli and N.

56. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read दूत्यं हि यत्नः फलितं विधेयम् for या दूतता नः फलिना विधेया found in Malli, Narahari and N.

58. C. P., Vidyā, Narahari and Jina read हरन्ति ते भैमि दिशाम-धीशान् for हरन्ति ते दिक्षु धृताधिपत्वान् found in N and Malli. The latter reads, however, धृताधिपत्यान्.

59. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read त्वयि खिद्यतेऽद्य for त्वयि खेदमेति found in Malli and N.

80. C. P., Īśānadeva, Vidyā, Jina and Narahari read तुभ्यं तदा स प्रजिघाय चित्तं, गतो यदायाति पुनर्न पान्थः for तदा स चेतः प्रजिघाय तुभ्यं, यदा गतो नैति निवृत्य पान्थः found in Malli and N.

82. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read तेनाश्रिता शैत्यगुणान्मृणाली for तेन श्रिता शैत्यगुणा मृणाली found in Malli, Narahari and N.

85. C. P., Narahari, Vidyā and Malli read सारोऽथ धारेव for सारोत्थधारेव found in Jina, N and Īśānadeva. Jina mentions the earlier reading. Narahari mentions the reading सारोत्थधारा.

All except N read संतर्पयन्ती दमयन्ति for.....हृदयानि.

87. C. P., Vidyā and Īśānadeva read the verse as in Nārāyaṇa and Malli, except that C. P. and Īśānadeva read निर्वासयता for निर्वापयता—

अपास्तपाथेयसुधोपयोगैस्त्वच्चुम्बिनैव स्वमनोरथेन ।
क्षुधं च निर्वापयता तृषं च स्वादीयसाऽध्वा गमितः सुखं तैः ॥

But after this they read another verse, which practically means the same thing, but which they explain as an independent verse.

The verse is—

त्वच्चुम्बिनैव स्वमनोरथेन स्वादीयसाऽस्तंगमितक्षुधेन ।
अपास्तपाथेयसुधोपयोगैरध्वा भुवस्तैरयमत्यवाहि ॥

(C. P. reads अपार्थ for अपास्त)

Both these verses are found in Jina (Text), though Jina explains the first only.

88. C. P. reads देवीं मनोभूशरदावदाहे
दिवं तवार्यादथ मज्जयद्भिः ।
मुराधिनाथैः.....for

प्रिया मनोभूशरदावदाहे देवीस्त्वदर्थेन निमज्जयद्भिः । सुरेषु सारैः..... found in Malli, Narahari and N.

The reading of Vidyā, Iśānadeva and Jina (Text) is the same as that of C. P. except that they read स्वर्लोकनाथैः for मुराधिनाथैः.

90. C. P., Vidyā, Iśānadeva and Jina read प्रत्येकम् for एकैकम्, and त्वं नः प्रसूनाशुगभल्लशल्यजुषां विशल्यौषधिवल्लिरेधि for त्वं मूर्छतां नः स्मरभिल्लशल्यै-र्मुदे विशल्यौषधि etc., found in Malli and N. C. P. gives the latter reading as a variant, except that he has भल्ल for भिल्ल.

91. C. P., Vidyā, Narahari and Jina read पिपासुः for पिपासन् found in Malli and N.

92. C. P., Vidyā, Iśānadeva and Jina read अनुग्रहोऽस्मासु यदि त्वदीयस्तदेहि देहि द्रुतमङ्कपालीम् । चार्वङ्गि निर्वापय तापमङ्गै.....॥ for निजे सृजास्मासु भुजे भजन्त्यावादित्यवर्गे परिवेषवेषम् । प्रसीद निर्वापय तापमङ्गै.....॥ found in Malli and N. The former reading is given by N as a variant. Narahari's reading is same as that of Malli and N except that he reads प्रिये for निजे, but in my ms. Narahari gives अनुग्रहो-ऽस्मासु etc., as an independent verse and remarks इति श्लोकान्तरं स्पष्टार्थम्. Jina mentions another variant—निजे भुजे त्वं परिवेषभाजाव-दित्यपत्यप्रकरे विधेहि (अदित्यपत्यानि देवास्तेषां प्रकरेऽस्मल्लक्षणे परिवेषं वेष्टनाकारं भजतः परिवेषभाजौ एवंविधे निजे भुजे विधेहि। अङ्कपालीं प्रयच्छेति भावः ।)

93. भिन्ना वरं तीक्ष्णकटाक्षबाणैः
प्रेमस्तव प्रेमरसात् पवित्रैः ।

C. P. reads भीरु as a separate word in place of तीक्ष्ण found in Vidyā, Malli, N and Jina. Vidyā and Jina (Text) read प्रिये for प्रेमः, but C. P. says the reading प्रिये is अनुपपन्न acc. to सहृदयs. Jina remarks on प्रेमः—प्रेम इति इण् गतौ अस्य वर्तमानोत्तमबहुवचनम्। प्रपूर्वस्यास्य मरणवाचित्वं परेतप्रेतसंस्थिता इति हैमवचनात्.

In the first line, Malli alone reads दयस्व नो घातय नैवमस्मान् for दयस्व किं घातयसि त्वमस्मान्.

94. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read कैतवनाटितम् for कैतवनर्तितम् (Malli and N).

96. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina read श्यामेव देवालयतां नयामो भूमौ रतिश्चेत्तव जन्मभूमौ for भुवः स्वरादेशमथाचरामो भूमौ धृतिं यासि यदि स्वभूमौ (Malli, Narahari and N). The latter reading is given by C. P. as a variant.

103. C. P., Narahari, Vidyā and Jina read वृणुष्व for वृणीष्व. Malli alone reads त्रपोदबि वचो न किं नः for त्रपाकृद्वचनं न किं नः. His reading is given by C. P. as a variant.

104. C. P., Vidyā, Jina, Īśānadeva and Narahari read

सुधारसादप्यधिकं प्रयच्छ
प्रसीद वैदर्भि निजाधरं नः for

प्रसीद तस्मादधिकं निजं तु, प्रयच्छ पातुं रदनच्छदं नः, which is a distinctly inferior reading found in Malli and N. Narahari reads अस्माकमस्मान्मदनापमृत्योस्त्राणाय पीयूषरसोऽपि नासौ for नास्माकमस्मा.....पीयूषरसायनानि.

107. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read त्वमनु विमृश्य for स्वयमवधार्य (Malli and N).

Extracts from C. P.—

12. This is from Durgasiṁha's Vṛitti on Kātantra (आख्यात 4. 216).

This is the reading of Malli and Nārāyaṇa, though the former reads प्रतिरुद्धवर्त्मा.

C. P. mentions the latter reading as a variant.

10. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read आखण्डलो दण्डधरः शिखावान्
पतिः प्रतीच्या इति दिग्महेन्द्रैः । for आखण्डलो दण्डधरः कृशानुः
पाशीति नाथैः ककुभां चतुर्भिः ।

The latter reading is found in Malli and N, but it is given by C. P. as a variant. Malli alone reads यये तदुद्वाहरसान्न शेषैः for स्वयंवरे तत्र गतं न शेषैः, but his reading is found in C. P. as a variant.

आखण्डल-अखण्डं सर्वं लाति गृह्णातीति तदधीनत्वात् सर्वस्य । स्वार्थेऽण् । अथवा आखण्डं खण्डमभिव्याप्य लातीत्याखण्डलः । अभिविधावाङ् । सर्वमपि गृह्णातीत्यर्थः C. P.

15. C. P. and Nārāyaṇa read अहिर्महीगौरवसासहिर्यः·

Malli reads कः for यः—महीगौरवं महीभारं सासहिर्मृशं सोढा अन्योऽहिः सर्पः कोऽस्ति न कोऽपीत्यर्थः.

C. P. says—

महीमहिः सासहिरस्ति को हीति पाठान्तरम् . Jina says अहिर्महीसासहिरस्ति कोऽन्य इत्यपि क्वचित् पाठः । This is the reading of Vidyā and Īśānadeva.

16. C. P. and Vidyā read

स्वयं विमृश्यैव स धर्मशास्त्रं स्वयंवरे प्रास्थित न स्वयंभूः ।
व्यलोकि लोके मुनिभिः श्रुतो वा समं विवाहः क पितामहेन ॥

Jina's reading is the same except that he reads श्रुतिभिः for मुनिभिः which he gives as a variant. Nārāyaṇa and Malli read—

ययौ विमृश्योर्ध्वदिशः पतिर्न स्वयंवरं वीक्षितधर्मशास्त्रः ।
व्यलोकि लोके श्रुतिषु स्मृतौ वा .. .. ॥

This reading is given by C. P. as a variant except that he reads श्रुतः for स्मृतौ.

17. Jina, Vidyā and C. P. read the first two lines thus—

श्रुत्वा निजं भीमजया निरासं
दूतीमुखादिन्द्रमुखा दिगीशाः ।

Malli and Nārāyaṇa's reading (भैमीनिरस्तं खमवेत्य दृष्ट्या मुखात् किलेन्द्र-प्रमुखा दिगीशाः) is given by C. P. as a variant.

Malli and Jina read स्पन्दे (गमने) for स्यदे. Jina gives स्यदे as a variant.

18. Vidyā and C. P. read वृणोति for भजेत. C. P., however, says भजेत इति पाठान्तरम्.

19. C. P. reads प्रयस्यताम् like N, but Vidyā reads प्रपश्यताम्. Malli alone reads तद्द्वैतसिद्धिर्न वतानुमेने for नैवानुमेने नलसाम्यसिद्धिः found in C. P. and others. He says तस्य नलस्य द्वैतं तत्सिद्धिः द्वितीयनलत्वसिद्धिः तदत्यन्तसारूप्यसिद्धिरिति यावत्।

22. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read ज्वरितात् for कथितात्, and read the last two lines thus—भ्माताथ सारैर्मदनाद्गृहीतै—

नलानुकल्पं स्वमकल्पयन्त।

C. P. says

23. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read ऊचे for आख्यत् (N and Malli).

25. Malli and Nārāyaṇa read तत्रागमद्वासुकिरीशभूषाभस्मोपदेहस्फुटगौर-देहः. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read ईशवासात् for ईशभूषा. Vidyā says—ईशवासात् ईश्वरदेहात् (अगमत्). C. P. says—ईशभूषाभस्म इति पाठान्तरम्। Jina says ईशे शम्भुवपुषि वासः तस्मात् हेतोः भस्मोपदेहेन.....गौरो देहो यस्य सः। ईशवासात् कैलासादिति केचित्। N gives ईशवासात् as a variant.

27. Vidyā, C. P. and Jina read the first two lines thus—

सपर्यया कुण्डिननाकनाथः
शस्तेषु पस्त्येषु निवेशनेन।

Malli and N read रम्येषु हर्म्येषु निवेशनेन सपर्यया कुण्डिननाकनाथः.

C. P. says— शस्तेषु प्रशस्तेषु प्रधानेषु पस्त्येषु आवासेषु निवेशनेन।

Malli and N read ... नम्रताद्यैः. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read ... नम्रताभिः.

51. It is related in Skandapurāṇa[3] that there was a dispute between Brahmā and Viṣṇu as to which of them could discover the extremity of the Phallic Śiva. Viṣṇu went down to the nether regions to find the lower end of the Liṅga, and being unsuccessful in his quest, admitted his failure. Brahmā, on the other hand, went to heaven to discover the upper limit of the Phallus, and being at a loss where to find it, he besought the Surabhi cow and the Ketakī flower to aver falsely that he had seen and worshipped the crest of the great Phallus. A voice from the air condemned them as false witnesses, and Brahmā together with the cow and the flower were subjected to various curses, as a result of which the Ketakī flower was excluded from the worship of Śiva. The story reappears in another section of Skandapurāṇa[4] with a slight variation. There is here no mention of Surabhi; Brahmā and Ketakī alone being cursed by Śiva for speaking a falsehood.

10. A आदेशाच्च.

11. This portion is a quotation from Kāśikā. Ms. has several lacunae which have been supplied from the printed Text (Bāla Sastri's ed.).

Iśānadeva follows Vidyā's reading, but he gives the other reading as a variant.

37. Vidyā reads सुधांशुसुधीभवन्त्या (i.e. चन्द्रामृतरूपेण संपद्यमानया गिरा) for सुधीषु सुधीभवन्त्या found in C. P., Iśānadeva, Jina and N. Jina mentions Vidyā's reading. Malli reads सुधीभवन्त्याः— सुधीषु विद्वत्सु सुधीभवन्त्या विदुषीभवन्त्यास्ते तवान्तरमन्तरङ्गम्.

41. Verses 41 and 42 (कल्लोलजाल .....and त्वद्रूपसम्पदः.....) are not explained by C. P., Malli[1] and Jina. In my ms. of Vidyā both text and commentary have been added in the margin, probably by a later hand. The verses are not found in Iśānadeva.

46. वाग्देवतायतनमञ्जुमुखाम्बुजेऽपि—

Vidyā alone reads वाग्देवता नयन..... for वाग्देवतायतन. He says सा वाग्देवता सरस्वती अमुष्मिन् नृपे एकमेव दूषणमजीगणत् एकदोषं संभावयामास। कीदृशे—नयनानां नेत्राणां मञ्जु मनोज्ञं मुखाम्बुजं यस्य तस्मिन्. Here दोषमजीगणत् ought logically to refer to Damayantī and not to Sarasvatī. Vidyā's alternative explanation is not more satisfactory— अथवा सा दमयन्ती अस्मिन् नृपे एकमेव दूषणमजीगणत् इति योज्यम्। तथा वाग्देवतासेवितनयनमञ्जु मुखाम्बुजं यस्येति समासः।

65. C. P. Vidyā, Iśānadeva and Jina read श्रीभावभावितपदाम्. Vidyā remarks नीराजनाय निर्मत्सनाय।

79. C. P. reads वेलाबलाक्रमण for वेलाचलाक्रमण—सरितामीश्वरः तस्य समुद्रस्य परपारे या वेला परतटं तस्या बलेन आक्रमणे विक्रमं कर्तुम्. He mentions वेलाचल as a variant.

80. Vidyā expounds गर्भरूपम् thus—गर्भस्येव शिशोरिव सुकुमारं रूपं यस्य तं गर्भरूपम्। गर्भे उदरमध्ये एव अस्य रूपं न बाह्यजातस्येति निन्दा।

Vidyā says अनध्यायस्य हेतुः यस्तिथिरमावास्या चतुर्दशी वा । अत्रोक्तनिमित्ता विशेषोक्तिः काव्यलिङ्गमलंकारः.

Other commentators think that the tithi in question is शुक्लप्रतिपद्. Viśveśvara remarks—शिष्टा हि प्रतिपत्तिथौ नाधीयते । यद्रामायणे-प्रतिपत्पाठशीलस्य विद्येव तनुतां गतेति.

96. Most commentators read दराञ्चित for the unusual दराञ्छित given by Nārāyaṇa and explained as ईषदाकृष्ट. Vidyā says—मत्स्यलाञ्छनस्य कामस्य दराञ्चित ईषदारोपितः यश्चापो धनुस्तस्य भासा कान्त्या नीराजितभ्रुवम् । कामकान्तिभिः निर्मञ्छनं क्रियते दमयन्तीभ्रुवोरित्यर्थः ।

In spite of the Palghat edition, Malli also seems to read सुधाम्बुसाधौ, for his explanation is अमृतोदकलाघ्ये.

11. The reference is to Śarvavarman, the author of the Kātantra. Vijayānanda's statement may be compared with the following remark found in Durgasiṁha's Tīkā on the rule: 'सौ च मघवान्' छन्दस्येतौ योगाविति भाष्यकारो भाषते। शर्ववर्मणस्तु वचनात् भाषायामप्यवसीयते। तथाच—मघवद्वज्रलञ्जानिदानमिति, श्वथीकृतप्रग्रहमर्वतां व्रज इति च दृश्यते। Śaraṇadeva in his Durghaṭavṛtti gives the same examples (मघवद्वज्र and श्वथीकृत-) and remarks छान्दसा अपि क्वचित् भाषायां प्रयुज्यन्त इति.

C. P. here refers to the seventh chapter of the Chāndogya Upaniṣad and summarises nearly the whole of it. This chapter gives the story of Nārada and Sanatkumāra, and propounds the nature of the Absolute as transcending all physical objects and mental processes such as water, light, ether, name, speech, mind and its functions, hope, strength and food. It will be seen that C. P. finds references to most of these in the verse, and accordingly explains certain words differently from the other commentators. Besides, in the passage from the Upaniṣad, unlike Śaṁkara, he explains बल 'strength' and अन्न 'food' as air and earth respectively to suit his interpretation of the verse.

Vidyā says उपनिषदपि चित्तेन ज्ञानेन आशाजुषो दिक्पतीन् अनेकान् प्राप्य मुवति। कानाशापतीनित्याह—तेजःसखा वह्नियुक्ता निखिला मरुतो देवाः पार्थिवश्च राजा अर्थात् मरुतामेव। एतेन वह्निरूपो न भवति अपरदेवरूपो न भवति देवराजरूपो न भवति इति तान् मुवति। तथा दिष्टभाजः स्वकर्मरूपान् etc. Īśānadeva says the same thing.

Later commentators find in the verse a reference to the nine Dravyas of the Vaiśeṣika system except the soul—earth, water, light, air, ether, time, space and mind. This interpretation is found in Malli, N and Jina. Malli, for instance, says उपनिषत्पक्षे तु सानन्तानाकाशसहितान्। 'अनन्तं सुरवर्त्म खम्' इत्यमरः। दिष्टभाजः कालयुक्तान्। 'दिष्ट

भाग्ये च काले च' इति विश्वः। चित्तेन समं मनसा सह आशाजुषो दिग्युक्तान्।..... अपां विकारः आप्यम्.....तेजःसखाः तेजोद्रव्यसहिताः मरुत् वायुः पार्थिवाः पृथिवी-विकाराः.....तान् मुञ्चती तार्किकोक्तपृथिव्यादिनवद्रव्येषु आत्मातिरिक्तद्रव्याष्टकस्य श्रुति-वाक्यैर्निषेधं कुर्वतीत्यर्थः।

सौधाग्रनटे पटाञ्चले— Vidyā and Jina (Text) read तटे for नटे. Vidyā says सौधाग्रतटे धवलगृहोपरिभूमिकायां यत् पटाञ्चलं पताकाप्रान्तं तत्र. Vidyā mentions सौधाग्रनटे as a variant. C. P. and others read नटे.

22. अश्वेति– C. P. says अश्वेति श्वेतीकृतम्। श्वित आवरणे लुङ्। आत्मनेपदप्रथमैकवचनम्। कालापके (अथ व्याकरणेषु च A) अस्मादश्यतनी. Vidyā first says श्वित आवरणे श्वेतते, but says at the end श्विता वर्णे कर्मण्यश्यतनी. N says 'श्वितीङ् (श्वितिङ् acc. to Jina) शौक्ल्ये' इत्यस्माण्ण्यन्तात् कर्मणि लुङ्यात्मनेपदम्. Dhātupāṭha and Kātantragaṇamālā have श्विता वर्णे.

32. तदध्वदृक्कारतरङ्गरङ्गणा— C. P. says तस्य राज्ञः अध्वनि दृशो दृष्टेः तारः कनीनिका तस्याः तरङ्गस्य रङ्गणं यस्याः सा तथा। N says तस्य अध्वनि तद्दिशि दृशः ताराणामतिविशालानां तरङ्गाणां दृग्व्यापाराणां रङ्गणं गतिर्यस्याः। दृग्व्यापारदर्शितवर्णनीयनृपान्तरा।

Vidyā reads तदर्धदृक्कारतरङ्गरङ्गणात् and connects it with तृणीभवत्पुष्पशरं—सरस्वती तां दमयन्तीं प्रति नृपान्तरम् अवदत्। कीदृशं नृपम्—तृणीभवन् पुष्पशरः कामो यस्मात् तम्। तस्या दमयन्त्या या अर्धदृक् कटाक्षः तया यत् तारस्य कनीनिकायास्तरङ्गवत् रङ्गणं भ्रमणं तस्मात्। यदि कामादपि सुन्दरः स न भवेत् तत् कथं कटाक्षेण दमयन्ती तं पश्येदित्यर्थः।

अयं राजा सिन्धोः समुद्रस्य जैत्रं जयनशीलं पवित्रं तत् कीर्तिरेव पूर्तमद्भुतमसृजत्। 'वापीकूपतडागानि देवतायतनानि च। अन्नप्रदानमारामः पूर्तमित्यभिधीयते॥' यत्र कीर्तिपूर्ते जगन्ति म्लान्ति धवलितानि। यत्र वा अथवा के कवयो वाचंयमा मौनपरा न सन्ति वर्णयितुमशक्तत्वात्[4]। तथा यस्य विन्दुश्रियमिन्दुरवति इन्दुर्यस्य विन्दुः। यस्य पूर्तस्य जलं चाविश्य दृश्यादितरा अदृश्या असौ जलदेवता जागर्ति। या स्फटिकभूः कैलासः अगानां पर्वतानामीश्वरः। अथ च सिन्धुः सर्वदा पवित्रो न भवति। अतः पर्वणि लोकाः स्नान्ति। समुद्रं पर्वणि स्पृशेत् इति स्मरणात्। अतः समुद्राज्जैत्रमुत्कृष्टम्। तत्रापि वाचंयमा मुनयस्तटे सन्ति। तस्यापि चन्द्रो विन्दुस्तज्जातत्वात्। तत्रापि जलदेवता यागानामीश्वरो यज्ञपुरुषोऽदृश्यः[5]।

यत्र.....सन्ति कवयः के वा न वाचंयमाः— Vidyā explains this somewhat differently —यत्र कीर्तिपूर्ताद्भुते वाचंयमाः के मुनयो न कवयो न काव्यकर्तारः सन्ति, अपितु सर्वेऽपि मुनयोऽस्य कीर्तिपूर्ताद्भुतं वर्णयन्तीत्यर्थः। अथच सर्वेऽपि वाचंयमाः[6] कवयो जलपक्षिणश्च[7] तन्मध्ये वर्तन्त इत्यर्थः। सिन्धौ च जलपक्षिण एव सन्ति न मुनयः।

He explains the last two lines thus— यस्य कीर्तितडागस्य असौ एष स्फटिकभूः कैलासगिरिरेव यागेश्वरो जलदेवता जागर्ति स्फुरति। कीदृशी जलदेवतेत्याह— जलमुदकं चाविश्य प्रविश्य दृश्येतरा अदृश्येत्यर्थः। कीर्तिरेव तडागजलं तावत् शुभ्रं स्फटिकभूर्यागेश्वरदेवता च शुभ्रा। अतएव जलमध्ये न दृश्यते। यः स्फटिको यागेश्वरो भवति स तदकमध्ये क्षिप्तोऽत्यच्छत्वान्न दृश्यते इति परीक्षा। समुद्रे च जलमाविश्य सर्वदृश्या जलदेवता नारायणः। स च स्वपिति। अस्य च जलदेवता जलमाविश्यादृश्या। यागेश्वरश्च जागर्ति न स्वपितीत्यर्थः।

Malli reads दृश्येतरः and connects it with इन्दुः, and does not take स्फटिकभूः to mean कैलास. He says असाविन्दुर्यस्य जलमाविश्य दृश्येतरः सावर्ण्याददृश्यो जलदेवता सन् जागर्ति। प्रकारान्तरेणोत्प्रेक्षते। स्फटिकाद्भवतीति स्फटिकभूः स्फटिकोद्भवो यागेश्वरः सन् जागर्ति। स्फटिकलिङ्गे यागेश्वर इति प्रसिद्धिः।

For the latter explanation see C. P. above.

Iśānadeva reads दृश्येतरा and says—यस्य कीर्तितडागस्य असौ स्फटिकभूः कैलासगिरिरेव यागेश्वरो महेश्वरो जलदेवता जागर्ति स्फुरति। कीदृशी—जलं च प्रविश्य दृश्येतरा अदृश्या इत्यर्थः। तडागजलं तावत् शुभ्रं यागेश्वरदेवतापि शुभ्रा। अतएव जलमध्ये न दृश्यते। उदकमध्ये क्षिप्तः स्फटिकजागेश्वरोऽच्छत्वान्न दृश्यते इति परीक्षा। समुद्रे च जलमाविश्य सर्वदृश्यो जलदेवता नारायणः स्वपिति। अत्र च जागेश्वरो जागर्ति न च स्वपिति। अतएव समुद्रादधिकम्।

62. All except N read नवलोकम् for वरलोकम्, and वा for ते in the first half.

C. P. explains नवलोकम् twice—

आगतम् एतं नवलोकं नाम राजानं प्रति वा अर्थाद् अवधारणे च.....त्वया एवमनवलोकनायैव प्रतिज्ञा कुतः कृता। किम्भूतं नवलोकम्—नवं नूतनं स्वयंवरलोकम् आगतम्।

Vidyā says वा अथवा आगतं स्वयंवरमायातं नवलोकमपूर्वजनं प्रति अनवलोकनाय अदर्शनाय एवमित्थं कुतः त्वया प्रतिज्ञा कृता।

65. तत् कम्बुप्रतिबिम्बितम्— C. P. says तत् किमु प्रतिबिम्बितं कम्बु इति सामान्याधिकरण्यम्। कम्बूनां प्रतिबिम्बितम् इति वा षष्ठी·

Vidyā remarks on पर्याय and अनुवाद—किं शङ्खप्रतिबिम्बितमेतद्यशोऽथवा शङ्खः कथ्यते शरदभ्रपंक्तिश्च कथ्यते। वृक्षस्तरुरिव पर्यायः। अथवा इयत्प्रमाणं क्षीरसमुद्रोदकमिति अनुवादः कियत इति शुभ्रत्वात् सन्देहः।

C. P. says पर्यायः अभिधानान्तरम्। किमु दुग्धसिन्धोः पयसां सर्वानुवाद एकदेशानुवादाभावात्।

In the second line शर्वपर्वतसितश्रीगर्वनिर्वासि is explained by C. P. and N as शर्वपर्वतः कैलासः तस्य सितश्रीगर्वः श्वेतकान्तिगर्वः तस्य निर्वासि कैलासादपि धवलतरं यशः.

Vidyā reads श्रीगर्भ[8] 'lotus' and says —शर्वपर्वतः कैलाशस्तथा सितं शुभ्रं यत् श्रीगर्भं पद्मं ते द्वे अपि निर्वासयति.....इत्येवंशीलमतिशुभ्रत्वात्.

Vidyā's reading is mentioned by Īśānadeva: श्रीगर्भमिति पाठः। श्रीगर्भं पद्मम्।

66. Nārāyaṇa reads क्षुरक्षुण्णासु, though the N. S. ed. reads क्षुराक्षुण्णासु. Vidyā and Jina (Text) read क्षणक्षुण्णासु. For C. P. see below. Jina reads क्षुर—क्षुरैः चरणाग्रैर्नखतीक्ष्णभागैः क्षुण्णासु.

P. here remarks that in स्वरसन्धि the एकादेश might be regarded either as forming the last letter of the preceding word or as the first letter of the word immediately following. He says "पूर्वान्तिवत् स्वरसन्धौ क्वचिदेव परादिवदिति पूर्वपरयोरेकादेशः स्वरसन्धौ विधीयमानः क्वचित् पूर्वस्यान्तवत् क्वचित् परस्यादिवत्। तथाच पाणिनेः स्मरणम्—अन्तादिवच्च इति"[9]। एवं चात्र "स्वरस्य परादिवद्भावे व्यञ्जनमपि तद्भक्तत्वात् तदादिवद् भवति"[10]। cf. Vidyā reads प्राप्तुम् for साप्तुम्. He reads also सत्यपरे for सत्यतरे, but in an alternative explanation he interprets the verse according to the latter reading. The reading सत्यपरे (Ms. सत्यपरः) is found also in the Text accompanying the Ms. of Vidyā used by me. Vidyā explains the verse thus—सा दमयन्ती निषधराड्विमतौ नलवैपरीत्ये

तया स प्रवरो ददृशे। इन्द्रविवाहे आयन्। यं प्रवरम् अत्रिप्रभृतिकम् ऋषिं सखायं वरं श्रेष्ठं पुरश्चकार। तथाच वैजवापानाम् अत्रिर्गविष्ठिरः पूर्वातिथिरिति प्रवराः। एवमन्येषामपि। किंभूते (विवाहे)—गोत्रस्य अनुकूलत्वेन भवे। उत्प्रेक्ष्यते—तस्य गोत्रस्य प्रातिकूल्यादिव। यतः गोत्रशत्रुः पर्वतशत्रुः। अयमाशयः—गोत्राणामानुकूल्येन विवाहो भवति प्रवराणां च। अहं गोत्रशत्रुत्वात् प्रतिकूलः ततश्च प्रवरानुकूल्येन विवाहो भवति। अतः प्रवरं पुरश्चकार। असमानप्रवरैः विवाह इति स्मरणात्।

Vidyā's explanation is different. He does not take प्रवर to mean 'the founder of a gotra'. He says तया दमयन्त्या स प्रवरो वरो ददृशे। स क इत्याह—गोत्रशत्रुरिन्द्र आयन् आगच्छन् (यं) प्रवरमुत्कृष्टं वरं सखायं मित्रं मातलिं पुरश्चकाराग्रे कृतवान्। गोत्रशत्रुरिति कविः शब्दच्छलेन उत्प्रेक्षते। विवाहे उपयमे

गोत्रस्य शाण्डिल्यकश्यपप्रभृतेरनुकूलत्वं तेन भवतीति गोत्रानुकूलत्वभवस्तस्मिन् एवंभूते। विवाहो हि गोत्रानुकूलः। तत्र चेन्द्रस्य प्रतिकूलस्य (भावः) तस्मादिव गोत्रशत्रुरित्यर्थः।

Jina's explanation is similar: गोत्रशत्रुः महेन्द्रः गोत्रयोः वसिष्ठकश्यपाद्योः वंशादिपुरुषयोः अनुकूलत्वेन भवति जायते यः स गोत्रानुकूलत्वभवः एवंविधे विवाहे विवाहार्थम् आयन् स्वर्गात् आगच्छन् यं वरं श्रेष्ठं प्रवरं सखायं प्रवराभिधं मित्रं पुरश्चकार अग्रे कृतवान् स प्रवरस्तया भैम्या ददृशे अदर्शि। कुतस्तं पुरश्चकारेत्याशङ्क्याह—इवोत्प्रेक्ष्यते। तत्प्रातिकूल्यात् तस्य गोत्रानुकूलत्वविशिष्टस्य विवाहस्य विरुद्धत्वादिव। गोत्रशत्रुरिति छलम्। यो गोत्रशत्रुर्भवति स गोत्रानुकूलत्वभवं विवाहं न सहते। ततो भैमीनलगोत्रयोरनुकूलत्वेन जायमाने विवाहे स्वयमिन्द्रः प्रातिकूल्यं कृतवान्; अथच गोत्रयोः शैलयोरनुकूलत्वं यत्र भवति तत्र प्रातिकूल्यात्। यः (तः) गोत्रः भिद्यते (तेन) इत्युचितमिति ध्वन्योऽर्थः। प्रवरो नाम देवदूतो महाबल इति हरिवंशः। प्रवरो नाम मातलिरिति केचित्।

Vidyā's explanation, as amplified by Jina, is the correct one. Pravara was a companion of Indra (see Vocabulary), and he had come with the latter to the Svayaṁvara festival. He had been invisible, but was now seen by Damayantī. As, however, the word 'pravara' means 'the oldest member or founder of a gotra', it is suggested by means of puns that Indra had brought a Pravara sage to make up for his lack of a gotra, without which it was impossible to marry. Indra being a god had, of course, no gotra; besides, he was called गोत्रशत्रु which at first sight means 'the enemy of a gotra or ancestral family', though the word gotra is here taken to mean 'mountain'. But the first meaning is also applicable to Indra. See Vocabulary under गोत्रशत्रु.

68. C. P. and Vidyā read स्त्रियमप्युपेयात् for स्त्रियमभ्युपेयात्. C (Text) also reads स्त्रियमपि.

Vidyā remarks—सहद्वितीयः स्त्रियमप्युपेयात्। अस्यार्थः—स्त्रियमपि एकाकी नोपेयात् नागच्छेत् अपितु सह द्वितीयेन सहायेन वर्तते सहद्वितीयः ससहायः स्त्रियमपि व्रजेदित्यर्थः। आस्तामन्यत् ग्रामादिकम्। स्त्रियमपि इति अपिशब्दार्थः।

88. The verse is variously explained. C. P.'s explanation is the best— वामे अर्धे वामपक्षार्धे प्रथमम् अवा ओकारेण तथा मा मकारेण ओंकारेणेत्यर्थः। यत् रूपं द्विधा द्विप्रकारं भूतं सत् द्वितीयेन ओंकारेण दक्षिणार्धेऽपि भूतं प्राप्तं भगवदभिधेयं भवति ब्रह्मवाचकम्। किंभूतम्—उभयाकारस्य ओंकारद्वयस्य घटनात्

The verse contains in a veiled form the formula ओम् ह्रीं ओम्, called the चिन्तामणिमन्त्र. The epithets are applied by some to both भगवदभिधेयं रूपम् and मन्त्रम्, while Sarasvatī's मन्त्र is sometimes identified with the अर्धनारीश्वर form of Śiva, because it represents the mystic nature of that form. Vidyā's explanation is in this respect more lucid than that of Nārayaṇā. भो नरपते नल तत् भगवदभिधेयमीश्वरवाच्यं रूपं मे मम मन्त्रमन्तर्मनसि स्मर चिन्तय. N says— यद्रूपं भगवती च भगवांश्च भगवन्तौ पार्वतीपरमेश्वरौ अभिधेयं यस्य। यद्वा—भगवच्छब्दवाच्यमर्धनारीश्वरम्।

1. C. P. construes हरमय as ह्+अ=ह, र्+अ=र, म्+अ=म, ई+अ=य. By omitting the अ s we get ह्रीम्.

2. N also says सेन्दुम् ई च इन्दुश्च ताभ्यां सह वर्तमानम्। ईकारेण अर्धचन्द्रेण च युक्तम्। तथा सकलं कला अनुस्वारस्तत्सहितम्। सेन्दुम् ईकारबिन्दुयुतमिति वा।

Vidyā goes on to say कीदृशम्—हरमयम् ईश्वरस्वरूपम् ईश्वरसदृशमित्यर्थः। अथच हकाररेफमयम्। अधुना ईश्वरस्य मन्त्रस्य च साम्यमाह। सह इन्दुना चन्द्रेण वर्तते इति सेन्दुः तम्। मन्त्रोऽपीन्दुकलायुतो लिख्यते। तथा कीदृशम्—अमलं कीलितनाददोषवर्जितम्। ईश्वररूपमपि अमलं शुभ्रम्। तथा निराकारं नीरूपमव्यक्तम्। नहि शब्दरूपस्य मन्त्रस्य आकारोऽस्ति निरवयवत्वात्। तत् किंरूपमित्याह—यत् सकलं समग्रमीश्वररूपम्। द्विधारूपं द्विस्वरूपं भवति। हेतुमाह—उभयाकारघटनादाकृतिद्वययोगात् स्त्रीपुरुषाकारेण युक्तत्वादीश्वरस्य। यतो वामार्धे अवामा पार्वती देवी विद्यते। अतएव अर्धं रूपं स्त्रिया अर्धं च पुरुषस्येति द्विस्वरूपं भवति। समग्रं विश्वरूपम् आकारद्वयोपेतमेव। ईश्वरस्य तृतीयं लक्षणं नास्तीत्यर्थः। यदुक्तं व्यासेन—

न वज्रचक्राङ्कसरोरुहाङ्कं, लिङ्गाङ्कितं पश्य जगद्गुरुं[3]।
हस्तप्रबद्धेन हि कङ्कणेन, पश्यन्ति मूढाः खलु दर्पणे न॥

मन्त्रपक्षे व्याख्यायते—यन्मन्त्ररूपं द्विधा भवति। उभयाकारघटनात् अक्षरद्वययोगात् सकलं समस्तं मन्त्रम् अक्षरद्वयस्वरूपम् जानातीत्यर्थः। अथवा सकलमूर्ध्वस्व(र)म् (?) इत्यागमिभाषा। कथमक्षरद्वयमित्याह—यतः अवा ओकारेण मा मकारेण प्रणवेन युक्ता अर्धे वामा देवी वर्तते। वामाशब्देन व्यञ्जनरहितम् ईमित्युच्यते। एतच्च हकाररेफमयं क्रियते। तदा प्रणवपूर्वको हींकारो भवति। अयं च सारस्वतो मन्त्रः सर्वेषु आगमेषु प्रसिद्धो दृष्टस्वभावश्च। भो नृप तं मन्त्रं शश्वदनवरतं जप। स मन्त्रस्ते तव सिध्यतु निष्पद्यताम्। अत्रानुप्रासश्लेषालंकारौ। शिखरिणी।

Nārāyaṇa construes अवामावामार्धे as अर्धे (पूर्वभागे) अवा अमा or मा (तथा उत्तरभागे) अवा अमा or मा (प्रणवद्वयसंपुटितमित्यर्थः). अवा is तृतीया of ओ, and अमा or मा that of अम् or म्.

92. C. P., Vidyā, Īśānadeva and Jina (Text) read सतः (विद्यमानस्य). Jina (comm.) and N read यतः (गच्छतः). N says (आनन्दन) नन्दनवनमभिव्याप्य मर्यादीकृत्य वा स्थितं नन्दनवनसमीपे स्थितम्.....उदयाचलमधिष्ठाय गच्छत उदित्वरस्येन्दोरिव।

Vidyā says कुरुविन्दैः पद्मरागैः पद्मरागाभरणैः सुन्दरः करो यस्य स तस्य (नलस्य). In the case of the moon, he takes कुरुविन्द in the sense of पद्मराग or हिङ्गुल and remarks: कुरुविन्दशब्दो माणिक्ये हिङ्गुले च. Jina also takes it to mean हिङ्गुल when applied to the rays of the moon. He quotes Hemacandra (Anekārthasaṁgraha 4. 139, 140)—कुरुविन्दः पद्मरागे मुक्तस्त्रीहिमेदयोः। कुल्माषे हिङ्गुले मुस्ते।

The commentators do not connect स्यन्दन with the moon. In the Trans. I have taken it to mean 'air' in the case of the moon (see Footnote to Trans.). Mythology, however, attributes a chariot to the moon as well, so that Nala journeying in a chariot to his bride's home is compared to the Moon travelling in his chariot to the pleasure hill of the East bordering on the Nandana garden (स्यन्दनमध्यास्य आनन्दनं शतक्रतुहरित्क्रीडाद्रिं यतः गच्छतः इन्दोरिव). For the Moon's chariot see Vocabulary under स्यन्दन.

Vidyā takes दलोदरम् (द्विपर्णम्) as the subject, but his meaning is not very clear. Nārāyaṇa does not connect दलोदरम् with the banquet at all. Acc. to him, तत् (i.e. व्यञ्जनम्) दलोदरं श्रीतालादिपत्रमध्यमिव रराज. Jina's explanation seems to be the right one. He takes दलोदरम् as the subject and explains it as referring to a kind of confect—तत् दलोदरं (दलं) नागवल्लीपत्रम् उदरे मध्ये यस्य (तत्) गोधूमचूर्णविगुण्ठितातापिकाग्नि-संयोगपीतघृतक्वथितशर्करापक्वान्नविशेषः रराज बभौ भोजनपात्रे इति शेषः। कीदृशं दलोदरम्—वर्तुलया वृत्ताकारया पाकेन अर्पिता निर्मिता गैरिकस्य शैलरक्तधातोरिव रक्ता श्रीः शोभा तया उपलक्षितैः क्षीरवटकैः स्थानीभूतक्षीरनिक्षिप्तमाषचूर्णसाधितैः पक्वान्नविशेषैः अलङ्कृतम्। क्षीरवटकानां संपर्केण दलोदरं रेजे इत्यर्थः। अश्नतां भुञ्जानानां भुजिक्रियाविधेः भोजनविधानस्य समाप्तेः संबन्धिन्या लिप्या छकाररूपया आलयीकृतम् आस्पदीकृतम् (दलोदरमिव) श्रीतालादिपत्रमिव। कीदृश्या लिप्या—वर्तुलया छकारस्य वृत्ताकारत्वात्। पुनः कीदृश्या—पाकैः बालैः अर्पिता गैरिकस्य श्रीः यस्यां तया। अथवा पाकेन तत्तदधिकारसमाप्ति व्यक्तीकरणेन निमित्तेन अर्पिता गैरिकस्य श्रीर्यस्यां तया। 'बालः पाकः शिशुर्डिम्भ' इति हैमः। पक्षे डुपचष् पाके, पचि व्यक्तीकरणे इत्येताभ्यां घञि पाकः।

C. P. also takes दलोदरम् as the subject of रराज, but his explanation of the word is different. He says—अश्नतां पुरुषाणां दलोदरं भाजनमध्यं क्षीरवटैः पक्वान्नविशेषैरलंकृतं सत् रराज। उत्प्रेक्ष्यते—भुजिक्रियाविधौ समाप्ति-लिप्या फूलडिकया.....वर्तुलया वृत्ताकारया आलयीकृतमिव। किंभूतया लिप्या—पाकेन अर्पिता गैरिकस्य धातुविशेषस्य श्रीः शोभा यस्यां सा तथा तया। दलस्य पुत्तिकापत्रस्य उदरे says that this cloth is to be given to the officiating priest. Usually Smṛiti injunctions are regarded as authoritative, because they are based on Vedic texts extant or lost (in the latter case, the existence of such texts is to be inferred). But in the present case the Smṛiti injunction was clearly introduced by some greedy priest in his desire to have the cloth, and the relevant Vedic text, even if it existed, must be regarded as an interpolation. Thus the injunction in question is not valid. The Cārvāka here ridicules the inconsistency in regarding the Veda as of the highest authority and rejecting certain of its dicta as interpolations.

144. C. P., Vidyā and Jina read निश्चित for निचित.

151. C. P., Vidyā and Jina (Text) read टकारवत् for डकारवत्. C. P.—त्वं नलं भैमीं च अन्तरा मध्ये न अकस्मात् प्रवेक्ष्यसि। टकारवत्। यथा टकारः षण्णां च अन्तरा मध्यं न प्रविशति। किंभूतं मध्यम्—क्रमेण संयुक्तं पठ्यमानम्। यतः 'षडो णो ने' इति डकारस्य णत्वे कृतः टकारस्यावकाशः।

Vidyā says उपमानमाह— यथा षण्णां मध्यं टकारः आम्-षष्ठीबहुवचनं चान्तरा मध्ये टकारो न प्रविशति। 'हशषछान्तेजादीनां च' इत्यनेन डकारे कृते सति 'अघोषे प्रथमः' इत्यस्य टकारस्य विषयं बाधित्वा 'षडो णो ने' इति सूत्रं प्रवर्तते। ततः षण्णामित्यत्र टकारप्रवेशो नास्तीत्यर्थः।

The rules quoted by Vidyā belong to Kātantra. Calcutta ed. of Kalāpa reads ड: for च in 'हशषछा—'[10]. By this rule the ष् of षष् is changed into ड्. But optionally the ड् may become ट् by 'वा विरामे' when षट् stands by itself; while the change is obligatory when an अघोष letter follows as in षट्सु. In a विभक्ति, however, the ड् is immediately changed into ण् when न follows, according to 'षडो णो ने'. So टकार has no chance of getting into षण्णाम्.

The reading डकार gives a different meaning. See Nārā-yaṇa. He calls this verse an interpolation, but, as we have seen, both C. P. and Vidyā explain it.

161. This verse (मण्डलं निषधेन्द्रस्य etc.) is not found in C. P., Vidyā and Īśānadeva. Acc. to Pt. Śivadatta, it is not found in Malli.

187. C. P., Vidyā and Jina (Text) read रम्भैः for राम्भैः. C. P. says रम्भैः दण्डैः. Vidyā says वैणवैः दण्डैः. N says राम्भैर्वेणुदण्डैः 'राम्भस्तु वैणवः' इत्यमरः। रम्भो वेणुः 'तस्येदम्' इति अण्. N explains वेदयष्टिभिः as वेदैरेव यष्टिभिः वेदानां क्रमजटारूपाणिर्वा यष्टिभिः.

Vidyā explains it as श्रुतिलकुटैः. C. P. takes वेद in the sense of कुशमुष्टि and this is the meaning applicable here.

188. Vidyā says पवित्राणां दर्भरचितपवित्रकाणाम् आलोकनात् दर्शनात् पवित्रासं वज्रभयमविन्दत् प्राप। वज्रपातमिव मेने। अत्र प्रतीयमानोत्प्रेक्षातिशयोक्त्यलङ्कारः. Jina says पवित्राणां ग्रन्थिविशेषनिबद्धपाणिस्थदर्भाणाम्. C. P. says पवित्रस्य सोमगलनकम्बलस्य आलोकनात्। अथवा उदकपवनं वस्त्रं पवित्रम्। अथवा प्रोक्षणार्थं कुशाः पवित्रम.

189. C. P. says सदीक्षस्य गृहीतदीक्षस्य यजमानस्य सः अक्षपणम् अक्षद्यूतमक्षत। यजमानो हि अग्न्याधाने ऋत्विग्भिः सह द्यूते रमते. N says अक्षपणं

196, 197. These two verses (दर्शस्य दर्शनात्– and तेनाद्दश्यन्त–)are not found in C. P., Vidyā and Jina (Text). They are found in Iśānadeva. Jina explains Verse 197 thus—तेन कलियुगेन वीरान् भटान् हन्तीति वीरघ्ना अद्दश्यन्त, न च वीरान् श्रेष्ठान् हन्तीति वीरहणोऽदृश्यन्त । ये अनस्रान् शूरानेव घ्नन्ति नतु सदाचारान् नक्षांश्च त एव तत्र दृष्टा इत्यर्थः। एतेन न्याययुद्धमेव तत्रास्तीत्युक्तम्। अथवा यज्ञे अतितप्तस्य घृतस्योपरि कुशदलेन दुग्धप्रक्षेपकारिणो याज्ञिकसंज्ञया[12] वीरघ्नाः । त एवाद्दश्यन्त, न च वीरहणः, वीरयते वीरः अग्निः, तमुपेक्षया घ्नन्ति वीरहणस्तादृशाः पुनर्न दृष्टाः। सर्वोऽपि लोकस्तत्र साग्निक इत्यर्थः। तथा स कलिः अभिनिर्मुक्तान् अभिभूय निर्मुक्तोऽस्तमितोऽर्कः एषां सुप्तानाम् अभिनिर्मुक्तास्तान् सूर्यास्तसमये निद्रितानतनाचारान् तत्र नापश्यत्, किन्तु जीवन्मुक्तानेव अवैक्षत । जीवन्तश्च ते मुक्ताश्च तान् संसारश्रमणोद्विग्नमानसान् ब्रह्मज्ञानिनो दृष्टवान्। 'वीरो जिने भटे श्रेष्ठे' 'नष्टाग्निर्वीरहा', 'क्षुद्रे यस्मिन्नुदेत्यर्कोऽस्तमेति च क्रमेण तौ, अभ्युदिताभिनिर्मुक्तौ' इति हैमः। वीरघ्ना इत्यत्र मूलविभुजादय इति कः। वीरहण इत्यत्र ब्रह्मभ्रूणेत्यत्र ब्रह्मादिभ्य एव हन्तेः क्विबिति भूते नियमनात् वर्तमाने क्वचिदिति क्विप् ।

Jina's gloss on Verses 196 and 197 is found quoted in the later manuscript of Vidyā. As regards the earlier manuscript (B), some leaves are here missing, but it is almost certain that it did not contain the two verses in question. The number of verses in this Canto is, according to Ms. B, 217 as against 221 recognised by Nārāyaṇa, and we get the number 217 only by omitting these two verses as well as two others (66 and 161) which are also not found in Vidyā (see above).

211. C. P. and Jina (Text) read कुण्ठम् for कुटम्. Vidyā reads कुटम् like N. C. P. says अथ स एकं बिभीतकं बहेडानामानं वृक्षं ददर्श । धर्मेषु अकर्मठमपि रोपितम् । सर्वोद्विदां सर्ववृक्षाणामासत्तिः आसन्नता तस्याः पूरणाय रोपितम् । तथा कुण्ठं निकृष्टम् । अथवा धर्मे कुण्ठमपि रोपितम् । अकर्मठमिति कुण्ठत्वे हेतुः.

213. C. P. and C (Text) read निष्पन्दस्य (i.e. निश्चलस्य). Others read निष्पदस्य (आश्रयरहितस्य). Jina remarks निःस्पन्दस्येति पाठे पदमात्रमपि गन्तुसमर्थस्येति व्याख्येयम्.

12. This interpretation is found in Iśānadeva also.

215. C. P., Jina (Text) and C (Text) read संत्रासम्, like N and Jina. Vidyā reads संतापम्. C. P. says—स तत्र उद्भिदि वृक्षे विरचित आवासो येन स तथा। तस्मात् साग्नेः अग्निहोत्रिणः राज्ञो निषेकादिगुणयुक्तात् द्विजात् क्षत्रियात् दीक्षायुक्तात् संत्रासं प्राप। कपोतादिव। यथा कश्चित् नूतनकृतावासः कपोतात् साग्नेर्जठराग्नियुक्तात् द्विजात् पक्षिणः ईक्षितात् आलोकितात् संत्रासं प्रापत्। गृहे हि कपोतप्रवेशे कपोतोपहतिप्रायश्चित्तं नाम शान्तिः क्रियते।

C. P. points out that आवहति means here करोति and has nothing to do with the literal meaning of the root वह. So the लज्जा is कृत्रिम, not real.

C. P. says, अन्यथा रूढिच्युतमन्यार्थमिति दोषः स्यात्। यथा—विभजन्ते न ये भूपमालभन्ते न ते श्रियम्। आवहन्ति न ते दुःखं प्रस्मरन्ति न ते प्रियाम्॥ तथा—ते दुःखमुच्चावचमावहन्ति ये प्रस्मरन्ति प्रियसंगतानाम् इति दोषः। यथा—विभजतिः वटने रूढ्या, नतु विशेषसेवायां योगेन। आलभतिर्वधे नतु अभितो लाभे। प्रस्मरतिर्विस्मरणे न तु प्रकृष्टस्मरणे। एवमावहतिः करोत्यर्थे न तु साधारणे। तेन लज्जायाः कृत्रिमत्वं न तु वास्तवत्वमिति सूच्यते।

APPENDIX I

PHILOSOPHICAL ALLUSIONS

The Naiṣadha contains a large number of philosophical allusions. Śriharṣa in his Khaṇḍana-khaṇḍa-khādya tries to establish the supremacy of the monistic Vedānta on a logical basis. In the Naiṣadha he refers to doctrines of all the systems including the Vedānta, and passes in review a number of characteristic theories, as if he desired his poem to serve also as an introduction to the study of the philosophical systems. An attempt has been made here to enumerate and discuss where necessary the various doctrines referred to in the poem.

I

Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika doctrines

There are several references to Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika doctrines in the Naiṣadha. In 3. 125[1] the poet refers to Dvyaṇuka or a combination of two atoms, the first item in the process of atomic creation. More interesting is the reference to the Vaiśeṣika theory of darkness in 22. 36. The poet playfully says that the Aulūka system of philosophy (lit. the system propounded by Ulūka or an owl) is capable of determining the true nature of darkness.[2] The reference is important and requires some discussion.

According to the Vaiśeṣikasūtras of Kaṇāda, darkness is non-existence or Abhāva, because it is different in origin from Substance, Quality and Action, and is occasioned simply by the obstruction of light by some other substance.[3] This has led to considerable discussion among Vaiśeṣika writers, who generally raise the point in connection with the question whether there are only nine substances as held by Kaṇāda or ten. If darkness is regarded as a substance in accordance with the Mīmāṁsaka view, the number of substances would, of course, be ten; but the Vaiśeṣika thinkers limit the number to nine, and say that darkness is not a substance, but merely the absence of light.

Among the writers of the Vaiśeṣika school who preceded Śrīharṣa, Vyomaśivācārya, Śrīdhara and Udayana discussed the nature of darkness in detail in their famous commentaries on the Praśastapādabhāṣya, and the poet was doubtless familiar with their views. Vyomaśiva, who is probably the earliest of the three,[4] criticises the view that darkness or a shadow is a substance, because it moves, and is endowed with qualities like coolness. Vyomaśiva points out that the movement does not belong to the shadow, but to the object which shuts out the light; while attributes like coolness are transferred to the shadow,[5] because these are experienced where there is shade.

Śrīdhara was the next writer to discuss the nature of darkness in his Nyāyakandalī. He, too, holds that darkness is not a substance, there being only nine substances excluding darkness. But he rejects the view that darkness is absence of light on the ground that it has a distinct black colour, which would be impossible if it were mere non-existence. At the same time it is not a substance, because it cannot be proved to be produced by atoms, and because what is perceived is nothing but blackness.[6] Śrīdhara, therefore, concludes that what appears to be darkness is a kind of colour or form (Rūpa) superimposed on all sides in the absence of light.[7] He seems to hold that darkness is not a substance, but a quality.

4. Nārāyaṇa in his commentary refers to the three Vaiśeṣika writers, and mentions Vyomaśivācārya first, which shows that he considered him the earliest.

7. रूपविशेषोऽयमल्पतेजोऽभावे सति सर्वतः समारोपितस्तम इति प्रतीयते. Aniruddha in Sāṁkhyasūtravṛtti summarises Śrīdhara's view (1. 56)—रूपविशेषोऽयं यत्रावरकमस्ति तत्रारोप्य गृह्यते. He remarks that darkness may be a quality or a substance, but it is not non-existence (Abhāva).

The next writer to discuss the question of darkness is Udayana who in his Kiraṇāvalī gives the most systematic exposition of the Vaiśeṣika view. Udayana's task is twofold. First, he proves that darkness is absence of light by showing that it does not come under any of the categories Sāmānya (Generality), Viśeṣa (Individuality), Samavāya (Inherence), Action, Quality, Space, Time, Mind, Self, Sky and Air.[8] Secondly, he refutes Śrīdhara's theory by saying that darkness is not a colour or form (rūpa) visible in the absence of light, because the eye cannot perceive anything without the help of light. Nor can it be said that the perception of darkness is a mental process like a dream, not requiring the activity of the eye; because if we keep our eyes shut, we cannot find out by the mind alone whether there is darkness in a room or not. Śrīdhara had said that if darkness were non-existence, it would be impossible to attribute to it positive qualities like blackness. To this Udayana replies that this is not impossible. We attribute, for instance, the positive quality of pleasure to a condition characterised by absence of pain; a man carrying a burden says, for example, that he is happy as soon as the burden is removed. Udayana concludes that darkness may be black, but blackness, whether imaginary or real, is not darkness.[9] If it were so, we would mistake a black cloth or skin for darkness. The conception of darkness as a black colour is not possible even as an error, for even an error must have a basis. We have thus to rely on personal experience and say that darkness is merely absence of light.[10]

9. तमो नीलं न तु नीलिमा तम इति। न चारोपितेन वास्तवेन वा नीलिम्ना तमोबुद्धिव्यपदेशौ समानार्थौ।

10. Udayana's criticism of Śrīdhara's theory is reproduced in part in the chapter on the Vaiśeṣika system in Sarvadarśanasaṁgraha. The line न चायमचाक्षुषः प्रत्ययः तदनुविधानस्यानन्यथा सिद्धत्वात् is a quotation from Kiraṇāvalī (p. 17), and should be shown as such in printed editions. Among later writers, Śrīdhara's theory is criticised by Vedāntadeśika (Veṅkaṭanātha) in his Nyāyasiddhāñjana, a work of the Rāmānuja school published in the Pandit, Vol. XXIII. Cf. also his Nyāyapariśuddhi (Chowkhamba ed., p. 506) —एतेन वियति वितानां सूक्ष्माणां पृथिव्यवयवानां कृष्णो गुणस्तम इति पक्षोऽपि निरस्तः.... गुणमात्रतया च कस्याप्यनुपलम्भात्।

We have summarised the views of Udayana and Śrīdhara at some length, as Śrīharṣa must have been well-acquainted with them, especially with those of Udayana. The other systems of philosophy have also treated the question of darkness.[11] The Vedāntists and the Mīmāṁsakas of the Kumārila school hold that darkness is a substance; while according to the Prābhākara school of Mīmāṁsā, darkness is the absence of the vision of colour.[12] The reason why Śrīharṣa singles out the Vaiśeṣika theory for reference in his poem seems to be that the latter view is the most plausible of the various theories of darkness, and gave rise to a controversy which continued till after the time of the poet.

In 17. 75 the poet refers to the Nyāya conception of salvation.

मुक्तये यः शिलात्वाय शास्त्रमूचे सचेतसाम् ।
गोतमं तमवेत्यैव यथा वित्थ तथैव सः ॥

Here the poet plays on the word Gotama (lit. a perfect ox), a fit appellation for a sage who reduced salvation to a condition similar to that of a stone. According to the Nyāya system, salvation is absolute cessation of pain, and this pain is regarded as having twenty-one forms covering the whole range of human experience including knowledge and pleasure.[13] As Vātsyāyana says, salvation is a state of quietude; it is the absence of all attributes, and the cessation of all experience.[14] Vātsyāyana insists that there can be no element of bliss in the state of salvation. Happiness is like honey mixed with poison, and must be avoided by all who desire final release. This is not only the view of Vātsyāyana but of Uddyotakara, Vācaspati and other authoritative writers on the Nyāya system.[15] According to this view salvation is a colourless condition devoid of all attributes, it is described in our verse as a state resembling that of a stone. It may be mentioned that this view of salvation is the same as that of the Vaiśeṣikas and of the Mīmāṁsā system, as interpreted by writers like Kumārila and Pārthasārathi.[16]

It should, however, be noted that there is at least one important Nyāya writer whose conception is different from that of Vātsyāyana and his followers. Bhāsarvajña says in his Nyāyasāra that salvation is brought about by the vision of Śiva, and it is an existence full of bliss. Salvation is, indeed, the absolute cessation of pain, as the older writers held, but according to Bhāsarvajña, it is accompanied by eternal bliss.[17] Dr. S. C. Vidyābhūshaṇa assigns Bhāsarvajña to the early years of the tenth century, and he is therefore earlier than Śrīharṣa, but the poet has ignored his view and followed the earlier view represented by Vātsyāyana, Uddyotakara and Vācaspati.

Bhāsarvajña mentions the fact that according to some, salvation consists in the extinction of all particular attributes, and means a condition of the soul resembling that of the sky. This seems to be a reference to the earlier Nyāya view, but commentators agree in holding that the author here refers to the Vaiśeṣika conception of salvation.[18] The influence of Bhāsarvajña is clearly visible in the opinion expressed in some later texts that the Nyāya view of Mokṣa is radically different from the Vaiśeṣika view inasmuch as the former admits and the latter denies the presence of bliss in the state of salvation. The distinction between the two views is alluded to in Sarvasiddhāntasaṁgraha, of uncertain date.[19] We find it also in Śaṁkaradigvijaya of Vidyāraṇya, who relates that on a certain occasion Śaṁkara, being questioned about the difference between the Nyāya and Vaiśeṣika views of salvation, explained the former as admitting the consciousness of pleasure in the state of salvation.[20] Bhāsarvajña's theory is mentioned also as the Bhūṣaṇamata[21] in the Nyāyapariśuddhi of Veṅkaṭanātha, a famous writer of the Rāmānuja school.[22]

In spite of the popularity of Bhāsarvajña's view, it has never eclipsed the more authoritative theory of the earlier writers, and it was natural for Śrīharṣa to ignore the former's opinion. The earlier writers have, in fact, stated their position very clearly. Vātsyāyana mentions the fact that according to some, bliss like magnitude, comes into evidence during the state of salvation, but he and his followers have rejected this view. Vācaspati reiterates the earlier view that salvation is an object of endeavour for the devotee even if it contains no sense of pleasure. The wise, he says, forsake even heaven, because it is like the shadow cast by the hood of an angry serpent.[23] The Sarvadarśanasaṁgraha, in the chapter on the Nyāya system, explains the Nyāya theory of salva-

22. Chowkhamba ed., p. 17. Veṅkaṭanātha supports Bhāsarvajña's theory, and contends that Vātsyāyana's view that salvation is freedom from all pain does not preclude the presence of bliss (दुःखात्यन्तनिवृत्तेरपवर्गत्वं सर्वाङ्गीकृतम्। न च तत्रानन्दः श्रौतः कण्ठोक्त्या प्रतिषिध्यते। तदभिप्राये चानन्यथासिद्धं न किमपि लिङ्गं पश्यामः। अत एव हि भूषणमते नित्यसुखसंवेदनसंबन्धसिद्धिरपवर्गे साधिता। एतेन "तस्मात् सर्वदुःखविमोक्षोऽपवर्गः" इति चतुर्थाध्यायवाक्यमपि निर्व्यूढम्। तत्राप्यानन्दनिषेधाभावात्).

23. Vācaspati says in his Nyāyavārtikatātparyaṭīkā—विवेकिनस्तु आयतिमालोचयन्तः स्वर्गमपि कुपितफणिफणामण्डलच्छायप्रतिममित्यपजहति। तेन मा भूदेतद्रागादिमतां प्रवृत्त्यङ्गं विवेकिनां तु भविष्यति।

tion according to the ideas of Vātsyāyana, and ridicules the theory that salvation is characterised by the manifestation of bliss.[24] Rājaśekhara in his Ṣaḍdarśanasamuccaya explains the Nyāya system as Śaiva-mata, and gives only the earlier theory of salvation, though he mentions Bhāsarvajña among the writers of the Nyāya or Śaiva school.[25] The Prapañcahṛdaya too, mentions only the earlier or the orthodox view in its summary of Nyāya doctrines.[26] In certain works, however, Bhāsarvajña's opinion is mentioned side by side with the earlier view, but the texts in question take care to keep the two views distinct from each other. This is the case with Guṇaratna's commentary (14th century) on the well-known compendium of Haribhadra.[27] Similarly, the Sarvamatasaṁgraha (of unknown date), after mentioning the earlier view, refers to Bhāsarvajña's theory as that of a section of Nyāya writers.[28]

The testimony of the above writers shows that Bhāsarvajña's opinion, though accepted by a few as the standard Nyāya conception of salvation, failed to oust the earlier theory, and was either ignored or kept apart from the orthodox view. In these circumstances it is easy to see why Śrīharṣa ignored his views, if he was at all acquainted with them.

In the Naiṣadha verse we are considering, the speaker is a Cārvāka, who, being a sensualist, was opposed to a kind of salvation which had no room for happiness. But as a Vedāntist Śrīharṣa himself was bound to be opposed to such a view of salvation, and we have no doubt that he takes this opportunity of ridiculing the Nyāya conception which ran counter to the Vedānta theory that liberation is eternal bliss. The Naiyāyikas were, in fact, aware of the Vedānta objections, but they contended that the word 'bliss' in the Śruti texts bearing on the question meant simply 'absence of pain', an interpretation which suited the negative view of Mokṣa held by them.[29]

It will be seen that the earlier Nyāya view of Mokṣa is the same as that of the Vaiśeṣika system. Both systems held that salvation was simply absence of pain;[30] only the method of acquisition was different. The charge of being like the condition of a stone शिलात्व has thus been brought against the salvation of the Vaiśēṣikas as well, and we find the great Vaiśēṣika authority Śrīdhara defending the view against this charge in his Nyāyakandalī.[31] It is not impossible that Śrīharṣa got the idea of शिलात्व from the opponent's objection (Pūrvapakṣa) mentioned in the Kandalī. However that may be, the simile of the stone came to be generally applied to a type of salvation which involved the extinction of pleasure, pain and all other individual attributes. The Prapañcahṛidaya applies the comparison to the salvation of the Vaiśeṣikas,[32] and the Sarvasiddhāntasaṁgraha uses it for that of Prabhākara.[33] The 'stony' type of salvation found a strong opponent in Veṅkaṭanātha who attacks it in several of his treatises on the philosophical system of Rāmānuja.[34]

There are a few more references to Nyāya doctrines. In 5. 29[35] the poet calls the mind an atom, a theory propounded by the Nyāya as well as the Vaiśeṣika system, according to which the mind is an atom, because if it were all-pervading, there would be simultaneous cognitions of colour, taste etc., owing to the fact that the mind would be in contact with all the sense organs at one and the same time.[36]

The rays of the eye are referred to in 8. 3.[37] According to the Nyāya system, the human eye has rays like those of the eyes of a cat, and perception takes place when the ocular rays come into contact with an object.[38] In 10. 81[39] the poet refers to the sixteen categories of the Nyāya philosophy, and to enunciation (उद्देश) and definition (लक्षण), two of the three methods of scientific discussion recognised by that system.

In 17. 79[40] the poet refers to the fallacy known as Satpratipakṣa, which may be described as an ambiguous or inconclusive statement, being counterbalanced by a contrary proposition of equal force.[41] Gotama and Vātsyāyana call this Prakaraṇasama (1. 2. 7), but the term Satpratipakṣa occurs in Vācaspati's Nyāyavārtikatātparyaṭīkā.[42]

Mīmāṁsā doctrines

Several doctrines of the Mīmāṁsā system are referred to in the Naiṣadha. In 5. 39[43] and 14. 73 the poet refers to the Mīmāṁsā theory that the gods have no existence apart from the Mantras with which they are invoked. The gods have no corporeal form, according to the Mīmāṁsakas, because they are never visible.[44] Besides, if they had bodies, it would be impossible for them to attend the large number of sacrifices performed by the priests at one and the same time. Further, if the gods had any physical form, they would be perishable like mortals, and the Vedic words signifying them would lose their eternal character, owing to their association with transient and perishable objects. The Mīmāṁsā view has been attacked by both Śaṁkara and Rāmānuja, who make a spirited defence of the traditional view that the gods have a corporeal existence.[45] Both Śaṁkara and Rāmānuja contend that without a physical form it would be impossible for worshippers to concentrate their minds on the deity.

In 2. 61[46] Śrīharṣa refers to the Mīmāṁsā theory of the self-validity of knowledge (स्वतःप्रामाण्य). Nala says to the swan that the benevolence of the good proceeds from their own impulse, just as cognitions are valid on their own account. The reference here is to the Mīmāṁsā view that the validity of cognitions is inherent in them, and they are therefore able to bring about the apprehension of an object without depending upon any other source of knowledge. If the apprehension of an object must be deferred until the purity of the source of the cognition is ascertained, we shall have to wait for the production of another cognition to test the validity of the first. The latter again will require another cognition for the same purpose, and there will be an endless series of cognitions, making knowledge itself impossible. The Mīmāṁsakas, therefore, believe in the authoritative character of the cognising faculty (Buddhi),[47] and maintain that a cognition that has definitely taken place does not require corroboration by other cognitions, and should be regarded as authoritative or self-evident.[48]

The self-validity (Svataḥ-prāmāṇya) of knowledge is held by the Mīmāṁsakas in general but there are differences of opinion about the truth of the cognitions so produced. In the Naiṣadha verse we are considering, the word Yathārtha means, strictly speaking, 'true'; and it is probable that the poet here refers to the Prābhākara view that all cognitions are true, because they are cognitions. It may be noted that according to the Prābhākara school, knowledge or cognition is self-luminous,[49] and the sense organs have by nature the power of bringing about correct cognitions; hence there is no error or misconception as such.

The theory of the Prābhākaras that all cognitions are correct has led them to propound a theory of error known as Akhyātivāda. According to Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, Śrīharṣa refers to this view in Naiṣadha 6. 51—

अन्योन्यमन्यत्रवदीक्षमाणौ परस्परेणाध्युषितेऽपि देशे ।
आलिङ्गितालीकपरस्परान्तस्तथ्यं मिथस्तौ परिषस्वजाते ॥

In the sixth Canto, Nala goes about invisible in the inner apartments of Damayantī, and distracted with love, he sees her in an illusion all around him. Damayantī is in a similar condition, and sees Nala before her in an illusion. Though both of them are together in the same place, they think themselves to be away from each other, and embrace each other's illusory figure, thinking it to be real. But still they may be said to have had real embraces in the midst of the embraces of their illusory figures; that is, although there were no actual embraces, the illusory ones were in a sense real or true, and this is possible according to the Prābhākara view.

As we have said above, the Prābhākaras do not recognise error as such. In the typical instance of mistaking nacre for silver in the expression 'This is silver', there is a dual conception: first, the idea of 'this' is occasioned by the direct perception of the nacre; secondly, the idea of silver is brought about by the awakening of the memory of silver, so that there is a remembrance of silver seen somewhere else, brought about by the similarity in colour between the nacre and the silver. The so-called mistake is due to a lack of discrimination between the perceived nacre and the remembered silver, but the apprehension of silver in the present case is by no means an erroneous cognition.[50]

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita applies the Prābhākara theory with great ingenuity to the verse in question. First, the embraces of the illusory figures were a direct experience. Then came the remembrance of past embraces, of which both Nala and Damayantī may be supposed to have had actual experience among their comrades. Both experiences were thus in a sense real, and there was no illusion about the embraces of Nala and Damayantī in the present case, according to the Prābhākara view.[51]

Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita is the only commentator who finds a reference to the Prābhākara doctrine of cognition in Naiṣadha 6. 51. According to the other commentators, since Nala and Damayantī were both present in the inner apartments (though the former was invisible), they happened to come into contact with each other, and had some real embraces in the midst of the illusory ones. Cāṇḍū, however, lays stress on the phrase अन्योन्यमन्यत्रवदीक्षमाणौ, and rules out the possibility of any actual embrace, which would have been repulsive to both Nala and Damayantī, in view of the former's mission on behalf of the gods. Cāṇḍū's interpretation keeps up the atmosphere of illusion better, and seems to be the right one.

In 11. 64 Śrīharṣa refers to the atheism of the Mīmāṁsā system. Mīmāṁsā is described as rejecting Lord Śiva, though he is glorified by all the Vedas, and exerts himself for the sake of others without any interest of his own.[52] There is no doubt that Śiva here stands for the Supreme Being. The chief exponents of the existence of God were the followers of the Nyāya system, and they were generally Śaivas,[53] and evolved a conception of Śiva, which transcended the well-known physical characteristics attributed to that deity.[54] Bhāsarvajña, an authoritative writer of the Nyāya school, identified Śiva with God, by declaring that salvation is brought about by the vision of Śiva.[55] The Bodhicaryāvatārapañjikā, while presenting the Nyāya theory of God, states that Śaṁkara or Śiva is the name of God.[56] It is also interesting to note that in 17. 16 Śrīharṣa himself represents Śiva as the formless God, while referring to the episode of the burning of the god of love by Śiva.[57]

In 11. 64 Śrīharṣa has obviously in view the controversy about the existence of God, which was carried on by the Nyāya and Mīmāṁsā writers in the centuries immediately preceding his time.

We need only to refer to Maṇḍanamiśra's Vidhiviveka with the comprehensive Nyāyakaṇikā commentary of Vācaspati[58] among Mīmāṁsā works, and to Udayana's Nyāyakusumāñjali among Nyāya treatises. The Vidhiviveka refutes the arguments in support of the existence of God, and dismisses them as mere gossip (वार्तम्); while the Nyāyakaṇikā denies the existence of Īśvara or the Supreme Being endowed with the six attributes.[59] Udayana, on the other hand, proclaims the existence of God whom he calls the great Lord Bhava or Śiva. He devotes a chapter to the refutation of the Mīmāṁsā view; and one of his many arguments is the universal use of words signifying God, among which we find Īśāna, Īśvara and Maheśvara, which are also popular names of Śiva.[60] Udayana, as a matter of fact, propounds the existence of God in the abstract, but he recognises the possibility of God assuming a physical form as occasion demands.[61] He quotes a verse illustrating the six great attributes of Maheśvara; but, as we saw above, the Mīmāṁsakas deny the existence of this very Maheśvara.[62] It may also be noted that the poet makes a significant allusion to the spontaneous benevolence (परार्थयत्न) of Śiva or God, for this is one of the theses brought forward by the theists and rejected by the Mīmāṁsakas.[63]

Apart from the identification of Śiva with God, Śiva with his peculiar physical characteristics seems to have been particularly repugnant to the Mīmāṁsakas. In the well-known satirical play Laṭakamelaka written in the twelfth century, we find the Mīmāṁsaka Mithyāśukla declaring that he turned out Śiva from his sacrificial shed, mistaking him for a Kāpālika.[64]

63. Cf. Vidhiviveka, p. 222—स्वार्थं परानुग्रहे वा दुःखोत्तरसर्गदर्शनात् प्रयोजनाभावनिराकृताऽपि चैतन्यमात्रसिद्धिः स्यात्. The Naiyāyikas, on the other hand, describe God as परानुग्रहस्वभाव (Vācaspati's Tātparyaṭīkā, p. 597, K. S. S.).

64. क्षीणस्थोऽपि पुरस्कृतोऽपि यजुषा गौरीभुजङ्गो मया।

Some of the commentators in their gloss on 11. 64 hint that the Mīmāṁsakas do not entirely reject the existence of God. Viśveśvara says that they do not believe in the corporeal existence of God[65], as if a formless God would be acceptable to the Mīmāṁsā school. Kumārila in his Ślokavārtika clearly rejects the possibility of a Supreme Being, whether with or without a body. If God had a body, it would be perishable like other bodies; while if he had no physical form, it would be impossible for him to exercise any control.[66] Nārāyaṇa also makes a remark similar to that of Viśveśvara. He says that the Mīmāṁsā system does not entirely disbelieve in God, and quotes in this connection the introductory verse of the Ślokavārtika, in which Kumārila seems to invoke Śiva.[67] It should, however, be noted that Pārthasārathi, consistently with the tenets of the Mīmāṁsā system, interprets the verse also as an invocation of the Sacrifice;[68] and even if we suppose that Kumārila regarded Śiva as a tutelary deity, we have to remember the important fact that he has definitely rejected the notion of a Supreme Being in his systematic exposition of the philosophical doctrines of the Mīmāṁsā. He was regarded as an atheist by the Naiyāyikas, who, as we have seen, were votaries of Śiva. Kumārila is spoken of as the leader of the atheists in the Sarvadarśanasaṁgraha in the chapter on the Nyāya system.[69]

The remark made by Nārāyaṇa is based on a later tradition that the Mīmāṁsā system was not really atheistic. Vidyāraṇya's Śaṁkaradigvijaya refers to Maṇḍanamiśra as an atheist, but argues that Jaimini, being a disciple of Vyāsa, could not have propounded doctrines contrary to those of his teacher.[70] The tradition finds expression also in the works of certain later Mīmāṁsakas who import the notion of God as a loose appendage to the Mīmāṁsā doctrine. Āpodeva in his Mīmāṁsānyāyaprakāśa speaks of devotion to Govinda, an idea foreign to the Mīmāṁsā philosophy, and his statement must be regarded as a belated concession to the theistic schools of thought. Similarly, Nārāyaṇabhaṭṭa in his Mānameyodaya rejects the God of the Naiyāyikas, but accepts a kindly Vedic God, whose nature, however, he does not explain. This Vedic God cannot, of course, be the Supreme Being, as he is neither omniscient nor recognised as the author of the Veda, which, according to the Mīmāṁsā, is eternal. It is here interesting to note that the Sarvamatasaṁgraha definitely states that the Mīmāṁsā system recognises neither the God of the Naiyāyikas nor that of the Upaniṣads.[71] As Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says in his gloss on Naiṣadha 11. 64, the Mīmāṁsā system does not recognise the existence of God; for if it does so, He will have to be regarded as the author of the Veda, and that will destroy the eternal or non-originated character of the Veda advocated by the Mīmāṁsā school.

The atheism of the Mīmāṁsā is contrasted with the theism of the Nyāya and the Vedānta in Naiṣadha 6. 102.[72] The mind of man is described as being dependent either on God or on the chain of causes originating the succession of individual souls (or the cycle of worldly existence) without a beginning. The latter theory is held by the Mīmāṁsā, according to which the cycle of existence is eternal; and actions (Dharma and Adharma) lead to birth and rebirth, and bring about their own results through the mysterious agency known as Apūrva, which preserves the efficacy of an action, for example, a sacrificial rite, for a future occasion. It is thus unnecessary to assume the existence of God as the dispenser of the results of acts done by sentient beings. Creation has neither beginning nor end, and depends upon Adṛṣṭa or the sum total of Dharma and Adharma, leaving no room for the conception of a personal Creator.[73] Kumārila suggests that if an intelligent agency (e.g. the will of God) be regarded as being at the root of Creation, the task of Creation could as well be accomplished by the actions of living beings who are all intelligent agents.[74]

The self-sufficient character of Karma or Adṛṣṭa is denied by the Nyāya as well as the Vedānta. Uddyotakara says that neither atoms nor Karma can do their work unless controlled by an intelligent Cause.[75] Śaṁkara compares the Apūrva propounded by the Mīmāṁsā to a piece of wood or a clod of earth.[76] Both the Nyāya and the Vedānta postulate the existence of God, without, however, denying the activity of Karma or Adṛṣṭa.[77] As a matter of fact, they advocate the co-operation of God and Karma, and conceive God to be the dispenser of the results of actions done by sentient beings, whose freedom is thus not denied.[78] Vātsyāyana rejects the theory that God alone produces the results of actions,[79] and says that he only favours or helps forward the personal endeavour of the individual.[80] Śaṁkara reiterates and explains the same view in detail in his commentary on the Vedāntasūtras.[81] The Mīmāṁsakas object to this dual conception of God and Karma. The simultaneous insistence on the omnipotence of God and the activity of Karma is to them an inconsistency. As Kumārila says, if the will of God be the cause of the world process, it is useless to postulate the activity of Karma; if on the other hand, the course of the world is assumed to be regulated by Dharma and Adharma, that would be accepting an agency other than the will of God.[82] Nevertheless, the Vedāntins and the Naiyāyikas, especially the latter, insist on the supremacy of God, and quote in this connection a verse from the Mahābhārata, which says that all creatures are ignorant and helpless, and go to hell or heaven as directed by God.[83] This verse has been cited by some of the commentators while explaining Śrīharṣa's reference to the dependence of the working of the human mind on God.[84] In the Naiṣadha verse we are considering, the poet has, in fact, in view the controversy about Karma and Īśvara carried on by the followers of the Mīmāṁsā, Nyāya and Vedānta schools, and Śrīharṣa here gives in a nutshell the two main conclusions put forward by the rival systems.

Sāṁkhya and Yoga doctrines

There are very few references to doctrines of the Sāṁkhya and the Yoga system in our poem. The Satkāryavāda seems to be referred to in 5. 94[86] where the poet says that there is no difference between the cause and the effect. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita finds a reference to Sāṁkhya doctrines also in 22. 76, where the slaughter of animals is represented as a blemish or an unclean feature of the Vedic sacrifices. Cāṇḍū here quotes Sāṁkhyakārikā (verse 2) which characterises the Vedic sacrificial system as impure, and hence ineffective as a means of averting pain. In 21. 119 there is a reference to the Saṁprajñāta form of Yogic meditation.[87]

Vedānta doctrines

There are several references to the Vedānta doctrine of the realisation of the Absolute.[88] The characteristics of salvation and the worldly state—joy and delusion respectively—are referred to in 8. 15.[89] There is an allusion to the Vedāntic theory of dreams in 1. 40.[90]

In 9. 94[91] there is a reference to the Liṅga-śarīra or the Subtle Body, which is regarded as the repository of the sense impressions.[92] Damayantī says that her inner being is occupied by her beloved, her mind is attached to him, and the five vital breaths are attached to the mind: so she cannot die. Mind is here taken as referring to the Subtle Body. The mind being the chief of the constituents of the Subtle Body, it is often used in the latter sense,[93] and the poet here refers to the process of departure of the Subtle Body at death, as described in the Upaniṣads. The Liṅgaśarīra is composed of various elements such as the mind, the vital breaths, the senses etc.[94] When death comes, the Soul departs followed by the Vital Breath (in its five forms), the mind and the ten senses,[95] all of which belong to the Subtle Body.

(b)

In 11. 129 we have an elaborate description of the devotion of the Upaniṣad to the Absolute.[96] The doctrine of the Upaniṣads is described as devoting itself to the One Being, beyond the range of speech, an ocean of consciousness, an infinite joy, by discarding air and earthly objects, watery objects and light, the sky, time, space and the mind. Certain commentators find in this enumeration of objects a reference to the nine substances of the Vaiśeṣika system minus the Soul.[97] Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, however, refers to the story of Nārada and Sanatkumāra in the seventh chapter of the

In 9. 121[99] the poet refers to the emergence of the knowledge of the Self, and the consciousness that it is different from Prakṛti or the Primordial Matters,[100] accompanied by relevant utterances based on the recollection of the past.[101]

In 21. 108[102] the poet gives us a synthesis of Vaiṣṇava and Vedāntic doctrines. The apparent diversity of the external phenomena attributed to Māyā is represented as being a mere flash of the will of Viṣṇu.[103]

Perhaps the most interesting reference to Vedānta doctrines is to be found in 13. 36. Speaking of the failure of Damayantī to distinguish the real Nala from the four bogus Nalas, the poet says :

साप्तुं प्रयच्छति न पक्षचतुष्टये तां तल्लाभशंसिनि न पञ्चमकोटिमात्रे ।
श्रद्धां दधे निषधराड्विमतौ मतानामद्वैततत्त्व इव सत्यतरेऽपि लोकः ॥

"Just as in the presence of a diversity of doctrines people do not believe in the truth of monism, the fifth alternative, though truer ; four other theories, wishing to win this (faith), being engaged in preventing such a belief (in monism) from gaining ground : similarly, Damayantī, in the face of this doubt about Nala, did not believe in the reality of the fifth alternative,[104] though more genuine than the rest, four other persons[105] desirous of winning her, having prevented her from acquiring such a trust."

The imagery of Śrīharṣa is based on two verses of the Gauḍapādakārikā, which mention four doctrines about the Self, namely, 'It exists', 'It does not exist', 'It exists and exists not', 'It exists not, it exists not', and represent the Self as 'untouched', that is, incomprehensible by any of these Koṭis or doctrines.[106] According to Śaṁkara, as interpreted by Ānandagiri, the first theory refers to the Vaiśeṣikas and others, the second to the Vijñānavādin Buddhists, the third to the Jainas, and the fourth to the Śūnyavādin Buddhists.[107] The Vedānta doctrine, which represents the Self as beyond the ordinary modes of thought and expression, is different from all these theories and is thus the fifth Koṭi.

There is no doubt that Śaṁkara's interpretation of the Kārikās is artificial and not the only one possible.[108] The Gauḍapādakārikā is a work which shows unmistakable traces of Buddhist influence, and the Kārikās in question seem to be based on the Mādhyamika definition of the Ultimate Reality found in Buddhist works.

The Ultimate Reality of the Mādhyamikas is here represented as beyond the four Koṭis,[109] which means modes of predication (or categories of existence) rather than 'theories' as interpreted by Śaṁkara. It will be seen that Gauḍapāda and Śrīharṣa alike apply the same definition to the Self, the Ultimate Principle of the Advaitavādins, and likewise describe it as beyond the four modes of predication.[110] The rejection of the Koṭis is thus common to the Mādhyamikas and the Advaita Vedāntins. In 21. 88 Śrīharṣa himself describes Buddha as having discarded the four Koṭis, while the Advaitins, too, have been blamed by other schools of thought for rejecting the Koṭis.[111] Both the Mādhyamikas and the Advaita thinkers describe the Ultimate Reality as beyond the comprehension of mind and speech, and beyond the range of world phenomena (Prapañca).[112] The Ādiśānta of the Mādhyamikas may be compared with the Upaśānta of the Vedānta.[113] The Vedāntins, it is true, did not admit this remarkable similarity between their Brahma and the Śūnya or the Ultimate Principle of the Mādhyamikas. Śaṁkara characterised the doctrine of Śūnya as contrary to all proof,[114] and relying on the literal meaning of the word, reduced the Śūnya theory to mere nihilism. Nāgārjuna, however, contends that his doctrine is neither non-existence (nāstitva) nor non-being (abhāva); and Śūnyatā is, in fact, characterised as Tathatā (thatness), Bhūtakoṭi (true limit) and Dharmadhātu (totality of things).[115] It may be added that the cognate theory of the non-origination and the dreamlike character of things is also common to the Vedānta and Mādhyamika systems.[116] In view of the striking similarity between the doctrines of the two schools, Śrīharṣa's definition of the Advaitatattva, though apparently based on the Gauḍapādakārikā, looks like an adaptation of the Mādhyamika definition of the Ultimate Reality.[117]

Buddhist doctrines

There are several references to Buddhist doctrines in the Naiṣadha. In 10. 87[118] the poet speaks of Śūnyātmatāvāda, Vijñānasāmastya, and Sākāratāsiddhi. The first refers to the Śūnya doctrine of the Mādhyamikas which we shall discuss later. The second refers to the theory of the Yogācāras, generally known as the Vijñānavādins. According to them, the universe is nothing but consciousness, there being no external objects, which are a creation of the mind. External objects and notions have no existence apart from the forms conceived by the intellect and thus exist only in the mind.[119] The forms conceived by the mind seem to us to be external objects.[120] The Śākāratāsiddhi mentioned by Śrīharṣa refers to the doctrine of the Sautrāntikas who believe in knowledge endowed with form (साकार)[121] They with the Vaibhāṣikas represent the Sarvāstivādin school of Buddhist philosophers.[122] The Sautrāntikas, like the Vaibhāṣikas, believe in the existence of the external world, though transitory; but while the Vaibhāṣikas hold that external objects can be perceived directly, the Sautrāntikas assert that they must be inferred. An external object first imprints its form on our consciousness, and from this form or image we infer the existence of the object.[123] Just as the act of eating is inferred from nourishment, a country from the language spoken by its people, and affection from cordiality, similarly external objects are inferred from the form or image left on the consciousness.[124] In other words, we infer the existence of external objects from their reflection in our consciousness, just as we infer the existence of the face from the reflection in the mirror.[125]

The reference to Śūnyavāda in 10. 87 may be brought into relation with the verse in the twenty-first Canto of our poem, in which Buddha is called विधुतकोटिचतुष्क and अद्वयवादिन् (21. 88). According to the Śūnyavādin or the Mādhyamika school, things have only an illusory or dreamlike existence. They are like the figures created by a magician, which are believed to be real by the ignorant.[126] Things exist so long as the attendant cause is present, and disappear when the cause ceases to exist. They are like the reflection of an object, which appears when there is a mirror near it, and is lost to view when the mirror is removed.[127] None can tell whence these illusory objects come and where they go.[128] The Śūnyavādins do not believe in the origination of things in the real sense, and things, according to them, are neither really existent nor suffer extinction.[129] The Ultimate Reality is, on the other hand, described as beyond the four Koṭis or modes of predication; that is, it is neither existent nor non-existent nor the combination nor the negation of the two.[130] It is, in other words, चतुष्कोटिविनिर्मुक्त, that is, cannot be brought under the four categories mentioned above. It is to this doctrine of the Mādhyamikas that Śrīharṣa refers when in 21. 88 he describes Buddha as one who discarded the four Koṭis or modes of predication. Similarly, Buddha is called in the verse an exponent of absolute monism (अद्वयवादिन्), because the Śūnyatā or the ultimate reality is described as Advaya or non-duality.[131] The expression Advayavādin is included among the names of Buddha in the Amarakoṣa, but Śrīharṣa uses it with a view to the philosophical aspect of the term. A Vedāntist like him was, of course, familiar with the following line occurring in a quotation from the Bodhicittavivaraṇa found in Vācaspati's Bhāmatī (2. 2. 18)-

भिन्नापि देशनाऽभिन्ना शून्यताऽद्वयलक्षणा.

We may also refer to the following verse cited in the Bodhicaryāvatārapañjikā to illustrate the nature of Śūnyatā—

अलक्षणमनुत्पादमसंस्कृतमवाच्ययम् ।
आकाशं बोधिचित्तं च बोधिरद्वयलक्षणा ॥[132]

It may also be noted that according to Advayavajra, one of the two Mādhyamika schools is called Māyopamādvayavādin, 'one who believes in Advaya or non-duality comparable to Māyā or illusion.' Advayavajra explains that the doctrine that the reality transcends the four categories of existence mentioned above is propounded by this school.[133]

It is noteworthy that in 10. 87 Śrīharṣa mentions only three of the four Buddhist schools—Sautrāntika, Yogācāra and Mādhyamika—and omits the Vaibhāṣika school. It is generally believed that the Mādhyamika and Yogācāra schools belong to the Mahāyāna, while the Sautrāntika and Vaibhāṣika schools are affiliated to the Hīnayāna. But Advayavajra says in his Tattvaratnāvalī that the Yogācāra, Mādhyamika and Sautrāntika schools belong to the Mahāyāna.[134] The grouping together of these three schools by Śrīharṣa seems to suggest that he is following the same tradition as Advayavajra, and presents the three Mahāyāna schools envisaged by that tradition. This is particularly interesting in view of the fact that Advayavajra, who is assigned to the eleventh century,[135] is not far removed from Śrīharṣa in date.

Jaina doctrines

There is a reference to the three Jewels in 9. 71.[136] The conception of the three jewels is found both among the Buddhists and the Jainas, but commentators agree in taking the reference as one to Jaina tenets. The three Jewels are Samyagdarśana, Samyagjñāna and Samyakcāritra. Samyagdarśana means faith in the teaching of the Jaina Scriptures.[137] It is sometimes called also Samyaktva and Ruci.[138] Samyagjñāna means a thorough knowledge of the doctrines propounded in the Scriptures. Samyakcāritra is cessation from all activities leading to sin. It involves the practice of the five Vratas or vows to renounce violence, theft, falsehood, lust and greed. Kundakundācārya says in his Pravacanasāra (1. 7) that Cāritra is Dharma which is śama or equanimity, a condition of the soul free from delusion and perturbation.[139] Jayasena remarks that Śama is that which alleviates the suffering caused by the fire of the passions. Cāritra is thus a quiescent frame of mind, and described as the cessation of all worldly activities containing the germ of Karma.[140]

The three Jewels were made familiar in the Kāvya literature by Jaina poets and writers before the time of Śrīharṣa. There are many references to them in Somadeva's Yaśastilaka where in one place they are collectively called Bodhi.[141] In the allegorical Upamitibhavaprapañcā Kathā, they are elaborately explained and represented as three medicines for the soul.[142] There are references to the three Jewels also in Kāvyas like Candraprabhacarita and Dharmaśarmābhyudaya. The latter work gives a lucid and simple definition of the Jewels as the means of salvation.[143]

Cārvāka doctrines

There is a popular exposition of Cārvāka doctrines in 17. 37 ff. (see Translation). The Cārvāka attack on the Nyāya conception of salvation[144] and God will be found in 17. 75, 77, 78. The Vedānta theory of the Self is attacked in 17. 74. The Cārvāka being a gross materialist does not believe in the existence of the soul and rebirth, and argues that a creature once burnt to ashes at death can by no means return (भस्मीभूतस्य भूतस्य पुनरागमनं कुतः 17. 69). This is the doctrine of annihilation known as Ucchedavāda and referred to in works like Āryaśūra's Jātakamālā (Mahābodhijātaka).[145] Being without any vision of the life beyond, the Cārvāka devotes himself to the world and its delights. Sensual pleasure is his summum bonum, and the Cārvāka in our poem requisitions even the aid of grammar in support of his doctrines; he quotes and misinterprets a rule from Pāṇini to prove that salvation is fit only for a eunuch.[146]

Minor Allusions

Dattātreya

In the hymn to Viṣṇu in the twenty-first Canto, Śrīharṣa refers to the ten incarnations of the deity; and in addition to these, assigns a verse to the Dattātreya incarnation,[1] which is not included among the commonly accepted Avatāras, whose number came to be fixed at ten by the twelfth century, if not earlier. The conception of the ten Incarnations was popularised by Jayadeva in the well-known hymn in his Gītagovinda, while Govardhana, in his Āryāsaptaśatī (verse 60), speaks of 'those who recognise ten Avatāras'.[2] Hemacandra in his Dvyāśrayakāvya 15. 119 uses the expression दशावतारी in the sense of 'a temple containing the idols of the ten incarnations of Viṣṇu.'[3] Earlier than this, Kṣemendra, in the eleventh century, describes ten Incarnations in his Daśāvatāracarita; while, in the tenth century, Somadeva speaks of the same number of Incarnations in his Yaśastilaka.[4] The conception of the ten Incarnations is no doubt still older, but the number ultimately came to be fixed at ten; and the usual group of ten Avatāras does not seem to have at any time included Dattātreya. The Matsyapurāṇa (47. 237-48), it is true, enumerates ten Avatāras of Viṣṇu, and includes Dattātreya among them; but this group of Incarnations is different from the usual ten, consisting as it does of Dharma Nārāyaṇa, Narasiṁha, Vāmana, Dattātreya, Māndhātṛ, Jāmadagnya, Rāma, Vyāsa, Buddha and Kalkin.

In spite of the exclusion of Dattātreya from the usual Daśāvatāra group, there are many references to him as an incarnation of Viṣṇu. Māgha refers to the Dattātreya incarnation in 14. 79,[5] and so does the Bhāgavata (2. 7. 4; 6. 8. 16), which recognises an indefinite number of Avatāras, as pointed out by R. G. Bhandarkar. Dattātreya is described in the Purāṇas as the son of Atri and Anasūyā, and brother to Durvāsas.[6] The Brahmapurāṇa (213. 107-9) explains that on the decline of the Vedic religion, Viṣṇu assumed the form of Dattātreya, and restored the Vedic rites and reestablished society.[7] Fuller details about Dattātreya are given in Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa,[8] which describes him as a sage of peculiar character; he is addicted to sensual pleasure without being affected by it.[9] He is an Avatāra of Viṣṇu, and Lakṣmī is his consort. He is the type of a Yogin who is in the world, and yet outside it, and who without being mad behaves like a mad man.[10] Dattātreya appears in this role also in the Upaniṣad called after him, which is, however, a compilation of later times. The Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa (19. 10-11) states that the sage god is to be worshipped with wine and flesh and music. The Matsyapurāṇa (99. 14) and the Agnipurāṇa refer to idols of Dattātreya like those of the other Incarnations. The latter work (49. 27) describes his image as two-armed with the figure of Lakṣmī on the left. The Viṣṇudharmottara,[11] on the other hand, says that he should be represented exactly in the same way as Vālmīki, a white figure with matted hair on the head. The Ahirbudhnyasaṁhitā, a famous work of the Pāñcarātra school, includes Dattātreya among the thirty-nine Vibhavas or manifestations of Vāsudeva or Viṣṇu (5. 50 ff).

In the Naiṣadha verse referred to above, there are two references to legends concerning Dattātreya. The one is to the story of the sage conferring boons on Kārtavīrya Arjuna, who was his favourite devotee. This story is independent of the tradition about the sage being an incarnation of Viṣṇu, and found in the Mahābhārata,[12] Matsyapurāṇa[13] and other works. The second story relates how the sage taught Yoga to king Alarka. The Mahābhārata[14] describes how Alarka attained perfection in Yoga, but there is no reference to Dattātreya. The Brahmapurāṇa (180. 32), however, mentions that the sage instructed Alarka in the Aṣṭāṅga Yoga. The story is narrated in detail in Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa[15] which gives a summary of the teachings of the sage. It is here important to note that it is as a teacher of Yoga that Dattātreya is better known in later times, and he is aptly called Yoganātha in the Bhāgavata (6. 8. 16). He is, as a matter of fact, sometimes quoted as an authority on topics related to Yoga.[16] In Brahmapurāṇa (chap. 117) the sage appears also as a great devotee of Śiva, and addresses an eloquent hymn to Śiva in the form of Somanātha. Dattātreya plays an important part in the Tāntric literature also. The Dattātreyatantra,[17] which gives details of many magical practices, is ascribed to him, while the sage sometimes appears as a teacher of Tāntric doctrines.[18] It is significant that his disciple Kārtavīrya also appears in Tāntric rituals.[19] Dattātreya is thus an important figure in Indian religious literature.[20] The well-known Avadhūtagītā is attributed to him, and Śrīharṣa describes him as an adherent of Absolute Monism. There is even a Dattātreya school of thought, the main ideas whereof are briefly recounted in the Kāthabodha (K. S. S.). The Kāśīkhaṇḍa (84. 18) mentions a Dattātreyatīrtha, and says that a person bathing in its waters

21. The cult of Dattātreya is at present widely prevalent in Maharashtra where the Datta-sampradāya has a large following. But here Dattātreya is worshipped not as an incarnation of Viṣṇu, but as the combined manifestation of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara. In an Ārati (devotional song) of Saint Ekanātha of Maharashtra he is referred to as Triguṇa Avatāra and Traimūrti embodying in himself the attributes of the Hindu Trinity. Though the spiritual genealogy of the Dattātreya sect is traced back to Vasiṣṭha, Parāśara, Śukra, Gauḍapādācārya and Śaṁkarācārya among others, the sect as a religious organisation does not appear to be very old, as its leading personalities come to the fore from about the fourteenth century onwards. Śrīpāda Śrīvallabha who flourished in the latter part of the fourteenth century may be regarded as the first historical teacher of the community. Even more important is Nṛsiṁha Sarasvatī (A.D. 1408-1458), born at Karanja in Berar, whose benevolent mission, teachings and miracles are described in detail in the Gurucaritra in Marathi verse composed in the sixteenth century. This work was completed by Sarasvatī Gaṅgādhara in 1558 A.D. and is regarded as the Veda of the Datta sect; it deals with Ācāradharma and other tenets of the school. Among other teachers of the sect whose succession comes down to recent times may be mentioned Janārdana Svāmī (1504-1575), Ekanātha (1533-1599), Dāsopant (1551-1615), etc. The gospel of Dattātreya is one of peace and forbearance and its philosophy is based on Advaita Vedānta. The relation of the universe to the Self is held to be like that of the waves to the sea or of the light to the sun. The teachers of the Datta school laid great stress on Ācāradharma which rendered notable service to Hinduism in a critical period, and their mission of peace and concord promoted communal harmony which extended even to Hindu-Muslim relations in the Deccan. The subsequent development of the Datta cult and its influence on the masses show the importance of this Avatāra, but, as we have said, Dattātreya came to be regarded as an incarnation of the Trimūrti rather than of Viṣṇu. Among the holy places of the Datta Sampradāya may be mentioned Gāṇagāpūra in Hyderabad on the banks of the Bhīmā; Narasobāchī Wāḍī, a great centre of pilgrimage not far from Kolhapur, at the confluence of the Pañcagaṅgā and Kṛṣṇā, named after Nṛsiṁha Sarasvatī who lived here for twelve years; Audumbar on the banks of the Kṛṣṇā, and Māhūr in Hyderabad. There is an old temple of Dattātreya on one of the peaks of the Girnar hill in Junagaḍ and there are others found in different parts of Bombay State. It is usual to worship the pāḍukās of Dattātreya who is sometimes represented with three faces and six hands, but the one-faced image is the more common. The famous idol of the deity at Bhatgaon in Nepal is of this type. Saint Ekanātha who composed Abhaṅgas on Datta-mānasa-pūjā and Datta-nāma-mahimā describes the Dhyāna of Dattātreya in one of his songs as follows: "Datta resides at Audumbara. He has matted hair. He holds in his hands a trident and a drum. The Kāmadhenu and a dog stand by his side. The alms-bag hangs from his shoulders. The half-moon is on his forehead. He holds in one hand a kamaṇḍalu and a stick in the other. His body is smeared with ashes. He enshrines in his heart mercy and peace." While the conception of Dattātreya as a great Yogin has led to his being adored as an apostle of peace and forgiveness, the physical characteristics enumerated here seem to have been elaborated in later times.

Trivikrama and Hari-Hara

The Vāmana incarnation is described by Śrīharṣa in connection with the ten Avatāras, but an additional verse is assigned to Trivikrama,[22] who is only another form of Vāmana. It is, however, usual to make a distinction between Vāmana and Trivikrama. The Bhāgavata says, for instance, स्थलेषु मायावटुवामनोऽव्यात्त्रिविक्रमः खेऽवतु विश्वरूपः 6. 8. 13. We shall also see that it was customary to worship Vāmana and Trivikrama separately, there being different idols for both. According to Agnipurāṇa (236. 15), Trivikrama is to be worshipped on the eve of a military expedition.

In the Naiṣadha verse referred to above, there is an allusion to the tradition that the bear king Jāmbavat sang the praise of Viṣṇu while he was banishing Bali to the nether regions. The story of Bali and Vāmana is found in many places; but the reference to Jāmbavat is extremely rare, though it occurs in the Bhāgavata.

विजयं दिक्षु सर्वासु महोत्सवमघोषयत् ॥ 8. 21. 8.

The Hari-Hara form of Viṣṇu is referred to in 21. 103 and 105. This dual form of Viṣṇu and Śiva seems to be the same as the Śiva-Nārāyaṇa mentioned in Matsyapurāṇa (chap. 260), which gives directions for constructing the idol representing the form in ques-

Dattātreya appears in a leading role in the religious tenets of another sect of Maharashtra, that of the Mahānubhāvas, founded by Cakradhara at Paiṭhaṇ in the latter half of the thirteenth century. This sect worships the five Kṛṣṇas, namely, Śrīkṛṣṇa, Dattātreya, Cakrapāṇi, Guṇḍama Rāūla alias Govinda Prabhu and Cakradhara, and regards Dattātreya not as the incarnation of a god but of God himself. He is the Ādiguru who has existed in the four yugas. There is a legend that Dāttātreya appeared in the guise of a tiger before Cāṅgadeva Rāūla, the Guru of Cakradhara, and gave him religious instruction. The Mahānubhāva sect has survived in Berar where it has some Maṭhas with a number of followers. See P. R. Mokasi's article on Datta Sampradāya in the Marathi Magazine Prasāda (Poona, June, 1954); Chitrav- Madhyayugīna Caritra Kośa, Poona, 1937, pp. 350-354; and articles in the Marathi encyclopaedia Jñānakośa edited by Ketkar on Dattātreya, Narasobāchī Wāḍī, etc. The Bombay Gazetteer (Index Volume, No. 27, 1904) contains the following references to Dattātreya: Shrine of D. at Cheul; Temple of D. at Nirmal; Image of D. in Sopara Cakreśvara Temple; Footprints of D. at Tungār; D. Image and pool at Gokarna. Dattātreya is believed by his followers to have been born on the full moon day of the month of Mārgaśīrṣa.

tion (वामार्धे माधवं विद्याद्दक्षिणे शूलपाणिनम्).[23] It is stated in Vidyāraṇya's Śaṁkaradigvijaya (12. 7—8) that at a sacred place called Hari-śaṁkara, Śaṁkara worshipped Hari and Śiva 'who manifested the emblem of unity.'[24] The Hari-Hara form seems to be referred to here, which is mentioned also in Harṣacarita (chap. 4).[25]

The 'White Hair' of Viṣṇu

While describing the Kṛṣṇa incarnation, Śrīharṣa refers to Balarāma as the 'White Hair' of Viṣṇu conceived as the Primeval Being, and identifies him with the serpent Ananta.[26] Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and Ananta are, as a matter of fact, represented here as identical. The poet here follows the tradition preserved in Viṣṇu-purāṇa[27] that in order to save the earth from the oppression of the demons, Viṣṇu plucked from his head two hairs, the one white and the other black (उज्जहारात्मनः केशौ सितकृष्णौ), and ordained that the two mysterious hairs should be incarnate on the earth in the form of Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa respectively. Viṣṇu explained the circumstances relating to Kṛṣṇa's birth in Devakī's womb, and said that prior to this, the serpent Ananta, a partial incarnation (अंश) of his own, would be born as 'the part of a part' (अंशांशेन) in the form of Balarāma.

The tradition is referred to in the Mahābhārata[28] and in the Bhāgavata.[29] Śrīdharasvāmin, in his commentary on the latter work, says that the black and the white hair refers to the colour of Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma respectively. Hemādri, on the other hand, in his commentary on Muktāphala where the Bhāgavata verse referred to here is quoted, explains the word केश in the sense of 'lord or possessor of happiness' (क+ईश).[30] He quotes in his support a verse from Narasiṁhapurāṇa, which uses शक्ति for केश—

वसुदेवाच्च देवक्यामवतीर्य महीतले।
सितकृष्णे च तच्छक्ती कंसाद्यान् घातयिष्यतः॥[31]

Hemādri's explanation seems to be farfetched and artificial, and Śrīdhara is no doubt right in taking केश in its usual sense of 'hair'. The testimony of Śrīharṣa's verse is to the same effect.

Rādhā

Śrīharṣa refers to Rādhā in connection with the Kṛṣṇa incarnation in 21. 84. It is not certain when the Rādhā legend came into being, but Rādhā made her entry into Kāvya literature several centuries earlier than Śrīharṣa's time. Rādhikā is mentioned in one of the introductory verses of Veṇīsaṁhāra composed not later than the eighth century. In the ninth century, Ānandavardhana in his Dhvanyāloka (chap. 2) cites a verse which alludes to Rādhā in the following lines—

तेषां गोपवधूविलाससुहृदां राधारहःसाक्षिणां
क्षेमं भद्र कलिन्दशैलतनयातीरे लतावेश्मनाम्।

The poetic emotion inspiring this verse is almost as strong as in the Gītagovinda, and the advent of Rādhā in Sanskrit poetry must have taken place considerably before Ānandavardhana's time. In the tenth century, Trivikrama refers to Rādhā's love for Kṛṣṇa by way of word-play,[32] in his Nalacampū (chap. 4); while Somadeva refers to the same topic in a more explicit manner in his Yaśastilaka (chap. 4).[33] Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa are the subject of a sentimental verse twice quoted in Sarasvatīkaṇṭhābharaṇa.[34]

Among other writers, Kṣemendra mentions Rādhā in his Daśāvatāracarita,[35] and Govardhana does the same in his Āryāsaptaśatī.[36] The allusion to Rādhā in Naiṣadha is thus an interesting link in the literary fortunes of Kṛṣṇa's beloved in later Sanskrit poetry.[37] It may also be mentioned that there was a drama called Rādhāvipralambha by Hejjala. Rāmacandra refers to it in the commentary portion of his Nāṭyadarpaṇa (1. 65) composed in the twelfth century. In Prākrit poetry, Rādhā is mentioned in Hāla's Gāthāsaptaśatī (1. 89) and Vākpati's Gaüḍavaho (verse 22) composed early in the eighth century.

In the Naiṣadha verse referred to above, Śrīharṣa addresses Kṛṣṇa as प्राणवत् प्रणयिराध, and we have reason to believe that Rādhā being 'dear to Kṛṣṇa as his life' had become a stock phrase by Śrīharṣa's time. In Devībhāgavata we frequently find epithets conveying a similar idea; for example, प्राणाधिकप्रियतमा[38], कृष्णप्राणाधिकप्रिया [39], कृष्णप्राणाधिदेवता[40] etc. The Devībhāgavata is earlier than Śrīharṣa; and, at any rate, the epithet used by the poet seems to be based on some such Paurāṇika text. We may here note that among the earlier Purāṇas, Rādhā appears as a goddess, and is treated as holy in Padmapurāṇa,[41] Varāhapurāṇa[42] and Liṅgapurāṇa.[43] In our poem she is mentioned only as the beloved mistress of Kṛṣṇa, but in the first half of the thirteenth century she appears in the role of a paramount goddess in Someśvara's poem Surathotsava (1. 19), wherein her blessing is invoked along with that of Pārvatī, Rāma, Kṛṣṇa and others.

The Twelve Idols of Viṣṇu and their Worship

In 21. 42 Nala is described as worshipping the twelve idols of Viṣṇu.[44] According to Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, the images are those of the twelve manifestations of Viṣṇu, namely, Keśava, Nārāyaṇa, Mādhava, Govinda, Viṣṇu, Madhusūdana, Trivikrama, Vāmana, Śrīdhara, Hṛṣīkeśa, Padmanābha and Dāmodara. The only difference in these idols is that the four emblems of Viṣṇu—the lotus, the conch, the mace and the discus—are placed by permutation in varying order in the four hands of Viṣṇu, as will be seen from the following list.

Keśava—Conch, discus, mace and lotus, beginning from the upper right hand.

Nārāyaṇa—Conch, lotus, mace and discus, beginning from the lower right hand.

Mādhava—Conch, lotus, mace and discus, beginning from the upper left hand.

Govinda—Conch, discus, mace and lotus, beginning from the lower left hand.

Viṣṇu—Conch, discus, mace and lotus, beginning from the upper left hand.

Madhusūdana—Conch, lotus, mace and discuss, beginning from the upper right hand.

Trivikrama—Conch, lotus, mace and discus, beginning from the lower left hand.

Vāmana—Conch, discus, lotus and mace, beginning from the upper right hand.

Śrīdhara—Conch, lotus, discus and mace, beginning from the lower left hand.

Hṛṣīkeśa—Conch, mace, discus and lotus, beginning from the lower left hand.

Padmanābha—Conch, lotus, discus and mace, beginning from the lower right hand.

Dāmodara—Conch, mace, discus and lotus, beginning from the upper right hand.[45]

44. उत्तमं स महति स्म महीभृत् पूरुषं पुरुषसूक्तविधानैः ।
द्वादशापि च स केशवमूर्तीर्द्वादशाक्षरमुदीर्य ववन्दे ॥

45. According to the manuscript, both Nārāyaṇa and Vāmana are characterised by conch, discus, mace and lotus, beginning from the lower right hand. This is a mistake. The necessary alterations have been made from Skandapurāṇa.

The above list is based on Skandapurāṇa,[46] which gives four groups of six idols each, making twenty-four in all.[47] It was obviously allowed to select twelve idols from these groups in the order given above.

The Agnipurāṇa (chap. 48) also mentions twenty-four idols of Viṣṇu, of which the first twelve appear in the same order as in the above list, though the arrangement of the four emblems is different. The Ahirbudhnyasaṁhitā (chap. 26), on the other hand, mentions only twelve images in the same order as above, though here too the emblems appear in different combinations to those in other texts.

The twelve idols of Viṣṇu correspond to the twelve months of the year; and according to certain texts, they are to be worshipped by turns in each successive month, and not, as in our poem, on the selfsame occasion. The Mahābhārata[48] says that Keśava should be worshipped in the month of Agrahāyaṇa, Nārāyaṇa in Pauṣa, Mādhava in Māgha, Govinda in Fālguna, Viṣṇu in Caitra, Madhusūdana in Vaiśākha, Trivikrama in Jyeṣṭha, Vāmana in Āṣāḍha, Śrīdhara in Śrāvaṇa, Hṛṣīkeśa in Bhādra, Padmanābha in Āśvina, and Dāmodara in Kārtika. This tradition is found also in Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa,[49] and Aparārka quotes some verses to the same effect in his commentary on Yājñavalkya (1. 154).[50] The idols are to be worshipped on the twelfth day of the month.

We find, however, in Skandapurāṇa (Utkalakhaṇḍa, chap. 43) that the twelve idols of Viṣṇu are to be worshipped one by one every day, with twelve kinds of flowers and fruits as well as other offerings. The idols should be of gold, and placed on twelve pitchers, covered with copper dishes and wrapped in white cloth. This ritual is prescribed in connection with the Mūrti-pañjara vow, usually lasting for a year. The idols are to be worshipped with the 'twelve-lettered' formula mentioned in our poem, but there is no reference to the Puruṣa hymn, to which Śrīharṣa gives prominence. All the idols are, however, worshipped on the same occasion, as Nala does in our poem.

50. The citation in Aparārka mentions twenty-four images; the first twelve for शुक्लद्वादशी s and the second twelve for कृष्णद्वादशी s.

In the above verse, Śrīharṣa says Nala worshipped Viṣṇu with the twelve-lettered formula (द्वादशाक्षर). This is the well-known द्वादशाक्षरमन्त्र, sometimes called द्वादशाक्षरविद्या,[51] equivalent to ॐ नमो भगवते वासुदेवाय. There are numerous references to this formula in the Purāṇas. The Viṣṇupurāṇa[52] speaks of the द्वादशाक्षर-चिन्तका:, and the twelve-lettered formula along with the eight-lettered one (ॐ नमो नारायणाय) is held to be particularly sacred by the Vaiṣṇavas. The Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa mentions them together, and says that they can be used by Brāhmaṇas as well as women and Śūdras (Khaṇḍa I, chap. 163).[53]

The poet further says that Nala worshipped Viṣṇu with the rites connected with the Puruṣasūkta (पुरुषसूक्तविधानै:). The Puruṣa hymn is essential in the worship of Viṣṇu, and the sixteen verses of which it is composed correspond to the sixteen items of worship (उपचार) in honour of the deity. The Padmapurāṇa says that each of these items (invocation, offering of water for washing and other purposes, perfume, incense etc.) is to be accompanied by a verse of the Puruṣasūkta as well as the basic formula (मूलमन्त्र), which obviously refers to the twelve-lettered formula mentioned above.[54] According to certain texts, the formula in question is the eight-lettered one, but both mantras are held to be equally sacred. The application of the Puruṣa hymn, verse by verse, is explained also in some verses quoted by Aparārka on Yājñavalkya 1. 101.[55] The deity is to be invoked with the first verse of the hymn; the ceremonial seat is to be offered with the second; water for washing the feet is to be offered with the third, and so on till the sixteen Upacāras are completed. The poet thus refers to the entire course of the daily worship of Viṣṇu, when he says पुरुषसूक्तविधान. The Vidhi of the Puruṣasūkta is referred to in the following verse quoted by Aparārka from the Narasiṁhapurāṇa—

जले देवं नमस्कृत्य ततो गृहगतः पुनः ।
विधेः पुरुषसूक्तस्य[55] तत्र विष्णुं समर्चयेत् ॥

The Puruṣasūkta-vidhāna includes Homa or oblation in the fire, which is also accompanied by the Puruṣa hymn.[57] It may be mentioned that apart from the customary worship of Viṣṇu, there are special Vaiṣṇava vows, for example, the Haṁsavrata, the observance of which requires systematic contemplation of the Puruṣa hymn over a definite period.

The Buddhist goddess Tārā

There is an important reference to the Buddhist goddess Tārā in 22. 136. The poet speaks of the custom of making a circle of camphor mixed with musk in the shrine of the goddess.[58] Tārā is mentioned as a Buddhist deity also in Āryāsaptaśatī of Govardhana[59] and in Vāsavadattā.[60] More interesting is the reference to Tārā in Haravijaya of Ratnākara who flourished in the ninth century. Tārā is here mentioned in a hymn to Caṇḍī, in which the great goddess Caṇḍī is identified with the Supreme Being, and the poet says that she is called by some Tārā, "whose origin has been seen, i.e., who originated, in the domain of Āryāvaloka," and "who is said to have been born amidst lotus blossoms".[61] With regard to the first epithet, Āryāvaloka evidently refers to the great Bodhisattva Avalokiteśvara who is often called Āryāvalokiteśvara, and we find in Sādhanamālā, a collection of ritual texts of Vajrayāna Buddhism, that in a frequently repeated mystic formula the goddess Tārā, also called Āryatārā, is invariably mentioned with Āryāvalokiteśvara.[62] With regard to the second epithet, we may note that in Sādhanamālā Tārā is always described as being seated on a lotus,[63] and sometimes as being evolved from the lotus.[64] The above references to Tārā in Buddhist and non-Buddhist works testify to the wide popularity of the Tārā cult in medieval India. The cult seems to have been well-established in the seventh century. Nāgārjuna II who is assigned to about the middle of the seventh century, wrote two Sādhanas or manuals, one for the worship of Vajratārā and the other for that of Ekajaṭā, who is closely allied to Tārā, and both the texts are included in the Sādhanamālā collection.[65] It may also be added that Tārā is frequently mentioned in the early Mahāyāna work Āryamañjuśrīkalpa.[66] We need not here discuss the question when Tārā was admitted to the Hindu pantheon, but she already appears as a Hindu goddess in some of the earlier

In that case the goddess would be seated on a white full-blown lotus within a circle of camphor. 'Moon' signifies 'camphor' also in Hindu religious texts. See Vocab. under चान्द्र.

Purāṇas.[67] Ratnākara also, in another verse of Haravijaya, represents Caṇḍī as shining among the eight Śaktis beginning with Tārā.[68] The eight Śaktis seem to be Tārā and the seven Mothers,[69] and Tārā is here conceived as a Brāhmanical deity. Tārā seems to have been worshipped side by side by both Hindus and Buddhists, though the former in course of time introduced many changes in the conception of her image and the mode of worship. There is sometimes even a deliberate attempt to obliterate the Buddhist affinities of the goddess by representing her as a typically Brāhmanical deity hostile to the Buddhists.[70] Yet, as late as the eighteenth century, the famous Tāntric commentator Bhāskararāya,[71] in his commentary on Lalitāsahasranāma, describes Tārā as a Buddhist deity, though he calls her a form of the great Hindu goddess Tripurā.[72]

72. षड्दर्शनपूजायां जैनदर्शनोपास्यत्वेनापि देव्याः पूजादर्शनात्तदुपास्यतारानामकदेवीरूपेति यावत् . The term जैन can here mean only Buddhist, the word जिन being used in the sense of Buddha also. The षड्दर्शनपूजा referred to by Bhāskara is described in ज्ञानार्णवतन्त्र 16. 131—4, and we learn that the six systems are Śaiva, Brāhma, Śākta, Sūrya and Bauddha (संपूज्यं बौद्धदर्शनमुत्तमम्). It may also be noted that the Jaina writer Guṇaratna calls Tārā a Buddhist deity in his commentary on Haribhadra's Ṣaḍdarśanasamuccaya (section on Buddhism)—तारादेवी शासने विघ्ननाशिनी, p. 24 (B. I. ed.)

The large number of references to Tārā as an essentially Buddhist deity by poets and lexicographers,[73] and the elaboration of her cult in early Mahāyāna and Vajrayāna texts prove the Buddhist origin of the goddess; and as Dr. B. Bhattacharya has shown,[74] there are many points in the description of Tārā in Hindu Tāntric works, which cannot be understood without referring to Buddhist ritual texts. Nowadays the worship of Tārā is found only among certain sections of Hindus in Bengal, and her Buddhist votaries are said to be confined to the hill tracts of Nepal.[75] We may contrast with this the widespread popularity of the Tārā cult in medieval India, as evidenced by the large number of Sādhanas or manuals for her worship incorporated in Sadhanamālā, one of the manuscripts of which was written in 1165 A.D.[76] The cult was also prevalent in Tibet. It is stated in the colophon of the Sādhana relating to the worship of Ekajaṭā composed by Nāgārjuna II (see above) that it was discovered by him in Tibet.[77] This seems to be the reason why the four-armed variety of Ekajaṭā was called Mahācīna Tārā.[78]

The cult of Tārā figures prominently in the expansion of Mahāyāna Buddhism in Java under the Śailendra kings in the last quarter of the eighth century. The Kalasan inscription of 778 A.D., which opens with a salutation to Āryatārā, records the building of a temple of Tārā by the Śailendra king Panaṁkaraṇa, who also granted the village of Kālasa for its maintenance. This edifice is the present Chandi Kalasan in the plain of Prambanan, and belongs to the important series of Buddhist monuments in central Java.[79]

She was once worshipped by the Buddhists of Chittagong, and in the Rāmu Magh dialect of that place she is called Phrā Tārā, Phrā being the Burmese equivalent of Āryā. The Buddhists of Chittagong no longer worship Tārā, but she is worshipped by the Hindus under the name Magadheśvarī. See S. C. Das's Note in Chittagong Gazetteer by L. O'Malley, I.C.S., 1908, p. 66.

VOCABULARY

अंशक (n) 15. 8, an astrologically favourable moment (e.g. for the marriage rites) (शशंस मौहूर्तिकसंसदंशकम्). Nārāyaṇa says अंशकं वैवाहिकं लग्नम्. Cf. Yaśastilaka (chap. 2)—मानुषो लग्नांशकश्च. The comm. says वृषलग्नस्य मिथुनांशो द्विपदत्वात् मानुषः.

अङ्ककार, a champion warrior (गौरगुणैरहंकृतिभृतां जैत्राङ्ककारे 12. 84). Bālarāmāyaṇa, Act 8, describes a fight between the champions or Aṅkakāras of Rāma and Rāvaṇa—किमखिलवानरराक्षसक्षयकरेण संग्रामेण, तदेकं तुलाधृतं प्रवर्तयावः। तत्र च—त्वत्काङ्ककारविजये तव राम लङ्का, सीता च ते पुनरियं भवतोऽस्तु दाराः। मत्काङ्ककारविजये तु ममाधिपत्यं, तस्यां च ते पुरि कलत्रजने च तत्र॥ The word secondarily means 'rival'; 'surpassing'; 'similar', e.g., in Naiṣadha 11. 122—नखपदैर्महतु स्तनौ ते.....शशाङ्ककलाङ्कारैः; in Maṅkhaka 7. 11; 1. 43—स्मरकरिकरसीकराङ्कारैः श्रमजलबिन्दुभिः; स त्रायतां पञ्चशरः सदैव विश्वं वृषाङ्कप्रथमाङ्ककारः.

Nārāyaṇa remarks in his gloss on 11. 122—अङ्कं द्वन्द्वयुद्धं कुर्वन्ती-त्यङ्ककाराः. Acc. to Viśvaprakāśa, अङ्क means चित्रयुद्ध.

अङ्ग 16. 20, pictorial designs, e.g. on a sword (सान्द्रतराङ्गकाननः). Nārāyaṇa says सूक्ष्माण्यङ्गानि अङ्गकानि मुद्गपत्रीवल्लीरूपाणि तेषामननं जीवनं यत्र। तदाधार इति यावत्। सान्द्रतराणां पूर्वोक्तानामेवाङ्गानां काननं समूहो यत्र. Jinarāja says the same thing. Vidyādhara says सान्द्रतरमतिगहनमङ्गानां पुष्कराणां काननमिव यत्र.

अङ्गभूमि 16. 22, the blade of a knife or sword (यदङ्गभूमी बभतुः). अङ्गभूमी (dual) refers to the upper and lower portions or the two sides of a blade. Nārāyaṇa says अङ्गभूमी पट्टिकाया ऊर्ध्वाधोदेशौ. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says अङ्गस्य भूमी उभयपक्षतः भूमिद्वयम्. Vidyādhara says तस्याः छुरिकाया अङ्गभूमी पुष्करपट्टिकाभूमी. Jinarāja says अङ्गं पट्टिका तस्य भूमी ऊर्ध्वाधोदेशौ.

अङ्गवासना 18. 79, application of cosmetics and perfumes to the body.

अतिपातुक 19. 5, surpassing (रवेर्लक्षालक्ष्मीं करैरतिपातुकैः).

अध्याहार 12. 57, 'supplying an ellipsis' (Apte). Here it means 'complement'; 'that which makes an incomplete thing complete' (अध्याहारः स्मरहरशिरश्चन्द्रशेषस्य).

अध्युष्ट 12. 10, the number three and a half (अध्युष्टापि हि कोटिरस्य समरे रोमाणि).

अनात्मनीन 11. 22, something unfavourable to oneself (तत् किमपि सृष्टमनात्मनीनम्).

अनास्था 1. 88, indifference. See Trans. The word is explained also as (1) 'impatience'; (2) 'instability', 'transitoriness'. See Nārāyaṇa and Notes (Extracts).

अनुकल्प, usually means a secondary rule prescribing something to be used as a substitute when the thing first prescribed (प्रथमकल्प) is not available. In 17. 12 the word is used in the sense of 'an inferior substitute' (तत्कर्णौ भारती द्वौ विरहाद् भीमजागिराम्। .....ध्वनिभिर्वर्णैरनुकल्पैर्व्यनोदयत्॥). In 10. 22 it means 'similar'—स्वं कल्पयन्ति स्म नलानुकल्पम्. Cf. ग्रसितुं क्षममम्बुधीन् क्षणादनुकल्पाश्रितचण्डपावकम् Yādavābhyudaya 9. 17; राकाशशी तद्वदनानुकल्पः Surathotsava 13. 20.

अनुसंधि 3. 129, same as अनुसंधान.

अनूपयति flood; fill (अनूपयामास विदर्भजाश्रुती.....सुधाभिरुक्तिभिः 12. 69; शृङ्गारशृङ्गारसुधाकरेण वर्णस्रजानूपय कर्णकूपौ 22. 59).

अन्धु (m) 6. 107; 21. 61, a well.

अपवर 18. 18, an inner room (अपवरान्तरेऽपि). Nārāyaṇa remarks अपवृणोत्याच्छादयति इत्यपवरो गृहगर्भः पचाद्यच्. The word occurs in Pūrṇabhadra's Pañcatantra (Book I, p. 120)—कारापवरके क्षेपिताः; अपवरकस्थापितविपुलपेटाभ्यन्तरात् idid., p. 107.

अपष्टु (adv.) 17. 96, falsely; wrongly (अपष्टु पठतः पाठ्यमधिगोष्ठि शठस्य ते). Nārāyaṇa saysअपष्टु प्रतिकूलम्, in a contrary or hostile manner.

अभिजन 11. 51, one's native country (तन्मात्रदैवतजनाभिजनः स देशः)• Amara says 'कुलेऽप्यभिजनो जन्मभूमावप्यथ.....'

अभ्रपुष्प 5. 127, water.

अभ्रमुकामुक 1. 108, अभ्रमुवल्लभ 12. 85, { the Airāvata elephant, Abhramu being his wife. The word अभ्रमु occurs in Haravijaya 31. 29—प्रेमास्पदाभ्रमुः, which refers to the Airāvata elephant; in Yaśastilaka 1. 157—श्रीमत्यभ्रमु वारले च सुतनो मा सुवतात्मप्रियान् ; in Surathotsava 4. 46—असौ कुथेन प्रथितामभिख्यामधःकरोत्यभ्रमुवल्लभस्य.

अमुद्र 3. 86, limitless (अमुद्रदारिद्र्यसमुद्रमग्नाम्).

अम्बिका 7. 98, the poet refers to the nine Ambikās or the goddesses more commonly known as the Mātṛs. As has been pointed out by Avalon in the Introduction (p. 35) to Prapañcasāra Tantra, the Mātṛs are seven—Brahmāṇī, Rudrāṇī, Kaumārī, Vaiṣṇavī, Vārāhī, Aindrī and Cāmuṇḍā or Mahābhairavī; usually eight are spoken of and sometimes nine; the others being Aparājitā and Nārasiṁhī. It should be, however, noted that there are occasional variations in the list of the Mātṛs. Skandapurāṇa (Kāśīkhaṇḍa) mentions the following nine: ब्रह्माणी, वैष्णवी, रौद्री, वाराही, नारसिंही, कौमारी, माहेन्द्री, चामुण्डा and चण्डिका (83. 33 of Uttarārdha). Nine Mātṛs are invoked in the Mātṛ hymn found in Devīpurāṇa (chap. 87) and the worship of the following nine is prescribed in Brahmavaivartapurāṇa (Prakṛtikhaṇḍa) 64. 87-88 in connection with the Durgā cult—वैष्णवीवैव ब्रह्माणीं रौद्रां माहेश्वरीं तथा। नारसिंहीव वाराहीमिन्द्राणीं कार्तिकीं तथा॥ सर्वशक्तिस्वरूपाच प्रधानां सर्वमङ्गलाम् । नव शक्तीश्च संपूज्य घटे देवांश्च पूजयेत्॥

Devībhāgavata, on the other hand, mentions eight Mātṛs, namely, ब्राह्मी, माहेश्वरी, कौमारी, वैष्णवी, वाराही, इन्द्राणी, चामुण्डा and महालक्ष्मी (12. 11. 57, 58). The characteristics of these eight are described in detail in the Nityāṣoḍaśikārṇava belonging to Vāmakeśvara Tantra (8. 126 ff.), which goes on to say एवं ध्यात्वा यजेदेताश्चक्रेशीं त्रिपुरां ततः. The eight Mātṛs mentioned above are enumerated also in Prapañcasāra Tantra 7. 11, and invoked in the Karṇejapa hymn found in Kulacūḍāmaṇi Tantra (chap. 3). Devībhāgavata in another place (9. 50) enumerates the eight Mātṛs, but here Nārasiṁhī is substituted for Mahālakṣmī. In the list of the eight Mātṛs in Devīpurāṇa (37. 83-90), Rudrāṇī takes the place of Nārasiṁhī or Mahālakṣmī, the other names being the same as in Devībhāgavata. Eight Mātṛs are mentioned in Liṅgapurāṇa (Pūrvārdha 82. 96), in which a new name appears, Āgneyikā in place of Mahālakṣmī or Nārasiṁhī or Rudrāṇī. The eight Mātṛs mentioned in the Mantramahodadhi of Mahīdhara (compiled from earlier sources) are Brāhmī, Nārāyaṇī, Māheśvarī, Cāmuṇḍā, Kaumārī, Aparājitā, Vārāhī and Nārasiṁhī (3. 17, 18). There is another list in 1. 64, 65, which agrees with that found in Devībhāgavata 12. 11 (see above). Varāhapurāṇa (chap. 27) describes the origin of the eight Mātṛs in the course of Śiva's fight with the Andhaka demon, and gives the following names: Yogeśvarī, Māheśvarī, Vaiṣṇavī, Brahmāṇī, Kaumārī, Māhendrī, Vārāhī and Yāmī (Yamadaṇḍadharā).[1] Kathāsaritsāgara refers to a group of Mātṛs headed by Nārāyaṇī, the other names being not mentioned (महन्नारायणीमुख्यं मातृचक्रं समागतम् (56. 76). Here the Mātṛs are described as being accompanied by Bhairava. The Mātṛs figure prominently in Tāntric ritual. They are invoked also during the Ordeal of Balance (घटदिव्य). Vyavahāramayūkha (p. 65, Kane's ed.) says मातर इहागच्छतेह तिष्ठतेति मातृरावाह्य। ब्राह्मी माहेश्वरी चैव कौमारी वैष्णवी तथा। वाराही च तथेन्द्राणी चामुण्डा सप्त मातरः॥[2] Hemacandra's Dvyāśrayakāvya (19. 59) refers to a मातृवेश्म or a household temple for the worship of the Mātṛs (Comm. says सप्तानां

1. Viṣṇudharmottara Purāṇa (Part I, chap. 226), on the other hand, enumerates a large number of Mātṛs created by Śiva to destroy the magic forms of Andhaka that arose from the latter's blood.

मातृणां देवतानां गृहम्), and it is interesting to find that the marriage rites take place in the मातृवेश्म.

अरित्र 12. 71, (1) an armour; (2) an oar. Nārāyaṇa remarks—अरिभ्यस्त्रायत इत्यरित्रं कवचम्.

अरीण, full (स्वरमध्वरीणतत्कण्ठ.....6. 65); complete, perfect (गुणैररीणैः 15. 8). From रीण (री—रीयते+क्त). 'ओरीङ् क्षरणे.'

अर्धसमस्या 4. 101, a verse of which the first half is spoken by one person and the second half by another. Verses 4. 102—9 are examples of Ardhasamasyā. See Trans.

अवकेशिन् 17. 142, fruitless (भक्तिर्भूतावकेशिनी); 9. 131 (कदर्थनाः सुरेषु रागप्रसवावकेशिनीः); 2. 45, barren (as a tree)—विफलं पुष्पमिवावकेशिनः.

अवच्छटा 16. 64, a playful movement (अवच्छटा कापि कटाक्षणस्य). Nārāyaṇa explains the word as भङ्गिपरम्परा. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says अवच्छटा विक्षेपः.

अवरोह 11. 30, a branch root of a banyan tree (न्यग्रोधमात्मभरधारमिवावरोहैः). Cf. Kauśikasūtra 7. 57. 6—पालाशं दण्डं ब्राह्मणाय प्रयच्छति .....न्यग्रोधावरोहं वैश्याय (in connection with Upanayana).

अवारीकृत 16. 26, brought near (जवादवारीकृतदूरदृक्पथः). From अवार, the near bank of a river.

अश्वतर 10. 8, (1) a mythical serpent; (2) a mule.

अष्टवर्ग 9. 119, an astrological calculation for determining the character of a birth (शुभाष्टवर्गस्त्वदनङ्गजन्मनः). The word occurs in a verse which is in all probability an interpolation. See Notes.

असंवर 1. 53, irresistible (असंवरे शम्बरवैरिविक्रमे).

आजानिक 15. 54, inborn, natural (आजानिकरागभूमिता). Nārāyaṇa says जननं जनः न जनोऽजनः अजनेन निर्वृत्तः स्वभावेन संभूतः आजानिकः, 'तेन निर्वृत्तम्' इति ठक्. Cf. आजानसिद्ध. Śāṁkarabhāṣya says तथा स्मृतिरपि.....योगिनामपि युगपदनेकशरीरयोगं दर्शयति, किमु वक्तव्यमाजानसिद्धानां देवानाम् 1. 3. 27, where Bhāmatī explains the word as स्वभावसिद्ध. Cf. Śaṁkaradigvijaya 13. 19—स एव.....आजानसिद्धोऽर्हति सूत्रभाष्ये वृत्तिं विधातुं भगवन्नगाधे. For आजानिक cf. Anyāpadeśaśataka (verse 5)—हे पीयूषमयूख.....धराध्वरभुजां राजा स्वमाजानिकः (Kāvyamālā, Part IX).

आत्मभू 8. 105, the god of love.

आनद्ध (n) 15. 16, drums and similar instruments (अमानमानद्धमियत्तया-ध्वनीत्).

आन्तःपुरी 19. 65, a maid servant of the inner apartments. Cāṇḍū-paṇḍita reads आन्तःपुरिकी. Nārāyaṇa mentions this as a variant and says अन्तःपुरशब्दात् 'अन्तःपूर्वपदाट्ठञ्' इति भवार्थे ठञ्.

आपोशान 19. 28, the custom of drinking before a meal some water from the hollow of the palm by stretching out the little finger, keeping the other fingers closed (मिहिरकिरणाभोगं भोक्तुं प्रवृत्ततया पुरः, कलितचुलुकापोशानस्य ग्रहार्थमियं किमु। इति विकसितैनैकेन प्राग्दलेन सरोजिनी, जनयति मतिं साक्षात्कर्तुर्जनस्य दिनोदये ॥). The word is spelt also अपोशन, अपोशान and आपोशन. It is believed that the Āpośāna ceremony turns the food into nectar, and should be accompanied by the appropriate formula. Cf. अपोशानं तु गृह्णीयात् सर्वतीर्थमयं हि तत्। अमृतोपस्तरणमसि विष्णोरन्नमयस्य च ॥ Brahmapurāṇa quoted in Vīramitrodaya (Āhnikaprakāśa). Cf. यथान्यायं पूजयित्वा शाकल्यो भोजनं ददौ। आपोशनं करे कृत्वा परशुर्वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ Brahma-purāṇa 163. 18. The custom is prescribed in Yājñavalkya 1. 31—कृताभिकार्यो भुञ्जीत वाग्यतो गुर्वनुज्ञया। अपोशनक्रियापूर्वं सत्कृत्यान्नमकुत्सयन् ॥ Mitākṣarā says अपोशनक्रियाम् अमृतोपस्तरणमसीत्यादिकां पूर्वं कृत्वा भुञ्जीत. Aparārka says उपनयनकाल आपोशा(श)नप्रयोक्ता क्रिया आपोशा(श)नक्रिया. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says—आपोशानस्य (v. r. अपोशानस्य) अन्नाऽनग्नाऽमृती-करणार्थस्य आचमनस्य ग्रहार्थं .....। यो भोक्तुं प्रवृत्तः स प्रथममापोशानं गृह्णाति। तदुक्तम्—अपोशानेनोपरिष्टादधस्तादश्नता तथा। अनग्नममृतं चैव कार्यमन्नं द्विजन्मना ॥ Vidyā says कलितं गृहीतं चुलुकेन प्रसृतेन यदपोशानं भोजनादौ पानीयप्राशनं तस्य ग्रहार्थमाचमनार्थम्। यः किल प्रथमं भोक्तुं प्रवर्तते स आदावपोशानं गृह्णाति. Nārāyaṇa says आपोशानग्रहीता करकमले एकां कनिष्ठामङ्गुलिं प्रसारयति, अन्याश्च संकोचयतीति संप्रदायः. Narahari makes a similar remark.

The word आपोशान is extremely rare in Kāvya literature. It is used also in Anargharāghava 7. 96—ध्रुवमिह चतुरम्भोनिधिरचि-तापोशानकर्मणि मुनीन्द्रे। भक्ष्यमन्यानि किमपि चकम्पिरे सप्त भुवनानि ॥ Rucipati remarks भोजनारम्भचुलकरूपमापोशानम्. The word occurs in its Prākṛta form in Koūhala's Līlāvaī (verse 8): ओसावणि व्व पीया

रत्त वि चुलुयट्ठिया उयही. उसायणि and ओसायणि are given as variants. Another form is ओसाअणं. See Upadhye's Notes, p. 324.

आभ्र 6. 62, from अभ्र, mica (चन्द्राभमाभ्रं तिलकं दधाना). Cf. Navasāhasāṅkacarita 15. 7 —धवलाभ्रकच्छुरितभित्तिलिखितललिताङ्गना.....

आरकूट (n) 9. 28, a kind of brass (पित्तल).

आर्यपुत्रीय 9. 68, relating to a high-born person; noble.

आलि (f), (1) 'a ridge or mound of earth crossing ditches or dividing fields etc.' (Monier-Williams); (2) a causeway, a bridge, as in 22. 28 (रामालि 'Rāma's Bridge', i.e., Setubandha). In Assamese आलि is used in the first sense and means also 'a road'.

आलिङ्गय 7. 66, (1) adj., worthy of being embraced; (2) n (m), a kind of drum described as having the shape of the tail of an ox.

आलेपन, (1) flour water (पिष्टोदक). विधुमालेपनपाण्डुरम् 2. 26. Nārāyaṇa and Narahari remark 'अईपण' इति लोके प्रसिद्धम्. (2) an application of paint or whitewash. आलेपनदानपण्डिता 15. 12. Here the word is variously explained. See Notes. Nārāyaṇa and Īśānadeva say that आलेपन is rice paste mixed with turmeric, a composition which seems to have been used in painting walls and floors. Cf. Bengali आल्पना.

आसेचनक 3. 119, extremely charming; that which never satiates, but gives unlimited satisfaction (त्वालोचनासेचनकस्तदस्तु नलास्यशीतद्युति-सद्वितीयः). Amara says तदासेचनकं तृप्तेर्नास्त्यन्तो यस्य दर्शने. There is another form of the word —असेचनक. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita explains the verse in accordance with both the forms आसेचनक and असेचनक. He says चन्द्रः नलस्य आस्यमेव शीतद्युतिः तेन सहद्वितीयः सन् तव लोचनयोरासेचनकः आनन्दसेककर्ता अस्तु। अथवा तव लोचनयोरसेचनकः अस्तु अतृप्तिकरोऽस्तु। यदि नलमुखेन सहितोऽभूत् तथापि तव विलोकयन्त्याः तृप्तिर्न भविष्यति। "तमसेचनकं प्राहुस्तृप्तिर्यस्य न जायते" (Halāyudha's Abhidhānaratnamāla 2. 195)। यस्य स्वाद्यमानस्य वस्तुनः तृप्तिर्न जायते, किन्तु तृष्णैव वर्धते सः असेचनकः। तत्र हि द्विधा व्याख्यानम्। (न) सिच्यते आप्याय्यते सुभोजनेनापि इति व्युत्पत्त्या, तथा न सिच्यते आप्याय्यते दृगनेन च व्युत्पत्त्या असेचनको भक्षयिता भक्ष्यं

च। कर्तरि संबन्धे च षष्ठीविधानात्। अतो हलायुधेन कर्तृप्रकरणे पाठे कृतेऽपि[3] आवृत्तिव्याख्यया स्वीकृतम्। असेचनकशब्दस्य[4] आस्वाद्यकर्मविषयत्वमेव अत्र व्याख्येयम्। The word in the form असेचनक thus means (1) insatiable (speaking of a person); (2) something which fails to satisfy by increasing the desire for it. The form आसेचनक is the more common, and the other commentators explain this form only. Kṣīrasvāmin in his comm. on Amara says आसिच्यते आप्याय्यते दृगनेन आसेचनकं यस्य दर्शनात् दृक् न तृप्यति. The word is repeated many times in the Śatasāhasrikā Prajñāpāramitā (B. I.), p. 23 ff. —तत्र जाम्बुद्वीपकानां मनुष्याणां तत्तथागतस्यासेचनकदर्शनमात्मभावं दृष्ट्वा एतदभूदस्माकं पुरतस्तथागतो निषण्णो धर्मं देशयति and so on. It occurs also in Yaśastilaka (chap. 1, p. 176)—आसेचनकावलोकनयोरावयोः; in Harṣacarita (chap. 1)—आसेचनकदर्शनं.....नप्तारम्. The form असेचनक occurs in Haravijaya 27. 76. —असेचनकदर्शनया. Alaka in his comm. quotes the following definition—'न गम्यते येन तृप्तिस्तदसेचनकं विदुः'. Cf. Dharmaśarmābhyudaya Kāvya 2. 4. तदङ्गरूपामृतमक्षिभाजनैर्यदृच्छयासेचनकं पपुः स्त्रियः.

आस्थानपट्ट 10. 57, a throne (आस्थानपट्टं रसनां यदीयां जानामि वाचामधिदेवतायाः).

आहृत 18. 2, artificial, not inborn (आहृता हि विषयैकतानता ज्ञानधौतमनसं न लिम्पति).

इक्षु 20. 21, this is the correct reading for इन्दु found in Nārāyaṇa. See Notes. Nārāyaṇa, however, mentions इक्षु as a variant and explains it as a kind of bamboo -इक्षुर्वंशविशेषः, तत्रोत्पन्नस्य मौक्तिकस्य वैद्यकनिघण्टौ शैत्यं माधुर्यं पित्तोपशमकत्वं चोक्तम्। वंशान्मौक्तिकोत्पत्तिः प्रसिद्धा पूर्वमुक्ता च. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita takes इक्षु in its usual sense of 'sugarcane', but the reference to pearls (मौक्तिकैरिन्दुकुक्षिजैः) makes it practically certain that the word here means 'bamboo' as stated by Nārāyaṇa. There are frequent references to pearls being found in certain bamboos. Cf. Naiṣadha 22. 105—विदर्भभूमीपतिवंशमुक्ता (Nārāyaṇa says वंशः कुलमेव वंशो वेणुस्तत्र जाता मुक्ता). Cf. also Yogavāśiṣṭha (Sthitiprakaraṇa) 35. 11

इङ्गाल 1. 9, charcoal (निजस्य तेजःशिखिनः परश्शता वितेनुरिङ्गालमिवायशः परे). The reading इङ्गाल is found in Nārāyaṇa and Malli. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita (Ms. A) reads अङ्गाल, but Ms. C reads इङ्गाल. Vidyādhara reads अङ्गार, but the accompanying Text has अङ्गाल. Īśānadeva reads अङ्गाल and mentions अङ्गार as a variant. Narahari reads अङ्गार and mentions इङ्गाल as a variant. Both Malli and Nārāyaṇa remark that इङ्गाल is a vernacular word (भाषाशब्द or देश्यशब्द). The word is, however, included in the Vaijayantī lexicon (अङ्गारोऽस्त्री प्रशान्तार्चिरिङ्गालः कारिकाग्निर्विट्), but it is extremely rare in Sanskrit literature. It is found in Appayadīkṣita's Siddhāntaleśasaṁgraha (chap. I)—तथाहि इङ्गालादौ चक्षुःसंप्रयुक्ते तदीयनैल्यादिरूपविशेषदर्शनसामग्रीसत्वान्न रजताध्यासः (Chowkhamba ed., p. 228. 1916). The expression इङ्गालकम्म is found in Ardhamāgadhī (Uvāsagadasāo, chap. 1).

ईषल्लभ 12. 93, easily available.

उत्स्वापगिरः 12. 25, words uttered during sleep.

उद्गूर्ण 17. 36, rising, overflowing (उद्गूर्ण इवार्णवौ). Nārāyaṇa remarks 'गुरौ उद्यमे' मर्यादाधारणे उद्यमत्यागिनीत्यर्थः.

उद्ग्रीविका, standing on tiptoe. रोमाणि..... वरश्रियं वीक्षितुमुत्सुकानि, उद्ग्रीविकादानमिवान्वभूवन् 14. 53; आश्रितोद्ग्रीविकम् 16. 122. Cf. Vāsavadattā -कामिमिथुननिधुवनलीलादर्शनार्थमिवोद्ग्रीविकाशतदानखिन्नेषु..... प्रदीपेषु.

उद्देश 10. 81, in उद्देशपर्वण्यपि लक्षणेऽपि द्विधोदितैः षोडशभिः पदार्थैः. Both उद्देश and लक्षण are terms of the Nyāya philosophy. The former means 'enunciation' and the latter 'definition'. The Vātsyāyana Bhāṣya 1. 1. 2 says नामधेयेन पदार्थमात्रस्याभिधानमुद्देशः, तत्रोद्दिष्टस्यातत्त्वव्यवच्छेदको धर्मो लक्षणम्.

उद्धृ, in वेदानुद्धरताम् 17. 163 (वेदानुद्धरतां तत्र मुखादाकर्णयन् पदम्), 'to draw out', to recite the Vedas according to the different methods of reading, Pada, Krama, etc. See Trans. Nārāyaṇa says वेदानूगादीनुद्धरतां गुणनिकां कुर्वताम्. Jinarāja says वेदानां पदशो गुणनिकां विदधताम्. Guṇanikā is 'repetition' as in Māgha 2.75. Hemacandra in his Anekārthasaṁgraha (4. 10) gives पाठ-निश्चय (determination of a particular reading) as one of the meanings of गुणनिका.

उद्वेग 7. 46, (1) n. a betel nut; (2) m. anxiety (उद्वेगरागादिमृजावदाताः). Cf. Āryāsaptaśatī (verse 287) —दलितोद्वेगेन सखि प्रियेण लग्नेन रागमावहता। मोहयता शयनीयं ताम्बूलेनेव नीतास्मि॥ Comm. says भञ्जितक्लेशेन। पक्षे चूर्णीकृतपूगवता.

उदयभास्कर 18. 103, a kind of camphor. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita remarks that it is found in Gauḍa.

उन्मत्त 3. 98, (1) n. the Dhattūra flower; (2) adj. mad (उन्मत्तमासाद्य हरः स्मरश्च द्वावप्यसीमां मुदमुद्वहेते).

उपकारिका 6. 36, 'a royal tent' acc. to Kṣīrasvāmin on Amara 2. 2. 10 who calls it a 'royal mansion' (राजसदन). Hemacandra (comm. on Abhidhānacintāmaṇi) follows Kṣīrasvāmin. Acc. to Maṅkhakośa, it is 'a tent'. Halāyudha (Abhidhānaratnamālā 2. 135) calls it 'a dwelling-place (गृहस्थान) of kings'. Here, it might mean 'a pavilion' or perhaps 'the inner court of a palace'. See Trans.

उपकार्या 15. 1, same as उपकारिका. Here it means 'a royal tent'. Nārāyaṇa says पटमयद्रव्यादिरूपाम् उपकार्याम्.

उपप्र (m) 17. 142, a shelter, a resting place; here used figuratively (नलस्यास्मदुपप्रा सा भक्तिः). Used also in 19. 11—नयति.... मघवप्रासादस्य प्रधाणमुपप्रताम्.

उपज्ञ 17. 90, one that knows (नानादेशजनोपज्ञाः प्रश्नेषि न कथाः कथम्). Nārāyaṇa says नानादेशजन उपज्ञः अनुभविता यासां ताः सर्वसाक्षिका इत्यर्थः.

उपज्ञा 3. 64, first knowledge; invention (मृषानभिज्ञरसज्ञतोपज्ञसमज्ञम्). The classic example is पाणिन्युपज्ञमाकालापकं व्याकरणम्। पाणिनेरुपज्ञानेन प्रथमतः प्रणीतम् Kāśikā 2. 4. 21. Here, the bird's fame is said to be the उपज्ञा of, that is, created by his truthfulness. See Nārāyaṇa and extracts from Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita.

उपदेह 10. 97, smearing, painting (देहो देहात् किरणैर्मणीनाम्).

उपनिधि 15. 58, a deposit. In Smṛti it means a thing left in the care of some one in a sealed box without disclosing the nature of the contents; the article is to be returned to the owner exactly in the same condition. See Yājñavalkya 2. 65. The word is here used simply in the sense of a 'deposit'—कलापलीलोपनिधिर्गरुत्यज: स यैरपालापि कलापिसंसद:.

उपवर्तन 11. 28, a country (स्वभौममेतदुपवर्तनमात्मनैव).

उपाधि 1. 4, a qualifying attribute, विशेषण (अधीतिबोधाचरणप्रचारणैर्दशाश्चतस्र: प्रणयन्नुपाधिभि:). See also Notes and Extracts. The Viśvaprakāśa says उपाधिर्धर्मचिन्तायां कैतवेऽपि विशेषणे. The word is used in this sense in Bhāgavata 1. 9. 25 ff. —अपृच्छद्विविधान् धर्मान्पृथीणामनुश्रृण्वताम् । पुरुषस्वभावविहितान् यथावर्णं यथाश्रमम् । वैराग्यरागोपाधिभ्यामाम्नातोभयलक्षणान् ॥ दानधर्मान् राजधर्मान् मोक्षधर्मान् विभागश: । (Comm. says वैराग्यरागाभ्यामुपाधिभ्यां क्रमेणाम्नातमुभयं निवृत्तिप्रवृत्तिरूपं लक्षणं येषां तान्); also in Ahirbudhnyasaṁhitā 20. 11, 12—..... शिष्यायाच्छलवादिने । प्रत्यक्षाभि: परोक्षाभिरुपाधिभिरनेकधा । शोधितायैकरूपाय रहस्याम्नायगोपिने ॥

Nārāyaṇa explains उपाधि as 'mode', 'category' (प्रकार). This meaning is particularly appropriate, as the Naiṣadha passage quoted above is based on Mahābhāṣya 1. 1. 1 which says चतुर्भिश्च प्रकारैर्विद्योपयुक्ता भवति—आगमकालेन, स्वाध्यायकालेन, प्रवचनकालेन, व्यवहारकालेनेति. It will be seen that Śrīharṣa uses the word उपाधि in place of प्रकार. With regard to the various modes of learning, अधीति of our poem corresponds to स्वाध्याय; बोध to आगम explained by Kaiyaṭa as ग्रहण; आचरण to व्यवहार; and प्रचारण to प्रवचन (i.e. अध्यापन). उपाधि is used in the sense of प्रकार in the following passage of Rasagaṅgādhara (chap. 1)—इमं च (विप्रलम्भम्) पञ्चविधं प्राच: प्रवासादिभिरुपाधिभिरामनन्ति । ते च प्रवासाभिलाषविरहेर्ष्याशापानां विशेषानुपलम्भान्नास्माभि: प्रपञ्चिता: (Benares ed., p. 60).

उलूलु 14. 51, a sound produced by women by blowing into the hollow of the palm on an auspicious occasion like a marriage (कापि प्रमोदास्फुटनिर्जिहानवर्णेव या मङ्गलगीतिरासाम् । सैवाननेभ्य: पुरसुन्दरीणामुच्चैरुलूलुध्वनिरुच्चचार ॥). Nārāyaṇa remarks that the custom of making this sound is prevalent among the women of Gauḍa, and the poet here refers to a custom of his own country (स्वदेशरीतिः कविनोक्ता). There is, however, nothing to warrant Nārāyaṇa's statement, as references to the Ulūlu sound are found in writers belonging to various parts of India. The word is used by Murāri in his Anargharāghava in connection with Sītā's marriage.[5] Murāri is believed to be a Kashmiri, but Rucipati in his commentary on the play remarks that the Ulūlu sound is made by women of the South on an occasion like a marriage.[6] According to Mallinātha, the custom is prevalent in the North (उदीच्यानामाचारः). The word उलुलु is found also in the Naranārāyaṇānanda of the Jaina writer Vastupāla who flourished in Guzarat in the thirteenth century, and is better known as a statesman. He uses the word in his poem in connection with the marriage of Subhadrā and Arjuna.[7] Amaracandra, a contemporary of Vastupāla, also uses the word in his Padmānanda Mahākāvya in the description of the marriage of the Jaina Tīrthaṁkara Ṛṣabha.[8] The Ulūlu sound has, in fact, been brought into special connection with the marriage festivities by certain later writers on Poetics. Amaracandra and Arisiṁha in their Kāvyakalpalatā include Ulūlu among the topics to be described in connection with a marriage (1. 5. 86). Ulūlu is likewise included in the similar lists found in Deveśvara's Kavikalpalatā (3. 36) and Keśavamiśra's Alaṁkāraśekhara.[9]

9. Kavikalpalatā (B. I. ed.) says विवाहे...भूषोलुलुत्रयीरवाः. Alaṁkāraśekhara (K. S. S.) reads भूषातूर्य, but the variant भूषोलुलु given in the footnote seems to be the correct reading. In the Benares edition of Kāviyakalpalatā (1931) भूषोलूल seems to be a mistake for भूषोलुलु.

The word उलूलु is onomatopoetic in origin. Cf. Greek ololugē 'any loud cry, mostly of a joyous kind (unlike Lat. ululatus), used by women invoking a god' (Liddell and Scott). Similarly, ololugmos is often used for the jubilant or triumphal shout of women on particular occasions, as in Aeschylus: Agamemnon 28, 595; Choephoroi 387. In Latin ululare means 'to cry, to shout', but ululatus often means 'a cry of lamentation'. Cf. 'feminarum ululatus'. The word उलूलु occurs in Chāndogya Upaniṣad 3. 19. 3 — अथ यत्तदजायत सोऽसावादित्यः तं जायमानं घोषा उलूलवोऽनूदतिष्ठन्.....तस्मात्तस्योदयं प्रति प्रत्यायनं प्रति घोषा उलूलवोऽनूत्तिष्ठन्ति. Here the word means simply 'a loud shout'. Śaṁkara takes it as an adjective and thinks it is a variation of उरुरु—घोषाः शब्दा उलूलव उरुरवो विस्तीर्णरवा उदतिष्ठन्. Ānandagiri, on the other hand, says उलूलव इत्युत्सवकालीनाः शब्दविशेषा देशविशेषे प्रसिद्धाः.

उल्लोल 17. 1, a wave (सुराः सरस्वदुल्लोललीला जग्मुर्यथागतम्). Cf. उल्लोलवल्गिनीभिर्ज्वालाभिः Udayasundarīkathā, p. 81.

ऊर्ध्वक 7. 66, a kind of drum, defined as यवमध्यस्तथोर्ध्वकः.

ऊहापोह 19. 26, in.....महांसि महस्पतेः। पटिमवहनादूहापोहक्षमाणि वितन्वतामहह युवयोस्तावद्धीविवेचनचातुरीम्॥ ऊहा is elucidation and अपोह elimination. Nārāyaṇa says असतः प्रकाशादेः प्रकटीकरणमूहा, सतश्च तिमिरादेरपोहो निराकरणम्. Jinarāja remarks बुद्ध्यतिशयात् अनुक्तस्याप्यर्थस्य विचारणा ऊहा। उक्तस्यापि दूषणाविष्करणेन परिहारोऽपोहस्तत्र क्षमाणि वस्तुनोः सामान्यविशेषादिनिर्णीतिदक्षाणि. ऊहा is thus the power to discover and comprehend the hidden aspects of the matter under discussion; while अपोह is the application of the critical faculty involving the rejection of what is objectionable. Both ऊह or ऊहा and अपोह are included among the eight Dhīguṇas or intellectual qualities, the others being श्रवण, ग्रहण, धारण, अर्थविज्ञान etc. Cf. Hemacandra's Dvyāśraya Kāvya 1. 182—धामाष्टानां धीगुणानाम् and commentary thereon. The eight qualities are somewhat differently enumerated in the Ratna commentary on the Pāśupata work Gaṇakārikā, and collectively known as Vāsa in the Pāśupata system. ग्रहणधारणोहापोहविज्ञानवचनक्रियायथान्यायाभिनिवेशानां वास

ऊहापोह combined means 'full discussion', 'consideration of the pros and cons' (Apte). The expression occurs in Ahirbudhnyasaṁhitā 20. 1—वेदवेदान्ततत्त्वज्ञो विद्यास्थानविचक्षणः। ऊहापोहविधानज्ञो दैवपित्र्यक्रियापरः॥ ; in Nāṭyaśāstra 33. 12—तन्त्रीभिः पणवं चैवमूहापोहविशारदः (K. S. S.); also in Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa (द्वितीयखण्ड)—इङ्गिताकारतत्त्वज्ञऊ हापोहविशारदः 6. 5 (मन्त्रिलक्षण). Haradatta on Gautamadharmasūtra 3. 10. 46 explains ऊहविद्भिः as ऊहापोहकुशलैः.

ऋभुक्षिन् 5. 73, a name of Indra (ऋभुक्षाः).

एकधुरीण, lit. bearing the same burden (एकधुरा+ख); similar (तत्कण्ठनालैकधुरीणबीणः 6. 65); belonging to the same rank (लोकपालैकधुरीणः 10. 90). Cf. Anargharāghava 1. 39—कूर्मराजभुजगाधिपगोत्रप्रावदिक्करिभिरेकधुरीणः (रघुवंशः).

एकपादिका 1. 121, standing on one leg (अथावलम्ब्य क्षणमेकपादिकां..... खगः).

ऐन्दव 11. 76, a moon-worshipper.

औपसन्ध्य 22. 56, belonging to the time just before the evening (रश्मिभिरौपसन्ध्यैः).

कक्षा 6. 81, a point of excellence (जागर्ति कक्षा किमतः परापि). Nārāyaṇa explains the word as उत्कर्ष, Mallinātha as उत्कृष्टावस्था, Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita as प्रतिष्ठाकोटि.

कच्छ (m), marsh, marshy ground, in कच्छतृण 8. 101, grass growing on watery soil; in कच्छरुहा 5. 7, explained by Nārāyaṇa as 'a flowering creeper'; or 'Dūrvā grass' (अद्भिः पाद्यमर्घ्यमथ कच्छरुहाभिः).

कट 22. 66, a funeral ground (कटभस्मपाण्डुः).

कदन 4. 8; 14. 99, pain.

कपटकुड्य 18. 18 in कपटकुड्यता. The word occurs in a verse not found in the earlier commentators. Nārāyaṇa explains it as meaning a coloured window curtain (तण्डुलचूर्णादिमण्डलिप्तं चित्रमयं वस्त्रं कपटकुड्यम्। दिवोप्समिया गवाक्षेषु चित्रपटा ध्रियन्ते etc.). The literal meaning 'a counterfeit wall' is also applicable. See Trans.

कपोलपत्र 7. 60, ornamental designs painted on the cheek (कपोलपत्रान्मकरात् सकेतुः).

कम्बल 10. 8, (1) a mythical serpent often mentioned in the Purāṇas; (2) a blanket.

करम्भ (m) 4. 64, a preparation of curds mixed with rice or barley-meal. Nārāyaṇa says it is दधिमक्त. Haradatta in his comm. on Āpastambadharmasūtra 1. 5. 17. 19 where the word occurs remarks—करम्भो दधिसक्तुसमाहारः करम्ब इति प्रसिद्धः । वेदेऽप्युभयं भवति । "यत् करम्भेर्जुहोति धानाः कारम्भः परिवाप" इति. The form करंब is used in Prākṛta. Cf. भिण्णम्मि करंबय-डेरयम्मि Līlāvaī of Koūhala, verse 1110 (see Upadhye's Notes, p. 373). From करम्ब comes करम्बित 'intermingled', 'blended', 'pervaded', e.g., in Naiṣadha 1. 85 (करम्बिताङ्गी मकरन्दशीकरैः); 11. 44 (नृणां करम्बितमुदाम्); 9. 102 (क्रियाः प्रियाया ललितैः करम्बिताः); 16. 94 (बिन्दुभिः करम्बितम्); 1. 115. The form करम्बन is used in 21. 139 (घर्माम्बुशीकरकरम्बनम्).

करण 1. 88; 15. 31, a variety of the citron tree, the shaddock (करणस्य कुड्मलैः.....कुटिला कचच्छटा). It is a small tree with whitish, sweet-smelling flowers in bunches.

करोति 18. 60, ऊरुं करोति (in तत् करोमि भवदूरुम्); 18. 134, चरणौ करोति (in भूय एव चरणौ करोतु वा), massage; caress; fondle. Vidyādhara remarks ऊरुकरणं देशभाषया ऊरुसमालम्भे वर्तते. He makes a similar remark on चरणौ करोतु.

कलम्ब 3. 120, a mature sprout; the middle sprout of a leaf (तवाधरो रज्यति यत्कलम्बः). Nārāyaṇa says कलम्बो मध्यमाङ्कुरः । रज्यत्यारक्तो भवति । प्रथमाङ्कुरापेक्षया मध्यमाङ्कुरस्यातिरक्तत्वात्. Narahari says कलम्बो नालः. Malli following Amara explains the word as नालिका किसलयकाण्ड इत्यर्थः. Nārāyaṇa quotes Viśvaprakāśa 'कलम्बः सायके नीपे नाले शाके कलम्ब्यपि'. The reading in the printed edition (Chowkhamba, p. 107) is corrupt—कलम्बः...नाऽलिशाबकलब्यपि ! Iśānadeva says कलम्बः प्रकाण्डः कन्दलः; and remarks (probably quotes from some other commentary)—यस्य वृक्षस्य पत्रद्वयादूर्ध्वं कलम्बः मयूरपिच्छिका.

कलरव 18. 22, a pigeon. The word occurs in this sense in Āryāsaptaśatī (verse 597) —कलरवः क्वणति ; also in Dharmaśarmābhyudaya Kāvya 10. 31—तरुतीरनिकुञ्जवेदीवियामठे कलरवक्रमपाठकेषु.

कला in 21. 127 means (1) art; (2) a peg of a lyre. See Notes.

कलाद 8. 99, a goldsmith (वयं कलादा इव दुर्विदग्धं त्वद्गौरिमस्पर्धि दहेम हेम). Hemacandra derives the word thus—कला आदत्ते कलादः, कलं सुवर्णकालिकाम् आयति आखण्डयति वा, अत एव कलं धौतं यत्रेति कलधौतम्. Cf. कषाश्मनेव श्यामेन मुखेनाधोमुखेक्षणः। काव्यहेम्नो गुणान् वक्ति कलाद इव दुर्जनः॥ Tilakamañjarī; कामानलेन मलयानिलबोधितेन कारुः कलाद इव शीतकरः प्रताप्य Mukundānanda Bhāṇa (verse 255); कलादश्चामीकरः Harṣacarita (chap. 1).

कलिद्रुम 17. 213, the Bibhītaka tree from which dice were made.

कलिप्रिय 6. 65, the sage Nārada (कलिप्रियस्य प्रियशिष्यवर्गः).

कल्पग्राम 20. 105, a sacred site near Badarikāśrama. Cf. Varāhapurāṇa 162. 67, 68—

कल्पग्रामेण किं तस्य वाराणस्यां च वा शुभे।
मथुरां तु समासाद्य यः कश्चिन्म्रियते भुवि॥
अपि कीटः पतङ्गो वा जायते स चतुर्भुजः॥

Kalpagrāma is sacred to the Vaiṣṇavas. It is stated in Padmapurāṇa (Uttarakhaṇḍa 71. 307) that the hymn to Viṣṇu containing his thousand names will, in the Kali Age, be taken to Kalpagrāma by Nārada. The word is found also in Yaśastilaka (chap. 2)— कल्पग्राममिव परिपूरितकामम्; but the commentator takes it in the sense of 'heaven'. Śrīharṣa says साश्रोणोत्तस्य वाग्भागम्..... । कल्पग्रामाल्पनिर्घोषं बदरीव कृशोदरी॥ 20. 105.

कादम्बिनी 21. 153, a bank of clouds.

कामशर 18. 6; 21. 37, lit. Cupid's arrow, a kind of incense. The following definition is cited by Nārāyaṇa under 18. 6– पुरसर्जाभयालाक्षानखाच्जादिजटागदैः। समैः समधुभिर्धूपो मतः कामशराभिधः॥ इति कामशरो धूपः.

कारीरी 17. 94, a Vedic rite performed to bring rain (पुत्रेष्टिश्येनकारीरीमुखा दृष्टफला मखाः). The rite is called कारीरी, because flour made from a plant named Karīra is mixed with honey and used in making balls (पिण्डी) for the purpose of oblations. A characteristic feature of the rite is that the sacrificer puts on black clothing, a symbol of the colour of the rain clouds. The Maruts are addressed as follows— रमयत मरुतः श्येनमायिनं मनोजवसं वृषणः सुवृक्तिम्. The flour is mixed with honey by addressing the waters, of which eleven names are recorded. See Taittirīyasaṁhitā (Ānandāśrama ed.) 2. 4. 7 ff. and Sāyaṇa thereon. As regards Karīra, Sāyaṇa describes it as the sprout of a creeper resembling the Soma plant. In another place (1. 8. 3) he says that according to some, it is the fruit of the date palm. The usual meaning of the word is 'bamboo-shoot'. Cf. Naiṣadha 5. 14; 9. 12; Māgha 4. 14 (वंशकरीरनीलैः).

The Kārīrī is called मेघवृष्टि by Hemacandra in Dvyāśraya Kāvya 8. 105 —मेघवृष्टिवदटव्यनुयाजैः. Comm. says मेघवृष्टिः कारीरीष्टिः.....तस्यां चानुयाजाख्याश्चरुः आहुतिविशेषा न दीयन्ते इति श्रुतिः.

कार्मण (n) 11. 69, 104, a charm prepared with herbs (द्रोणः स तत्र वितरिष्यति.....सौभाग्यकार्मणमयीमुपदां ; जगद्विजयकार्मणमस्य पद्य.....मणिं). Yaśastilaka (chap. 3) refers to the herbs used for the purpose of कार्मण—कार्मणानेकजटाजातिजटितकण्ठिकावगुण्ठनजठरकण्ठनालः (Comm. says कार्मणा वशीकरणादिप्रयोगा.....जटा मूलानि तासां जातयः प्रकाराः etc.). The word is used in Maṅkhaka 3. 12—वशंवदः.....श्रियाः कार्मणकर्मयुक्तिभिः..... हरिः ; in Dharmaśarmābhyudaya 15. 59—ताम्यति स्म सुरते न कथंचित् प्रेमकार्मणवशेव कृशाङ्गी ; in Vatsarāja's Kirātārjunīyavyāyoga (verse 9)—अस्त्रप्रयोगपरिकर्मणि मन्त्रयोगं व्रीडाकरं तमपि कार्मणमेव मन्ये. The word is often used in the sense of 'a magic influence'; 'something that charms or captivates', e.g., in Māgha 10. 37—कार्मणत्वमगमन् रमणेषु ; in Anargharāghava 3. 16—निर्माय कार्मणमृचामथमर्षणीनामुन्माजनीर्जगदघानि तवाद्य वाचः ; in Dharmaśarmābhyudaya 17. 12 —सा.....श्चक्रारभूवल्लभराजधानी जगन्मनःकार्मणमेकमेव ; in Vikramāṅkadevacarita 8. 2; 9. 69—करहाटपतेः पुत्री त्रिजगच्चित्रकार्मणम् ; लावण्यमाणिक्यरुचिच्छटेयमियं मनःकार्मणचूर्णमुष्टिः. Cf. also कान्तिः काचिन्निखिलनयनाकर्षणे कार्मणज्ञा in a verse quoted in Rasagaṅgādhara (Benares ed., p. 59).

Strictly speaking, कार्मण is what is known as मूलकर्म, a magic rite with roots or herbs to bring some one under the influence of another. Kṣīrasvāmin says मूलैरोषधिभिर्यद्वशीकरणं तत्, कर्मैव कार्मणं, तद्युक्तात् कर्मणोऽण्. Rucipati on Anargharāghava 3. 16 explains it as आभिचारिक. Gopīnātha in his Saṁskāraratnamālā, Vol. I (Ānandāśrama ed., p. 540), while referring to certain popular observances in the bride's chamber in a marriage, quotes a Śāṅkhāyanabhāṣya to the effect that some women practise on the occasion Kārmaṇa or magical rites, which the bridegroom should avoid. These rites were most probably designed to make the bridegroom subservient to his future wife.

कालखण्ड 1. 84, liver (स वृन्तमालोकत खण्डमन्वितं वियोगिहृत्खण्डनि कालखण्डजम्). The word occurs in the following Kāvya texts—Bālarāmāyaṇa 3. 6 —उन्मुक्तरक्तति खण्डितकालखण्डम्; Haravijaya 46. 22 — प्रकटितविस्तृतकालखण्डनाभिः..... मृतविग्रहः स तेषाम्; Māgha 18. 77 —कालखण्डोपदंशं कोष्टा डिम्बं व्यध्वणत्.

कालना 2. 80, driving (हेलिहयालिकालनाम्). From कालयति, drive, found in Sāmavidhāna Brāhmaṇa 3. 3 —गाः प्रकाल्यमानाश्चोपकाल्यमानाश्च सदोपतिष्ठत; Yādavābhyudaya 5. 9—अकालकाल्येन परेण पुंसा; Haravijaya 6. 26—स्वमायया ...कालयति कालमेव तत्.

कासर 16. 18, a buffalo, in कासरासुर=महिषासुर. Cf. Anargharāghava, Act 6- वाजिनिवहवितीर्णकीनाशकासरकर्णज्वरेण प्रजविना रथेन.

किलकिञ्चित 2. 44, an emotional complex usually of a woman; a state of mental agitation in which there is a confused feeling of anger, sorrow, joy, fear and the like in the presence of the beloved (त्वयि वीर विराजते परं दमयन्तीकिलकिञ्चितं किल). किलकिञ्चित is an Alaṁkāra term frequently used in the Kāvyas, e.g., in Maṅkhakha 14. 44—नवपानकेलिकिलकिञ्चिताञ्चिता; in Haravijaya 29. 45; 17. 80—श्रितकिलकिञ्चितामिव प्रभाकरो रमयति नाथ पद्मिनीम्; कान्तानां.....चेतो रामाभिर्मदकिलकिञ्चितेन जहे (Alaka quotes the following definition—"शुष्कं क्षणं प्ररुदितं क्षणमश्रुपातः क्रोधो मुहुर्हसितमाशु पुनश्च गीतम्। व्यामिश्ररूपमिह हर्षरसप्रयुक्तमुक्तं जनैः श्रुतधनैः किलकिञ्चिताख्यम्॥");

in Yaśastilaka (chap. 1)—कामदेवकिलकिञ्चितोचितासु क्रीडासु बद्धानन्देन सुन्दरीजनेन सह रमन्ते कामिनः; in Abhinanda's Rāmacarita 24. 50—किं न प्रपञ्चो लीलायाः किं च्युतं किलिकिञ्चितम्। किं ममाथ वराङ्गीणां वीतौ विच्छित्ति-विभ्रमौ ॥; and in Puruṣottama's Viṣṇubhaktikalpalatā 3. 30—परवधूकिलकिञ्चितचिन्तया मलिनमीश मनः. Yādavābhyudaya 10. 62 speaks of किलकिञ्चित of men—कृतिनस्तादृशं युद्धं किलिकिञ्चित-यन्त्रिताः। लीना इव च पश्यन्तो लिखिता इव चाभवन् ॥ It will be seen that the word is sometimes spelt किलिकिञ्चित. किलकिञ्चित is illustrated in Māgha 7. 37—कृतभयपरितोषसंनिपातं सचकितसस्मित-वक्त्रवारिजश्रीः। मनसिजगुरुतल्पणोपदिष्टं किमपि रसेन रसान्तरं भजन्ती ॥

कुट 17. 211, a tree (बिभीतकं ददर्शैकं कुटं....); 18. 26, a pot, in कुचकुट which is the earlier reading for कुचघट. See Notes.

कुटी 18. 9, in नासिकापुटकुटी, nostril. कुटी means 'a hut'.

कुट्टमित, कुट्टमित 21. 30, it is an Alaṁkāra term signifying the obstructive yet graceful movements of a young woman pretending to be angry at the importunities of a lover.

Here the word means simply 'graceful movements' (गातूर्ध्व-विधुतेरनुबिम्बात् कुट्टमक्षितिषु कुट्टमितानि). It is used in Kuṭṭanīmata (verse 151)—रतिसंगरविहितमतावाकर्षति रभसतः पुरस्तस्मिन्। कुट्टमितमाच-रन्ती जनयिष्यसि किञ्चिदञ्चसंकोचम् ॥; in Bṛhatkathāmañjarī 9. 2. 1281-2 —तं वीक्ष्य पौरललना बभूवुर्मन्मथाकुलाः। मोदायितैः कुट्टमितैर्जृम्भितैः किलकिञ्चितैः ॥; in Haravijaya 3. 22—निधुवनावसरे कमितुर्वधूरहृत कुट्टमितेन भृशं मनः.

कुण्डलना 1. 14, a circle put round a word to indicate that it is cancelled; 2. 95, a circle (परिखावलयच्छलेन या.....कुण्डलनामवापिता). Cf. कुण्डलन 7. 95, twisting round (as the trunk of an elephant).

कुण्डलिका 10. 116, a ring, a wheel (लक्ष्ये धृतं कुण्डलिके सुदत्या ताटङ्कयुग्मं स्मरधन्विने किम्).

कुत्सबेर (n) 10. 13, an ugly body or shape (स्वच्छस्वशैलेक्षितकुत्सबेरः). Nārāyaṇa says कुत्सं कुत्सितं बेरं वपुः. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara say the same thing.

कुनटी 22. 7, (1) red arsenic; (2) a bad dancer.

कुन्द 19. 54, a turner's lathe. See also तर्कु.

कुरुविन्द 11. 48, ruby (कुरुविन्दसकान्तिदन्ति). Īśānadeva remarks that it is one of the four kinds of rubies—माणिक्यानां जातिचतुष्टयम्—'प्रथमजातक', 'द्वितीयजातक', 'सौगन्धिक', 'कुरुविन्द'.

कुहू 4. 57; 7. 59; 8. 37, the Amāvāsyā night. Cf. Padmapurāṇa (Kriyāyogasāra 5. 320)—यथा हार्दी पतिर्नार्याः तथा नारी न हार्दिनी। कुहूरजन्यामप्येषा मृशं कुमुदिनी हसेत्॥

कृकुद 16. 19, he who gives the bride in marriage (कन्यादाता).

कूर 16. 91, 107, boiled rice.

कृष्णलघु 21. 47, dark aloe wood. Nārāyaṇa remarks अगुरुपर्यायो लघुशब्दः। तेन कृष्णागुरुरित्यर्थः.

केदार 7. 35, (1) a field; (2) the deity known as Kedāra, a form of Śiva; also the famous site of pilgrimage known as Kedāratīrtha. The poet says केदारभाजा शिशिरप्रवेशात् पुण्याय मन्ये मृतमुत्पलिन्या. Nārāyaṇa remarks अन्योऽपि केदारदेवसंनिधौ हिमचूर्णनादुत्तमे वंशे जायते. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says यः किल श्रीकेदारं नमस्कृत्य etc. Vidyādhara says केदारभाक् केदारदेवतासेवकः. Narahari says अन्योऽपि केदाराख्यं तीर्थं प्राप्य शिशिरे हिमे प्रवेशान्मृत्वा तत्पुण्येनोत्तमं जन्म लभते. Malli says केदारः क्षेत्रविशेषः पर्वतविशेषश्च. Viśveśvara says the same thing. Nārāyaṇa and Viśveśvara quote Viśvaprakāśa—'केदारः पर्वते शंभोः क्षेत्रभेदालवाल्योः'. Malli and the printed edition of Viśvaprakāśa read 'केदारः पर्वते शंभौ.....' Malli remarks केदारक्षेत्रमरणादुत्तमजन्मलाभ इत्यागमः.

Occasional references to the Kedāra deity are found in the later Kāvya literature. In Hemacandra's Dvyāśraya Kāvya we find Kumārapāla, king of Guzarat, repairing the temples of Kedāra Śiva and Somanātha. The temple of the former is referred to as केदारहर्म्य 20. 90. Comm. says केदारस्य शंभोर्हर्म्यम्. The idol is referred to in 20. 91—खण्डालये देव आस्ते. Vastupāla, also of Guzarat, makes a curious reference to Kedāra in that he compares the buffaloes lying in the sun to an idol of the deity-तन्वाने तरणौ करव्यतिकरोत्पाटं ललाटन्तपे, विष्वक्सेकुचितैर्विनिश्चलतया ग्राव्णेव निर्मापितैः। क्षिप्त्वा नम्रतराग्रमग्रचरणद्वारेण मौलिं निज-च्छायासीत्रि मरुप्रदेशमहिषैः केदारदेवायितम्॥ Naranārāyaṇānanda 8. 55. Cf. also Nāgarāja's Bhāvaśataka (verse 98)—यः केदारपदारविन्दयुगलप्रत्यग्रपूजाविधि-प्राप्ता-शेषपवित्रभव्यविभवैः सार्थीकृतार्थिश्रमः (Kāvyamālā, Part IV).

More famous is the Śiva-liṅga known as Kedāreśvara located in the snowy region of Kedāra, and it is probable that Śrīharṣa has either the deity or the sacred site in his mind, to judge from his reference to 'snow' in the verse in which he speaks of Kedāra—(केदारभाजा शिशिरप्रवेशात् etc.). In this connection we may refer to Śivapurāṇa (Jñānasaṁhitā, chap. 47), which describes the origin of Kedāreśvara on the snowy peak of Kedāra ('तत्र केदारसंज्ञं वै शृङ्गं हिमसमुद्भवम्'; 'केदारे हिमसंज्ञके'; 'स्वयं स्थितस्तदा शंभुः केदारेश्वरसंज्ञकः'). This is the famous peak belonging to the Kedarnath-Badrinath group which feeds the Bhagirathi and Alaknanda headwaters of the Ganges in Kumaon.

कोक 7. 77; 21. 162, a Cakravāka bird (स्तनकोकयुग्मम् 7. 77). Cf

चेतोऽहरत् कुचयुगं मणिहारयष्टिमध्यस्फुरन्मरकतांशुविलङ्घिताग्रम्।
लीलागृहीतनवशेवलबर्हिकच्चग्रकोकयुगविभ्रममबितोर्वाः॥ Haravijaya 23. 12.

कोटि (1) end, extremity, limit, alternative. साप्तुं प्रयच्छति न पक्ष-चतुष्टये तां.....न पञ्चमकोटिमात्रे। श्रद्धां दधे 13. 36. Here कोटि means 'alternative'. Cf. the word भूतकोटि 'the true limit or alternative' used to describe the Ultimate Reality of the Mādhyamikas (Bodhicaryāvatārapañjikā, p. 354). The word कोटि may be taken to mean also 'theory or doctrine' in Naiṣadha 13. 36. The word is taken in this sense by Śaṁkara in his comm. on Gauḍapādakārikā— कोट्यश्चतस्र एतास्तु ग्रहैर्यासां सदावृतः। भगवानाभिरस्पृष्टः..... ..... ॥ Śaṁkara says कोट्यः प्रावादुकशास्त्रनिर्णयान्ताः.

(2) In 21. 88—विधुतकोटिचतुष्क, the word is used in its Buddhist sense, 'a mode of predication'; 'a category of existence'. The four Koṭis are mentioned in the following verse—
न सन्नासन्न सदसन्न चाप्यनुभयात्मकम्। चतुष्कोटिविनिर्मुक्तं तत्त्वं माध्यमिका विदुः॥ quoted in Bodhicaryāvatārapañjikā, p. 359 and Advayavajrasaṁgraha, p. 19.[10] See also Notes 21. 88 and Appendix I, Sections IV (c) and V (b). Cf. Laṅkāvatāra-sūtra— तत्र महामते चतुष्कोटिका यदुत एकत्वान्यत्वोभयनोभयास्तिनास्तिनित्या-नित्यरहितां चतुष्कोटिकामिति वदामि । एतया चतुष्कोटिकया महामते रहिताः सर्वधर्माः (P. 121, Fasc. I, ed. S. C. Das and S. C. Vidyabhushan, 1900).

(3) In 21. 44 —मेचकोत्पलमयी ...वलिस्रगुरसि स्फुरति स्म...श्रीकटाक्ष-विकटायितकोटिः, the word कोटि means 'a series', 'a succession'. Nārāyaṇa says कोटिः परम्परैव । कटाक्षविकटायितं कोटिरिवाशोभत. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, however, explains the word as 'resemblance'— कटाक्षाणां विकटायितं विलसितं तस्य कोटिर्महिमा सादृश्यं यस्याः स्रजः सा तथा. Vidyādhara and Īśānadeva take कोटि as an adj. and explain it as समान 'similar' —कटाक्षप्रतिबिम्बसमाना नीलोत्पलमाला शुशुभे इत्यर्थः.

कोटीर (m) 11. 18, matted hair.

कोषकार 22. 59, a kind of sugarcane black in colour (त्वचारुवाणीरसवेणि-तीरतृणानुकारः खलु कोषकारः). The word occurs in Yaśastilaka (chap. 3) —कोशकारश्यामिकापरिणामप्रणयिनि.....हैमने मरुति, also in Bālarāmāyaṇa, Act 5— अये हेमन्तः । इह हि वहति कामं कामकोदण्डयष्टिं, द्रविडयुवतिगण्डश्यामिकां कोशकारः ।

कौतस्कुत 10. 124, belonging to or coming from all sides (कौतस्कुतलोक-बाधः, a multitude of people coming from every region).

कौशिक 5. 64, Indra.

कौशिक 5. 64, an owl.

क्रोड 19. 45, the planet Saturn (शमनयमुनाक्रोडैः)

क्षुब्ध (m) 11. 61, a churning-stick, in क्षुब्धाचलः.

क्षुरप्रशर 11. 123, an arrow with a razor-like blade at its tip (संग्रामसंगत-विरोधिशिरोधिदण्डखण्डिक्षुरप्रशरसंप्रसरत्प्रतापः). Hemacandra says क्षुरामं लोहं

10. Cf. Āryadeva's Catuḥśatikā (ed. H. P. Sastri), verse 192 and Candrakīrti thereon—"सदसत् सदसच्चेति नोभयं चेति कथ्यते." Candrakīrti says सर्वभावदर्शनमलक्षालनाय सदिति कथितम् । भावाभिनिवेशप्रहाणाय असदिति कथितम् । उभयाकारदर्शनत्यागाय सदसदित्यावेदितम् । सर्वाकारप्रपञ्चोच्छेदाय नोभयमिति प्रकाशितम्.

प्राति क्षुरप्रो धारामुखलोहः Abhidhānacintāmani 3. 444. See also Apte under क्षुरप्र. Rucipati in his comm. on Anargharāghava 4. 47 (क्षुरप्रनखरैः कौशाद्दिदन्तावलम्) refers to another form of the word, viz. खुरप्र—'क्षुर विखण्डने' 'खुर च्छेदने' इति धात्वोर्वर्णदेशनायां साधितत्वात्। 'दशाननक्षिप्तखुरप्रखण्डितः' इत्यत्र, पुरस्तात् 'मृगखुरक्षुरप्रव्यालेखस्थपुटितविभागा वनभुवः' इत्यत्र च प्रयुक्तत्वात्. See also Cāṇḍūpāṇḍita's remarks on 12. 66.

खुरली 21. 5, practice of arms (अस्त्रशस्त्रखुरलीषु). Cf. 12. 100 - अश्वैरस्वैरवेगैः कृतखुरखुरलीमङ्क्षुविक्षुभ्यमानक्ष्मापृष्ठ..... Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says खुराणां खुरली उल्लेखनम्. On 21. 5 he takes खुरली in the sense of 'a gymnasium'. Vidyādhara quotes Pratāpamārtaṇḍa —खुरली श्रमस्थानम् । यदुक्तं प्रतापमार्तण्डे—श्रमस्थानं खुरलिका खुरली च. (Ms. B reads खल्लिका [11] for खुरलिका). The word is used in the sense of 'a gymnasium' in a verse of Pratāparudrayaśobhūṣaṇa, p. 83 — खुरलिविहरत्कार्तिकेय..... The Ratnāpaṇa commentary says खुरलिर्मल्लादिसाधनशाला, while the Ratnaśāṇa comm. adds भाषान्तरे सा मुगरली.

खुरली is used in the sense of 'practice of arms' in Anargharāghava 4. 24—खुरलीकलहे कुमारमप्याक्षिपन्. Rucipati quotes Hārāvali —अभ्यासः खुरली योग्या. Cf. Mahāvīracarita 2. 34— अस्त्रप्रयोगखुरलीकलहे गणानां.....जित एव मया कुमारः. Vīrarāghava remarks 'खुरली लक्ष्यबन्धनम्' इति केशवः. Cf. also कथं खुरलीखेलनप्रसरत्पृषत्कपेक्षीनां त्रिनयनान्तेवासिनां चेतसि विरचितं पदं परस्परस्पर्धया Bālarāmāyaṇa, Act 4; प्रत्यूषयामखुरलीक्षणनर्तितास्त्रौ Amaracandra's Bālabhārata, Ādiparva 11. 52. The form खुरुली occurs in Yaśastilaka 3. 468—शस्त्रप्रपञ्चखुरुली खलु कः करोतु. Abhinanda in his Rāmacarita 17. 50 uses the expression खुरलीखल in the sense of 'a gymnasium' (धारास्त्रयोग्यापिशुनानि रक्षोवीरार्भकाणां खुरलीखलानि). Cf. Vastupāla's Naranārāyaṇānanda 10. 47—कामस्य लीलाखुरलीगृहाभः. खुरली is used in the sense of 'a target' in Bihlaṇa's Karṇasundarī 2. 6—सापि स्वैरं विशिखखुरली कल्पिता मन्मथेन.

11. Bhāskararāya in his commentary on नित्याषोडशिकार्णव 8. 128 (Poona ed.) uses the form खल्लिका.

गरुडाश्मन् 10. 103, emerald (हाराग्रजाग्रद्गरुडाश्मरश्मि). Cf. गारुडशिला 21. 25 (गारुडशिलाजममत्रम्). Cf. also गारुडरत्नशङ्खपाली: Maṅkhaka 7. 22; ग्रैवेयगारुत्मतरत्नमाला ibid. 6. 20; राशिर्मणीनामिव गारुडानाम् Raghu 13. 53.

गर्भरूप 11. 80, young (तं गर्भरूपमपि रूपजितत्रिलोकम्). Malli remarks प्रशस्तो गर्भो गर्भरूपस्तं पूर्ववयसमपीत्यर्थः। प्रशंसायां रूपप्। For another derivation see Notes. Cf. Anargharāghava 1. 15—यद् गर्भरूपमिव मामनुशास्ति सर्वम्. Acc. to the Viśvaprakāśa, the word means 'a boy' as well as 'a youth'. In Mahāvīracarita 4. 32 Sītā and Rāma are referred to as गर्भरूप-रघुजनकगृहेषु गर्भरूपव्यतिकरमङ्गलकृद्वयोऽनुभूताः. Cf. Bālarāmāyaṇa, Act 6— निवेदय वैदेशिकत्वं गर्भरूपाणाम्.

गलन्तिका 16. 84, a water jug. The word is used in the description of the marriage feast. Nārāyaṇa explains it as a gold vessel. The word occurs in Kīrtikaumudī 6. 11, where Kathvate explains it as a vessel filled with water with a hole in the bottom. It was used for watering an idol. The word occurs in this sense in Kāśīkhaṇḍa (Pūrvārdha) 4. 85—देवे देया गलन्तिका; in Padmapurāṇa (Sṛṣṭikhaṇḍa) 34. 269—वायव्यां योगपट्टञ्च ऐशान्याञ्च गलन्तिकाम् (in connection with the worship of Brahmā).

गाङ्गेय 11. 95, (1) n. gold; (2) m. Bhīṣma or Kārtikeya (गाङ्गेयपीतकुचकुम्भयुगाम्).

गुच्छ 7. 76, गुच्छावलि 3. 127 (त्वद्गुच्छावलिमौक्तिकानि), a pearl-string; 'a pearl necklace of 32 (or, according to some, of 70) strings' (Apte).

गृध्रक 21. 130, tame (..... गृध्रकः.....कीरः).

गोत्रशत्रु 14. 62, an epithet of Indra (गोत्रानुकूलत्वभवे विवाहे तत्प्रातिकूल्यादिव गोत्रशत्रुः). The word गोत्रशत्रु or गोत्रभिद् is usually construed as 'the enemy (or cleaver) of गोत्रs or mountains' the reference being to the story that Indra cut off the wings of the mountains. There is another derivation which suits the context better. Indra was really the enemy of his own gotra or family, for he killed a child of his stepmother Diti while still in the womb. Vāmanapurāṇa (chap. 71), while explaining why Indra is called गोत्रभिद्, relates that Diti, the mother of the demons, had in her womb a child destined to kill Indra, who, however, got scent of it and cut the embryo into seven pieces by entering Diti's womb through the nostrils. Vāmanapurāṇa 71. 42 says एवं पुरा स्वानपि सोदरान् स गर्भस्थितान् पातितवान् भयार्तः। बिभेद वज्रेण ततः स गोत्रभित् ख्यातो महर्षे भगवान् महेन्द्रः॥

गोधि (m) 21. 6, forehead (स्वेदबिन्दुकितगोधिः).

गोरोचना 10. 97, a yellow pigment, being "concretions found in the gall bladder of the ox" (Ray—Hindu Chemistry, Vol. 1, 1903, p. 25). Alaka on Haravijaya 19. 2 (गोरोचनारुचिमरीचि विरोचनस्य बिम्बम्) remarks that Gorocanā is found in the horn of an ox. The word is frequently used in Kādambarī (Pūrvabhāga)—गोरोचनातिलकपत्रभङ्ग; गोरोचनाबिन्दुतिलक; गोरोचनाचित्रकण्ठसूत्रग्रन्थिः..... पुत्रकः; गोरोचनालिखितभूर्जपत्रगर्भान् मन्त्रकरण्डकानुवाह; गोरोचनामिश्रगौरसर्षपैश्च सलिलाञ्जलिभिश्चाचारकुशलेनान्तःपुरजरतीजनेन क्रियमाणावतरणकमङ्गलाम्; गोरोचनाचित्रितदशमनुपहतमतिधवलं दुकूलयुगलं वसानां विलासवतीं ददर्श; गोरोचनाछुरितदेहः...सिंहासनमारुरोह.

घन (n) 15. 16, musical instruments like bells and cymbals (तदा निसस्वानतमां घनं घनम्).

घरट्ट (m) 2. 85, a millstone.

घुसंज्ञा 19. 61, the grammatical term घु, a collective name for certain roots like दा, धा etc. 'दाधा घ्वदाप्' Pāṇini 1. 1. 20.

घोरणा 19. 59, snoring (द्विरेफरवघोरणाघनमुपैति निद्रामुदम्).

चक्रिका 21. 156, a kind of confect, same as वर्षोपल q. v. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says चक्रिकाः चक्रकारा गोलकाः। वरसोलका इति प्रसिद्धाः। Vidyādhara says चक्रिकाः वर्षोपलाः। शर्करारचिताश्चक्रिकाः शर्करिकेति वर्षोपल इति च कथ्यन्ते।

चक्षुःप्रसृति 15. 82, see under प्रसृति.

चण्डातक 16. 8, a loose robe worn by women (here, compared to the leaves of a plantain tree). According to Nārāyaṇa, it is a robe worn by dancing girls spreading out in a circular fashion (नृत्तोपयुक्तं पुरः पश्चाच्च प्रलम्बिवर्तुलभागद्वयं कदलीसदृशं वस्त्रं नर्तकीभिरन्तः परिधीयमानं चण्डातकम्). The word is generally used in the sense of a loose robe or skirt. Kṣīrasvāmin says चण्डं भगमतति चण्डातकं, यस्य चलनकोऽपभ्रंशः. Amara says 'अधोरुकं वरस्त्रीणां स्याच्चण्डातकमंशुकम्'. Cf. Yaśastilaka, chap. 3—चण्डातकमार्द्रचर्माणि. The commentator remarks चण्डातकं चण्डभङ्गम्। अतिचण्डातकमधोरुकं वस्त्रं चलनकमिति यावत्. The word is used in a similar connection in Vemabhūpālacarita— शशिहरिणचर्मनिर्मितचण्डातकाम् .....आदिभैरवीम्. In the same work, the peacock's train is likened to a चण्डातक —कलितकलापचण्डातकानि गृहशिखण्डिमण्डलानि. We may note in this connection that there was a special kind of चण्डातक red in colour and studded with coloured dots, called पुलकबन्ध. Cf. Harṣacarita, chap. I— कुसुम्भरागपाटलं पुलकबन्धचित्रं चण्डातकम् (The comm. explains पुलकबन्ध as नानावर्णबिन्दुन्यास and मणिविशेषाः). Cf. also Haravijaya 23. 3— आविष्कृतातिशयनिर्भररागसंपदासादितातिनिबिरीसनितम्बबिम्बः। स्थाने बभार सुरकामवतीजनस्य चण्डातकः पुलकबन्धमनोहरत्वम्॥ (Comm. says पुलकः सितो बिन्दुनिचयः). Harṣacarita (chap. 3) speaks of a चण्डातक which is white like the inner petals of the Ketakī flower. A चण्डातक was thus of various colours, and plain or studded with white or coloured dots. Cf. also दापय क्रीडाद्रिकन्दराशबरमिथुनानामखण्डानि कल्पतरुचीरचण्डातकानि Tilakamañjarī; वीचिक्षोभादुत्थितः फेनपुञ्जो विष्वग्व्याप्तव्यायतश्रोणिबिम्बः। सीमन्तिन्या न्यस्यमानो मुहूर्तं शोभां भेजे पाण्डुचण्डातकस्य॥ Haravijaya 18. 87.

Yādavābhyudaya 4. 49 uses the word in the sense of a sort of petticoat or under-garment. The cowherd maids whose silk robes were taken away by Kṛṣṇa while they were bathing are described as having only their चण्डातक left (स चारुचण्डातकमात्रभाजां क्षौमार्थिनीनां स्वयमर्प्यमाणैः). The word occurs in later Vedic literature. See Monier- Williams.

चतुष्क 15. 19, ornamental designs of various shapes (lotus blossoms, Svastikas etc.) painted on floors, altars and the like (चतुष्कचारुत्विषि वेदिकोदरे). Vidyādhara says चतुष्कैः स्वस्तिकपद्मप्रभृतिभिः.

Jinarāja says चतुष्केन स्वस्तिकमण्डनेन. Nārāyaṇa says चतुष्कसंज्ञेन नानावर्णककल्पितस्वस्तिकसर्वतोभद्रादिमण्डनेन. The word occurs in Tilakamañjarī—प्रत्यग्रविरचितचतुष्कचारुणि मणिवितर्दिकापृष्ठपीठे ; in Candraprabhacarita 7. 92 —प्रविश्य भवनान्तरं क्षणचतुष्कमध्यस्थितः, प्रतीक्ष्य जरतीकृतं कुशलमङ्गलारोपणम् ; in Vatsarāja's Hāsyacūḍāmaṇi— ज्वलद्बहौ गेहे रचयति चतुष्कानि कतमः, p. 132 of Rūpakaṣaṭka; in Sādhanamālā (Vol. 1), p. 130 —चतुष्कोपशोभितचन्द्ररत्नघटितगन्धकुटीतले.

चन्द्रशाला 16. 127, a chamber on the top of a building (निखिलनगरसौधाट्टवलीचन्द्रशालाः). Cf. Haravijaya 21. 1 —सौधोन्नतचन्द्रशालिकातले.... क्लृप्तमहार्घसंस्तरे.

चन्द्रिका 12. 102, (1) moonlight; (2) baldness (विभ्रच्चन्द्रिकया च कं विकचया). With regard to the latter meaning, Malli explains the word as शिरोरोगविशेष, while Nārāyaṇa says विगतकेशया चन्द्रिकया खालित्येन । 'चान्दी' इति कान्यकुब्जभाषायाम्.

चान्द्र 16. 100, (1) pertaining to the moon; (2) belonging to camphor (श्रितचान्द्रसौरभा). चन्द्र is frequently used in Naiṣadha in the sense of 'camphor', e.g., in 1. 51; 6. 39; 11. 5; 18. 5; 22. 88. Cf. 'चन्दनेनेन्दुयुक्तेन दक्षिणार्धं विलेपयेत्' quoted in Kṛtyakalpataru (Vratakāṇḍa), p. 270 (G.O.S.). Comm. explains इन्दु as कर्पूर.

चित्र (n) 15. 62, an ornamental dot on the forehead, a Tilaka (वर्तुलचित्ररूपिणी).

चित्रशिखण्डिनन्दन 9. 73, a name of Bṛhaspati, so called because he is the son of Aṅgiras who belongs to the group of चित्रशिखण्डिन्s, more commonly known as सप्तर्षिs or the constellation Ursa Major. References to the चित्रशिखण्डिन् group are sometimes found in Kāvya poetry, e.g. in Maṅkhaka 16. 25 —अस्तं चित्रशिखण्डिनामपि गते तेजस्यहो संप्रति; in Yaśastilaka (chap. 1) —चित्रशिखण्डिमण्डलीस्तूयमानपुण्याचरणैः ; in Bālarāmāyaṇa 10. 35, 98—एतन्मानिनि मानसं सुरसरः..... । अस्माच्चित्रशिखण्डिभिश्च परमे पर्वण्युपादीयते ..... पयः ॥; इक्ष्वाकूणां कुलगुरुं प्रेष्ठं चित्रशिखण्डिनाम् । अरुन्धतीपतिमृषिं राम एषोऽभिवन्दते ॥; in Haravijaya 3. 64.—जलदकालनिशापगमे..... । क्वचिदवाप्यत चित्रशिखण्डिभिर्न रुचिरा रुचिराकलुषीकृतैः ॥

चिन्तामणिमन्त्र 1. Epilogue; 14. 88, 89 (मन्त्रचिन्तामणि), a Tantric formula (ओम् ह्रीं ओम्), the contemplation of which is believed to vouchsafe poetic genius, learning, beauty, and the fulfilment of all desired objects. See Trans. 14. 89. The mystic composition of the formula is described in 14. 88 (see Notes), and the Mantra, though particularly sacred to Sarasvatī, propounds the mystic nature of the Ardhanārīśvara form of Śiva. The following definition in Tantric language which yields the above formula is cited by Nārāyaṇa—'शिवान्त्यो वह्निसंयुक्तो ब्रह्माद्वितयमन्तरा। तुरीयस्वरशीतांशुरेखातारासमन्वितः॥ एष चिन्तामणिर्नाम मन्त्रः सर्वार्थसाधकः। जगन्मातुः सरस्वत्या रहस्यं परमं मतम्॥' (शिव=ह; वह्नि=रेफ; ब्रह्मन्=प्रणव; तुरीयस्वर=ई; शीतांशु.....तारा=चन्द्रबिन्दु). As stated by Nārāyaṇa, the formula is known also as भुवनेश्वरीमन्त्र (प्रणवद्वयसंपुटितभुवनेश्वरीरूपं चिन्तामण्याख्यम्).

The Cintāmaṇi Mantra mentioned above is to be distinguished from various other Mantras of the same name. There is a Buddhist formula named Cintāmaṇiratna Mantra mentioned in Āryamañjuśrīmūlakalpa (Trivandrum ed., Part II, p. 393). The Sādhana or the ritual text laying down the worship of the white Ekajaṭā form of the Buddhist goddess Tārā describes a formula which is very similar to the Cintāmaṇi Mantra mentioned by Śrīharṣa. The formula is ह्रीं described as एकाक्षरोऽयं मन्त्रराजश्चिन्तामणिकल्पः, and like the Cintāmaṇi formula of our poem, claims to make a man a great poet, scholar and orator (see Sādhanamālā, G. O. S, Vol. 1, p. 269). The definition of the formula may be compared with that of the Cintāmaṇi Mantra quoted above—सप्तमस्य चतुर्थं वह्निसंयुक्तं ईकारभेदितं अर्द्धेन्दुबिन्दुभूषितं इत्थं जपेत्. Ahirbudhnyasaṁhitā 23. 96ff. describes a Cintāmaṇi formula which figures in Pāñcarātra ritual in connection with the Sahasrāramātṛkācakra. Prapañcasāra Tantra (chap. 28) also deals with a Cintāmaṇi Mantra, of which the deity is the Ardhanārīśvara form of Śiva; but it is a वशीकरणमन्त्र and has nothing to do with Sarasvatī and the acquisition of poetic power. Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, a comprehensive Śaiva work, describes in detail the ritual connected with another Cintāmaṇi formula, of which the deity is Mahārudra (Trivandrum ed., Part II, Mantrapāda, p. 179). A Vaiṣṇava formula called the Mantra-cintāmaṇi, sacred to Kṛṣṇa, is explained in Padmapurāṇa (Pātālakhaṇḍa), chap. 50. We may refer also to a Cintāmaṇi hymn quoted by Bhāskararāya in his commentary on Lalitāsahasranāma (verse 87).

चुंकृत 1. 142, the cooing of young birds (सुताः कमाहूय चिराय चुंकृतैः).

छत्रभङ्ग 22. 130, 'the breaking of the (royal) umbrella', loss of dominion.

छुपति 18. 148, touch (छुप्तपत्रविनिमीलितान्). Cf. उद्गतमकरन्दरजः सिताम्बुजं... । उपरिचलधूलिधूसरधवलच्छत्रच्छविं छुपति ॥ Yaśastilaka (chap. 5).

जनंगम 17. 112, a Caṇḍāla (विमुखान् द्रष्टुमप्येनं जनंगम इव द्विजान्). The word occurs in Māgha 15. 35; in Yaśastilaka (chap. 5)—जनंगमावसोद्देशे; in Harṣacarita (chap. 6)—जनंगमानामिव वंशवाद्यमनार्यां श्रियम्, and other texts.

जनाश्रय 10. 37, a pavilion (स्वयंवरस्थानजनाश्रयः).

जन्य, in 11. 15 जन्याः means those who carry the bride (in a palanquin). In 11. 65, 95 जन्यजनः means the same thing. In 16. 48 जन्यजन is used in the sense of those who accompany the bridegroom to the bride's place; the members of the bridegroom's party, or वारयात्रिक, as they are called, in 16. 66. In 15. 72 जन्ययात्रा means 'the marriage procession', 'the procession of the bridegroom's party'. Nārāyaṇa says जन्या वरपक्षीयास्तैः सह (यात्रा). The word is used in Moharājaparājaya, Act 1, वरस्स खलु

भोयणे जन्नजत्ताए पंसु त्ति (वरस्य खलु भोजने जन्ययात्रायां पांशुरिति): also in Mālatīmādhava, Act VI—मङ्गलेभ्यः प्रत्यासन्नस्त्वरयतितरां जन्ययात्राप्रवेशः. Jagaddhara says जन्या वरस्य स्निग्धास्तेषां यात्रायाः प्रवेशो वधूगृहप्राप्तिः, and quotes Medinī—'वरस्निग्धेऽपि जन्यः स्यात्.'

जम्बाल 7. 13, clay (जम्बालजालात् किमिकर्षि जम्बूनद्याः). Cf. मग्नाः कुटुम्बजम्बाले 17. 30.

जलयन्त्र 18. 14, a device for spouting water; an artificial fountain (जलयन्त्रपातुकासारदूरधुततापतन्द्रिकः).

जाङ्गुलिक 12. 96, a snake-charmer (जाङ्गुलिकता यैर्नाम नालम्बिता).

जीवितेश्वरा 9. 74, 'mistress of one's life', a beloved woman.

झर्झर 15. 17, a kind of cymbal.

झलत्कार 20. 17, brilliance (तदपाङ्गचलत्तारझलत्कारवशीकृतः). Nārāyaṇa remarks that it is a vernacular word (देश्यपदम्).

तत (n) 15. 16, a stringed instrument (ननाद तस्मिन्नितरां ततं ततम्).

तर्कु (m) 21. 18, a lathe (चकृस्त्वष्टृतर्कुचलदर्कवितर्कम्). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says तर्कुः काष्ठरचितशाणः संघाटक इति प्रसिद्धः. Vidyādhara says कुरन्द इति प्रसिद्धः. The usual meaning of the word is 'a spindle'. See Monier-Williams.

ताटङ्क 10. 116, an ear-ring (ताटङ्कयुग्मं स्मरधन्विने किम्).

ताण्डविका 22. 71, a dance teacher (पुत्री विधोस्ताण्डविकास्तु सिन्धोः).

तान्त्रिक 17. 64, one who is well-versed in religious doctrine (व्यासस्यैव गिरा तस्मिञ्श्रद्धेत्यदा स्थ तान्त्रिकाः). Nārāyaṇa says तान्त्रिका युक्तिज्ञा वाक्यविचारचतुराः. Cf. एषा च धारणेत्युक्ता योगशास्त्रविशारदैः। तान्त्रिकैर्योगशास्त्रज्ञैर्विद्वद्भिश्च सुशिक्षितैः॥ Yoga-Yājñavalkya 8. 4; तान्त्रिकेषु सुशिक्षितैः ibid., 8. 25 (J.B.R.A.S., Vol. 28).

ताम्बूलपुटी 12. 76, a betel roll. Vidyādhara explains it as ताम्बूलवीटिका. Nārāyaṇa says ताम्बूलपुटीं पूगीफलचूर्णखदिरपर्णानि यत्रैकत्र क्रियन्ते तां यां मध्यदेशे भाषया 'गुलवडा' इति व्यवहरन्ति ताम्.

तार 7. 29, bright, radiant (अक्षिपद्मं.....श्यामल 'तार' तारम्). Cāṇḍū says श्यामला तारा उज्ज्वला तारा कनीनिका यस्य तत्. Malli says तारा स्थूला. Narahari takes तारतार as a single expression and says श्यामलं तथा तारतारं वा उज्ज्वलं वा। 'मुक्ताशुक्तौ च तारः स्यात्'. The word means 'radiant' in the following passages—उन्मिषत्तरल'तार'तारया संध्यया Maṅkhaka 10. 11; नीलतारत्विषो.....दृशः Haravijaya 23. 62; तार-मुक्ताफलौघ ibid., 7. 64; कलधौतहर्म्यैः.....तारमणीष्टकान्तैः ibid., 5. 149; तारमणयः ibid., 5. 111; ताराप्रस्तारतारकिरणोत्कर..... ibid., 4. 2.

तारामृग 22. 80, lit. the starry deer, the lunar mansion known as Mṛgaśīrṣa consisting of three stars (रुद्रेषुविद्रावितमार्तमारात्तारामृगं व्योमनि). The poet speaks of the 'Starry Deer' as being chased by Śiva with his arrows. There are at least two legends which explain the allusion. It is stated in Vāmana-purāṇa (chap. 5) that the Sacrifice of Dakṣa when broken up by Śiva fled to the sky in the guise of a deer, and remained there with his limbs studded with stars. There is another story in Skandapurāṇa (Brahmakhaṇḍa, 40. 6—13 of Setumā-hātmya), according to which Brahmā attempted to commit incest with his daughter Vāk, and when the latter ran away in the form of a hind, Brahmā pursued her in the form of a deer. Śiva saw this and shot the deer-shaped god with his arrows. A light emanating from the wounded body of the deer went up to the sky and became the Mṛgaśīrṣa constellation. Cf. सुरवारणाङ्कुश इव च्युते गलति तारामये मृगे Harṣacarita, chap. 3. The Saṁketa comm. says तारामयो मृगशीर्षलिखितारोऽङ्कुशाकारः. Cf. also तारकमृगोल्लिखितान्तरिक्ष..... Haravijaya 30. 92; ऐक्षिष्ट स त्रिदशकाननसन्नि राजदग्रे कुरङ्गकुलमाकुलितान्तरिक्षम्। .....तारामृगस्य विदधत् परिवारलीलाम् ॥ Ibid., 31. 43.

ताराशङ्ख 19. 57, the Viśākhā star called also Śaṁkha, Conch (ताराशङ्ख-विलोपकस्य.....तीक्ष्णत्विषः). Nārāyaṇa says विशाखानक्षत्ररूपस्य मण्डल-संज्ञस्य शङ्खाकारत्वात् शङ्खस्य. This star is mentioned also in 22. 22—स्मरस्य कम्बुः किमयं चकास्ति दिवि.

तिन्दुक 12. 19, the ebony tree (.....प्रत्यर्थिसेनाभटश्रेणीतिन्दुककाननेषु विल-सल्लस्य प्रतापानलः).

तीर्थिक, a follower of a religion or a sect. In 17. 50 the Cārvāka addresses the adherents of the orthodox faith as तीर्थिक—स्वागमार्थेऽपि मा स्थास्मिस्तीर्थिका विचिकित्सवः. In 17. 103 the orthodox faith is characterised by one of its defenders as the तीर्थिक way, i.e., the traditional path—न श्रद्धापयते मुग्धास्तीर्थिकाध्वनि वः कथम्. Nārāyaṇa says तीर्थिकाध्वनि सेश्वरमार्गे वैदिकाध्वनि वा. Vidyādhara says मीमांसकनैयायिकादिमार्गे. Under 17. 50 Nārāyaṇa derives तीर्थिक thus—तीर्थेन आगमेन चरति ठक्। सदुपाध्यायो वा तीर्थम्, तस्मादस्त्यर्थे ठन्. Pt. Śivadatta points out in a footnote in his edition that ठक् will give the form तैर्थिक, and as a matter of fact, the Text accompanying Ms. C of Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita reads तैर्थिक. The form तैर्थिक is found also in Prabodhacandrodaya (N. S. edition, 1924), Act II, p. 65; Act III, p. 122. In another place (Act II, p. 74) the word occurs in its Prākrit form (एवं खु तित्थिआ आलवन्ति). The Prakāśa commentary explains the word as वैदिक and स्मार्त; and the Tairthīkas are referred to in the play by characters like the Cārvāka and the Kāpālika. Similarly, the Buddhists use the word in the form तीर्थिक to denote the followers of other sects, especially those of the Brāhmanical religion. Cf. Bodhicaryāvatāra, p. 434—सविवादं महायानमिति चेदागमं व्रज। तीर्थिकैः सविवादत्वात् स्वैः परैश्चागमान्तरम्॥ The Pañjikā says तीर्थिकैर्मीमांसकादिभिः ..... न केवलं तीर्थिकैः अपितु स्वयूथ्यैः..... Laṅkāvatārasūtra (ed. S. C. Das and S. C. Vidyabhushan, Fasc. I, 1900) uses the words तीर्थ्य and तीर्थंकर in a similar sense. As pointed out by the editors (Footnote, p. 20), the word तीर्थ्य (as also तीर्थंकर) generally means 'non-Buddhists', who often turn out to be followers of the Brāhmanical schools. Cf. तत् कथमयं भगवन् तीर्थंकरात्मवादतुल्यस्तथागतगर्भवादो न भवति। तीर्थंकरा अपि भगवान् नित्यः कर्ता निर्गुणो विभुरव्यय इति आत्मवादोपदेशं कुर्वन्ति। भगवान् आह न हि महामते तीर्थंकरात्मवादतुल्यो मम तथागतगर्भोपदेशः ibid., p. 80; एवमेव महामते तीर्थ्याः कुदृष्टिविकल्पाशया..... सद्धर्मापवादकाः आत्मानं परांश्च विनिपातयिष्यन्ति ibid., p. 93; विभज्यं स्थापनीयं च तीर्थवादनिवारणम्॥ सचासतो ह्यनुत्पादः सांख्यवैशेषिकैः स्मृतः। ibid., p. 116. The Buddhists thus use the words तीर्थिक, तीर्थ्य and तीर्थंकर to signify the adherents of non-Buddhist, especially Brāhmanical, schools of thought, as distinguished from the members of their own faith, the स्व-यूथ्य, as they are called in the Bodhicaryāvatārapañjikā (see above). The Jainas use the word तीर्थिक in a similar sense, e.g., in Upamitibhavaprapañcā kathā, p. 51—कुदर्शनग्रन्थास्तत्प्रणेतारश्च कुतीर्थिकाः ; in Jinaprabha's Pārśvanāthastava (verse 14) — कुतीर्थतृणभुक् सूते वृषं गौस्तव (Kāvyamālā, Part VII); in Dhanapāla's Ṛṣabhapañcāśikā—लीलया नयन्ति सुखमन्ये यथा तीर्थिकास्तथा न त्वम्। तथापि तव मार्गलग्ना मृगयन्ते बुधाः शिवसुखानि॥ (Sanskrit paraphrase); in Hemacandra's Mahāvīrastotra (verses 4 and 20)— परतीर्थनाथैः (Kāvyamālā, Part VII).

Generally speaking, the word is used by non-Brāhmanical writers to denote the followers of the Brāhmanical religion. In our poem it is put into the mouth of a Cārvāka, and if a protagonist of the orthodox faith also uses it, he does so while replying to the Cārvāka.

The word तीर्थ in तीर्थिक means शास्त्र. तीर्थ has this meaning in the expression तीर्थंकर. Cf. Śaṁkaradigvijaya of Vidyāraṇya 7. 9; 15. 11; 16. 101, where Śaṁkara is called तीर्थंकर and the word explained as शास्त्रकर in the comm. of Dhanapati. Cf. also Vācaspati on Yogabhāṣya (Samādhipāda, Sūtra 25)— ननु सन्ति बहवस्तीर्थकरा बुद्धार्हतकपिलर्षिप्रभृतयः.

तुरी 1. 12, an implement of weaving; the beam of a loom round which the cloth as it is woven wraps itself (तद्वटचतुरीतुरी). Cf. Āryāsaptaśatī (verse 443)—आश्लिष्य कर्णं तरुणैस्तुरीव वसनैर्विमुक्तासि. The word is frequently used in the philosophical literature as an illustration, e.g., in Nyāyavārtika 4. 1. 21—यच्च निमित्तं तदितरयोः समवायिकारणासमवायिकारणयोरनुग्राहकम्, यथा तुर्यादि तन्तूनां तत्संयोगानां चेति ; in Śaṁkarabhāṣya 2. 3. 7 —नच निमित्तकारणानामपि तुरीवेमादीनां समानजातीयत्वनियमोऽस्ति.

तुल्, in तुलयन् 2. 92, to lift up, weigh, compare, etc.; here, weigh. Nārāyaṇa remarks 'तुल उन्मितौ' इति ण्यन्ताच्छता संज्ञापूर्वकविधित्वाद्घुत्वगुणाभावः. He makes a similar remark on तुलना in 2. 20. तुलयति is commonly used, though तोलयति is the regular form. Māgha writes तुलयित्वा in the sense of 'weighing' in 10. 38.

Cf. Naiṣadha 10. 127—तुलिता करेण. Similar instances are given in Monier-Williams. In Naiṣadha 7. 79 (इमौ तौ तुलयेत् कुचौ चेत्) the root means 'to resemble, wish to resemble, rival'. Similarly, it means 'to resemble' in Māgha 6. 4—तुलयति स्म विलोचनतारकाः.....।.....मलिनिमालिनि माधवयोषिताम् ॥ The p. p. तुलित in the sense of 'lifted up', 'overpowered', 'vanquished', 'set at nought' etc. is used in Māgha 5. 31; 8. 12; 15. 30; 15. 61. It may, however, be noted that the form अतोलयत् is used in Naiṣadha 12. 80 (नृपः कराभ्यामुदतोलयत्...नृपान्) in the sense of 'raising'.

तृणेढि 9. 152, from तृह् 'to destroy' (तृणेढि ज्वलनः.....द्रुमकाण्डमण्डलम्).

तृतीया (प्रकृतिः) 17. 70, a eunuch (उभयी प्रकृतिः कामे सज्जेदिति सुनेर्मनः। अपवर्गे तृतीयेति भणतः पाणिनेरपि ॥). The Kāmasūtra 2. 9 divides eunuchs into male and female —द्विविधा तृतीयाप्रकृतिः स्त्रीरूपिणी पुरुषरूपिणी च etc. Cf. Vararuci's Ubhayābhisarikā (printed in Caturbhāṇī)—अहो राजमार्गस्य कलिः सुकुमारिका नाम तृतीयाप्रकृतिरित एवाभिवर्तते। अहो अमङ्गलदर्शनैषा। The eunuch is here described in two elaborate verses. The eunuchs played quite an important part in the sexual life of former times. Haradatta on Gautamasūtra 2. 6. 15 makes a distinction between क्लीब and तृतीयाप्रकृति—क्लीबो मोघवीर्यो न तृतीयाप्रकृतिः. Alaka in his comm. on Haravijaya 27. 79 remarks—नपुंसकं तृतीयाप्रकृतिः। तस्य स्त्रीस्पर्शेन सुखाबाप्तिः।

तेमन 16. 49, 76, 87, a curry (मृगमांससाधितं.....मृदु तेमनं 16. 76).

त्रिदण्ड (n) 17. 39, in अग्निहोत्रं त्रयीतन्त्रं त्रिदण्डं भस्मपुण्ड्रकम्, the three bamboo sticks tied into one carried by a religious mendicant. Cf. "त्रीन् दण्डानङ्गुलिस्थूलान् वैणवान् मूर्धसंमितान्।.....एतावतैव विधिना भिक्षुः स्यादापदि द्विजः॥" Baudhāyana quoted by Mādhavācārya on Parāśara (chap. 2). The word is variously explained by the commentators. C. P. says त्रिदण्डं यतीनामाश्रमः i.e., the mode of life of a Yati or a religious mendicant. Vidyādhara and Īśānadeva take it to mean भागवतदर्शन. A marginal note in the Ms. of Īśānadeva says –नारदपञ्चरात्रोक्तविधानं वैष्णवं मतम्. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita, Vidyādhara and Īśānadeva contrast त्रिदण्ड with भस्मपुण्ड्क which they explain as शैवदर्शन. Īśānadeva says भस्मतिलकं शैवं दर्शनम् ; C. P. says शैवपाशुपतादिव्रतम्. Nārāyaṇa, on the other hand, explains त्रिदण्ड as पाशुपतव्रत and भस्मपुण्ड्क as शैवादिव्रत. It is noteworthy that Īśānadeva, himself a Śaiva ascetic, does not take त्रिदण्ड to mean a Śaiva vow, but calls it 'Bhāgavata or Vaiṣṇava doctrine'. In this connection we may refer to an interesting statement by Oppert in his Introduction to Vaijayantī that there is a stone pillar in the Vijayarāghavasvāmin temple at Tiruputkuli on which are engraved the figures of two hermits, Yādavaprakāśa holding in his hand the Ekadaṇḍa or single rod as an emblem of the Advaita Sanyāsin, and Rāmānuja carrying the Tridaṇḍa or three rods as an indication of his being a Viśiṣṭādvaita (or Vaiṣṇava) Sanyāsin. We may refer also to an important passage in Prabodhacandrodaya, Act II, which runs thus — एते त्रिदण्डव्यपदेशजीविनो द्वैताद्वैतमार्गपरिभ्रष्टा एव. Both the Candrikā and Prakāśa commentaries here explain त्रिदण्डिन्s as the followers of the Bhedābheda system of Vedānta propounded by Bhaṭṭabhāskara. The followers of Bhāskara, like those of Rāmānuja, were, in fact, Tridaṇḍins. Vardhamāna in his comm. on Nyāyakusumāñjali (chap. 2) says भास्करत्रिदण्डिमतभाष्यकारः (Chowkhamba ed., p. 67), and Bhāskara himself praises Tridaṇḍa in his Bhāṣya on Vedāntasūtras 3. 4. 26—स्मृतौ च मननादौ त्रिदण्डयज्ञोपवीतादिनियमादुत्तमाश्रमः स्वरूपतो धर्मतश्च निर्ज्ञात इति नातिप्रसङ्गः.

The word त्रिदण्ड is used in its original sense of "three sticks tied into one" in Jātakamālā (Harvard ed., p. 144)— समादाय त्रिदण्डकुण्डिकाद्यां परिव्राजकभाण्डिकां प्रक्रमणसव्यापारः समभवत्; also in Sūtasaṁhitā (Jñānayogakhaṇḍa), chap. VI, which describes the life of religious mendicants, e.g., कुटीचकश्च संन्यस्य... शिखी यज्ञोपवीती स्यात् त्रिदण्डी सकमण्डलुः; बहूदकश्च संन्यस्य ..... गोबालरज्जुसंबद्धं त्रिदण्डं शिक्यमद्भुतम् (धारयेत्); परहंसस्त्रिदण्डं च रज्जुं गोबालनिर्मितम्. Cf. Kṣemendra's Daśāvatāracarita—त्रिदण्डिकालंकृतपाणिपद्मः (वामनः), Vāmanāvatāra, verse 191.

According to certain texts, the Kuṭīcaka and Bahūdaka mendicants carry Tridaṇḍa; the Haṁsas and Paramahaṁsas carry only one stick. Cf. "त्रिदण्डं कुण्डिकां चैव सूत्रं चाथ कपालिकाम्...सर्वं भिक्षुः परित्यजेत् ॥..... कुर्यात् परमहंसस्तु दण्डमेकं तथैव च ॥"; "तत्र परमहंसा नाम त्रिदण्डकमण्डलुं.....यज्ञोपवीतकपालानां त्यागिनो न तेषां धर्माधर्मौ" Viṣṇu and Kāṇvāyana quoted by Amalānanda in Vedāntakalpataru (3. 4. 20). See also quotation on हंसवृत्ति and परमहंसवृत्ति from Skandapurāṇa in Mādhavācārya's comm. on Parāśara (chap. 2). Mādhavācārya, however, remarks that according to some, all the four classes of religious mendicants should carry Tridaṇḍa -हारीतदत्तात्रेयपितामहाः कुटीचकादीन् चतुरोऽपि उपन्यस्य सर्वेषां त्रिदण्डमेव विदधते. The following passage from the Mahābhārata is cited by Mādhava and Amalānanda—एकदण्डी त्रिदण्डी वा शिखी मुण्डित एव वा। कषायमात्रसारोऽपि यतिः पूज्यो युधिष्ठिर ॥

The Jaina writer Siddharṣi in his Upamitibhavaprapañcā kathā (p. 547) classes the Tridaṇḍin mendicants among heretics (शाक्याश्चैदण्डिकाः शैवाः गौतमाश्चरकास्तथा), and goes on to say—त्रिदण्डकुण्डिकामुण्डवल्कचीवरभेदतः। वेषः परस्परं भिन्नः स्फुट एवोपलक्ष्यते। (p. 548).

The three sticks are supposed to represent the control of mind, speech and the senses. Cf. Manu 12. 10, 11 –वाग्दण्डोऽथ मनोदण्डः कायदण्डस्तथैव च। यस्यैते निहिता बुद्धौ त्रिदण्डीति स उच्यते ॥ त्रिदण्डमेतन्निक्षिप्य सर्वभूतेषु मानवः etc. Kullūka remarks न तु दण्डत्रयधारणमात्रेणेत्याभ्यन्तरदण्डत्रयप्रशंसा. Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa 41. 22 gives the दण्डs as वाग्दण्ड, कर्मदण्ड and मनोदण्ड. The identical verse is found in Skandapurāṇa (Māheśvarakhaṇḍa) 55. 135, 6 of Kumārikākhaṇḍa.

त्रेता 17. 146. (1) the Age of that name; (2) the three sacrificial fires (गार्हपत्य, आहवनीय and दक्षिण).

त्रैयक्ष 21. 133, relating to त्र्यक्ष or Śiva (त्रैयक्षवीक्षणक्षिलीकृतनिर्जरत्व..... मकरध्वज.....). In the verse in question Nala is described as superior to Cupid who was burnt by the third 'eye of Śiva' (त्रैयक्षवीक्षण), and in this connection Vidyādhara gives another explanation, viz., 'looking with three eyes' or becoming angry. He says शंभुविलोकनेनैव यो दाघः स्मरस्तस्य संशयं संदेहं त्वयि विषये कोऽपि न करोतीत्यर्थः। त्वं तावत् त्रिभिरक्षिभिर्दुष्टत्वेन कमपि न विलोकयसे। तेन तव निर्जरत्वमतिप्रसिद्धमायुश्च वर्तत इत्यभिप्रायः· 'To look at some one with three eyes' is a popular expression meaning 'to become angry'. It is used by Śrīharṣa himself in 4. 76—स्मर निरैष्यत कस्यचनापि न त्वयि किमक्षिगते नयनैस्त्रिभिः· See Trans. and Notes. Īśānadeva remarks under 4. 76— दुष्टं दृष्ट्वा कश्चिदुक्ति अहो एनं दृष्ट्वा अहं त्रिनेत्रो जात इति. Nārāyaṇa adds लौकिकी चोक्तिरियम्.

दण्ड, (1) a stick; (2) one of the attendants of the sun. आदाय दण्डं सकलासु दिक्षु योऽयं परिभ्राम्यति भानुभिक्षुः 22. 12; दण्डव्राजिनि भानुशाणवलये 21. 149.

दध 9. 14, 'what holds or bears' (धा + श). (अथास्यरागस्य दधा पदे पदे).

दम्भोलि (m) 12. 19; 20. 71, thunderbolt.

दरिद्राण 19. 4, decaying (दरिद्राणप्राणस्तमीदयितः) From the root दरिद्रा. Mādhavīyadhātuvṛtti says दरिद्राणः ल्युट्.

दर्पक 9. 19; 10. 44, Cupid.

दलोदर (n) 16. 98. The word is variously explained. Some take it to mean 'a hollow dish made of leaves'. Acc. to Jinarāja, it is a kind of sweetmeat. See Notes.

दशमिता 19. 1, extreme old age; decline (निशि दशमितामालिङ्गन्त्याम्). दशमिन् means 'very old'. Cf. also दशमी. Aparārka on Yājñavalkya 1. 116, 117 remarks वर्षशतस्योत्तमो दशमो भागो दशमी।.....वृद्धो दशमीस्थः, 'चक्रिणो दशमीस्थस्य' इति (स्मृतिः)। वयसोऽन्तिमावस्था दशमी. Cf. Manu 2. 137—शूद्रोऽपि दशमीं गतः. The form दशमिता occurs in Puruṣottama's Viṣṇubhaktikalpalatā 3. 8—भवति धर्मविधौ न पटीयसी दशमिताशमिता तनुरङ्गिनाम्. The expression दशमीस्थ is used in the sense of 'dead' in Yaśastilaka (chap. 4)—दशमीस्थस्य भवत कथं मया सोढव्या भविष्यन्ति विताचित्रभानोः.....शिखालेखाः (Vol. II, p. 159). Kullūka on Manu 2. 137 says शतवर्षाणां दशधा विभागे दशम्यवस्था नवत्यधिका भवति. The expression अदशमीस्थ occurs in Harṣacarita (chap. 1)—कालेनादशमीस्थ एवास्तमगात्. The Saṁketa comm. says अपूर्णायुरित्यर्थः·

दाक्षीपुत्र 19. 61, a name of Pāṇini (दाक्षीपुत्रस्य तन्त्रे).

दिनोंकार 20. 2, dawn (दिन + ओंकार. The Sandhi is regulated by 'ओमाङोश्च'). ओंकार means here 'beginning', 'prelude', and is used in a similar sense in Harṣacarita—ओंकारमिव क्रौर्यस्य...कृपाणम् ; प्रथमाव्यक्तजल्पितेन सख्यस्य शनैरोंकारमिव कुर्वाणे ; in Anyoktimuktālatā (verse 2)—ओंकारं कुरु कैरवाकर निजोन्मेषेषु योग्यः क्षणः (Kāvyamālā, Part II, p. 61); and in Jahlaṇa's Mugdhopadeśa (verse 62)—ॐकारः साहसानाम् (ibid., Part VIII).

दिवाकीर्ति 19. 55, a barber (दिनमिव दिवाकीर्तिस्तीक्ष्णैः क्षुरैः सवितुः करैः). The word is used in this sense in Yaśastilaka (chap. 3)—कलिङ्गेष्वनङ्गो नाम नृपतिर्दिवाकीर्तिसेनाधिपत्येन सामन्तसंतानं संतापयन् संभूय प्रकुपिताभ्यः प्रकृतिभ्यः.....वधमवाप. The word occurs in another place in the same chapter—दिवाकीर्तेर्नप्ता स्वस्रीयो बलाहकस्य संवाहकस्य, where the comm. explains it as meaning 'a barber' or 'a Caṇḍāla'. The word is used in the latter sense in Manu 5. 85. Kṣīrasvāmin and Hemacandra derive the word thus in the sense of 'a barber'—दिवा कीर्त्यते दिवाकीर्तिः, रात्रौ क्षुरकर्मनिषेधात्.

दिष्ट (m. n.) 2. 17, 11. 129, time. Malli quotes Viśvakoṣa 'दिष्टं भाग्ये च काले च.' Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita differs. See his gloss on 11. 129.

दुःखाकृत 22. 138, hurt, oppressed. The suffix is डाच् by 'दुःखात् प्रातिलोम्ये' (स्वर्भानुना.....दुःखाकृतैनमवधूय सुधा सुधांशुम्).—Cf. Māgha 2. 11. दुःखाकरोति माम्.

दुण्डुभक 21. 43, a long wreath (मल्लिकाकुसुमदुण्डुभकेन). The word is variously spelt in the Mss. as दुन्दुभक, दुन्दुभिक etc. The word primarily means a kind of harmless snake (राजिल). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara explain it as रचितमालाविशेषः. Īśānadeva remarks दुण्डुभिकेन मालाद्वयत्रयस्यैकत्र गुम्फेन रचिते। टोडर इति लोके। सूचीस्यूतकुसुमैर्गुम्फितं दण्डुभिकम्। Nārāyaṇa remarks दुण्डुभस्य विफणतया साम्यात् स्थूलघनतरे पुष्पदाम्नि दुण्डुभपदं लाक्षणिकम्। दुण्डुभप्रतिकृतिर्दुण्डुभकः 'इवे प्रतिकृतौ' इति कन्। 'दुडि निमज्जने' दुण्डतीति दुण्डुभ इत्यौणादिकः पृषोदरादिर्वा.

दुर्विध 2. 23, poor, destitute (रुचिगर्वदुर्विधम्).

दूतयति 9. 22, send some one as a messenger (अधिक्षि तं दूतयतां).

देवमणि 1. 58, a particular curl of hair on the neck of a horse (निगालगाद्देवमणेरिवोत्थितैः). The word is found in Vāsavadattā—रत्नाकरा इव सदेवमणयः.....तुरंगमाः; in Yaśastilaka (chap. 2)—देवमणिनिःश्रेणिश्रीवृक्षरोचमानादिनामभिरावर्तैः. Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa (Part II) says आवर्तस्तु निगालस्थो ज्ञेयो देवमणिः शुभः 11. 19.

दैग्दाह 12. 92, from दिग्दाह, 'a conflagration of the regions of the sky' regarded as an evil omen (दैग्दाहैरिव भस्मभिर्मघवता वृष्टैः). The phenomenon is referred to in Kumāra 15. 96—धूमं ज्वलन्त्यो व्यसृजन् मुखै रजो दवुर्दिशः; and in Māgha 15. 21—काचित् कीर्णा रजोभिर्दिवमनुविदधे..., काश्चिदन्तर्दिश इव दधिरे दाहम्. Matsyapurāṇa (233. 8) mentions दिग्दाह among the abnormal phenomena which forebode ill to the state. The phenomenon in question is a lurid, red colour spreading in the regions of the sky; and Bṛhatsaṁhitā explains that when it is yellow, it indicates peril for the king, and brings disaster to a country when it has the glow of fire (दाहो दिशां राजभयाय पीतो देशस्य नाशाय हुताशवर्णः 31. 1). The word दिग्दाह occurs in Bṛhatkathāmañjarī 9. 2. 3—पङ्कावगाहसंनद्धमहिषक्रोडकुञ्जरे। लोके प्रत्यग्रदिग्दाहधूमैरिव समावृते॥; in Harṣacarita (chap. 6)—दिने दिने दारुणा दिशां दाहा दृश्यन्ते। दिग्दाहभस्मकणनिकर इव निपतति नभस्तलात् तारागणः; in Maṅkhaka 19. 59 —दूरं दिग्दाहसाहायकवदथ नभो दग्धदिग्दाहमासीत्; in Kādambarī (Pūrvabhāga)—आसन्नरिपुविनाशपिशुनेन दिग्दाहेनेव पाटलीक्रियमाणमम्बरतलम्; also in Yogavāśiṣṭha Rāmāyaṇa (Sthitiprakaraṇa) 28. 12—उज्ज्वाललोचनविषज्वलनातपौघदिग्दाहदर्शितयुगान्तदिनेशसेना.

दौरुधरी 15. 42, from दुरुधरा, a conjunction of the planets Jupiter and Venus with the moon regarded as highly auspicious for births. The word is variously spelt. See Notes. The word occurs in Māgha 13. 22—दधतेव योगमुभयग्रहान्तरस्थितिकारितं दुरुधराख्यमिन्दुना. The verse रविरर्जं द्वादशगैः..... quoted by Vidyādhara (see Notes) is quoted also by Malli in his comm. on Māgha and attributed to Kalyāṇavarman. It is found also in Śrīnāthabhaṭṭa's Koṣṭhīpradīpa (edited in Bengali character by Pt. Rādhāvallabha), and gives a wider definition, according to which when there are two planets, excepting the sun, in the twelfth and the second place respectively from the moon, the Yoga is called Durudharā. In the Naiṣadha verse in question Damayantī's face with the two ear-rings is fancied as the moon attended by two planets (अवादि भैमी परिधाप्य कुण्डले वयस्ययाभ्यामभितः समन्वयः। त्वदाननेन्दोः प्रियकामजन्मनि श्रयत्ययं दौरुधरीं धुरं ध्रुवम् ॥). Harṣa-carita (chap. 3) compares the ear-rings to Venus and Jupiter, but omits the reference to the moon—स्फटिककुण्डलाभ्यां शुक्रबृहस्पतिभ्यामिव.....अनुबध्यमानं.....भैरवाचार्यं ददर्श.

दौहदिक 6. 61, a gardener. From दोहद, a fertiliser. Cf. 21. 153—रोहति दोहदेन पयसां पिण्डेन चेत् पुण्ड्रकः. In 1. 82 (दाडिमे दोहदधूपिनि द्रुमे) दोहदधूपित् means 'fertilised with smoke'. See also Nārāyaṇa under 17. 220. Nārāyaṇa derives दौहदिक thus—वृक्षादि-दोहदे नियुक्तो दौहदिकः 'तत्र नियुक्तः' इति ठक्. In the sentence दौह-दिकोपनीता...मधूकमाला 6. 61 he construes the word also as दौहदिका धात्री, but this meaning is not appropriate. Malli alone reads दोहलिकोपनीता and explains दोहलिका as 'nurse', but his reading is corrupt and not supported by the other commentaries. Nara-hari explains दौहदिक as मालाकार. Ms. C of the commentary of Cāṇḍūpāṇḍita has दोहदिकया वाटिकापालिकया, but this is against the reading of A which reads दौहदिक.

द्वादशात्मन् 10. 52, the sun. The twelve forms of the Sun are men-tioned in the following verse cited by Nārāyaṇa— विधातृमित्रार्य-मणो वरुणेन्द्रभगांशवः। पूषा विवस्वान् पर्जन्यस्त्वष्टा विष्णुर्दिनेश्वराः॥ In द्वादशा-त्मसितदीधितिस्थितिः 18. 115, the 'sun' means also the Iḍā artery and the 'moon' the Piṅgalā. See Nārāyaṇa.

द्विचन्द्रधी-मति, the illusion of seeing two moons due to an eye disease called Timira; also produced by pressing the eye cor-ners. अस्ति द्विचन्द्रमतिरस्ति जनस्य तत्र, भ्रान्तौ दृगन्तचिपिटीकरणादिरादिः 13. 42; जितस्तदास्येन कलानिधिर्दधे द्विचन्द्रधीसाक्षिकमायकायताम् 15. 51. The ex-pression is frequently used in philosophical literature as an illustration of illusion, e.g., in Śrībhāṣya 1. 1. 1—द्विचन्द्रज्ञानादौ तु

बाधकसन्निधावपि मिथ्याज्ञानहेतोः परमार्थतिमिरादिदोषस्य ज्ञानबाध्यत्वाभावेन अविनष्टत्वात् मिथ्याज्ञाननिवृत्तिरविरुद्धा। प्रबलप्रमाणबाधितत्वेन भयादिकार्यं तु निवर्तते ; in Śāṁkarabhāṣya 2. 1. 27—न ह्यविद्याकल्पितेन रूपभेदेन सावयवं वस्तु संपद्यते। नहि तिमिरोपहतनयनेनानेक इव चन्द्रमा दृश्यमानोऽनेक एव भवति। Paramārthasāra (verse 22) says तिमिरिकचन्द्रयुगवद् भ्रान्तं निखिलं जगद्रूपम्. The Yogācāra Buddhist who regards knowledge as the sole reality says that to see a difference between knowledge and its object is to see two moons in one—सहोपलम्भनियमादभेदो नीलतद्धियोः। भेदश्च भ्रान्तिविज्ञानैर्दृश्येतेन्दाविवाद्वये॥ (quoted in Bhāmatī). The idea is found also in other texts, e.g., Yogabhāṣya (Samādhipāda)—तत्र प्रमाणेन बाधनमप्रमाणस्य दृष्टं तद्यथा द्विचन्द्रदर्शनं सद्विषयेणैकचन्द्रदर्शनेन बाध्यत इति ; Yogavāśiṣṭha (Sthitiprakaraṇa) 35. 36—गन्धर्वनगराकारा मृगतृष्णा इवोत्थिता। द्विचन्द्रविभ्रमाभासा द्वैतैकत्वविवर्जिता॥ (ref. to māyā); असत्त्वैव विकल्पोक्तिः सत्त्वभावो विकल्पते। तमोऽपहृतदृष्टित्वाद् द्विचन्द्रज्ञानदोषवत्॥ ibid., 40. 33; द्विचन्द्रविभ्रमप्रख्या मनोरथवदुत्थिताः। मिथ्याज्ञानघनाः सर्वे जगत्त्वाकारराशयः॥ ibid., 45. 18, असत्त्वामेति संसारः स्वव्यवस्थां विचारतः। दीपालोकादिवान्धस्य द्वीन्दुत्वं स्वेक्षितादिव॥ ibid., 54. 40 and other passages. Vivaraṇaprameyasaṁgraha (V. S. S., p. 37) refers to द्विचन्द्रज्ञान as being produced by pressing the eye with a finger—तादृशं चेच्छानुवर्तित्वमविद्याया अपि दृष्टं नेत्रस्याङ्गुल्यवष्टम्भेन द्विचन्द्रभ्रमोत्पत्तेः. The expression is extremely rare in Kāvya literature. Cf. Kṣemendra's Kavikaṇṭhābharaṇa (chap. 5)—तर्कपरिचयो यथा मम पद्यकादम्बर्याम्.....मोहोत्प्रेक्षितशुक्तिकारजतवत् प्रायेण यूनां भ्रमं, दत्ते तैमिरिकद्विचन्द्रसदृशं खे नूनमाशाकृषिः॥ Kādambarī (Pūrvabhāga) refers to the Timira disease as the cause of seeing a black spot bigger than it actually is—तिमिरोपहतेव यूनां दृष्टिरल्पमपि कालुष्यं महत् पश्यति.

In Greek literature the idea of seeing double is found to imply frenzy or madness. In the Bacchae of Euripides, Pentheus, inspired by Dionysus with frenzy, exclaims that he sees two suns, and a double Thebes and a double citadel (kai mēn horan moi duo men hēlious dokō, etc.). Cf. 'the vision of two moons seen by a drunken person'—Bernard Shaw's Preface to Saint Joan.

द्विफालबद्ध 1. 16, in द्विफालबद्धाधिकुराः 'hair parted in two.' The expression is rare, but found in Padmapurāṇa (Pātālakhaṇḍa 52. 37)—द्विफालबद्धचिकुरैः. Cf. Assamese फाल, side; section. The expression द्विफालबद्ध would be दुफाले बन्धा in Assamese.

धाय्या 2. 56, a verse of the Ṛgveda used in kindling the sacrificial fire, same as सामिधेनी (मदनानलबोधने भवेत् खग धाय्या).

धारय 9. 3, one that owes something, a debtor, in उत्तरधारय (न मद्यमत्रोत्तरधारयस्य किं हियेऽपि सेयं भवतोऽधमर्णता). Nārāyaṇa says धारयतीति धारयः 'अनुपसर्गाद्विम्पविन्दधारि—' इति शः। उत्तरस्य धारयः इति समासः. Under the above Sūtra, Tattvabodhinī refers to Śrīharṣa's use of the form धारय.

धारा 1. 72, the pace of a horse (धारामवधीर्य मण्डलीक्रियाश्रियामण्डि तुरंगमैः स्थली).

धूपग्रह 15. 29, a censer (धूपग्रहधूमकोमला).

धूलिहस्तयति (intrans.) 1. 81, smear the hands with dust (धनुर्मुखस्विन्नकरोऽपि .....परागैस्तव धूलिहस्तयन्).

धोरणि 15. 49, a continuous series (अवधिबुद्धिधोरणिः). Nārāyaṇa and Jinarāja remark that it is a vernacular word. Jinarāja mentions धोरणी as a variant and derives it from 'धोर्ङ् गतिचातुर्ये' (धोरति). He quotes Hemacandra 'धोरणी श्रेणी'. The word frequently occurs in Kāvya literature, e.g. in Maṅkhaka 14. 2; 12. 50—मधुपायिधोरणी, दीधितिधोरणीभिः; in Bālarāmāyaṇa Act 9 (Prākṛta passage)—सरधोरणी, जलधाराधोरणीहिं; in Haravijaya 3. 44—पयोधरधोरणी; in Rasamañjarī चिकुरधोरणी, कुन्तलधोरणी; and in other works of a later age.

नग्नाचार्य 19. 41, a bard; a minstrel; a panegyrist. Hemacandra says नग्नः स्तुतिव्रतः. Cf. Tilakamañjarī—नग्नाचार्य एकः समुच्चार्य जयशब्दम् इमं श्लोकमपठत्। आकर्ण्य चैनमब्रवीत समरकेतुः 'कुमार, साध्वनेन मङ्गलपाठकेन पठता किं इश्यते किंच वर्ण्यते.' Cf. also Kuṭṭanīmata, verse 897—तारमधुरस्फुटार्थं नग्नाचार्यः पपाठ नेपथ्ये. The derivation of the word is not clear. Hemacandra, relying on the literal meaning of the word, describes नग्न as an ill-clad person wearing only a small piece of loin-cloth. But it is extremely doubtful whether shabby persons wearing rags were employed by kings to awaken them in the morning in melodious strains.[12] The word नग्नाचार्य is a term of respect, and these bards, in our poem, allow themselves considerable liberty of speech (see Naiṣadha 19. 21, 24). Kuṭṭanīmata (verse 550) seems to imply that a नग्नाचार्य is a well-to-do person— ज्वालाकरालहुतभुजि नग्नाचार्यः पपात नरसिंहः । तस्मिन्नेव शरीरं निजमजुहोच्छोकपीडिता दासी ॥ It is, however, probable that these Nagna bards were sometimes Jaina mendicants. The word नग्न means also a Jaina mendicant, and it is remarkable that there is another word गोरङ्गु which also means both 'a bard' and 'a Jaina mendicant'. Viśvaprakāśa, for instance, says 'गोरङ्गुः पक्षिजातौ च भवेन्नग्नकवन्दिनोः', 'क्षपणवन्दिनोः । नग्नकः'. Medinī and Anekārthasaṁgraha say the same thing, while Keśavasvāmin gives only नग्न and वन्दिन् as the meanings of गोरङ्गु. Trikāṇḍaśeṣa says खगे नग्ने च गोरङ्गुः. The double meaning of the two words नग्न (or नग्नाचार्य) and गोरङ्गु seems to suggest that Jaina mendicants sometimes served as bards or panegyrists.

नभस् (m) 9. 84, the month of Śrāvaṇa.

नभस्य (m) 9. 84, the month of Bhādra.

नागदन्त 18. 15, a peg in the wall; here a perch (सारिकाध्युषितनागदन्तिका). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita explains the word as घोडलक.

नार्पयति 5. 89, (1) न + अर्पयति; (2) surrender to the king (e.g. property). 'नार्पयति तानि मृतोऽपि'. Nārāyaṇa says नृपसंबन्धीनि राजायत्तानि नार्पाणि करोति नार्पयति.

नालीक (m) 2. 28, an arrow; acc. to Nārāyaṇa, a thin arrow shot through a tube (नलिका)—'नलिके न तदुच्यनासिके त्वयि नालीकविमुक्तिकामयोः'. See 21. 151, where also नलिका and नालीक are used. Vidyādhara explains नालीक as नलिकाबाण.

नासत्ययुग 17. 146, (1) न + असत्ययुग i.e. सत्ययुग; (2) the two Aśvins. The latter meaning occurs also in 10. 45 —नासत्यतां (i.e. आश्विनेयत्वम्) नात्र बिभर्ति कश्चित. Cf. 10. 44—नासत्ययुतौ.

निक्षेपवणिक् 3. 43, a merchant with whom goods are left in deposit (तत्राभिनवस्मराज्ञाविश्वासनिक्षेपवणिक्). Nārāyaṇa says निक्षेपवणिक् स्थाप-

12. Māgha (18. 16) describes Nagna bards as singing the exploits of heroes on the battlefield.

निको वणिक्. In Smṛti निक्षेप, as opposed to उपनिधि q. v., is an open deposit entrusted to some one personally (समर्थं तु समर्पणं निक्षेपः Mitākṣarā 2. 67).

निगाल (m) 1. 58, the neck of a horse. See under देवमणि.

निमिच्छति, निर्मिच्छति, 7. 43, perform Nīrājana or the ceremonial waving of lights round an object of worship or an idol; also round a person or horses and elephants as an auspicious act (कुरुते तमेव निमिच्छय देवः सफलं स जन्म). For the various forms of this word see Notes 7. 43. The word नीराजन-ना is also used in Naiṣadha, e.g., 11. 77 (त्वन्नेत्रयोरहह तत्र विपाशि जाता, नीराजनाय नवनीरजराजिः); 1. 10 (रराज नीराजनया स राजधः); 1. 144 (चक्रनिभ-चङ्क्रमणच्छलेन नीराजनां जनयतां निजबान्धवानाम्), and 2. 26 (भ्रमयत्युचितं विदर्भजाननीराजनवर्धमानकम्). The word occurs in Devīpurāṇa 59. 26-नीराजनं प्रकर्तव्यं नृनागतुरगादिषु। कार्तिक्यां कारयेत् पूजां यागं देवीप्रियं सदा॥; in Catuḥṣaṣṭyupacāramānasapūjāstotra (Kāvyamālā, Part 9) रत्नालंकृतहेमपात्रनिहितैर्गोसर्पिषा दीपितैः .....रत्नप्रदीपैः सदा, मातस्त्वामहमाद-रादनुदिनं नीराजयाम्युच्चकैः॥ in Yaśastilaka 3. 477—नीराजनार्जनविधौ विधिवत् प्रयुक्ता दीपावली सकलमङ्गलहेतुभूता। नक्षत्रपंक्तिरिव मेरुमहीधरस्य पर्यन्तवृत्तिरुदयाय तवेयमस्तु॥; in Bālarāmāyaṇa 9. 52—वेल्लद्विद्युल्लताली-च्चुरितपरिकरैरम्बुदैर्वान्तवार्भिः; .....तारकाणामुत्तालैश्चक्रवालैरिव च विरचिता वक्त्रनीराजनश्रीः॥; in Yādavābhyudaya 5. 38; 8. 11— महीभृतः संभृततीर्थतोयैरम्भोधरैराचरिताभिषेकाः। प्रयुक्तविद्युद्बलयैः पुनस्तैः प्रायेण नीराजनमन्वभूवन्॥; आघूर्ण्यमानैरभितो नभस्वान् कान्तैः प्रदीपैरिव कर्णिकारैः। वनश्रियो माधवसंगमार्हं मङ्गल्यनीराजनमाचचार॥; in Prabodhacandrodaya 2. 8—अस्पृष्टचरणा ह्यस्य चूडामणिमरीचिभिः। नीराजयन्ति भूपालाः पादपीठान्त-भूतलम्॥, and diverse other texts.

The Nīrājana ceremony was originally military in character, being performed by kings on the eve of an expedition usually in the autumn. The object was the purification of the army and the elephants and the horses that formed part of it. Harivaṁśa says while describing the autumn—नीराजयित्वा सैन्यानि प्रयान्ति विजिगीषवः। अन्योन्यराष्ट्राभिमुखाः पार्थिवाः पृथिवीक्षितः॥ Viṣṇuparva 16. 33. A similar reference is found in Pad-mapurāṇa (Pātālakhaṇḍa), which describes how Kāntimatī performed Nīrājana in honour of her husband Puṣkala on the eve of his departure on a warlike mission (नीराजयामास मुहुस्तत्र कान्तिमती सती। नीराजयित्वा बहुशः किरन्ती मौक्तिकैर्मुहुः। गलदश्रुजला चैव परिरेभे पतिं निजम्॥ 5. 102-3). The word has a similar significance in Naiṣadha 1. 10—जयाय सृष्ट्या रराज नीराजनया स राजघः, though the verse admits of another construction. Cf. Jātakamālā (Harvard ed.), p. 215—कृतास्त्रशस्त्रपुरुषमनेकसमरनीराजितं महन्महौघभीमं बलम्; and Māgha 17. 16, on which Malli remarks नीराजनात् स्याद्विजय इत्यागमः.

The military character of the ceremony finds prominence in Bṛhatsaṁhitā (chap. 44), which prescribes the Nīrājana of horses, elephants and men in the month of Āśvina or Kārtika, and lays stress on the rites connected with the horses in particular. The priest pierces the earthen figure of the foeman with a spear, and the king sets out on his expedition.[13] The Nīrājana ceremony was essentially a Śānti or a rite to counteract evil influences. Bṛhatsaṁhitā says— कुर्याच्चनीराजनसंज्ञितां शान्तिम्. Gradually it lost its military character, but continued as a propitiatory rite. Rucipati in his comm. on Anargharāghava 2. 10 says नीराजना शान्तिकर्म। तेजोव्छन इति प्रसिद्धम्. The circular waving of lights was a special feature of the Nīrājana ritual, and that before idols is also known as आरात्रिक, popularly called आरति. In Kāvya poetry the word is often used in the sense of 'illumination'; 'adoration as with waving lights'.

In Naiṣadha 2. 26 (quoted above), the expression नीराजनवर्धमानक means 'a vessel revolved round the face of a person to ward off the evil eye'. See Notes 2. 26.

Kṣīrasvāmin gives the following derivation of the word: नीरस्य शान्त्युदकस्याजनं क्षेपोऽत्र नीराजनं, मन्त्रोक्त्या वाहनायुधादेर्निःशेषेण राजनं वात्र. The latter construction is the more probable. The word is derived from निः+राज्. Māgha uses the form निरराजयत् 17. 16.

13. Kṣīrasvāmin on Amara 2. 8. 95 says that Nīrājana is followed by a rite called Lohābhisāra to be performed before the starting of the expedition.

निर्व्यथन 7. 68, (1) (adj.) without any pain; (2) (n) a hole.

निष्कुलाकरोति 22. 15, peel off (तच्चिष्कुलाकृत्य रविं त्वगेषा संध्योज्झिता पाकिमदाडिमं वा). The verse 22. 15 is regarded by Nārāyaṇa as an interpolation.

निस्तुष 15. 8, faultless, pure (शशंस मौहूर्तिकसंसदंशकम्.....उदयास्तनिस्तुषम्). Nārāyaṇa remarks—तुषो दोषलेशः. Cf. कवेः पुष्यति निस्तुषत्वम् Maṅkhaka 2. 7.

निःसूत्र 7. 69, helpless (निःसूत्रमास्ते घनपङ्कमृत्सु).

नीराजन-ना, see under निमिच्छति.

नीराजित 11. 96, illumined, made radiant (तां मत्स्यलाञ्छनदराञ्छितचापभासा नीराजितभ्रुवम्). Cf. अग्रे नीराजित इव नवावातधैर्योऽर्यमाऽसम—ज्वालाजालैरयमुदयते चक्रवर्ती ग्रहाणाम् Maṅkhaka 16. 9; प्रत्यग्रज्वलितैः पतङ्गमणिभि र्नीराजिता भानवः, सावित्राः कुरुविन्दकन्दलरुचः प्राचीमलंकुर्वते Anargharāghava 2. 10.

नीवृत् 2. 40, a region, a country (सरसीः परिशीलयितुं मया गमिकर्मीकृतनैकनीवृता).

नैष्ठिकब्रह्मचारिन् 17. 116, a religious student who never marries and lives all his life in the house of a guru (.....कथमुद्वक्ष्यसे तु सः। सृष्टवान् परमेष्ठी यं नैष्ठिकब्रह्मचारिणम्). Cf. Yājñavalkya 1. 49—नैष्ठिको ब्रह्मचारी च वसेदाचार्यसंनिधौ। तदभावेऽस्य तनये पत्न्यां वैश्वानरेऽपि वा॥ Aparārka remarks निष्ठा शरीरपातः, तदवधिके ब्रह्मचर्ये संकल्पः कृतो येन स नैष्ठिकब्रह्मचारी। स पुनराचार्यस्य संनिधौ वसेन्न समावर्तेत.

पक्कण (m) 22. 5, the house of a low-caste Śabara (अस्ताद्रिचूडालयपक्कणालि...). Cf. दुराचारचिक्कणस्य पक्कणपतेः Yaśastilaka, chap. 5.

पञ्च 22. 19, wide (पञ्चास्यवत् पञ्चशरस्य नाम्नि प्रपञ्चवाची खलु पञ्चशब्दः).

पटच्छिदा 15. 14, a shred of cloth (पटच्छिदाकालिकपुष्पजाः स्रजः).

पतद्ग्रह 16. 27, a spitoon (तमेकमाणिक्यमयं महोन्नतं पतद्ग्रहं). The word occurs in Haravijaya 32. 10—पतद्ग्रहशताकुलान् निशान्तान्; in Padmapurāṇa (Pātālakhaṇḍa 41. 127—दधाना दक्षिणे हस्ते सा वै रत्नपतद्ग्रहम्.) The form पतद्ग्राह occurs in Śaṁkaradigvijaya 15. 173—कपालिकपतद्ग्राहग्रहव्यापृताः.

पतिंवरा 9. 81, a woman who chooses her husband herself.

पत्र, (1) a leaf; (2) a challenge, in पत्रं ददाति, to challenge to a controversy, same as पत्रालम्बनं करोति. Strictly speaking, पत्र is a written declaration delivered to a rival asserting one's own superiority over him; hence 'to give a 'पत्र' means 'challenge'. Vidyādhara remarks in his gloss on 7. 93–आत्मनः पूजाख्यार्थं गुणोत्कर्षप्रतिपादको लेखो यद्विपक्षोपरि दीयते तत् पत्रम्. The word occurs more than once in the Naiṣadha, and both meanings 'leaf' and 'challenge' are employed, e.g. in 7. 93—स्वस्यैव येनोपरि सा ददाना पत्राणि (Nārāyaṇa remarks पत्राणि पत्रालम्बनानि ददती सती। अन्योऽपि वादी प्रतिवादिनि पत्रालम्बनं कुरुते। See also Notes); in 10. 82—पत्रं क्व दातुम् (where दातुम् means also खण्डयितुम्. See Notes). In 14. 66—मघेर्ददोपरि पत्रमन्यः, the expression means 'to challenge', hence 'to surpass'. Nārāyaṇa remarks अन्यः कृष्णगुणस्तु मघेरुपरि पत्रं ददत् मघेः सकाशादहं काल इति पत्रालम्बनं कुर्वन्..... । अतिदयाम इत्यर्थः· The expression is extremely rare in the earlier poets. It is used in Bṛhatkathāmañjarī 9. 1. 664—विधेरपूर्वनिर्माणचित्रपत्रावलम्बनम् (सरः); in Moharājaparājaya 3. 57—.....स्थापितमेतदत्र नगरं.....पालिध्वजव्याजाज्जैत्रमदत्त पत्रममराधिपैर्यदुचैस्तराम्; and in Abhayadeva's Jayantavijaya 1. 52—कस्तूरिकास्थासकवर्णभाजां व्याजेन जैनेन्द्रगृहध्वजानाम्। या दत्तपत्रेव...पुरीणामुपरि स्वकृद्भ्या॥ Cf. also Tilakamañjarī—दत्तपत्रं कुवलयततेरायतं चक्षुरस्याः.

The following verses contain actual Patras or challenges delivered by scholars in writing to rival Paṇḍitas— प्राक्प्रत्यक्पृथिवीभृतोः परिषदि प्रख्यातसंख्यावता,—महायाऽद्भुततर्ककर्कशतया विच्छिद्य विद्यामदम्। ये केऽप्युत्कलभूपते तव सभासंभाविताः पण्डिताः, "पत्रं" श्रीजयदेवपण्डितकविस्तन्मूर्ध्नि विन्यस्यति॥ quoted in Keśavamiśra's Alaṁkāraśekhara. Cf. also Prabhāvakacarita (Mahendrasūri Prabandha)—स राजमन्दिरद्वारि पत्रालम्बं प्रदत्तवान्। काव्यान्यमूनि चालेखीत्तत्र मानाद्रिमूर्धगः॥ तद्यथा—शंभुगंडमहामहीप्रकटके धारानगर्यां द्विजो, विष्णुर्भट्टिअमण्डले पशुपतिः श्रीकन्यकुब्जे जितः। येनान्येऽपि जडीकृताः कतिपये जन्यानिले वादिनः, सोऽयं द्वारि समागतः क्षितिपते धर्मः स्वयं तिष्ठति॥ यःकोऽपि पण्डितंमन्यः पृथिव्यां दर्शनेष्वपि। तर्कलक्षणसाहित्योपनिषत्सु वदत्वसौ॥ अथ श्रीभोजभूपालपुरः संगत्य पर्षदम्। तृणाय मन्यमानोऽसौ साहंकारां गिरं जगौ॥...क्षितिप तव समक्षं बाहुरुर्ध्वीकृतो मे, वदतु वदतु वादी वियते यस्य शक्तिः। मयि वदति वितण्डावादजल्पप्रवीणे, जलधिवलयमध्ये नास्ति कश्चिद्विपश्चित्॥ etc. It will be seen that Patras or Patrālambas were often delivered at royal courts where disputations of rival Paṇḍitas usually took place.

पद्म (क) 22. 9, (1) a lotus; (2) red dots on the face or trunk of an elephant.

पयायते 14. 76, act like milk (मदीक्षामयकामधेनोः पयायतामभ्युदयस्त्वदीयः).

पराक 17. 193, in पराकिणाम्, a religious vow involving a fast of twelve days. Cf. महापराकिणः 17. 93.

परिप्लुति 4. 76, overabundance (त्रिनयनत्वपरिप्लुतिशङ्कया).

परिवाद 21. 127, (1) scandal; (2) an instrument with which a lyre is played (परिवादमेत्य लोकेऽधुनापि विदिता परिवादिनीति). The seven-stringed परिवादिनी lyre is mentioned also in Māgha 6. 9 and Naiṣadha 15. 44.

परिशुद्धपार्ष्णि 7. 101 (2), (1) one that has refined heels; (2) secure or free from attack in the rear. See also पार्ष्णिविग्रह.

परीष्टि 16. 112, service; attendance; caresses (वारसुन्दरीपरीष्टिभिस्तुष्टिमुपेयुषां निशि).

पर्पट 22. 149, a rice cake stuffed with sesamum (तिलतिलकितपर्पटाभमिन्दुम्). Nārāyaṇa gives तिलसंकुली as an equivalent. Cf. पर्पटौदनपूजायां जलहोमेन सिद्धिदा Devīpurāṇa, chap. 50.

पल्लव 10. 83, (1) story, narrative (सपल्लवं...यत् पाणियुग्मं वर्तते पुराणम्); (2) a leaf. In the latter case, the word may very well mean 'red lac paint'. Jinarāja says पाणियुग्ममपि सह पल्लवेन अलक्तकरागेण वर्तते. This meaning is mentioned by Nārāyaṇa also.

पवि (m) 17. 188, thunder.

पवित्र 17. 188, (1) a pair of Kuśa blades used at sacrifices for purifying and sprinkling clarified butter (पवित्रालोकनादेव पवित्रासमविन्दत). Nārāyaṇa quotes Kātyāyana—अगर्भौ साग्रौ दर्भौ पवित्रम्. (2) The word may here mean also 'a cloth for straining Soma juice'. It is used in this sense in Vedic texts, e.g. Taittirīya-saṁhitā 1. 8. 21—वायुः पूतः पवित्रेण प्रत्यङ् सोमो अतिद्रुतः. Sāyaṇa quotes Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 1. 8. 5—पवित्रेण पुनाति। पवित्रेण हि सोमं पुनन्ति, and remarks दशापवित्रेण सोमस्य शोधनं प्रसिद्धम्.

पश्य (adj.) 6. 39, what sees or looks on (पश्याः पुरन्ध्रीः). Also ददर्श पश्यामिव पुरम् 16. 122.

पात्र 16. 11, a volume or current of water (सुरस्रवन्त्या इव पात्रमागतम्). Cf. रसधुनीपात्रे 15. 86.

पान्थदुर्गा 14. 37, in आलक्ष्य नीत्वाकृत पान्थदुर्गां भूपालदिक्पालकुलाध्वमध्यम्. Sarasvatī takes Damayantī to the middle of the passage before the suitors seated in the Svayaṁvara hall and 'makes her a पान्थदुर्गा', i.e., makes her stand before the suitors. (1) Nārāyaṇa explains the word as meaning 'a deity of the road' (मार्गदेवता), being a stone idol of Durgā worshipped by travellers (पान्थदुर्गां पथिकसिन्दूरादिपूजितशिलामयकल्पितमार्गदेवताम्कृत). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita's explanation is similar— पान्थानां दुर्गां. He remarks दुर्गादेवी मार्गमध्ये पतति. Vidyādhara also explains पान्थदुर्गां as पथिकदुर्गां and remarks—पान्थदुर्गां हि मार्गमध्ये क्रियते. पान्थदुर्गा, lit. travellers' Durgā, thus means an idol of Durgā installed on the roadside and worshipped by travellers. A very similar reference is found in Harṣacarita (chap. 2) which speaks of an image of Kātyāyanī or Durgā, engraved on a tree at the entrance of a forest, and saluted by wayfarers (पथिकजननमस्क्रियमाणप्रवेशपादपोत्कीर्णकात्यायनीप्रतियातनं.....चण्डिकाकाननम्). पान्थदुर्गा was thus a मार्गदेवता as explained by Nārāyaṇa, and in this connection we may refer to Hemacandra's Dvyāśraya Kāvya 7. 34, which describes a certain king as worshipping the deities of the road during his march against a rival—उपतस्थे चाध्वदेवताः. Abhayatilaka in his comm. remarks अध्वदेवता देवकुलादिस्था मार्गाधिष्ठातृदेवता निरुपद्रवाय उपतस्थे.

References to a Wayside Goddess are met with in Greek literature. Pausanias says in his Description of Greece III. 14. 9 that the Greeks of Colophon sacrifice a black female puppy to the Wayside Goddess (Enodios). More interesting is the reference to Athena as Keleutheia ('Lady of the Road' or 'Goddess of Paths') in Pausanias III. 12. 4, her sanctuary being located at Sparta. Ulysses is said to have set up the image of Athena and named her Goddess of Paths, after he had vanquished the wooers of Penelope in the race. He founded three sanctuaries of the Goddess of Paths at some distance from each other. See Pausanias (Loeb), Vol. 2, p. 72 and Frazer's Trans., Vol. 1, p. 151.

(2) Nārāyaṇa gives another explanation of पान्थदुर्गा. He explains it as a travelling image of Durgā, and refers to the idol of Durgā carried on a platform in the streets on festive occasions. This custom is, in fact, still followed in Bengal and Assam on the Vijayādaśamī day of the great Durgāpūjā festival. See Trans. We may refer also to the description of the Rathayātrā of the Devī in Devīpurāṇa (chap. 31), which speaks of the idol of Durgā as being taken round in procession in a richly decorated chariot. A similar procession is described in Skandapurāṇa (Prabhāsakhaṇḍa) in connection with the worship of the Yogeśvarī form of Durgā (chap. 83 of Prabhāsakṣetramāhātmya). It is, however, doubtful if पान्थदुर्गा has anything to do with such customs, and the first explanation of the word seems to be the right one.

पारमिता, in दानपारमिता, perfection in charity (दानपारमितयैव वदान्यान् 5. 11). Nārāyaṇa suggests the following derivation of पारमिता-युवादेराकृतिगणत्वाङ्गीकारेण भावेऽणि पारमः, तस्मादत इनौ 'यस्येति च' इति तद्धितनिमित्तेऽङ्लोपे पारमीति सिध्यति. दानपारमिता is a Buddhist term. It is one of the cardinal virtues or Pāramitās of the Buddhists. Cf. Bodhicaryāvatārapañjikā, p. 347—इयं कौशिक प्रज्ञापारमिता बोधिसत्त्वानां महासत्त्वानां दानपारमितामभिभवति शीलपारमितामभिभवति क्षान्तिपारमितामभिभवति ध्यानपारमितामभिभवति. The Kathāsarit-sāgara (Taraṅga 72) illustrates six Pāramitās (दान, शील, क्षमा, धैर्य, ध्यान and प्रज्ञा) by means of suitable stories. Cf. एवं चारुह्य नौतुल्यां तरन्त्येव भवाम्बुधिम्। वत्स बुद्धोक्तदानादिषट्कपारमितां बुधाः॥ ibid., 72. 362. The Pāramitās are illustrated in a similar fashion in Kṣemendra's Bṛhatkathāmañjarī (9. 1. 496 ff.). Cf. also Mattavilāsaprahasana (T. S. S.)— कपाली—नूनमेवं बुद्धेनापि दानपारमिता पूरिता.

पुण्ड्रक (m) 21. 153, a kind of sugar-cane.

पुण्याहविधि 15. 13, in आसिस्वददयन्मधुपर्कमर्पितं.....पास्यन् मधु भीमजाधरे मिषेण पुण्याहविधिं तदाकृत. पुण्याह or शान्तिपुण्याह is a ceremonial

rite performed on an occasion like a marriage or birth to remove the influence of unfavourable planets from the auspicious day. Cf. Haradatta on Gautamadharmasūtra 2. 2. 17 (शान्तिपुण्याह.....) शान्तिसंयुक्तं दैवोत्पातचिन्तकसूचितापचयनिवृत्त्यर्थं यत् क्रियते ग्रहशान्त्यादि पुण्याहसंयुक्तं दिनदोषनाशाय विवाहादौ यत् क्रियते. In our poem the occasion is Damayanti's marriage. Cf. Anargharāghava 2. 33—नीराक्षसां वसुमतीमपि कर्तुमद्य पुण्याहमङ्गलमिदं धनुरादधातु. Rucipati remarks जन्मदिनसुखरात्रिकवृत्सवदिनं तत्र मंगलं यत् क्रियते तत् पुण्याहमंगलपदेनोच्यते. Cf. also Brahmapurāṇa 72. 15—पुण्याहवाचनं कृत्वा तन्तवेंऽमनि नारद। वेदिकायामुपाविष्टौ दम्पती सुरसत्तमौ॥

पुर (m) 21. 37, the aromatic resin commonly known as Guggulu burnt as incense before idols (ततपुरः पुरमतोऽयमधाक्षीद्धूपरूपम्).

पुष्पसिन्दूरिका, a kind of flower-dyed red cloth worn by the married couple on the fourth day of the marriage (पुष्पसिन्दूरिकापर्वणि 22. 10). Nārāyaṇa remarks विवाहस्य चतुर्थे दिने प्रथमदिनपरिहितानि वस्त्राणि प्रक्षालनार्थं परित्यज्य पुष्पसिन्दूरिकाख्यपर्वणि कौसुम्भादिरक्तवस्त्राणि वधूवरेण परिधीयन्त इति वृद्धाचारः. See also Notes. It will be seen that the festive occasion of wearing this cloth was called पुष्पसिन्दूरिकापर्व. The word is extremely rare, but the custom of wearing red clothing in marriage is sometimes referred to. We find in Abhayadeva's Jayantavijaya that a red cloth is presented to the bridegroom on his arrival at the bride's place. ताः कुसुम्भरसरञ्जितवस्त्रं कण्ठकन्दलतले विनिवेश्य। सौधमध्यमनयन्मृगनेत्राः.....॥ 13. 82. Red clothing (रक्तवासः) is brought for the purpose of a marriage in Rājaśekhara's Viddhaśālabhañjikā (Act 4), ed. Jīvānanda, p. 134. Cf. Jānakīharaṇa 5. 51—ततस्तासूक्खलोहिताम्बरः श्रियं जयस्थामुपयन्तुमुद्यतः; Nāgānanda, Act 4: कञ्चुकिन् त्वया दशरात्रं यावन्मलयवत्या जामातुश्च रक्तवासांसि नेतव्यानि.

पूत्कार्य 20. 145 (पूत्कार्यपीडनौ चक्रे स सखीषु प्रियास्तनौ). Nārāyaṇa explains the word as महाकलकलकथनीय. पूत्कृ means 'to cry aloud.' त्रायध्वं त्रायध्वमिति महता शब्देन पूत्कृतवती Upamitibhavaprapañcā kathā, p. 374; तया च दूरत एव विहितः पूत्कारः। यदुत त्रायध्वं भो नाथास्त्रायध्वम् ibid., p. 483; न च सन्मार्गवक्त्रारः पूत्कुर्वन्तोऽध्यनेकधा ibid., p. 543; कस्यायमाक्रन्दमुखरो ध्वनिः, अथ भवतु यस्य कस्याप्येष पूत्कारः Udayasundarīkathā, p. 75 (G. O. S.); पूत्कारकरणो ध्वनिः ibid.; इयमपि शफरी समुत्पतन्ती ...ध्रुवमपहृतविभ्रमा भवत्या नयनयुगेन नताङ्गि पूत्करोति॥ Candraprabhacarita 9. 38.

पृषती 2. 23, in पृषतीमस्पृशतीं तदीक्षणे, a collyrium stick (अञ्जनशलाका). The word is explained also as 'a doe.' See Notes.

पोप्लूयते (intrans.) 22. 27, move or spread in all directions; overflow (पोप्लूयते.....पूर इवान्धकारः). Nārāyaṇa says 'प्लुङ् सर्पणे' इत्यस्माद्भृशार्थे यङ् द्विर्वचनम्. Cf. Vāmanapurāṇa 20. 46— पृष्ठस्थितायां महिषासुरोऽपि पोप्लूयते वीर्यमदान्मृडान्याम्. The same work (62. 46) uses the irregular form पोप्लूयति—भावेन पोप्लूयति बालवत् स, भुजौ प्रसार्यैव ननर्त वेगात्.

पौरुष 1. 57, in जवेऽपि मानेऽपि च पौरुषाधिकम्. पौरुष is the size of a man with his arms and hands uplifted.

प्रघाण(m) 19. 11, a terrace in front of a building (मघवप्रासादस्य प्रघाणम्).

प्रचारण 1. 4, teaching (अधीतिबोधाचरणप्रचारणैः).

प्रज्ञाचक्षुष् 12. 106, blind (प्रज्ञाचक्षुरवेक्ष्यमाणतिमिरप्रख्याः किलाकीर्तयः). Used in this sense in Bhāgavata 1. 13. 29— प्रज्ञाचक्षुर्वोधितो ह्याजमीढः ; in Dvisandhānakāvya 13. 16, where applied to Rāvaṇa or Jarāsandha, it means शास्त्रज्ञानेक्षणः, and applied to the Kalpataru, means बाह्यचक्षुरहितः. Cf. Manodūta (verse 115)— अरे मन्द प्रज्ञानयनसुत किं ते व्यवसितम् (addressed to Duryodhana). Here, प्रज्ञानयन refers to Dhṛtarāṣṭra (Kāvyamālā, Part XIII).

प्रतिच्छायिका 6. 45, a reflection.

प्रतिपत्ति 21. 63, giving (दानवारिरसिकाय विभूतेर्वर्हिमं तेऽस्मि सुतरां प्रतिपत्तिम्).

प्रतिव(ब)न्दी 9. 17, a retort (प्रतिवन्द्यनुत्तरः). The messenger (Nala) had said that he could not tell his name as it was against the custom prevailing among the great to do so. Damayantī replied with a प्रतिवन्दी that she, too, could not talk with him as it was against the custom prevalent among women of birth. See Notes. Nārāyaṇa uses the word प्रतिबन्दी in his gloss on 20. 124— प्रतिबन्द्या.....प्रतिरोधकारिण्याम्. Jinarāja remarks in his gloss on 5. 112—युष्माकं यदीदमुचितं तर्हि ममापीति प्रतिबन्दिः. The word is variously spelt and not probably used anywhere else in Kāvya literature. It occurs in the following introductory verse of Śeṣānantācārya's comm. on Śaśadhara's Nyāyasiddhāntadīpa (Pandit, Vol. XXV, 1903)—दृष्ट्वा कौस्तुभदिव्यदर्पणमुरः सामूयमुत्क्षिप्तया, दृष्ट्वा कामपि पूर्वपक्षरचनामालक्ष्य लक्ष्म्या हरेः। जीयासुः प्रतिवन्दिमुत्तरयितुं मुक्ता विवाहोत्सवे, तस्याः स्वप्रतिबिम्बचुम्बिनि कुचद्वन्द्वे कटाक्षच्छटाः॥ The word is sometimes found in later philosophical treatises, e.g., in Veṅkaṭanātha's Nyāyapariśuddhi— प्रतिबन्दिव्यवहितास्वविशेषसमादय इति भिदा (Chowkhamba ed., p. 234).

प्रतिबन्दूता 9. 37, opposition, refutation.

प्रतिमुहुः 20. 161, emphatic for मुहुः. Nārāyaṇa says मुहुरित्यर्थे प्रतेर्मुहुः-शब्देन 'सह सुपा' इति समासः। मुहुर्मुहुरित्यर्थः.

प्रतिश्रुति 5. 135, (1) a promise; (2) the sacrificial formula अस्तु श्रौषट् spoken by the Āgnīdhra priest in reply to the Adhvaryu priest who addresses him by saying ओ श्रावय. प्रतिश्रुति is usually called प्रत्याश्रुत in sacrificial language. Cf. Satyāṣāḍhaśrautasūtra 2. 1— अस्तु श्रौषडित्याग्नीध्रः प्रत्याश्रावयति. The commentator Mahādeva remarks प्रतिमोदनं श्रावयतीत्यर्थः। कथं श्रौषडनुमतिरस्तु इति. Sāyaṇa in his comm. on Taittirīyasaṁhitā (Ānandāśrama ed.) 1. 6. 11 says— हे आग्नीध्र यज्यमाणदेवतां प्रति तुभ्यमिदं दीयत इत्याभिमुख्येन श्रावयेत्यध्वर्युणोक्ते सति स आग्नीध्रोऽस्तु इत्यङ्गीकृत्य श्रौषडिति शब्देन श्रावयति। हे देवा युष्मद्विषयमिदं हविर्दानं शृणुतेत्यर्थः. See also Notes (Extracts).

प्रतिसीरा 14. 31, a curtain (त्रपोर्मिप्रतिसीरया).

प्रतोली 6. 58, Nārāyaṇa takes the word in its usual sense of 'a street', but this meaning is hardly applicable here. Damayantī's Sabhā is described as being located on a bejewelled platform of the प्रतोली of the royal palace (विलोक्यामास सभां स भैम्यास्तस्य प्रतोलीमणिवेदिकायाम्). Here प्रतोली means 'antechamber', 'entrance', 'corridor.' Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says प्रतोली प्रवेशमार्गः. Narahari says द्वारवीथी. The word seems to be used in the above sense in Udayasundarikathā (गृहप्रतोलीद्वारेण निर्गच्छन्) and in Abhinanda's Rāmacarita 17. 9— तृणोद्गमाभैर्गरुडोपलानां प्रतोलिकावेश्मसु रश्मिजालैः. The word is used in a similar sense in Syāmilaka's Pādatāḍitaka (in चतुर्भाणी)—.....वलभीपुटाट्टालकावलोकनप्रतोलीविटङ्कप्रासादसम्बाधानि.....भवनवरावतंसकानि वारमुख्यानाम्. The word is often used in the sense of 'a fortified gate or door', 'a gateway'. In this sense प्रतोली is practically the same as गोपुर. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita in his gloss on 1. 22 and Kṣīrasvāmin on Amara 2. 2. 16 explain गोपुर as प्रतोली. Śrutasāgāra does the same in his comm. on Yaśastilaka (chap. 4)—

गोपुरमुखेषु नगरप्रतोलीद्वारेषु ; गोपुरपरिघान् प्रतोलीद्वारार्गलानि[14] Cf. वासराधिपतिस्तुङ्गप्रतोलीशिखरं शनैः । यत्राधिरुह्य पूर्वाह्णे प्रपूर्णकलशायते ॥ Candraprabhacarita 2. 129; ..... दुर्गसंस्कारमनवरतमन्वतिष्ठत् ..... निवारिताविज्ञातजननिर्गमप्रवेशाम् अप्रमत्तापुरुषगुल्मकप्रतिपन्नसकलप्रतोलिरक्षां..... काञ्चिनगरीमकरोत् Tilakamañjarī; कुठारताडितप्रतोलीकपाटनिस्वनानुसारनिपतत्-प्रबलपाषाणवर्षाणि....आयोधनानि ibid.; स्फुलिङ्गानि नूनं मिलितानि यस्य स्वर्गप्रतोली-कपिशीर्षकाणाम् Vikramāṅkadevacarita 9. 105; नागोत्तमसमारूढः सच्छत्रो विशते यथा । तथा प्रतोल्यः कर्तव्या दुर्गे धर्मार्थकामदाः Devīpurāṇa 72. 139, 140; हेमप्राकाररचिता प्रतोली गजमण्डिता ibid. 93. 90; तन्मण्डलं चण्डरुचेः शुचं वश्छिनत्तु दैत्यारिपुरप्रतोली Surathotsava 1. 25. Cf. also प्राकाराद्बहिर्योधलक्षास्तिष्ठन्ति । प्रतोलीं यावदागत्य मध्येऽचीकथत् द्वाःस्थैः । आगम्यतां जनचतुष्केन सहेति राज्ञा ज्ञापितम् Jinamaṇḍana's Kumārapālaprabandha quoted by Dalal in his Introd. to Rūpakaṣaṭka (G. O. S.); गन्धर्वकेण उपदिश्यमानसरणिरुत्तरया प्राकारप्रतोलिकया निर्जगाम Tilakamanjarī. The word occurs in its Prākṛta form in Koūhala's Līlāvaī in connection with the establishment of a royal camp, and seems to mean 'a gateway' or 'a boundary wall' or 'a partition': एत्थुत्तरपुव्वपलोट्टभूमिभाए खिवेह पत्तोली । विच्छिण्णं कीरउ राउलस्स रायंगणुद्देसं (verse 732). In verse 688 पओलिवाल (प्रतोलीपाल) means 'a door-keeper', 'a sentry'. प्रतोली occurs in its Prākṛta form also in Mṛcchakaṭika, Act VIII: पासाद-बालगपदोलिकाए. The reference seems to be to a tower (perhaps gopura) in front of the palace where the Śakāra proposes to imprison the Ceṭa. Cf. Assamese पदुलि 'the front entrance of a compound'.

प्रदक्षिणन, verbal noun from प्रदक्षिण. प्रदक्षिणनकृत् 21. 97.

प्रबन्दृता 9. 37, the composition of a commentary or gloss (मद्भाषित-सूत्रपद्धतौ प्रबन्द्धृतास्तु).

प्रभाप्रभु 17. 205, the sun.

प्रमापण 19. 12, killing. Cf. प्रमापणनिष्णातैः Haravijaya 43. 58.' मीञ् हिंसा-याम्.'

प्रमीला 2. 21, closing of the eyes; sleep (स्वदृशोः .....उदयत्प्रमीलयोः).

---

14. Dhanañjaya in his Nāmamālā (Banaras, 1950) says प्रतोली गोपुराकृतिः. Mahīpa in his Anekārthatilaka (Poona, 1947) gives मार्ग and प्रतोली among the meanings of रथ्या—'रथ्या मार्गे लतामेदे प्रतोल्यां रथसंहतौ'.

प्रलेह 16. 86, a kind of broth. Nārāyaṇa says सूरणादिद्रव्ययुक्त आर्द्रकादि-संस्कृततक्रादिनिर्मितो द्रवद्रव्यविशेषः.

प्रवर 14. 62, the name of a sage said to be a friend of Indra, in पुरश्चकार प्रवरं वरं यमायन् सखायं ददृशे तया सः, where there is an indirect reference also to the usual meaning of the word 'the founder or dean of a gotra', 'one of a group of sages associated with the sage who actually founds a gotra i.e. a family or a line.' Cf. Mādhavācārya on Parāśara (chap. 2)—प्रवरः गोत्रप्रवर्तकस्य मुनेर्व्यावर्तकमुनिगण इत्यर्थः। तद् यथा—गोत्रप्रवर्तकस्य भरद्वाजस्य व्यावर्तकौ अङ्गिरो-बृहस्पती। अत एवाङ्गिरसबार्हस्पत्यभारद्वाजगोत्रोऽहमिति प्रयुञ्जते। With regard to the first meaning, see Harivaṁśa (Viṣṇuparva 96. 54 ff.)—ऐरावणमधिष्ठातुं प्रवरं स नियुक्तवान् etc. Nīlakaṇṭha remarks—प्रवरम् इन्द्रस्य सखायं ब्राह्मणम्. Harivaṁśa represents Pravara as a fighting sage. In Pārijātaharaṇacampū 5. 27 ff., he is described as fighting on Indra's side to save the Pārijāta tree—प्रवरः प्रवरः प्रभाविणामथ शक्रस्य सखा द्विजोत्तमः 5. 27.

प्रवहानिल 22. 77, 'one of the seven courses of wind said to cause the motion of the planets' (Apte). Here it is personified (प्रवहानिलस्य च्युतो रथाद्वाहनरङ्कुरेपः).

प्रवल्हिका(प्रवल्हिका) 16. 102, a riddle (विदग्धबालेङ्गितगुप्तिचातुरीप्रवल्हिकोत्पाटनपाटवे). The Puruṣakāra comm. (13th cent.) on Daiva (p. 123, T. S. S.) derives the word from वल्ह or वल्ह (वल्हयति) 'to speak', and remarks—' प्रवल्हिका प्रहेलिका '.....भाषाविशेषार्थत्वात् प्रवल्हेः। तथाच बह्वृचब्राह्मणम्—'प्रवल्हिकाः शंसति। प्रवल्हिकाभिर्वै देवा असुरान् प्रवल्याथैनान-ल्यायन्' इति। व्याकृतं चैतत् गोविन्दस्वामिना—"प्रवल्हिकाः प्रहेलिकाः 'विततौ किरणौ द्वौ' इति षडनुष्टुभः। प्रवल्य अनृतं भाषित्वा" इति। The Pravalhikās in question are given in full in Śaṅkhāyana-śrautasūtra 12. 22. The earliest use of this word would thus seem to be in Vedic ritual literature. Kṣīrasvāmin and Hema-candra derive the word as प्रवल्हते (प्रवल्हते) प्राधान्यं भजते प्रवल्हिका (प्रवल्हिका), which hardly gives any meaning. The root वल्ह प्राधान्ये is mentioned by Puruṣakāra, but the latter does not connect it with प्रवल्हिका. Puruṣakāra says, for instance, यथादौर्गभेव चान्द्राः।.....स एवाह—'बर्ह वल्ह प्राधान्ये।.....चुरादौ तु भाषार्थौ। बर्हयति वल्हयति' इति। 'बर्ह वल्ह परिभाषणहिंसाच्छादनेषु' इति च।

प्रसञ्जित 9. 96, made, brought into being (वर्षासु ऋतौ प्रसञ्जिते).

प्रसृति, in चक्षुःप्रसृति. प्रसृति means 'the palm of the hand stretched out and hollowed' (Apte). 'निर्मायचक्षुःप्रसृतिचुलुकितम्' 15. 82, 'looking at him eagerly with their large eyes.' Nārāyaṇa says चक्षूरूपाभ्यां प्रसृतिभ्याम्....प्रसृतिप्रमाणाभ्यामतिविशालाभ्यां चक्षुर्भ्यां सादरदृष्टं कृत्वा,

Cf. 20. 11, 12—कराभ्यां पृष्ठगस्तस्या न्यमिमीलदसौ दृशौ ।....प्रसृतिभ्यामिवायामं मापयन् प्रेयसीदृशोः॥Cf. also प्रियेण प्रसृतिदृशामनुरागकिंकरेण Mańkhaka 11. 24.

प्रेयरूपक 5. 66, beauty (प्रेयरूपकविशेषनिवेशैः). प्रियरूप +वुञ्.

प्लवकुम्भ 2. 31, a pitcher used as a support in swimming.

फक्किका 2. 95, a grammatical proposition; the statement of a grammatical problem(फणिभाषितभाष्यफक्किका). See Notes. Cf. Prabandhacintāmaṇi—अथ पुरावन्त्यां पुरि कथिद्विप्रः पाणिनिव्याकरणोपाध्यायतां वृणिः....छात्रैः फक्किकाव्याख्यानप्रश्नादिभिरुद्वेजितः, p. 121 (Siṁghī ed. 1933)

फलभावना 14. 7, the acquisition of a result; success (सुपर्वणां हि स्फुटभावना या सा पूर्वरूपं फलभावनायाः). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says फलभावनायाः फलस्य उत्पत्तेः. Nārāyaṇa says कर्यसिद्धेः.

फाणित (n) 18. 118, condensed juice of the sugar-cane. Occurs in Āpastambadharmasūtra 1. 5. 17. 19.

फालिका, a slice, a piece (मृदुव्यञ्जनमांसफालिकाम् 16. 82; ताम्बूलफालिकाः 20. 82). Occurs in Yaśastilaka 3. 435—यत्राद्रार्द्रिकफालिभिः परिचितः सद्यःस्रुतोऽसौ रसः ; अर्धराद्धालाबूफलफालिप्रकारम् ibid.

बष्कयणी 16. 93, a cow with a full-grown calf (हयद्विषद्बष्कयणीपयःसुतं .....दधि).

बहुकर 19. 13, the sun (बहुकरकृतात् प्रातः संमार्जनात्). The word here indirectly means also 'a sweeper, a cleaner,' the usual sense.

बहुतृण 22. 137, (1) worthless (इन्दुं मुखाद्बहुतृणं तव यद् गृणन्ति) ; (2) abounding in grass. In the case of the first meaning, the derivation is बहुतृणमीषदसमाप्तं तृणं, तृणत्वमपि यस्य पूर्णं न संपन्नं, तृणादपि निःसारमिति यावत्.....'विभाषा सुपो बहुच् पुरस्तात्तु' इति बहुच् Nārāyaṇa. Cf Māgha 2. 50–लघुर्बहुतृणं नरः. For a similar construction see Haravijaya 45. 55–पीलूनां खड्गलूनैर्बहु बहुमकरैः कीर्णमन्तः करौघैः, where बहुमकर means 'resembling Makaras.' Alaka quotes विभाषा सुपो बहुच् etc.

बहुल 4. 63; 21. 124, the dark half of a month (बहुलः खलु पक्षः ; बहुलपक्षशितिम्नि).

बालभाव 7. 26, (1) a hairy growth; (2) childishness.

बाहुज 12. 12, a Kṣatriya.

बिडौजस् 17. 111, a name of Indra (तेजसेव बिडौजसः); 16. 36 (स्थितेस्तु नाचालि बिडौजसापि सा) ; 5. 78; 5. 24 (विजयस्व बिडौजः). Nārāyaṇa remarks वेवेष्टि विट् व्यापकमोजो यस्य बिडौजाः पृषोदरादित्वाद्वृद्धिः. Used also in 14. 35.

बिन्दुच्युतक 9. 104, a kind of word play. See Footnote to Trans. The poet says चकास्ति बिन्दुच्युतकातिचातुरी घनाश्रुबिन्दुस्तुतिकैतवात्तव ।...

बि(वि)रुद (m and n) 11. 37, a panegyric, in बिरुदबन्दिन्, a reciter of panegyrics (एतद्भुजाबिरुदबन्दिजया.....गिरा). The word बिरुदावली occurs in Vikramāṅkadevacarita 7. 65— मूर्च्छद्विश्ववियोगिगर्वगदलनोत्ता-लस्य वैतालिकैः, प्रारब्धा बिरुदावलीव पठितुं श्रृङ्गार बन्धोर्मधोः. Nārāyaṇa explains बिरुद as 'might' (प्रताप). Jinarāja and Malli give प्रतापस्तुति and प्रशस्ति respectively as equivalents. The word usually means 'a title of honour.' In Śaṁkaradigvijaya 4. 78 (अद्वैतश्रीजयबिरुद-घण्टाघणघणः) बिरुद is explained by Dhanapati as 'proclamation' बिरुदघण्टायाः प्रख्यातिकरायाः घण्टायाः). The word occurs also in the same work (4. 41) in the usual sense. Dhanapati remarks that it is a देशीयशब्द. Cf. बिरुदं तेऽस्तु श्रीकूचंलिसरस्वती (Prabhāvaka-carita, Mahendrasūriprabandha); प्रतिदिनमेकैकं सूपकारमकूपः कृपाणि-कया निघ्नन्.....कोपकालानल इति बिरुदं बभार Prabandhacintāmaṇi; हनूमानिति कस्यचित् कपेरुपरि क्रोऽयं लोकस्य बिरुदवादबहुमानः Viśva-nātha's Saugandhikāharaṇa.

भक्तिगन्धि 21. 32, one who has only a small measure of devotion (भक्तिगन्धिरसुनाकलि कर्णः).

भङ्गिनी 18. 137, a river.

भानुभू 18. 25, 'daughter of the sun', the Yamunā river.

भाविक 19. 1, pertaining to or originating from the emotions; emotional (श्रुतिमधुपदसङ्गवैदग्धीविभावितभाविक - स्फुटरसमृशाभ्यक्ता वैतालिकै- जगिरे गिरः). Cf. Māgha 4. 33— प्रगीयते सिद्धगणैश्च योषितामुदारमन्ते कलभाविकस्वरैः. Malli explains the word as उद्दीपक.

भाषितेशा 11. 96, Sarasvatī.

भित्त 2. 74, a portion, a piece (गृहाः शशभृद्भित्तनिरङ्कभित्तयः).

भुजाकम्बु 12. 35, a conch bracelet.

भुवन 21. 64, (1) water; (2) the world.

भूतगत्या 9. 159, truthfully (तदखिलमिह भूतं भूतगत्या.....अभिलपति स्म स्वात्मदृत्तत्वतत्त्वम्).

भूतपति 4. 55, (1) the sky; (2) Śiva. In 11. 18 भूतभर्तृ means Śiva.

भूति 21. 160, a supernatural power. The eight well-known Bhūtis of a Yogin are indirectly mentioned in the verse— मध्ये बद्धाणिमा यत् सगरिममहिमश्रोणिवक्षोजयुग्मा, जाग्रच्चेतोवशित्वा स्मितभृतलघिमा मां प्रतीशित्वमेषि। सूक्तौ प्राकाम्यरम्या दिशि विदिशि यशोलब्धकामावसाया, भूतीरष्टावपीशस्तदिति मुदितः स्वस्य शिल्पाय तुभ्यम् ॥ The Bhūtis are अणिमा, महिमा, गरिमा, लघिमा, ईशित्व, वशित्व, प्राकाम्य and कामावसायिता. See Trans. Nārāyaṇa explains कामावसाय as कामेन स्वेच्छया अप्रतिहतप्रसरोऽवसायो गतिः. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says यत्र काम इच्छा तत्रैव अवसायः अवसानं यस्यां सिद्धौ सा। यत्र कामावसायित्वं कामसिद्धिः, यथा भूमौ प्रवेशेच्छायां तत्रावसायः. In certain lists प्राप्ति is substituted for गरिमा, and the भूतिs or सिद्धिs, as they are called, are also somewhat differently explained. Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa 40. 31-33 says सूक्ष्मात् सूक्ष्मतमोऽणीयान् शीघ्रत्वं लघिमा गुणः। महिमाशेषपूज्यत्वात् प्राप्तिर्नाप्राप्यमस्य यत् ॥ प्राकाम्यमस्य व्यापित्वादीशित्वनेश्वरो यतः। वशित्वाद्वशिमा नाम योगिनः सप्तमो गुणः ॥ यत्रेच्छास्थानमप्युक्तं यत्र कामावसायिता।... Sāṁkhyatattvakaumudī explains nine Siddhis, both गरिमा and प्राप्ति being included (p. 44, Jha's Trans. and Text, 1896). It explains प्राकाम्य as इच्छानभिघात, e.g. भूमावुन्मज्जति निमज्जति च यथोदके; and कामावसायित्व as सत्यसंकल्पता, येन यथाऽस्य संकल्पो भवति भूतेषु तथैव भूतानि भवन्ति. The eight Siddhis are referred to in Prabodhacandrodaya 3. 22 and explained in detail in the Candrikā commentary, which, however, omits कामावसायित्व and includes both गरिमा and प्राप्ति.

भोगावलि 10. 105, a short description in verse treating of pleasant objects like a flower garden, the spring, the virtues of a lover etc. It is divided into small sections of eight or four lines, called 'skandhas'. Vidyānātha thus defines भोगावली in his Pratāparudrayaśobhūṣaṇa. He says

आद्यन्तपद्यसंयुक्ता संस्कृतप्राकृतात्मिका ।
अष्टभिर्वा चतुर्भिर्वा वाक्यैः स्कन्धसमन्विता ॥
प्रतिस्कन्धं भिन्नवाक्यरीतिर्देवनृपोचिता ।
सर्वतो देवशब्दादिरेषा भोगावली मता ॥

The comm. remarks अत्र भोगोपकरणोद्यानवसन्तनायकगुणादिवर्णनं प्रायेण कर्तव्यम्. This definition is found also in Mandāramarandacampū (Kāvyaprakaraṇa), and expresses the later Alaṁkāra view. Hemacandra gives a simpler definition (see below). Jonarāja on Maṅkhaka 6. 55 (अनङ्गभोगावलिपाठबन्दी) explains the word as उपभोगवर्णना. It is enough to note that the word is generally used in the sense of 'a poetical composition on a delightful subject.' Cf. राजभवनभूमिषु भोगावलीपाठकेषु Yaśastilaka (chap. 2), wherein the phrase is explained as गीतकार in the comm.; सोत्कण्ठमुत्कण्ठस्य भोगावलीपाठेषु ibid. (here the expression is explained in the comm. as सुरतक्रीडावचनपठनेषु); and भोगावलीपाठिनः ibid. (chap. 3), explained in the comm. as चारणभाटस्य. The testimony of Yaśastilaka points to the existence of a class of men employed by kings to recite भोगावली verses. The word occurs also in Tilakamañjarī— मङ्गलपाठकस्येव.....भोगावली.....; in Viddhaśālabhañjikā (Act. 4)— शृणु नरेन्द्रबन्दिनः कर्पूरखण्डस्य प्रभातभोगावलिम् (in Prākṛta); in Māgha 5. 67— निवेदयन्तश्चेष्टाविशेषमनुजीविजनाय राज्ञाम्। वैतालिकाः..... भोगावलीः कलगिरोऽवसरेषु पेठुः ॥ Bhogāvalī is used in the sense of 'panegyric' or 'hymn' in Vemabhūpālacarita— अस्याः (चण्डिकायाः) पुनरपदानभोगावली वेदाः[15]; and in Rāghavapāṇḍavīya 1. 6— स वः करोतु विघ्नानां वारणं वारणाननः। मदवारिभिरारब्धभोगावलिरिवालिभिः ॥ Cf. Ahirbudhnyasaṁhitā (Adyar ed.) 29. 65, 66—

15. अपदान=अवदान.

तल्लोकवासिनः सर्वे सिद्धगन्धर्वकिन्नराः ।
यक्षाः किंपुरुषाश्चैव चारणाः साङ्गनागणाः ॥
वीणावेणुमृदङ्गैश्च वाद्यैस्तालैश्च सर्वशः ।
तस्यापदानचरितगर्भां भोगवलीपराः ॥

Here the reading भोगवली is a mistake. The variant तस्यापदान-चरितमहाभोगावलीपराः is, I think, the correct reading. तस्य refers to Viṣṇu, and भोगावली here means स्तव. Hemacandra says नम्रः स्तुतिव्रतस्तस्य ग्रन्थो भोगावली भवेत्, and remarks भोगः सुखं तद्धेतुत्वात् भोगाः स्तुतयः, तासामावली भोगावली.

Bhogāvalī verses or panegyrics were recited on the battle-field by way of encouraging the soldiers. Cf. Haravijaya 44. 59— आह्वासताधिरणवर्त्म परस्परं ते भोगावलीभिरुपलक्षितनामधेयाः. The comm. says भोगावली वन्दिनां पाठः.

भोजकुल 16. 48, the dynasty of the Bhojas who ruled over the country of Vidarbha or Berar. See Bhandarkar—Early History of the Deccan, p. 20 (Third ed.). In our poem Damayantī's brother Dama is called भोजकुलाङ्कुर.

भ्रमणी 3. 19, same as भ्रमण (विधेः कदाचिद् भ्रमणीविलासे).

भ्रमरित 2. 103, turned blue (यदतिविमलनीलवेश्मरश्मिभ्रमरितभाः शुचिसौध-वलवलिः).

मखमृगव्याध 22. 140, a name of Śiva. Lit. Hunter of the Sacrifice Deer, the reference being to the story of Śiva cutting off the head of Dakṣa's Sacrifice when it attempted to flee in the form of a deer. Cf. Naiṣadha 4. 67—मखमृगस्य यथा दलितं शिरः. See also under तारामृग. यज्ञमृगव्याध occurs among the names of Śiva in the Mahābhārata, Śāntiparva 290. 159 (Kumbhakonam ed.) and in Brahmapurāṇa 40. 78.

मणिक (m) 7. 75, a jar. In 22. 146 मणिक and चषक 'a cup' are used. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita remarks— चषकं पानपात्रम् । मणिके हि उदकोदञ्चनार्थं लोटिका भवति.

मणिमन्थ 19. 18, the name of a mountain where rock salt is found (मणिमन्थभूधरभवशिलालेह्यवेह्याचणः).

मण्डक 16. 107, a kind of thin cake. Apte refers to Marathi मांडे. Kāśikhaṇḍa refers to Maṇḍakas mixed with mango juice— सचूतरसमण्डकाः (80. 49 of Uttarārdha). Jñānārṇava Tantra refers to Maṇḍakas seasoned with sugar and 'wrapped in birch bark' (?)— .....भूर्जत्वक्मण्डकाः प्रिये। शर्करालोलिता देवि सूपं मुद्गोद्भवं तथा॥ 5. 20. Abhayatilaka on Dvyāśrayakāvya 3. 140 explains मण्डक as पोलिका.

मथिन् 11. 62, a churning-stick (मन्था नगः).

मदिर 9. 113, maddening, in मदिराक्षि (voc.). Nārāyaṇa says मदयत इति मदिरे उन्मादजनके अक्षिणी यस्यास्तत्संबुद्धिर्हे मदिराक्षि. Narahari says मदयतो हर्षयत इति मदिरे etc. Nārāyaṇa further says मदिर इत्यत्र 'इषिमदि—' इत्यादिनौणादिकः किरच्प्रत्ययः। रामायणे—'नार्यो मदिरलोचनाः' इति. Malli in his gloss on Raghu 8. 68 also refers to the Rāmāyaṇa passage and says माद्यत्याभ्यामिति मदिरे अक्षिणी यस्याः. It should, however, be noted that मदिर is the technical name of a kind of mildly frenzied look, of which the following definition occurs in Nāṭyaśāstra (K. S. S.) 8. 79—व्याघूर्णमानमध्या या क्षामान्ताचितलोचना। दृष्टिर्विकसितापाङ्गा मदिरा तरुणे मदे॥ This verse is quoted anonymously by Alaka in his gloss on Haravijaya 26. 44 in connection with the expression मदिरेक्षणा. Appayadīkṣita in his comm. on Yādavābhyudaya 10. 31 (वरस्त्रीर्मदिरेक्षणाः) quotes the above verse thus— व्याघूर्णमानतारं च क्षामोपान्तविलोकनम्। चक्षुर्विकसितापाङ्गं मदिरं तरुणे मदे॥ and says मदिराणि मन्दीकृतानि..... .....इत्युक्तलक्षणानि ईक्षणानि यासां ताः. The word मदिर, though it literally means 'maddening' or 'frenzied', thus refers to rolling and graceful eyes, and denotes, like मुकुल etc., a particular look described in the Nāṭyaśāstra. The expression मदिरेक्षणा, however, often means simply 'fair-eyed'. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says मदिराक्षि निर्मलनेत्रे. The expression मदिरदृश् (f) occurs in Viddhaśālabhañjikā 1. 17.

मनस्कार 14. 84, mental concentration. Nārāyaṇa remarks मनस ऐकाग्र्यकरणं मनस्कारः। चित्तस्यैकाग्र्येण चिन्तनमिच्छाविशेषः। 'चित्ताभोगो मनस्कारः' इत्यमरः। 'अतः कृकमि—' इति सत्वम्. The word means here 'resolution', 'will' (भवन्मनस्कारलब्धोद्गमेन). Cf. निरन्तरयोगोप-

योगनिमग्नमनस्कारेण; पापर्द्धिप्रबुद्धमनस्कार; कुञ्जराजिकूजितजरत्खञ्जनमनस्कारम् Yaśastilaka; सापि प्रव्रजिता.....तदुपदिष्टेन मनस्कारविधिना ध्यायति स्म Jātakamālā (Harvard ed., p. 123); दिदृक्षादत्तदृष्टीनां मनस्कारमनीषयोः। सपीतिरससंतोषं दिशन्तौ देहकान्तितः॥ Yādavābhyudaya 10. 9.

मनःशिला 15. 28, 33, red arsenic. The poet refers to an ornamental dot of red arsenic on the forehead of the bride. Similar uses of मनःशिला are referred to in Vidagdhamādhava 7. 33—मनः-शिलातिलकिना भालेन; in Kādambarī (Pūrvabhāga)—मनःशिलापङ्क-लिखितेन च....तिलकबिन्दुना विद्योतितललाटपट्टम्; in Padmaprābhṛtaka, p. 19- प्रवाललोलाङ्गुलिना करेण मनःशिलं कन्दुकमुद्वहन्ती (in चतुर्भाणी). मनः-शिला was used also for medicinal purposes. Rājanighaṇṭu gives रोगशिला as one of its names and says .....विषनाशनी। भूतावेशभयोन्मादहारिणी वश्यकारिणी॥

मन्तु (m) 6. 110, offence, guilt.

मन्दाक्ष (n) 3. 61, shame (मन्दाक्षमन्दाक्षरमुद्रमुक्त्वा); 3. 8 (मन्दाक्षलक्ष्या); 22. 33 (मन्दाक्षलक्ष्याः); 4. 122; 14. 47.

मन्देह 19. 41, the Mandeha demons are supposed to attack the rising Sun who overcomes them with the help of the palmfuls of water offered by worshippers and consecrated with the Gāyatrī formula (इह हि समये मन्देहेषु व्रजन्त्युदवज्रता-मभि रविमुपस्थानोत्क्षिप्ता जलाञ्जलयः किल). Cf. 17. 94—धर्मसन्देहमन्देहजयमानवः. The story of the Mandehas is given in Taittirīya Āraṇyaka 2. 2. The line मन्दे-हेषु व्रजन्त्युदवज्रताम् ..... may be compared with the statement in the Āraṇyaka—गायत्रियाऽभिमन्त्रिता आप ऊर्ध्वं विक्षिपन्ति ता एता आपो वज्रीभूत्वा तानि रक्षाꣳसि मन्देहारुणे द्वीपे प्रक्षिपन्ति. Kāśikhaṇḍa (Pūrvārdha) 35. 152-3 says गायत्रीं शिरसा हीनां महाव्याहृतिपूर्विकाम्। प्रणवाद्यां जपंस्तिष्ठन् क्षिपेदम्भोऽञ्जलित्रयम्॥ तेन वज्रोदकेनाशु मन्देहा नाम राक्षसाः। सूर्यरश्मयः प्रलीयन्ते शैला वज्रहता इव॥

मरिच (n) 18. 118, black pepper (मरिचावचूर्णना).

मसार, sapphire (मसारतारासि 9, 104; मसारमालावलितोरणां पुरम् 16. 122). Cf. Haravijaya 5. 47 —चन्द्रमसारचितां श्रियम्; ibid., 26. 22.

महाकालफल 22. 29, a red fruit with black seeds. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita gives किंपाक as an equivalent. Nārāyaṇa says महाकालस्य ऐन्द्रवारुण्याः फलम्, and refers to a custom of hanging this fruit on the door of a house to ward off evil spirits (गृहोपसर्गनिवारणार्थं गृहद्वारे वृद्धै- बध्यते). The poet says पक्वं महाकालफलं किलासीत् प्रलयगिरेः सानुनि भानुबिम्बम् । भिन्नस्य तस्यैव दृषन्निपाताद्वीजानि जानामितमां तमांसि ॥

महाज्यैष्ठी 15. 89, the name of a festival (ताभिर्दृश्यत एष यान् पथि महाज्यैष्ठीमहे मन्महे, यद्दृग्भिः पुरुषोत्तमः परिचितः प्राग्मज्जमज्जन् कृतः).

Śrīharṣa refers to the idol of Puruṣottama, 'going in the streets, occupying a platform, during the Mahājyaiṣṭhī festival'. The festival in question is described in Brahmapurāṇa (chap. 65) and Skandapurāṇa (Utkalakhaṇḍa, chap. 29, 31, 32), and mentioned in Padmapurāṇa (Kriyāyogasāra 18. 35). It is stated that on the Mahājyaiṣṭhī or the Full Moon day of the month of Jyeṣṭha, the idols of Kṛṣṇa, Subhadrā and Balarāma are placed on a gaily decorated platform (मञ्च), overhung with a canopy; and bathed with perfumed water drawn from a sacred well. The idols are carried overnight to the well 'with royal pomp' (राजवत् परिचर्य); and the ceremony of bath takes place in the morning to the accompaniment of music and hymns, after which the holy images are led out in procession towards the south. According to Skandapurāṇa, a mantra called समुद्रज्येष्ठा is used in connection with the bathing ceremony, while Brahmapurāṇa gives the text of a long hymn in prose beginning with जय जय लोकपाल भक्तरक्षक. The whole ceremony is commonly known as ज्येष्ठस्नान, and takes place in Puruṣottamakṣetra (Puri).

Great religious merit is said to accrue to those who witness the ceremony of bath or the southward procession,[16] and Skandapurāṇa (Utkalakhaṇḍa) 32. 9.

Cf. the following verse quoted by Nārāyaṇa—

दोलारूढं तु गोविन्दं मञ्चस्थं मधुसूदनम् । रथस्थं वामनं दृष्ट्वा पुनर्जन्म न विद्यते ॥

The festival is nowadays called Snānayātrā, the idols of Jagannātha, Bala-

it is the latter event which the poet has in his mind. While explaining this verse, Nārāyaṇa says that there are separate platforms for Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and Subhadrā, and Kṛṣṇa occupies the first one. But the abovementioned Purāṇas speak of one platform only.

Jinarāja reads महाज्यैष्ठी for महाज्यैष्ठी and remarks that the former is the usual form of the word. He says ज्येष्ठीत्येव सर्वे पठन्ति व्याख्यान्ति च पूर्ववत्। पुस्तकेषु च तथैव पाठो दृश्यते। मासनामापि ज्येष्ठ इत्येवं वदन्ति. Nārāyaṇa says ज्यैष्ठीति ज्येष्ठानक्षत्रयुक्ता पौर्णमासीति 'नक्षत्रेण युक्तः कालः' इत्यणि वृद्धिः।.....'ज्येष्ठी' इति पाठे वृद्ध्यभावश्चिन्त्यः। संज्ञापूर्वकस्य विधेरनित्यत्वाद्वृद्ध्यभावः कथंचित् समर्थनीयः. Nārāyaṇa quotes the following definition of the Mahājyaiṣṭhī day—ऐन्द्रे गुरुः शशी चैव प्राजापत्ये रविस्तथा। पूर्णिमा ज्येष्ठमासस्य महाज्यैष्ठीति कीर्तिता॥ Agnipurāṇa 121. 63. There is a reference to the Mahājyaiṣṭhī day in Vidagdhamādhava 2. 28- मम राधा निसर्गस्थं प्रतीपमनयन्मनः। महाज्यैष्ठीव सहसा प्रवाहं सौरसैन्धवम्॥ The comm. remarks अन्यपूर्णिमाभ्योऽपि तद्दिने समुद्रस्य क्षोभोद्रेकेणोद्वेलत्वे तरङ्गावघातिताया गङ्गायाः स्रोतः परावर्तते.

महानट 22. 7, a name of Śiva (महानटः किं नु.....तनोति.....सांप्रतमङ्गहारम्). Cf. Vāsavadattā—महानटबाहुनेव बद्धभुजंगाङ्केन.

महाव्रत 17. 203, a Vedic rite which involves amorous relations between a religious student and a whore (क्रतौ महाव्रते पश्यन् ब्रह्मचारीत्वरीरतम्). The Mahāvrata takes place at the winter solstice at the end of the Gavāmayana sacrifice which lasted for a year. The sacrificers were required to observe the vow of chastity throughout this period, and the Mahāvrata is supposed to restore the power to return to the householder's life. For this purpose a whore and a Brahmacārin of Magadha are brought together on the sacrificial altar. See Taittirīyasaṁhitā (Ānandāśrama ed.) 7. 5. 9. This and a further custom of the same type associated with the Mahāvrata are regarded as calculated 'to promote human fruitfulness'; and the Mahāvrata itself, in which Agni and the sun are formally worshipped by the sacrificer, is believed to be 'an attempt to stimulate the sun at the winter solstice both by worship and by magic'. माणवक 7. 66, (1) a boy; (2) a kind of pearlstring.

माधुकरी 7. 104 (पश्चस्विहास्याङ्घ्रिकरेष्वभिख्याभिक्षाधुना माधुकरीसदृक्षा), a form of begging practised by a religious mendicant restricting himself to three, five or seven households. The word occurs also in the form माधूकर. Cf. मनःसंकल्परहितान् गृहांस्त्रीन् सप्त पञ्चकान्। मधुवदाहरणं यत्तु माधूकरमिति स्मृतम् ॥ Uśanas quoted by Mādhavācārya on Parāśara (chap. 2). Bhāgavata 11. 8. 9 says स्तोकं स्तोकं ग्रसेद् ग्रासं देहो वर्तेत यावता। गृहानहिंसन्नातिष्ठेद् वृत्तिं माधुकरीं मुनिः ॥ Mādhukarī is so called because it resembles the gathering of honey by bees in small quantities. Śrīdharasvāmin's explanation of the word in his gloss on the above verse seems to be irrelevant. He says यथा मधुकरो विशिष्टगन्धलोभेनैकस्मिन्नेव पद्मे वसन् अस्तमयसमये मुकुलिते तस्मिन् बध्यते एवं मुनिरपि गुणलोभेनैकमेव गृहमाश्रितस्तन्मोहेन बध्यत इति.

मायाजल 10. 93, lit. artificial water, (1) a kind of artificial colouring or paint applied to jewels. Acc. to Nārāyaṇa, it is called also पाणिपाद (नैर्मल्यार्थपाणिपादसंज्ञकमायाजलप्रक्षेपेण....). (2) Acc. to Jinarāja, it is a layer of gold (स्वर्णपुटिका) applied to the bottom of jewels. (3) Acc. to Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita and Vidyādhara, it is a kind of lotion for polishing cloths. See Notes. The first explanation is the most appropriate. The presence of मायाजल on jewels is described in the verse as a defect; it seems to have been used as a make-believe.

मिहिकारुच् 19. 35, the moon (रात्रीमुचं मिहिकारुचं).

मीमांसामांसल 17. 61, in मीमांसामांसलप्रज्ञाः, 'those whose intellect is fattened on the Mīmāṁsā philosophy'; a term of ridicule.

मीमांसामांसल 'fat with Mīmāṁsā' is a satirical expression meaning 'dull', 'fat-witted', 'thick-headed'. Cf. अहो मन्दस्य मीमांसाश्रमहानि विजृम्भते। मीमांसामांसलं चेतः कथमित्थं प्रमाद्यति ॥ Āgamaprāmāṇya of Yāmunācārya (Lazarus, p. 20).

मुखमुद्रा 5. 120, silence.

मुदिर (m) 11. 119, a cloud (मुदिरमण्डनधन्वना).

मुद्रणा 2. 51, in सारमुद्रणा 'gist' (सामुद्रकसारमुद्रणा).

मुद्रितकण्ठ 20. 37, silent (इति मुद्रितकण्ठेऽस्मिन् सोल्लुण्ठमभिधाय ताम्).

मुनिद्रुम 1. 96, the Agastya or Baka tree. Cf. Yaśastilaka (chap.4)— मुनिद्रुमदलेष्विव संश्रेचनोचितेषु. It is a small tree with large butterfly-shaped flowers with white petals.

मुर्मुर 4. 105, तुषानल, a smouldering fire. पशुगणानिव मुर्मुरराशिभिः पचति Upamitibhavaprapañcā kathā, p. 496, प्रियविरहमहोष्मामुर्मुरामङ्गलेखाम् Viddhaśālabhañjikā 3. 23; विनिर्मितमुर्मुरोपहारास्विव दुःस्पर्शप्रचारासु.....इलासु Yaśastilaka (chap. 1).

मूकमुद्रा 22. 58, silence (केयं तव प्रेयसि मूकमुद्रा).

मृत्स्ना 11. 86, mud (in a commendatory sense) (जाम्बूनदं जगति विश्रुतिमेति मृत्स्ना). 'मृदस्तिकन्' 'सत्सौ प्रशंसायाम्'. Cf. Dvisandhānakāvya 3. 7— मृत्स्नाभ्यवहार.....

मोचा 7. 31, the banana plant (त्वचः समुत्तार्य दलानि रीत्या मोचात्वचः पद्मपाटनायाम्). Cf. Mukundānanda Bhāṇa— यदेवं मोचारसमुचा वाचा मे चेतश्चोरयसि. The form मोच occurs in Bālarāmāyaṇa 5. 48— प्रम्लोचा मोचपाकच्छविः.

यक्षकर्दम 21. 7, lit. Yakṣa mud, a kind of fragrant paste. Nala's body is rubbed with Yakṣa paste before he takes his bath (यक्षकर्दममृदून्मृदिताङ्गम्). According to Dhanvantarīya Nighaṇṭu and Rājanighaṇṭu, the ingredients of Yakṣakardama are saffron, aloe wood (Aguru), camphor, musk and sandal.[17] Nārāyaṇa's quotation from Garuḍapurāṇa is to the same effect, except that

17. Rājanighaṇṭu states that Yakṣakardam is used exclusively by worshippers of Śiva (त्र्यक्षपूजनपरैकगोचर). The statement need not be taken literally.

it substitutes Kakkola for saffron. Skandapurāṇa (Kāśī-khaṇḍa 80. 44—46) says that the paste is liked by all the gods, and gives the following recipe for its preparation: two parts of musk, two parts of saffron, three parts of sandal, and one of camphor. The idol of the Devī is to be smeared with Yakṣakardama. In Devīpurāṇa (31. 5) we read that the chariot in which the Devī is led out in procession is to be worshipped with various flowers, Yakṣakardama, and sandal. Agnipurāṇa (75. 50) prescribes Homa or oblations of Yakṣa-kardama in the fire in connection with the ritual of Śiva worship. Prāṇatoṣiṇī Tantra (5. 3) gives a quotation from a Matsyasūkta, according to which a kind of incense prepared from Yakṣa paste (यक्षकर्दमधूप)[18] should be used in the worship of a Śivaliṅga. Padmapurāṇa (Kriyā-yogasāra 12. 8) tells us that he who applies the fragrant Yakṣa paste to the idol of Hari in the summer attains salvation. We hear of Yakṣakardama being used in Jaina ritual also. We find in Someśvara's Kīrtikaumudī (9. 23) that the Kapardi-yakṣa, a Jaina idol with the head of a bull, is smeared with the Yakṣa paste.[19] The paste was used also for various secular purposes, of which the reference in our poem is an example. We learn from Nalacampū that it was customary to wash the floor of a palace with water mixed with Yakṣakardama;[20] and the same work describes the walls of a recreation hall as being sprayed with Yakṣakardama.[21] Yaśastilaka likewise describes the walls of a palace chamber as being decorated

18. The Yakṣa incense mentioned in Dhanvantarīya Nighaṇṭu (3. 121) is different (ललन: शालनिर्यासो यक्षधूमोऽग्निवल्लभ:). An incense called यक्षाङ्ग is described in a citation from Bhaviṣyapurāṇa in Kṛtyakalpataru (Vrata-kāṇḍa), p. 6 (G.O.S.).

with pieces of camphor smeared with Yakṣakardama.[22] On festive occasions it seems to have been the practice to strew Yakṣakardama powder over the streets.[23] The Yakṣa paste was frequently used for personal decoration. We find in Skandapurāṇa[24] that it is an item in the adornment of Viṣṇu on the eve of his marriage. The same work describes Lakṣmī as having her body smeared with the Yakṣa paste.[25] A similar reference is found in Mahānāṭaka which incidentally enumerates the ingredients of Yakṣakardama.[26] Śeṣakṛṣṇa in his Kaṁsavadha speaks of Yakṣakardama powder as being used as beauty paint.[27]

यन्त्र (n) 10. 6; 22. 87, (here) a device for extracting oil from mustard and sesamum seeds. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says यन्त्रं तिलपीडनकम्. Nārāyaṇa says यन्त्रं निष्पीडनचक्रम्. In 22. 150 यन्त्र means 'a boring instrument'.

यमक 10. 24, the well-known device of repeating words similar in sound but different in sense; (here) duplicate, extremely similar (नलश्रीयमकैर्यमार्यैः).

यागेश्वर 12. 38, a certain crystal phallus of Śiva. See Notes. The word is spelt also जागेश्वर in the manuscripts as well as in Nārāyaṇa's commentary. The word occurs in the form यागेश्वर in Pūrṇabhadra's Pañcatantra (ed. Hertel) where it is wrongly explained by the editor as meaning 'gold.' See Dr. Venkata-subbia's Note in the Indian Hist. Quarterly, June, 1929. As I have pointed out in a supplementary Note in the same journal (March, 1931), the word is found in the form जागेश्वर in Skandapurāṇa where it refers to 'a Śivaliṅga made of stone'—तत्र जागेश्वरं लिङ्गं कृत्वाथ विनिवेशितम्। बाल्यादुपलरूपं तद्वर्षवारिविशुद्धितम्॥ (Māheśvarakhaṇḍa, 11. 6 of Kumārikākhaṇḍa). Yāgeśvara is described in Naiṣadha as a water deity lying invisible in the waters (जलं चाविश्य दृश्येतरो, यस्यासौ जलदेवता स्फटिकभूजांगर्ति यागेश्वरः). It may be noted in this connection that Yāgeśvara is not the only form of Śiva to be associated with the waters. In Maṅkhaka's Śrīkaṇṭhacarita (3. 14) there is a reference to the wooden Kapaṭeśvara Śiva, who is described as 'sleeping' in the midst of waters (दधद्वपुः काष्ठमयं जले स्वपित्यनुद्गमायेव दृगग्नितेजसः). See also Rājānaka Jayaratha's Haracaritacintāmaṇi, chap. 14. Jñānārṇava Tantra (20. 18) also refers to a Śivaliṅga abiding in the waters (स्वयंभूबाणलिङ्गं वा वृषशून्यं जलस्थितम्). Liṅgapurāṇa (18. 6 of Pūrvārdha) refers to a 'watery phallus' (हेमलिङ्गाय हेमाय वारिलिङ्गाय वाम्भसे। शिवाय शिवलिङ्गाय...॥); and in another verse describes Śiva as being in the midst of waters (संस्थिता-वाम्भसां मध्ये 18. 11). A similar reference is found in Brahmapurāṇa—सलिलाशयलिङ्गाय युगान्ताय नमो नमः 37. 6. Liṅgapurāṇa further describes the installation of a Śivaliṅga in the midst of waters with Viṣṇu in the form of a boar under the phallus, and the figure of Brahmā with folded hands on one side.[28] It is probable that the Yāgeśvara-liṅga was likewise installed amidst waters, and being made of crystal, was invisible as described in Śrīharṣa's verse. There are, however, other references to the Liṅga which do not mention these characteristics. The Jāgeśvara (sic) Liṅga is mentioned as

28. विष्णुं वराहरूपेण लिङ्गस्याधस्त्वधोमुखम्॥
ब्रह्माणं दक्षिणे तस्य कृताञ्जलिपुटं स्थितम्।
मध्ये लिङ्गं महाघोरं महाम्भसि च संस्थितम्॥
कृत्वा भक्त्या प्रतिष्ठाप्य शिवसायुज्यमाप्नुयात्।
End of chap. 76 of Pūrvabhāga.

being installed in a brick temple of Śiva at Camatkārapura, which seems to be in Ānarta (Saurāṣṭra or Kathiawar), in Skandapurāṇa, Nāgarakhaṇḍa, chap. 271, verse 272. Another verse (214) refers to it as being swayed in a swing. A Jāgeśvara Tīrtha is mentioned in the same Khaṇḍa (chap. 108 and 109). It may also be noted that while the name Yāgeśvara is extremely rare, references to crystal Śivaliṅgas frequently occur in the Purāṇas, and are found even in Kāvya literature. A crystal phallus of Śiva is mentioned in Vāsavadattā,[29] Daśakumāracarita (1. 2), and Navasāhasāṅkacarita (18. 51). Liṅgapurāṇa (chap. 81 of Pūrvabhāga) mentions various Śivaliṅgas made of gold, silver, diverse gems, copper, wood and the like, and says that a crystal phallus is to be worshipped in the month of Phālguna.

The word यागेश्वर means literally 'the lord of sacrifices', and it is noteworthy that यज्ञेश्वर which means the same thing is an epithet of Śiva. It is true that this epithet is applied also to Viṣṇu, but there are Śaiva texts which emphasise Śiva's suzerainty over sacrifices. Śrīkaṇṭhabhāṣya, for instance says—श्रूयते हि सर्वकर्मणामधिपतिः परमेश्वरः.....' गाथपतिं मेधपतिं रुद्रं .....।' 'आ वो राजानमध्वरस्य रुद्रम् ।' इत्यादिषु। एतन्मूला स्मृतिरपि परमेश्वरस्य सर्वयज्ञाधिपत्यं वदति.....(3. 2. 38).

यांचितक 7. 56, something obtained by begging. It is a Smṛti term signifying clothing or ornaments borrowed from others for wearing on a festive occasion. The poet has this meaning in view—अस्या मुखश्रीप्रतिबिम्बमेव जलाच्च तात्रान्मुकुराच्च मित्रात्। अभ्यर्च्य घत्तः खलु पद्मचन्द्रौ विभूषणं यांचितकं कदाचित्॥ Mitākṣarā on Yajñavalkya 2. 67 says—विवाहादुत्सवेषु वस्त्रालंकारादि यांचित्वानीतं यांचितम्. Cf. यांचितकमण्डनमिव छन्दानुवर्ती परिजनः Yaśastilaka (chap. 4).

युत 19. 22, separated (लघुयुताक्रान्तः). Nārāyaṇa says 'युमिश्रणामिश्रणे' क्तः. Cf. Taittirīyasaṁhitā 1. 7. 13— इन्द्रो अस्मे आराच्चिद्द्वेषः सनुतर्युयोतु. Sāyaṇa explains युयोतु as पृथक्करोतु.

29. स्फाटिकलिङ्गमिव गगनमहातापसस्य.....भगवानुडुपतिरुज्जगाम.

यूपद्विप 17. 61, a cloth wrapped round the sacrificial post in certain rites. The usual form of the word is यूपहस्तिन्, हस्त being explained as 'a measure of length', 'a cubit.' See Notes and Extracts. Somanātha in his comm. on Śāstradīpikā 1. 3. 3. 4 says वाजपेयादौ यूपपरिव्याणशाटकं यूपहस्तिशब्दार्थः.

योगपट्ट 2. 78, a cloth worn during meditation (श्रितवत्प्रावलियोगपट्टया). The word occurs also in 11. 18. It is used in Kādambarī (Pūrvabhāga)—एकान्तावलम्बितयोगपट्टिकाम्.....गुहाम्. Sūtasaṁhitā (Jñānayogakhaṇḍa) 6. 9 says योगपट्टं बहिर्वस्त्रं मृत्स्नानिर्मां कृपाणिकाम् । सर्वाम्नोद्भूलनं तद्वत्त्रिपुण्ड्रं चैव धारयेत्॥ (in connection with the custom of religious mendicants).

योग्या 3. 117, practice (योग्यामुपास्ते नु युवां युयुक्षुः). Cf. विप्रयुक्तवनिताजनचेतोदारणे विरचयञ्जिव योग्याम् Maṅkhaka 11. 12.

यौवत, a multitude of young women. दिवोऽपि यौवतैः 2. 41; सुभगयौवतमौलिमाला 11. 90; वीरयौवतभ्रुटद्भुजाकम्बु..... 12. 35; यौवतविभ्रमोद्भवः 16. 109.

रत्नाचल 12. 67, see under रोहण.

रसाल 1. 89; 2. 66, the mango tree. रसालवनी 3. 46, a mango grove.

राजदन्ताः 7. 46, the four frontal teeth (राजौ द्विजानामिह राजदन्ताः). Trikāṇḍaśeṣa says राजदन्तास्तु चत्वारो दशनानां पुरःस्थिताः. Cf. Śṛṅgāradhanadaśataka (verse 67)—राजन्ते सुतनोर्मनोरमतमास्ते राजदन्ताः पुरः (Kāvyamālā, Part XIII).

राजिका 16. 73, black mustard. Nārāyaṇa remarks—'रायी' इति कान्यकुब्जभाषायाम्.

राम्भ 17. 187, a bamboo staff (यतिहस्तस्थितैस्तस्य राम्भैरारम्भि तर्जना). See Notes.

रीढा 17. 111, contempt, disrespect (गुरुरीढावलीढः); 17. 128 (कृतरीढः).

रूपक 18. 12, a statue. From रूप. The meaning of the word has been discussed in I.A. (1913, p. 27). There is, however, no doubt that रूप very often means a 'statue'. Kathāsaritsāgara distinguishes between a रूपकृत् and a चित्रकृत्—

अथागाच्चित्रकृत्तेन पथा रूपकृता सह ।
स स्तम्भं वीक्ष्य सुश्लक्ष्णं तत्र गौरीं समालिखत् ।
रूपकारोऽपि शस्त्रेण क्रीडयैवोल्लिलेख ताम् ॥ 37. 8, 9.

Cf. शालभञ्जिकाद्यनेकनयनानन्दकारिरूपरचनाकलिताः..प्रासादाः Upamitibhavaprapañcā kathā, p. 55; सुदारुवत् रूपनिर्माणस्य ibid., p. 123. The word occurs also in Naiṣadha 2. 83 where it may have the same meaning, though differently explained by the commentators. The form रूपक in the sense of 'an image' is found in Tilakamañjarī— उभयतो निरूपितनिरुपमानरतिप्रीतिरूपकम्.....कुसुमशरासनम्. The word is used thrice in Udayasundarīkathā— उत्कीर्णलिखितलेपितानल्परूपकोपशोभावल्यन्तर्मण्डपे ; द्वारशाखोपशोभारूपकमात्रम् ; समन्ताद्विपविताने कस्वरूपाणि रूपकाणि.

रोप, an arrow (रोपशिखी 4. 87; चापरोपैः 8. 105).

रोहण 5. 125; 12. 90 (मणिप्ररोहेण विवृध्य रोहणः), a legendary mountain located in Ceylon and supposed to produce jewels at the rumbling of clouds for the benefit of all comers. It is referred to as रत्नाचल in 12. 67. See also विद्रुद्रि. The Rohaṇa mountain is mentioned in Vāsavadattā— रोहणगिरिं सकलगुणरत्नसमूहस्य ; in Udayasundarīkathā— निक्षिप्य भूमावुपर्युपविष्टस्य कृपणस्य वित्तमिति रोहणस्य च मणिचक्रमनादेयमन्यथा भुजबलेनोन्मथ्य रोहणनगेन्द्रं.....किं नाम न गृह्णामि .....रत्नसर्वस्वम् p. 56; in Bālarāmāyaṇa 10. 49— जनश्च वाक्सुधासूतिर्मणिसूतिश्च रोहणः । नान्यत्र सिंहलद्वीपान्मुक्तासूतिश्च सागरः ॥ and other passages; in Upamitibhavaprapañcā kathā, p. 865—खनामि रोहण यावत्पातालतलमुचकैः and in Abhinanda's Rāmacarita 24. 26— विभीषणकणः कोऽसौ सति रावणरोहणे.

रोहित 7. 76, (1) red, rosy; (2) a rainbow appearing in a straight form (रोहति रोहितश्रीः).

लक्षण 10. 81, see under उद्देश.

लग्नक (n), 15. 90, a surety, security, bail. Used also in 16. 61 (तदाप्तिलग्नकम्).

लक्ष्मन् 19. 53, beauty. See Notes for variants. Cf. Vidagdhamādhava 3. 44—लक्ष्मतरङ्गि. Used in Prākṛta. Cf. Karpūramañjarī 2. 24—पिमुणइ तणुलट्ठीलक्ष्मिं चक्ष्मिं च. Explained as 'youth, freshness'.

लज्जित 18. 64 (used as a noun), a bashful act (संभुजिक्रियारम्भविघ्नघन-लज्जितैर्जिताम्).

लतावेष्टितक 7. 97, a kind of embrace by women (अपि भ्रमीभङ्गिभिराधृताङ्ग वासो लतावेष्टितकप्रवीणम्).

"उपविष्टं प्रियं कान्ता सुप्तावेष्टयते यदि। तल्लतावेष्टितं ज्ञेयं कामानुभववेदिभिः॥" quoted by Nārāyaṇa.

ललाटिका 15. 33, a gold chain worn across the forehead (ललाटिकासीमनि चूर्णकुन्तलाः. ललाट+कन् by 'कर्णललाटात् कनलंकारे.' Vaijayantī (and not Halāyudha, as stated by Nārāyaṇa) gives पत्रपाश्या as an equivalent. Hemacandra does the same. Acc. to Halāyudha, ललाटिका is an ornamental line painted on the forehead (रचिता ललाटपट्टे ललाटिका कथ्यते रेखा), but this meaning is not applicable here. The word is used in Āryāsaptaśatī in the same sense as in Naiṣadha—सुतनु ललाटनिवेशितललाटिके (verse 529).

लवणस्यति 19. 18, desire to have salt (तुरगसमजः.....लवणस्यति).

लसड्डिम्ब (v. r ललड्डिम्ब) 22. 53, a top (बालेन नक्तंसमयेन मुक्तं रौप्यं लस(ल)ड्डिम्बमिवेन्दुबिम्बम्). See Notes for the variant. Nārāyaṇa remarks डिम्बं ललडिम्बमिति वा गौडदेशभाषायां भ्रमरकस्य संज्ञा। महाराष्ट्रभाषायां कान्यकुब्जभाषायां च 'भवरा' इति संज्ञा। Īśānadeva says गौडदेशे भ्रमरकस्य 'लाडिम्ब' इति नाम. Cf. the Bengali word लाटिम, a top; Assamese लाटुम. The word लडड्डमरु used in Bṛhatkathāmañjarī 9. 2. 55 (also लडड्डमरुक in 9. 1. 648) seems to be a corruption of ललड्डमरु—पिशाचशाकिनीयुक्तं लडड्डमरुमण्डलम्. (डमरु is a kind of drum generally used by the Kāpālikas). The word ललड्डिम्ब seems to have been corrupted into लडड्डिम्ब, whence लाडिम्ब and लाटिम followed.

लाक्षणिक 10. 115, having a secondary significance (साक्षात् सुधांशुर्मुखमेव भैम्या दिवः स्फुटं लाक्षणिकः शशाङ्कः). See Notes.

लिखितपठित 19. 36, written and read about; described; known लिखितपठिता राज्ञो दाराः कविप्रतिभासु ये, शृणुत शृणुतामूर्यपश्याः). Cf. Anargharāghava 1. 31—इक्ष्वाकूणां लिखितपठिता स्वर्वधूगण्डपीठक्रीडापत्रप्रकरमकरीपाशुपाल्यं हि वृत्तिः. Rucipati remarks that it is a popular expression (लोकोक्तिरियम्).

लेख 13. 49, (used in plural) gods. Cf. लेखप्रभु 22. 118; लेखानुजीविन् 11. 56.

वट 16. 107, a fried ball of pulse, a kind of dainty. Cf. क्षीरवट 16. 98, a वट of this kind cooked in milk. Nārāyaṇa says क्षीरवटैः दुग्धमध्यक्षिप्तैर्माषसाधितैर्वटकाख्यैः. The word occurs in Kāśīkhaṇḍa 80. 49 (Uttarārdha)—फेणिका वटकाश्चैव पायसञ्च सशर्करम्; in Jñānārṇava Tantra 5. 19—वटकः कुङ्कुमाकारः पायसं हेमसंनिभम्; and in Dvyāśrayakāvya of Hemacandra 3. 141-माषान् प्रतिसिषेवेऽन्यो वटकानि विषेचितुम्.

वटी 7. 79, a small cowrie, an insignificant amount. 'जातं वटीमप्यधुना न लब्धुम्,' not worth even a cowrie. Nārāyaṇa remarks 'वटः कपर्दे न्यग्रोधे' इति विश्वः। 'स्त्री स्यात् काचिन्मृणाल्यादिविवक्षापचये यदि' इत्यमरसिंहवचनादल्पो वटो वटी. In 2. 88 and 3. 88 वराटिका is used in the sense of a cowrie. There is a वराटिकासप्तमीव्रत in which any food bought at a price of three cowries should be taken. See citation from Bhaviṣyatpurāṇa in Kṛtyakalpataru (Vratakāṇḍa), p. 184 (G.O.S.). The form वराट (m) occurs in Naiṣadha 22. 13.

वत्सिमन् 3. 55, childishness (धिक् चापले वत्सिमवत्सलत्वं). Nārāyaṇa says वत्सस्य बालस्य भावो वत्सिमा बालत्वम्.

वदावद 19. 24, a speaker, in पराङ्मुखवदावद, a slanderer. Amara says 'वदो वदावदो वक्ता'.

वरटा 1. 135, the female of a swan (नवप्रसूतिर्वरटा तपस्विनी). The word is used in Kāśīkhaṇḍa 3. 68 (Pūrvārdha)—कण्डूयमाना वरटा स्वचञ्चुपुटकोटिभिः। हंसं कामयमानं तु वारयेत् पक्षधूननैः॥

वरण (m) 2. 86, a wall.

वरयति 17. 119, choose (भैमी वरं सावरद्वरम्).

वरवर्ग 16. 55, the members of the bridegroom's party in a marriage.

वराटक 7. 18; 11. 110, the seed-pod of a lotus flower.

वराटराट् 16. 111, 117, the king of Vidarbha or Berar The variant विराटराट् is found in some commentaries.

वर्गणा 10. 65, accumulation (इति स्तुवन् हुंकृतिवर्गणाभिः).

वर्धकिन् 19. 54, a carpenter (वर्धकिना दिवः).

वर्धमानक (m) 2. 26, an earthen vessel. See under नीराजन.

वर्षोपल 16. 100, 'hailstone', a kind of sweetmeat ball (वर्षोपलगोलकावली). Vidyādhara remarks खण्डरचिता गोलकाः कर्पूरवासिता भक्षविशेषा वर्षोपलाः कथ्यन्ते. Īśānadeva says वर्षोपला बिरसोलाः खण्डनिर्मिताः त एव गोलकाः. Jinarāja remarks वर्षोपला वरगोलेति भाषया प्रसिद्धाः. See also under चक्किका.

वलना 3. 118, moving turning; (here) making (e.g. of pictorial designs), same as रचना. 'पत्रावलीनां वलना'. Cf. Brahmavaivartapurāṇa (Janmakhaṇḍa) 28. 96—पत्रावलीं सुवलितां सुकपोले चकार ह and Yogavāśiṣṭha (Utpattiprakaraṇa 28. 39; 34. 25)—धम्मिल्लवलना. The word is used in the sense of 'movement' in Haravijāya 2. 31—नृत्तवलनासु ; वलनाकुलपदाः ibid. 3. 47. Cf. दैव्यश्रीकटाक्षवलना in Yogavāśiṣṭha (Utpattiprakaraṇa 48. 79).

वाक्पारीण (वाक्पार+ख) 22. 140, beyond the range of speech (वाक्पारीणरुचिः).

वातकिन् 18. 12, gouty (ध्रुवञ्शिरो जरावातकी). Cf. Hemacandra's Mahāvīrasvāmistotra—जिन त्वदाज्ञामवमन्यते यः स वातकी नाथ पिशाचकी वा (Kāvyamālā, Part 7).

वामदेव्य 17. 194, the name of a Sāma or Vedic chant, the cult of which involved promiscuous relations with women (कन्यं तत्रोपनम्राया विश्वस्या वीक्ष्य तुष्टवान् । स मम्लौ तं विभाव्याथ वामदेव्याभ्युपासकम् ॥) Nārāyaṇa says वामदेवेन मुनिना दृष्टं ब्रह्मसाम 'कया नश्चित्र—' इत्यादि वामदेव्यं नाम साम तस्य ब्रह्मविद्याया अभ्युपासकम्....। 'वामदेव्योपासने सर्वाः स्त्रियः उपसीदन्ति' इति श्रुतिः । 'दृष्टं साम' इत्यर्थे वामदेवाड्ड्यड्ड्यौ' इति ड्यः. The cult or Vrata of the Vāmadeva Sāma is described in Chāndogya Upaniṣad 2. 13, which says न कांचन परिहरेत् तद्व्रतम्. Both Śaṁkara and Ānandagiri take this literally and defend the rite as being prescribed by Śruti. The Vāmadeva cult is personified by Ānandarāyamakhin in his allegorical play Vidyāpariṇayanam, Act 5— 'इष्टाङ्गलक्षितरतिक्रमशोभितैषा, शृङ्गारिणी विजयते धुरि वामदेव्या ।.....हृद्यं च कीर्तिमियमातनुते हि विद्या ॥'.....

वासित 8. 77, perfumed (चन्दनवासिता दिक्); 21. 119, purified, edified (संप्रज्ञातवासिततमः). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita says संस्कृततमः. Nārāyaṇa says अतितरां संभावितमनाः.

वाह 1. 66, a horse, in वाहवाह 'riding'. Vidyādhara explains वाहवाह as 'a horseman.'

विकटायित, a flash; a charming display. कटाक्षरुचिच्छटानां.....विकटा-यितम् 11. 40; श्रीकटाक्षविकटायितकोटिः 21. 44. In 18. 19 विकट means 'beautiful' or 'loud' (किन्नरीविकटगीतिझंकृतिः). Viśvaprakāśa says 'विकटः सुन्दरे प्रोक्तो विशालविकरालयोः'.

विघसीकृत 22. 118, reduced to dregs (निपीय देवैर्विघसीकृतायां.....सुधा-याम्). विघस 'the remnant of food' is used in Āryāsaptaśatī—बकविघसपङ्क्तिसारा न चिरात् कावेरि भवितासि ; in Anargharāghava 4. 22—प्राक्कवलग्रहस्य विघसीभूतेष्वपि क्षत्रियक्षुद्रेषु क्षुधितथिरेण परशुः ; in Sāmbapañcāśikā (verse 27)—आमावस्यं विघसमिव खे तत्कलाशेषमश्नन्.

विटङ्क 18. 24, a dove-cot. Nārāyaṇa remarks—विशेषेण टङ्कयते बध्यते इति विटङ्कम्.

वितायमान 10. 74, being spread out; spreading (आसीदथर्वा.....विताय-माना.....श्रुतिर्यदीयोदररोमरेखा). The word may be derived from तन् (passive) which takes the forms तन्यते and तायते by 'तनोतेर्यकि'. It may be derived also from 'ताय् सन्तानपालनयोः'. Cf. Bhāgavata 4. 1. 22—वितायमानयशसः (Comm. says अप्सरः-प्रमुखैर्वितायमानं विस्तार्यमाणं यशो येषां ते); स वाजिमेधेन.....वितायमानेन मरीचिमिश्रैः ibid. 6. 13. 21.

विदर 8. 38, a cavity, a slit (विदरप्रणालीरेखा).

विदुषिम्भुवा 9. 43, a woman who calls herself learned (न लज्जसे वा विदुषिम्भुवा कथम्). Nārāyaṇa remarks विदुषी इति ङीपः पचाद्यजन्ते भ्रुव-शब्दे परे 'धरूप—' इति ह्रस्वः । पचादिषु भ्रुव इति पाठसामर्थ्यादेव च वचिगुणौ न भवतः. Cf. सर्वविद्भ्रुव 21. 91, one who pretends to be all-knowing (त्वय्यशेषविदि जाग्रति शर्वः सर्वविद्भ्रुवतया शितिकण्ठः).

विद्रुराद्रि, same as रोहण q. v. घनध्वानजरन्नभेदुरः तथा विद्रुराद्रिः 12. 55. Cf. Haravijaya 16. 25—यस्योत्थिताभिनवरत्नशलाकयेव लक्ष्मीरुरःस्थलविद्रुमभुवा

विदधे. Alaka remarks विदूरो बालवायशैल: । देशविशेष इत्यन्ये । Cf. also Yaśastilaka (chap. 3)— रत्नाङ्कुररोमाञ्चकञ्चुकिनि विदूरभूधरे.

विदूषक 10. 57, a critic; an opponent (चार्वाकितासर्वविदूषकेण).

विद्या 1. 4, 5. The different branches of learning are referred to as being fourteen and eighteen in number. The fourteen sciences are the four Vedas and their six Aṅgas, Mīmāṁsā, Nyāya, the Law Books and the Purāṇas. In 1. 5 the number is spoken of as being eighteen (अगाहताष्टादशतां) by including Medicine, Military Art, Music and Polity.

विनिमे 20. 113, to exchange (विनिमीयताम्).

विमति 7. 22, a dispute (विधिं कलापौ विमतेरगाताम्).

विमान 10. 107, an open palanquin carried on men's shoulders (विमानेन सभां विशन्तौ). Cf. विमानवाहा: 11. 23; विमानधुर्या: 13. 1 'palanquin bearers.' It should be noted that विमान does not mean here 'an aerial car.' In the above sense, विमान is the same as कर्णीरथ. Appayadīkṣita in his comm. on Yādavābhyudaya 12. 88 remarks— कर्णीरथ: प्रवहणं डयनं च समं त्रयमित्यमरकोशव्याख्याने पुंसामंसैरुह्यमान: विमानाख्यो रथ: कर्णीरथ इति क्षीरस्वामी. In the printed edition Kṣīrasvāmin says कर्णीरथ:...पुंस्कन्धोह्यमानो रथ:.....डयन्ते विहायसा यान्तीव अनेन (डयनम्) विमानाख्यम्. In Jayantavijaya 13. 77, 79 the bridegroom comes to the bride's place in a विमान.

विशसन 19. 12, killing (शशविशसनत्रासात्). Cf. वैशस (n) 9. 78 slaughter (राजव्रजवैशसात्).

विस्र 22. 50, raw smelling (छित्वा शिरोऽस्राणि ... विस्राणि). Cf. Anargharāghava 4. 25— रुधिरवसाविस्रगन्धि: कुठार:.

वीरपट्टिका 15. 61, a gold band worn by men across the forehead (नलस्य भाले मणिवीरपट्टिका.....). Īśānadeva gives वीरुटी as an equivalent. Cf. पाटलापटलमप्युदगच्छद्वीरपट्टघटनाधिललाटम् Maṅkhaka 12. 2;

आलिख्य वीरपट्टे यन्त्रमिदं स्वमस्तकार्पितं कृत्वा ।
युध्यन् प्रत्यर्थिनमपि हत्वा यात्यव्रणाङ्कितो योद्धा ॥

Prapañcasāra Tantra 32. 23

Skandapurāṇa (Viṣṇukhaṇḍa) refers to a very similar ornament—कनकपट्ट सरत्नं मुकुटे दधौ (8. 5 of Veṅkaṭācalamāhātmya). Cf. also Yaśastilaka 2. 224—क्षितिरमण ललाटे पट्टबन्धस्तवास्तु. The comm. explains पट्टबन्ध as मस्तकालंकार.

वीरयते 12. 27, act like a hero (इतोऽपि किं वीरयसे न). The form वीरयस्व occurs in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa 12. 9 in this sense.

वीरहन् 17. 197, one who allows the sacrificial fire to die out by neglect (तेनादृश्यन्त वीरघ्ना न तु वीरहणो जनाः). Kṣīrasvāmin and Hemacandra derive the word thus वीरयते वीरोऽग्निस्तमुपेक्षया हन्ति. This explanation does not seem to be correct. The word वीरहत्या occurs in Manu 11. 41—अग्निहोत्रमपविध्याग्नीन् ब्राह्मणः कामकारतः। चान्द्रायणं चरेन्मासं वीरहत्यासमं हि तत्॥ Kullūka explains वीर as पुत्र, and both he and Medhātithi quote the following Śruti—'वीरहा वा एष देवानां भवति योऽग्निमुद्वासयते' Taittirīyasaṁhitā 1. 5. 2. The Śruti is quoted also in Śāṁkarabhāṣya 3. 4. 18.[30] The word वीर thus means 'a child' and वीरहन् is a child-murderer. He who neglects the Sacred Fire is, according to the above Śruti, the murderer of the child of the gods, i.e. Fire. Manu, on the other hand, says that the offence of neglecting the sacrificial fire is as grave as वीरहत्या or child-murder. According to this version, it would seem that a man who failed to maintain the Sacred Fire was relegated to the position of a वीरहन् or child-murderer, and gradually वीरहन् itself came to mean a sinner who allowed the sacrificial fire to become extinct.

It may be noted that वीर is frequently used in the sense of पुत्र in Vedic literature. See, for instance, Sāyaṇa on Ṛgveda 10. 68. 12 (स हि गोभिः सो अश्वैः स वीरेभिः); ibid. 10. 115. 8 (त्वया सुवीरा द्राघीय आयुः प्रतरं दधानाः) and other passages. The word is used in this sense also in the following and other passages cited in Kauśikasūtra—वीरान् मे प्रतितामहा दत्त वीरान् मे तितामहा दत्त वीरान् मे पितरो दत्त पितॄन् वीरो याचति 11. 88. 25 (in connection with पिण्डपितृयज्ञ); वीर्यं पितृभ्य आहार्षं वीरवन्तो गृहा ममेति 11. 89. 12. Keśava in his Paddhati on the same work (4. 35) speaks of a वीरकर्म which seems to be the same as गर्भाधान. Similarly, in Pāraskaragṛhyasūtra 1. 4, in the verse वीरसूर्देवकामा स्योना शन्नो भव द्विपदे शं चतुष्पदे recited during the marriage rites, the word वीरसू is explained as सत्पुत्रजननी in the commentary of Gadādhara. Cf. Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3. 8. 13. It may be noted that the expression वीरहोम occurs in a citation from Ādityapurāṇa in Kṛtyakalpataru (Vratakāṇḍa), p. 167 (G.O.S.) in connection with the Putrasaptamī Vrata performed for obtaining a son. The compiler explains वीरहोम as अग्निहोम. Here, too, वीर might very well mean पुत्र.

With regard to वीरहन्, the word is rarely used in its original sense of child-murderer, and found only in the sense of नष्टाग्नि, this being the meaning given by Amara and Hemacandra, and recognised by the Smṛtis.[31] The word seems, however, to be used in the original sense in the following passages of Liṅgapurāṇa— मातृहा पितृहा चैव वीरहा भ्रूणहा तथा (Pūrvabhāga 65. 174); गोघ्नश्चैव कृतघ्नश्च वीरहा ब्रह्महा भवेत् (ibid. 82. 118). The above conclusion is based on the fact that in similar enumerations of crimes found in Padmapurāṇa (Uttarakhaṇḍa) the word बाल is substituted for वीर, e.g. ब्रह्महा हेमहारी वा बालहा गोघ्न एव च 133. 32; भ्रूणहत्या बालहत्या गोहत्या च विशेषतः ibid. 75. 13. Liṅgapurāṇa is a more archaic work than the Padma, and it is very probable that the former uses the older expression.

The word वीरहन् is extremely rare in Kāvya literature. The expression वीरहत्या is found in Śaṅkaradigvijaya of Vidyāraṇya—वीरहत्यामवाप्तोऽसि वहीनुद्वास्य यत्नतः 8. 26.

वृक्षाधिरूढ 7. 97, a kind of embrace by women resembling the climbing of trees by creepers (क्रमोद्गता पीवरताधिजङ्घं वृक्षाधिरूढं विदुषी किमस्याः). 'बाहुभ्यां कण्ठमालिङ्गय कामिनी कान्त उत्थिते। अङ्गमारोहते यस्य वृक्षारूढः स उच्यते ॥' quoted by Nārāyaṇa. Cf. बद्धीपुरन्ध्रिपटलं घटिताभिरामवृक्षाधिरूढकमुपैति परामभिख्याम् Haravijaya 5. 33.

वृत्तसमाप्तिलिपि 10. 86, lit. a circular terminal script, the Visarga (द्विकुण्डली वृत्तसमाप्तिलिप्याः.....काये यदीये निरमायि सारैः). Nārāyaṇa takes the word to mean also 'the round circular figures (resembling the Nāgari छ)put at the end of a manuscript'. This is exactly the meaning of the word समाप्तिलिपि used in 16. 98 (समाप्तिलिप्येव भुजिक्रियाविधेः .. ....वर्तुलया). Nārāyaṇa says समाप्तिसूचिकया छकाररूपपुष्पिकारूपया.....ग्रन्थलेखनसमाप्तिपत्रे समाप्तिसूचकं छकारादिवर्तुलमक्षरं क्रियते. In Anargharāghava 6. 70 the Sudarśana wheel of Viṣṇu is called सकलदानवजीवितव्यविद्यासमाप्तिलिपिः.

वेशन्त 8. 35; 11. 54, a pool of water, a small tank.

वेष्टक 19. 16, in नवेष्टकवेष्टना. Trans. follows the construction नव + इष्टकवेष्टना. But Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita construes the expression also as न वेष्टकवेष्टना and explains वेष्टक as a kind of resin used for catching birds. He gives चेप as an equivalent. See Notes Cāṇḍū's explanation is found also in Īśānadeva and Jinarāja, but the latter two give another very curious meaning of वेष्टक —'latrine'! Jinaraja says वेष्टकस्य वेटड इति नाम्ना प्रसिद्धस्य हदनस्थानस्य वेष्टना आवरणभित्तिः, but he has the good sense to remark तत् जुगुप्सादोषदुष्टत्वादुपेक्ष्यम्.

वैधव 1. 96, relating to the moon (विधु).

वैमानिक 16. 129, a god (कुसुमवृष्टीरेष वैमानिकानाम्).

वैलक्ष्य 3. 10, shame (वैलक्ष्यहेतोः); 1. 134 (सचित्रवैलक्ष्यकृपं नृपम्). From विलक्ष 'ashamed' used in 11.21; 6. 18.

वैधव्य 15. 55, widowhood, from विधवा 'a widow'. 'नलात् स्ववैधव्यमनाप्तुमानता नृपस्त्रियः'.

वैसारिण 9. 110, a fish, in वैसारिणकेतन 'the fish-bannered (god of love)'.

वैहासिक 19. 64, a jester (भानुस्ताम्यद्वनरुहवनीकेलिवैहासिकोऽयम्). Cf. मृदुमृणालिनीवनविलासवैहासिकस्त्विषां वितपते पतिः Anargharāghava 4. 4; नूनमन्योन्येषां वैहासिकाः कपयो दशकण्ठमुल्लुण्ठयन्ति ibid., Act 6.

व्यतिषञ्जन 15. 88, joining together, uniting (स्त्रीपुंसव्यतिषञ्जनम्).

व्युत्तिष्ठते 20. 124, oppose; resist; (here) say something in opposition (इति व्युत्तिष्ठमानायां तस्यामूचे नलः प्रियाम्).

शतकोटि (M) 7. 79, thunderbolt (कराग्रजाग्रच्छतकोटिरर्षी).

शम्बाकृत 20. 83, ploughed twice; (here) doubly pierced (त्वया शम्बाकृतं क्षतम्). Nārāyaṇa says प्रथमं फालकृष्टे क्षेत्रे पुनरपि सीरावदारणवत् प्रथमकृतनखक्षतमध्य एव पुनरपि गाढतरं नखक्षतं यदारोपितं तत्.....। 'शम्बाकृतं द्वितीयं स्यात्' इति निघण्टुः। शम्बाकृतं 'कृञो द्वितीय—' इति डाच्। लक्षणया प्रयोगः। The second ploughing is in a reverse direction. Siddhāntakaumudī says शम्बशब्दः प्रतिलोमे. Kāśikā says शम्बाकरोति अनुलोमकृष्टे क्षेत्रं पुनः प्रतिलोमं कृषतीत्यर्थः. Kalāpa (Cal. ed.) reads सम्ब. Durgasiṁha remarks सम्बाकरोति पुनस्तिर्यक् कर्षतीत्यर्थः. The word शम्ब is explained also as meaning 'a kind of ploughshare'. Abhayatilaka in his commentary on Hemacandra's Dvyāśrayakāvya 19. 36 (क्ष्मां....शम्बाकृतबीजाकृतामिव) says शम्बं तिर्यक् कृता शम्बाकृता अनुलोमं कृष्ट्वा पुनस्तिर्यक् कृष्टा इत्यर्थः। अन्ये त्वाहुः शम्बसाधना कृषिरिति शम्बेन हलभेदेन कृष्टेत्यर्थः.

शरोपासन 14. 54, archery practice (स्मारी शरोपासनवेदिकेव).

शर्करागल 21. 154, in दानान्तःश्रुतशर्करागल....., the ceremonial "mountain" of sugar (a heap measuring eight Bhāras) given away by pious donors together with four other smaller "mountains" called Viṣkambhaparvata. Three golden trees are planted on the "mountain", while on the smaller "mountains" are placed idols of Cupid, Kubera and Brahmā as well as a golden image of the Surabhi cow. It was customary to give away similar "mountains" of butter, salt, paddy, cotton and sesamum seeds. The Matsyapurāṇa seems to be the only early work which gives full details about these "mountains", and the relevant chapters of it are quoted in full by Aparārka in his commentary on Yājñavalkya 1. 208.

शाम्बरी 6. 14, magic; illusion (शाम्बरीशिल्पमलक्षि दिक्षु). The word is from शम्बर, a demon famous for his magical skill. Cf. Naiṣadha 20. 130—अम्बुनः शम्बरत्वेन मायैवाविरभूदियम्; also 10. 123—छद्मैव तच्छम्बरजं.....In both the examples शम्बर means also 'water'.

शम्बर is used in the sense of 'error', 'delusion' in Yogavāśiṣṭha (Sthitiprakaraṇa 47. 88) —किमेतस्मिन् महामायाडम्बरे दीर्घशम्बरे where the comm. explains दीर्घशम्बरे as दीर्घभ्रमे. The word शाम्बरी occurs in Liṅgapurāṇa (27. 198 of Uttarārdha) as the name of one of the deities or शक्तिs mentioned in connection with a Tantric rite in which the king undergoes a ceremonial bath for the attainment of victory. शाम्बरी and शाम्बरिक are used in the sense of 'magic' and 'magician' respectively in Śivārkamaṇidīpikā or Śrīkaṇṭhabhāṣya (3. 2. 6), Vol. II, p. 232 —शाम्बरिकदर्शितप्रपञ्चस्य.....शाम्बरीप्रसरणमात्रकालावसायित्वेन च यथाश्चर्यरूपत्वम् etc. Cf. Mallikāmāruta, Act I—पौष्पेषवी शाम्बरी. The form शाम्बर occurs in Yogavāśiṣṭha (Vairāgyaprakaraṇa) 12. 12—बत मूढा वयं सर्वे जानाना अपि शाम्बरम्. Comm. says शाम्बरं शम्बरसंबन्धि । मायेयमिति भावः.

शारद 9. 14, (1) autumnal; (2) able, clever (शिखीव शारदः). Narahari and Nārāyaṇa explain the word as निपुण. The latter explains it also as शार+द=हिंसाप्रद 'malevolent'. The word means also 'diffident, shy', and this meaning is implied in Naiṣadha 1. 20. See Notes.

शिक्षित 20. 64, taught (शिक्षितासि मयैव यम्). The verb is used in 17. 80—अक्रोधं शिक्षयन्त्यन्ये: क्रोधना ये तपोधनाः. शिक्ष् 'to learn' is used in 1.73 (मरुत् किमद्यापि न तासु शिक्षते); 1. 77 (तदातिथ्यमशिक्षि शाखिभिः); 4.48 (गुरोः कुतः स्फुटमशिक्षयत दाहवदान्यता). शिक्षण 'learning, practice' is used in 15. 26 (चिरशिक्षणैः).

शुष्मन् 17. 168, fire (ऋतुशुष्ममहोष्मभिः). Cf. Māgha 14. 22—शुष्मणि..... तैर्हवींषि जुहवांबभूविरे.

शूकशिखा 4. 11, the pointed beard of corn (निविशते यदि शूकशिखा पदे).

श्येनंपाता 19. 12, hawking; hunting. Nārāyaṇa says श्येनानां पातः श्येनपातः सोऽस्यां क्रियायां वर्तते श्येनंपाता मृगयेति 'घञः सास्यां क्रियेति अः', 'श्येनतिलस्य पाते ञे' इति मुम्.

श्रवःपत्र 7. 62, an ear-ring (श्रवःपत्रयुगे प्रणालीरेखैव धावत्यभिकर्णकूपम्).

षडभिज्ञ 21. 88, a name of Buddha. The six अभिज्ञाs or supernatural faculties are the power of seeing unseen things, the power of hearing unheard sounds, knowledge of the mind of others, recollection of previous births, destruction of the sources of human passion (आस्रवक्षय), and miraculous powers in general (ऋद्धि). See Kṣīrasvāmin on Amara 1. 14 and Hemacandra in his comm. on his Abhidhānacintāmaṇi 2. 147. Sarvānanda in his comm. on Amarakoṣa explains the word as meaning 'one who has knowledge of the six Pāramitās' (see above under दानपारमिता). Rāyamukuṭa mentions both the interpretations, and attributes the latter explanation to a Sarvadhara. Nārāyaṇa gives the last two faculties as अविद्यास्मितारागद्वेषाभिनिवेशाख्य-पञ्चक्लेशक्षयः and अणिमादिसिद्धिः. Acc. to Vidyādhara and Īśānadeva, they are the power of walking in the sky (वियद्गतम्) and the capacity to assume a plurality of forms (कायव्यूहनिर्माणम्).

सबक 22. 47, 48, a mould (in which the outlines of the thing to be reproduced are inscribed in an inverted fashion) (विधिर्विधत्ते विधुना वधूनां किमाननं काञ्चनसबकेन). Nārāyaṇa says सबके हि निष्पाद्यस्य वस्तुनो निम्नोन्नतभागा विपरीता एवोत्कीर्यन्ते. He remarks that the thing is called डस in the language of Mahārāṣṭra. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita on 22. 48 explains सबक as मुद्राबिम्ब, while on 22. 47 he explains it as बीजक (v. r. बीचक). Jinarāja gives प्रतिबिम्बक as an equivalent. Cf. Assamese साँच, a mould; an impression.

सपत्राकृत 22. 25, severely wounded (एणः स्मरेणाङ्कमयः सपत्राकृतो भवद्-भ्रूयुगधन्वना यः). The suffix is डाच् by 'सपत्रनिष्पत्रादतिव्यथने'. Bhaṭṭoji says सपत्राकरोति मृगम्। सपुङ्खशरप्रवेशनेन सपत्रं करोतीत्यर्थः. Cf. सपत्राकृतशत्रूणां संपराये Kīrtikaumudī 2. 4; निष्पत्राऽकुरुतासुरानपि सुरान् मारः सपत्राऽकरोत् Vidyāraṇya's Śaṁkaradigvijaya 5. 84.

सप्ततन्तु 11, 100, a sacrifice (व्यापत् सदाशयविसारितसप्ततन्तुजन्मा...जगन्ति यशःपटथ). The word literally means 'that which has seven Tantus', but the meaning of Tantu is not clear. Acc. to Kṣīrasvāmin, the reference is to the seven metres (सप्तभिः छन्दोभिस्तन्यत इति). Hemacandra says पशुबन्धार्थं सप्त तन्तवोऽत्र सप्ततन्तुः; but he explains the seven Tantus also as the seven varieties of the Soma sacrifice, and quotes the following definition—यदाह–"अग्निष्टोमादयः संस्थाभेदाः सप्ताऽस्य तन्तवः" इति. Malli also explains तन्तु as संस्था in his comm. on Māgha 14. 6 (सप्ततन्तुमधिगन्तुमिच्छतः). Bhānucandra in his comm. on Kādambarī (N. S. ed. 1928, p. 108) says प्रयाजादीनि षडङ्गानि सप्तमः प्रधानमिति सप्त तन्तवः. Sāyaṇa in his comm. on Ṛgveda 10. 124. I gives two explanations of the word. Acc. to one, the reference is to the seven varieties of the Soma sacrifice (Agniṣṭoma, Atyagniṣṭoma, Ukthya, Ṣoḍaśin, Vājapeya, Atirātra and Aptoryāma). The other explanation is सप्त तन्तवस्तनितारः कर्मणां विस्तारयितारः होत्राद्याः सप्त वषट्कर्तारः यस्य. The last explanation is the more probable. Tantu means here 'one who extends', an organiser, i.e. the officiating priest. The word is used in this sense in Bhāgavata 4. 24. 37—चातुर्होत्राय तन्तवे, preceeded by नमः पङ्कजनाभाय वासुदेवाय.... (Śrīdhara says चातुर्होत्रं कर्म तस्मै तत्साधनायेत्यर्थः। कृतः तन्तवे तद्विस्तारकाय). The word is used in this sense also in Bhāgavata 3. 19. 28— नमस्तेऽखिलयज्ञतन्तवे (addressed to the Varāha incarnation of Viṣṇu). Here Tantu clearly means विस्तारक, though the commentator says अखिलयज्ञानां तन्तवे विस्ताराय कारणायेति वा. Here, too, it would be more natural to take the word in the same sense as in the other passage. सप्ततन्तु thus means 'that which has seven organisers i.e. priests'. The seven priests are enumerated in Taittirīya Āraṇyaka 3. 5 in connection with the Saptahotṛmantra. Sāyaṇa remarks होताऽध्वर्युराग्नीध्रो ब्रह्मा प्रस्तोता प्रतिहर्ता उद्गातेति सप्तसंख्याका होमनिष्पादका अत्रोक्ता इत्ययं मन्त्रः सप्तहोतेत्युच्यते.

In the Naiṣadha verse in question the word सप्ततन्तु means at first sight 'seven-threaded' (see Footnote to Trans.), but the ordinary meaning of तन्तु 'thread' does not seem to have anything to do with a sacrifice. Hemacandra, it is true, says in one of his explanations that 'the seven threads' are the cords with which the sacrificial animal is tied, but he does not quote any authority in support of this. In the verse of our poem, the alternative meaning 'seven-threaded' is mere word-play or शब्दच्छल employed for the purpose of Virodhābhāsa or Apparent Contradiction. A similar word-play is found in Jānakīharaṇa 6. 34—यो धर्मस्य धृतः सप्ततन्तुभिः सगरादिभिः। तन्तुः स एव सन्नाजा सम्यगालम्बितस्त्वया ॥

समज्ञा 3. 64, fame. Nārāyaṇa says समैः सर्वैर्ज्ञायते इति समज्ञा कीर्तिः. For the reading समाज्ञा see Notes.

समर्थना 18. 136, compensation (e.g. for an offence). 'नो तदागसि परं समर्थना'

समित् 4. 80; 12. 35, battle.

सरट 18. 148; 16. 52, a lizard. सरड in Prākṛta. Cf. Uvāsagadasāo, chap. 2: सरडकयमालियाए.

सर्वतोमुख 16. 49, water.

सर्वस्वार 17. 202, a Vedic sacrifice in which the sacrificer commits suicide, usually a man suffering from some incurable disease with little hope of life. Śrīharṣa says आनन्द निरीक्ष्यार्यं पुरे तत्रात्मघातिनम्। सर्वस्वारस्य यज्ञानमेनं द्रष्टुमथ विव्यथे ॥ Varadattasuta Ānartīya remarks in his comm. on Śāṁkhāyanaśrautasūtra 15. 10. 1—सर्वस्वारो नामैकाहः। स सर्वगायत्रो मरणकामस्य यजमानस्य भवति प्रयोगान्तरे च स्वर्गकामस्य (Hillebrandt's ed., Vol. II, p. 311).

संख्य 12. 58, battle (संख्यापगमं विना when construed as संख्यादपगमं विना); 5. 25, 35, 56. Used mostly in compounds.

संप्रज्ञात 21. 119, a kind of Yogic meditation or Samādhi, in which the object of meditation remains distinct, though the mind is absorbed in its contemplation; as opposed to the असंप्रज्ञात variety, in which the distinction between knowledge and its object is completely obliterated. Śrīharṣa says इत्युदीर्य स हरिं प्रति संप्रज्ञातवासिततमः समपादि. Nārāyaṇa says ध्येयध्यातृभावयुक्त-साकारध्यानसमाधिः संप्रज्ञातः, संवित्संवेद्यविलोपेन निराकारस्वप्रकाशपरमानन्द-लक्षणात्मसाम्राज्यध्यानसमाधिरसंप्रज्ञात इति योगशास्त्रम्. The Saṁprajñāta Samādhi is called Samāpatti in the Yogasūtras, and known also as Savikalpa Samādhi. Vācaspati says in his commentary on Pātañjala Bhāṣya (Samādhipāda)—तेषु ग्रहीतृग्रहणग्राह्येषु स्थितस्य धारितस्य ध्यानपरिपाकवशादपहृतरजस्तमोमलस्य चित्तसत्त्वस्य या तदञ्जनता तदाकारता सा समापत्तिः संप्रज्ञातलक्षणो योग उच्यते. The various modes of संप्रज्ञात-

समाधि are described in the Yogasūtras (Samādhipāda). Śivopādhyāya in his comm. on Vijñānabhairava (Kashmir Sanskrit Series) refers to another classification—'हृदीव [बाह्य-देशेऽपि यस्मिन् कस्मिंश्च वस्तुनि। समाधिराद्यः सन्मात्रे नामरूपपृथक्स्थितः॥' इति दृश्यानुविद्धसविकल्पकः समाधिः। शब्दानुविद्धं सविकल्पकं समाधिमाह तत्रैव (वाक्यसुधायाम्) 'अखण्डैकरसं वस्तु सच्चिदानन्दलक्षणम्। इत्यविच्छिन्नचिन्तेयं समाधिर्मध्यमो भवेत्॥' p. 100. The संप्रज्ञातसमाधि is referred to as सबीजयोग by Māgha—मैत्र्यादिचित्तपरिकर्मविदो विधाय क्लेशप्रहाणमिह लब्ध-सबीजयोगाः 4.55.

संप्रदान, the recipient of a gift (दानपात्र). स्तुत्यस्तु कल्पविटपी फलसंप्रदानं कुर्वन् स एष विबुधान् 11. 125; कुर्वद्भिरात्मभवसौरभसंप्रदानं.....चामरमारुतौ-घम् 11. 4.

संभालयति 6. 76, hear (विज्ञप्तिमन्तः सभयः.....संभालयामास). न संभालयति शुकसारिकागणम् Upamitibhāvaprapañcā kathā, p. 887.

संयत् (f) 12. 10, 99, battle (used in loc.).

संवर्तिका 8. 76, a new leaf of the lotus (स्मरेन्धने वक्षसि तेन दत्ता संवर्तिका शैवलवल्लिचित्रा). Kṣīrasvāmin remarks on this word in his comm. on Amarakoṣa— संवर्तयति वेष्टयति संवर्तिका, पद्मादीनां नवोद्भिन्नं दलं शरच्चन्द्रिकाख्यम्. Hemacandra says the same thing, but he reads शरयन्त्रिकाख्यम्. The word occurs in Anargharāghava 2. 4, 5— कमलिनीसंवर्तिकाः; अम्भोजसंवर्तिकाः; राजीवसंवर्तिका 2. 70; also in Nāgarāja's Bhāvaśataka (verse 90)..... संवर्तिका कैतकी, वैयोगी फकचद्वयीव सखि मे चित्तं परं कृन्तति (Kāvyamālā, Part IV).

संवावदूक 22. 104, extremely similar; having a close resemblance to (मुखेन्दुबिम्बं संवावदूकश्रियमम्बुजानाम्).

संसिसृक्षु 14. 21, desirous of embracing (स्वेदः स्वदेहस्य.....संसिसृक्षोः).

साधिमन् 9. 44, excellence, perfection (नरसाधिमभ्रमः).

साय 22. 52, used as a noun for सायम् in सायधूर्तः.

सारणी 9. 155, a river, a stream. C. P. reads सारिणी.

सारव 12. 7, belonging to the Sarayū river (सारवसारवोर्मिजः). सरयू + अण् by निपातन, acc. to Pāṇini 6. 4. 174. Cf. Dvisandhānakāvya 1. 12—सारवे ह्रदे.

सांयुगीन 12. 56, warlike (भुजभुजगयुगं सांयुगीनं बिभर्ति). संयुग (n), battle, is used in 3. 39.

सांराविण 19. 29, a loud noise, chirping (तटतरुखगश्रेणीसांराविणैः). Nārāyaṇa says समन्ताद्रावाः सांराविणानि 'अभिविधौ भाव इनुण्' इतीनुण्णन्तात् स्वार्थे 'अणिनुणः' इत्यण्. Cf. उत्तालाः कटपूतनाप्रभृतयः सांराविणं कुर्वते Mālatīmādhava, Act V; जातं रणरणोपेतं सांराविणमितस्ततः Dvisandhānakāvya 9. 16.

साल 1. 89, a tree (रसालसालः).

सासहि 10. 15, perfectly able to bear (महीगौरवसासहिः). From सह+यङ् by निपातन.

सिचय 7. 84; 19. 3, cloth. The word occurs in Sāṁkhyatattvakaumudī (Kārikā 61)—असूर्यम्पश्या हि कुलवधूः.....प्रमादाद्विगलितसिचयावला; in Āryāsaptaśatī (verse 626)—स्पृशति नखैर्न च विलिखति सिचयं गृह्णाति न च विमोचयति and other texts.

सितच्छत्र 12. 37, a cobweb (मर्कटकीटकृत्रिमसितच्छत्रीभवत्).

सिता 3. 94, sugar. Cf. 'कासारं तु सितासारं नैवेद्यं भास्कराय वै' quoted from Bhaviṣyatpurāṇa in Kṛtyakalpataru (Vratakāṇḍa), p. 125 (G.O.S.). Comm. says सितासारः शर्कराबहुलः.

सिद्धरस 9. 42, specially treated mercury believed to turn iron into gold (अयसां सिद्धरसस्पृशामपि).

सिद्धार्थ 10. 6, mustard seed (यन्त्रस्थसिद्धार्थपदाभिषेकं लब्ध्वाप्यसिद्धार्थममन्यतस्वम्). Cf. अविरललग्नगौरसिद्धार्थकप्रकारतया काञ्चनरसखचितामिव.....मालाम् Kādambarī (Pūrvabhāga).

सुधाभूबिम्ब 7. 38, the lunar orb. The expression is, however, variously explained. See Trans. and Notes.

सुपर्वन् 14. 3, 7, a god; 9. 44 (विहाय हा सर्वसुपर्वनायकम्); 4. 90; 14. 41, 76.

सुरधनुष् 18. 134, 'rainbow', a kind of nail-mark (पयोधरे मत्करः सुरधनुष्करस्तव).

सुरार्चाविश्मन् 21. 21, a household temple. If अर्चा is taken in the sense of an 'idol', the meaning will be 'a chamber containing the idols of deities.'

सुषिर 15, 16, flutes and similar instruments (अवापुरुच्चैः सुषिराणि राणिताम्).

सूत्र 16. 15, an indication; a prelude (विशङ्कय सूत्रं पुरुषायितस्य तद्-भविष्यतः).

सूत्रयन्त्र 18. 13, controlling or working by strings (सूत्रयन्त्रजविशिष्टचेष्टया). See Notes. Used as an adj. in Yogavāśiṣṭha, 'controlled or tied with a string'—सूत्रयन्त्रपतत्रिवत् (Upaśama 15. 15).

सूननायक 18. 129, the god of love (सूननायकनिदेशविभ्रमैः).

सो 9. 140, to bring to an end, to destroy (भ्रान्तिमसाद्मखसुः).

सोत्त्रास 20. 100 (सोत्त्रासहासिनि), loud; loudly. Nārāyaṇa says उत्त्रासेनोच्चैस्त्वेन सह यथा तथा हसति सति. Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita explains it as सोल्लुण्ठम् 'mockingly'. Narahari says साभिप्रायम्. Cāṇḍū's explanation is supported by instances like the following–स्वभार्ययाप्यव-ज्ञाताः..... । उत्त्रास्यमानाः स्वापत्यैस्तरुणीभिस्तिरस्कृताः ॥ Upamitibhava-prapañcā kathā, p. 644; उत्त्रासनपरैः षिड्गलोकैः ibid. p. 720.

सोमसिद्धान्त 10. 87, Somasiddhānta is explained by the commentators as Kāpālikadarśana or the doctrine of the Kāpālikas. Kṣīrasvāmin in his commentary on Amara 2. 7. 50 quotes some verses in which a Kāpālika is called Somasiddhāntin.[32] Somasiddhānta is one of the characters in Kṛṣṇamiśra's Prabodhacandrodaya (Act 3), and we get a good idea of its tenets from the latter work.[33] Somasiddhānta is here represented as a Kāpālika who describes himself as a votary of the Mahābhairava form of Śiva. The latter is worshipped with human sacrifice; oblations of human flesh are made in the fire, and the worshipper drinks wine from a human skull (3. 13). The Kāpālika boasts of extraordinary magical feats, and it is claimed that his doctrine facilitates the attainment of the eight superhuman powers known as Mahāsiddhis (3. 22). So far as doctrine is concerned, the world, according to the Somasiddhānta, though full of diversities, is identical with Śiva;[34] and he who has obtained salvation assumes the form of Śiva and sports with a mistress beautiful like Pārvatī (3. 16).

Somasiddhānta appears as a character in another allegorical drama, the Vidyāpariṇayana of Ānandarāyamakhin, composed in the first half of the seventeenth century,[35] and here, too, it is represented by a drunken Kāpālika. Questioned about his idea of religion, of heaven and of salvation, he replies that Mahābhairava, pleased with human sacrifices and wine, grants the worshipper Sārūpya or a form similar to his own, the summum bonum being salvation without discarding the body.[36] As to heaven, it is a place where all desires are satisfied and the enjoyment of sensual pleasure unrestricted by any limit.[37] It is interesting to note that Somasiddhānta is here put on the same level as the Pāñcarātra system. The Somasiddhānta personified in the play declares: 'Just as we are regarded as vile heretics for indulging in wine and flesh in accordance with the Bhairava scriptures, although we accept the authority of the Vedas; similarly, the followers of Pāñcarātra, though they recognise the authority of the Veda, are regarded as Pāṣaṇḍas for following customs contrary to the teachings of the Vedas'.[38] The followers of Somasiddhānta or the Kāpālikas would seem to have accepted in theory at least the Vedas, though their practices had nothing in common with the Vedic religion.

Somasiddhānta is personified also in Gokulanātha's philosophical drama Amṛtodaya written in 1693.[39] Vardhamāna, the well-known commentator on Udayana's Nyāyakusumāñjali, is here described as fighting and killing Somasiddhānta,[40] also called Somatantra, the friend of the Cārvāka.[41] When Somasiddhānta is put to the sword, his associates or patrons Kāpālika, Nīlalohita, Mahābhairava, Bhūtaḍāmara, Umā, Maheśvara and others flee from the battle.

The word Somasiddhānta means literally 'the doctrine of Soma or Śiva.' Soma is frequently used in the sense of Śiva in the Purāṇas,[42] and Prabodhacandrodaya describes Soma-

Kaviraj in S. B. Studies, Vol. III, pp. 112 and 134. Pariśiṣṭaprakāśa does not refer to the Kusumāñjaliprakāśa of the same writer, as stated by the editor of the N. S. edition of Amṛtodaya (1897).

41. The editor of the N. S. edition of the play makes the following remark in a footnote (p. 29): बौद्धाधिकारटीकायां वादिविनोदे च शंकरमिश्रचरणैरुक्तम्—' सोमसिद्धान्तोऽपि चार्वाकरीत्या संगमनीयः ' इति ।

42. Cf. Kūrmapurāṇa—सोमः स दृश्यते देवः सोमो यस्य विभूषणम् ; सोमं सोमार्धभूषणम् (Uparibhāga 31. 44, 48). In the same section a hymn to Śiva in eight verses is called सोमाष्टक. Soma is included among the names of Śiva in Sūtasaṁhitā, chap. 33 of Yajñavaibhavakhaṇḍa, p. 620, Vol. II (Ānandāśrama ed.). In Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa, the worship of Śiva is associated with सोमाष्टमी—शुक्लपक्षादथारभ्य सोमाष्टम्यां नराधिप । पूजयेत् सोपवासस्तु देवदेवं त्रिलोचनम् ॥ Chap. 173. The ceremony in question is called महेश्वराष्टमीव्रत. The following verses are quoted from Liṅgapurāṇa by Bhāskararāya in his commentary on Lalitāsahasra nāma, p. 69 (N. S. ed. 1927) — समस्तसौम्यवस्तूनां प्रकृतित्वेन विश्रुतः । सोमात्मको बुधैर्देवो महादेव इति स्मृतः ॥ सोमात्मकस्य देवस्य महादेवस्य सूरिभिः । दयिता रोहिणी प्रोक्ता बुधश्चैव शरीरजः ॥ It will be noted that the moon or सोम is one of the eight forms of Śiva.

siddhānta as Pārameśvara (i.e. Śaiva) Siddhānta.[43] In one verse of the play the Kāpālika theory of salvation is, in fact, attributed to Śiva.[44] Somasiddhānta is thus an offshoot of the Śaiva system, and we may in this connection refer to an important statement in Kūrmapurāṇa, in which Śiva declares that he propounded the holy Pāśupata vow as well as certain degenerate systems such as Soma, Vāma, Pāśupata (in its impure form), Bhairava and Lāṅgala.[45] It is interesting to find that in one of the verses Śiva is called Soma,[46] and there is no doubt that the Soma system is a degenerate branch of Śaivism.

Yāmunācārya in his Āgamaprāmāṇya quotes a verse which enumerates four Śaiva systems, namely, Śaiva, Pāśupata, Lāguḍa, and Saumya, and the latter obviously refers to the Somasiddhānta we are considering.[47] The author quotes also some other verses which enumerate four Śaiva sects, namely, Śaiva, Pāśupata, Kālāmukha, and Kāpāla.[48] Here the latter sect evidently corresponds to the Saumya or the Soma system, while the Kālāmukha sect corresponds to the Lāguḍa system, because the Kālāmukhas are described in the work as carrying a Laguḍa or heavy stick.[49] The evidence of Yāmunamuni's work is interesting as clearly showing that the Kāpālikas followed the Somasiddhānta or the Soma system. It may also be noted that Rāmānuja's classification of the Śaiva sects into Śaiva, Pāśupata, Kāpāla and Kālāmukha in his Śrībhāṣya 2. 2. 35 is based on his teacher's work Āgamaprāmāṇya. The verses quoted by him to illustrate the Kāpālika view[50] have been already quoted by Yāmunamuni, and Rāmānuja reproduces the description of the Kālāmukhas from Āgamaprāmāṇya.

The authorities we have considered so far agree in treating the Somasiddhānta or the Soma system as identical with the Kāpālika doctrine. There is, however, at least one text in which the Kāpāla and Soma systems are mentioned separately. We find in the Sūtasaṁhitā belonging to Skandapurāṇa that the Kāpāla, Pāśupata and Soma systems are referred to separately,[51] which shows that the Soma system was not always regarded as identical with the Kāpāla school. In this connection we may also refer to the fact that Gopīnātha in his Saṁskāraratnamālā[52] quotes some verses dealing with certain Tantric formulas, and says that they are compiled from a Somasiddhānta and certain other works including the well-known Rudrayāmala Tantra. The Somasiddhānta referred to by Gopīnātha is clearly a Tāntric work, but we do not know whether it had anything to do with the Kāpālika system. It may also be mentioned that there is an early Śaiva writer named Somaśambhu who is quoted in Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati (Kriyāpāda, chap. 21), but there is no reason to connect him with the Somasiddhānta.

A general description of the Kāpālikas will be found in Bhandarkar—Vaishnavism, Saivism etc. I may add that it is stated in Skandapurāṇa that during the worship of Yogeśvarī, a form of Durgā, the wine offered to the goddess is to be distributed among the Kāpālikas (Prabhāsakhaṇḍa, chap. 83, Prabhāsakṣetramāhātmya).

सौत्रामणी 17. 182, a Vedic sacrifice involving the use of wine (मुमुदे मदिरादानं विदन्नेव द्विजन्मनः। दृष्ट्वा सौत्रामणीमिष्टिं तं कुर्वन्तमदूषयत ॥). सौत्रामणी is so called because one of the gods invoked in this sacrifice is सुत्रामन् or Indra.[53] The wine is mixed with sprouts of barley, rice and other herbs, and addressed thus—अश्विभ्यां पच्यस्व सरस्वत्यै पच्यस्वेन्द्राय सुत्रामणे पच्यस्व. Flour made from various plums is one of the oblations offered in this rite, and a bull is sacrificed in honour of Indra. A mare is prescribed as the Dakṣiṇā of Sautrāmaṇī (Taittirīyasaṁhitā, Ānandāśrama ed., 1. 8. 21 and Sāyaṇa thereon). The wine is drunk with the following Mantra—यमश्विना नमुचावासुरे दधि सरस्वत्यसुनोदिन्द्रियाय। इमं तं शुक्रं मधुमन्तमिन्दुं सोमं राजानमिह भक्षयामि ॥ Śāṁkhāyanaśrautasūtra 15. 15. Māṭharavṛtti on Sāṁkhyakārikā (2) refers to the drinking of wine in the Sautrāmaṇī sacrifice and to the fact that the priests engage in free conversation with a whore (सौत्रामण्यां सुरापानं रण्डया सह स्वेच्छालापश्च ऋत्विजाम्).

स्तोकक 5. 127, the Cātaka bird (स्तोककस्य खलु चञ्चुपुटेन).

स्थानिन्, (1) 19. 60, the original form in grammar for which something else is substituted and called आदेश (भण फणिभवशास्त्रे तातङः स्थानिनौ कौ). In the above example तु and हि are the स्थानिन् or original forms, and तातङ् is the आदेश or substitute. For the rule in question see Footnote to Trans. (2) 10. 135, here the grammatical meaning is implied by pun, and the word is used in the sense of 'original'—किं स्थानिवद्भावमधत्त दुष्टम् ॥ 'why did he retain his original evil nature?' (preceded by स्वं नैषधादेशमहो विधाय). Cf. Anargharāghava, Act 4—तपोभिरस्य ब्राह्मणादेशोऽपि स्थानिवद्भावेन क्षत्रकार्यं न जहाति.

स्थापत्य 20. 138, a chamberlain. The form स्थपत्य occurs in Jānakīharaṇa 7. 1—स्थपत्यशुद्धान्तजनैः परीतः.

स्थायुक 12. 36, located; situated (कुम्भास्थिकूटाबटस्थानस्थायुकमौक्तिक.....).

स्पृष्टक 6. 35, a kind of light embrace (नलस्पृष्टकमेत्य हृष्टा). It is described as the contact of a man with a woman while passing by her—"यद् योषितः संमुखमागताया अन्यापदेशाद् व्रजतो नरस्य। गात्रेण गात्रं घटते यदेतदालिङ्गनं स्पृष्टकमाहुरार्याः॥" quoted by Nārāyaṇa.

स्यन्दन 15. 92, see Notes. There is a reference to the Moon's chariot, though it is not so well-known as that of the Sun. Acc. to Viṣṇupurāṇa (12. 1 of 2nd. Aṁśa), the Moon's chariot has three wheels and is drawn by ten white horses.

स्वरितत्व 9. 42, connotation, significance (स्वृ—स्वरति+क+त्व or स्वर+इतच्+त्व). अयोविकारस्वरितत्व 'the connotation अयोविकार i.e. अयोविकारशब्दवाच्यत्व'. See Notes. Nārāyaṇa explains the word as आक्षिप्तत्व 'inclusion' and says 'स्वर आक्षेपे' इति चौरादिकाददन्ताक्षिप्तः. अयोविकारे स्वरितत्वम् 'inclusion or reckoning among objects made of iron.'

स्वारसिक 3. 48, voluntary, spontaneous (विधेरपि स्वारसिकः प्रयासः परस्परं योग्यसमागमाय).

हरिण 22. 134, (1) white; (2) a deer.

हस्तलेख, sketching practice before producing an object of art (अस्यैव सर्गाय भवत्करस्य सरोजसृष्टिर्मम हस्तलेखः 7. 72; हस्तलेखमसृजत् खलु जन्मस्थानरेणुकमसौ भवदर्थम् 21. 69). Cāṇḍūpaṇḍita gives हस्तोल्लेख as an equivalent. In 21. 69 the word लेखक used in connection with हस्तलेख means 'an artist'.

हारिद्र 6. 45; 7. 13 (हारिद्रभङ्गाय; हारिद्रनिभप्रभा). Nārāyaṇa and Vidyā (on 6. 45) explain हारिद्र as 'gold'. Otherwise it is to be derived from हरिद्रा 'turmeric'.

हाहा 2. 27, the name of the court singer of Indra (हा हेति गायन् यदशोचि तेन नाम्नापि हाहा हरिगायनोऽभूत्). Some regard the word as a noun, and others as an Avyaya. Malli remarks 'हाहा खेदे हूहू हर्षे गन्धर्वे-ऽप्यू स्वनव्यय ' इति विश्वः । अव्ययमेव इति श्रीभोजराजः । Cf. Kauśikasūtra 7. 56. 13— हाहाहूहूभ्यां त्वा गन्धर्वाभ्यां परिददामि (in connection with Upanayana).

हिमवालुका 2. 88, camphor.

हुडुक्क 15. 17, a kind of small cymbal.

हेमन् 21. 34, the Dhattūra plant (हेमनामकतरुप्रसवेन). Words signifying 'gold' have also this meaning. Kṣīrasvāmin and Hemacandra attribute this to the belief that a man who partakes of the fruit of the Dhattūra plant (Datura stramonium) sees everything golden before him, and obviously refer to the intoxicating properties of the fruit. The fact is also mentioned by the Jaina writer Jinadatta Sūri in his Kālasvarūpakulaka (v. 12) composed in Apabhraṁśa: जो धत्तूरयफुल्लु समुज्जलु पिक्खिवि लग्गउ तित्थु समुज्जलु। जइ सो तसु रसु पियणह इच्छइ ता जगु सव्वु वि सुन्नउ पिच्छइ॥ Comm. says जगत् सर्वं सुवर्णं पश्यति. Apabhraṁśakāvyatrayī (G.O.S.), p. 71. Bṛhannāradīyapurāṇa (8. 110) has a fanciful explanation—अहो कनकमाहात्म्यं व्याख्यातुं केन शक्यते । नामसाम्यादहो चित्रं धुस्तूरोऽपि मदप्रदः ॥ In 3. 98 Śrīharṣa mentions the उन्मत्त or 'mad', flower, i.e. the flower of the Dhattūra plant, as the favourite of Śiva. It was usual to worship Śiva with Dhattūra and other flowers, e.g. in connection with the Kālāṣṭamī and other Vratas. See Vāmanapurāṇa quoted in Kṛtyakalpataru (Vratakāṇḍa), p. 262 (G.O.S.); and citations from Bhaviṣyatpurāṇa in the same work (pp. 251, 253, 255) which mention the Unmatta(ka) flower.

हेलि 2. 80; 3. 80; 22. 13, the sun. Cf. Yaśastilaka 3. 403— हेलिः केलिसरोजबन्धुः; 'जपन् हेलीति देवस्य नाम भक्त्या पुनः पुनः' Bhaviṣyatpurāṇa quoted in Kṛtyakalpataru (op. cit.), p. 141.

Note. The citations from the Purāṇas are from the Vangavasi editions published in Calcutta, with the following exceptions—Varāhapurāṇa (Bombay), Brahmapurāṇa (Ānandāśrama), Mārkaṇḍeya (B. I.) and Viṣṇudharmottara (Bombay).

YAŚASTILAKA AND INDIAN CULTURE

OR

Somadeva's Yaśastilaka and Aspects of Jainism and Indian Thought and Culture in the Tenth Century

Jivarāja Jaina Granthamālā, No. 2

Prof. L. Renou, Paris University, writes in Livres Nouveaux:

"Except for a note by Peterson, nothing had been written on Yaśastilaka. It required the remarkable zeal of Mr. Handiqui, which had already found expression fifteen years ago in a vastly learned work on Śrīharṣa's Naiṣadha-carita, to incorporate the Yaśastilaka in the general current of Hinduism. This is now an acquisition.

Mr. Handiqui gives a precise account of what is known about the activities of the literary circles and the religious sects of the 10th century. Then follow an analysis of the work; a study of the sources (here Mr. Handiqui points out what Somadeva owes to Haribhadra and his Prakrit romance); and a literary appreciation..... But these chapters, however valuable they may be, are only an introduction to what Mr. Handiqui is primarily interested in: an examination of the doctrines contained in the work of Somadeva.

The Yaśastilaka, properly interpreted, is a sort of encyclopedia of Jainism, and Mr. Handiqui has overlooked nothing for explaining the facts of dogmatics, discipline and ethics which are described or alluded to in the work. With the help of the Yaśastilaka and a vast amount of information literary and epigraphic, Mr. Handiqui describes the position of Jainism in the tenth century and records the controversies or the conflicts with diverse Hindu sects and eventually with the Buddhists. Here is a study which had not been made before, at least on such an extensive scale. Particularly interesting is Chapter 14.....will serve as a basis for all such studies in the future.

Somadeva does not confine himself to contrasting Jainism with Buddhism and Hinduism; he also studies them for their own sake, both in their philosophical content and the practices developed by them..... Mr. Handiqui examines in detail the facts brought forward by Somadeva and confronts them with the realities of the sects and the theories.....A descriptive index of geographical names terminates this voluminous work, one of the most substantial that have been achieved in connection with a Sanskrit literary text."—(Translated)
